Chicago, Sept. 19—The European war may give the United States its second Olympic meeting in eight years—but the odds are against it.

If Finland, which already has started preparations, is unable to stage the 1940 games, the American Olympic Committee would be willing to pinch hit, said Chairman Avery Brundage.

"We could handle them if there were time enough to prepare for games of the usual high Olympic standard, but I am not certain we would have that much time," Brundage said.

SEP 20 1939

Other Complications

Besides, he pointed out, Finland would have to abandon formally its plans to hold the games before a transfer move could be made. Even then spread of war might prevent representation by many countries, which, Brundage remarked, would leave America without a good reason for holding the games.

"Games would not be Olympic games unless they were international in character," Brundage averred.

As late as last week, Brundage said, a Finnish spokesman had declared "Finland was determined to carry out its plans if at all possible." Finland took over the job when Japan became engaged in the Sino-Japanese conflict and canceled the games which had been scheduled for Tokyo in 1940.

Word With Finland

Despite many letters and telegrams urging the A. O. C. to seek a transfer of the games because of the war, Brundage said the final word remained with Finland. The American Olympic chairman said he had cabled the International Olympic Committee for information regarding Finland's plans, but that there had not been enough time for an answer.

Brundage disclosed he also had received an offer from Lake Placid, N. Y., to conduct the winter games, if they could not be held in Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany. However, the same obstacles affecting a shift in summer events also applied to the winter, he said.

Says U. S. Is Deficient in Getting Americans Home.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Senator Reynolds, Democrat, of North Carolina, asserted today that this Government had "fallen down miserably" in providing transportation for Americans seeking to return from Europe.

Mr. Reynolds, who returned from France on the United States liner Manhattan yesterday, said he planned to address a letter to Secretary Hull inquiring as to the number of aliens on the boat during its passage.

"I think it is a shame and an outrage that Americans in Europe were refused transportation on these ships whereas aliens were occupying berths and cots that should have been occupied by American citizens," he declared.

Lad's Uncensored Films Picture Nazi Mine Fleet

College Junior Tells Story of Adventure on Mormachawk

BOSTON, Sept. 19 (AP).—A Pennsylvania State College junior, preparing for study of maritime law by serving in the crew of the American motorship Mormachawk, came home today with first-hand pictures of the perils in mine-strewn European waters.

His camera clicking in spite of menacing guns, slim Frank Lynn, twenty-one years old, of Darby, Pa., brought back uncensored film to show how the German Navy put aboard a gold-braided officer to pilotthe 435-foot freighter past hidden death in an hour and a half zigzag off the Danish coast.

The Germans, with a destroyer cleared for action and seven minelayers on patrol, made no effort to prevent pictures, Lynn said. Officers of the Mormachawk discouraged the crew's picture-taking, however, apparently fearing Nazi protests.

The pilot took the Mormachawk safely through the mines, with Danish and Greek merchant vessels tagging behind, while the American vessel's helmsman grew increasingly jittery as five loose mines blew up 500 to 800 yards away, with tremendous concussions and spouting geysers. The motorship heard later that a loose mine had suunk the pilotless Greek steamer Kosti going through the field behind it.

GOV. BALDWIN ASKS U. S. TO KEEP OUT

SEP 20 1939

Declares Peace Is Worth Cost of the Last War.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Gov. Raymond E. Baldwin of Connecticut said today it was worth forty-one billion dollars—the cost of the world war to the United States—for this nation to keep out of the present European conflict.

"If it costs forty-one billion dollars to get into war, certainly it's worth forty-one billion, or any part of it, to stay out," the Governor told an audience participating in the dedication of the Connecticut Building at the Eastern States Exposition.

"Remember that when you're told our 'own interests' demand participation in this war."

The Governor referred to the effects of the boom that accompanied the world war.

"We are still suffering . . . from the last war boom," he said. "It will do us no good to have a new set of problems thrust upon us before even the old ones are solved.

"The solution of America's problems lies in America itself, not overseas, not in becoming involved in other people's affairs.

"America does not need war boom prosperity. We want butter on our bread . . . not blood."

AFTER TOURIST TRADE

SEP 20 1939

Bahamas Government Seeks to Keep It Despite War.

NASSAU, Bahamas, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—The Bahamas Government, trying to save a winter tourist trade threatened by the European war, sent two emissaries northward today to arrange for American ships to bring visitors here from Miami.

Colonial Secretary J. H. Jarrett and R. G. Collins, both members of the Governor's Cabinet, left by plane for New York and Canada. They also hoped to arrange for transportation of the Bahamas tomato crop to Canada.

A contract for the Cunard liner Lancastria to make weekly trips between New York and Nassau was canceled when Great Britain entered the war. The Government believes that tourists will now prefer to travel overland to Miami, making daylight crossings to Nassau aboard fast American ships or Pan American planes which maintain a daily service.

Rickenbacker Says Nazi Air Power Crushed Poles.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, America's leading world war flyer, gave Germany's air force credit today for the quick capture of Poland.

"The air offense was carefully planned," he said. "The German air fleet first paralyzed the Polish air force by systematically destroying the major air fields, also making it impossible for French and British planes to come to Poland's aid.

"The cities followed. Then came the bombing of railroads, bridges and highways, cutting off the army's lifeline of food and war materials. The swift entry of mechanized forces into the bomb-numbed country finished the job."

"It will be a long war," Capt. Rickenbacker continued. "Bombers do swift devastating work, but the air fleets will be quickly decimated when the belligerents settle down to real fighting."

Capt. Rickenbacker returned recently from a European trip.

President's Son-in-law Has Full Confidence.

SEATTLE, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—"We can depend on the President to keep us out of war and to keep the light of democracy burning in the new world," John Boettiger, Seattle publisher and son-in-law of President Roosevelt, told a peace meeting.

"In spite of war in other countries, in this country progress must continue and a greater measure of security can be provided for our children and our children's children," Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Boettiger, the President's daughter, said.

Professor's Son Awaiting Return Ship

SEP 20 1939

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Prof. William Orton of Smith College, whose son, Maurice, was reported to have been drafted into the German Army, said tonight the last word from his son indicated he was waiting for a ship to return to the United States.

Prof. Orton, a native of England, who was a lieutenant in the British Army during the world war, said his son sailed for the United States just before the European war started, but the ship was recalled to Germany. His son notified him, Prof. Orton said, that he would wait for another ship.

BATA CHILDREN DOING NICELY

Czech Manufacturer Says That Germans Want Him to Return.

N.Y.-SEPT. 19 (SUN)

The two children of Jan Bata, millionaire Czecho-Slovakian shoe manufacturer, occupying a $60 a day suite in the Gotham Hospital, are recovering from operations for the removal of tonsils and adenoids, The Sun learned today.

Dr. William F. Mayer-Hermann of the hospital staff, reported that his patients were doing nicely.

Mr. Bata, recently arrived from Czecho-Slovakia, is in Belcamp, Md., supervising the construction of an American duplicate of his European factory, situated at Zlin. He hopes there to employ eventually some 10,000 shoe workers. He arrived here on the Ile de France on July 6.

Mr. Bata came to this country as head of a firm whose assets have been estimated at nearly $300,000,000. He smilingly admitted, however, to reporters that he had found it rather difficult to raise enough ready cash to make the trip. Besides his wife and five children he was accompanied by a governess and a maid. Despite rumors to the contrary the Bata Works have remained under the company's own management since the occupation of his country by the Germans.

Traveling in Poland.

"I was traveling in Poland and Rumania at the time of the occupation," he said. "And I was informed that the Germans were interested in having me come back and manage the business as usual."

About the new plant: "It isn't a new story," he said. "We bought the land about six years ago and construction has started already. It is difficult to say how many will be employed in Maryland at this time but eventually 10,000 might be the figure."

On the subject of money, Mr. Bata indicated that the American company might do some financing here soon. Funds for expansion of the plant will have to be obtained here, he explained, because of the difficulty of transferring capital from Europe due to war conditions.

When he arrived in this country, he said that his company had in mind several locations for other plants throughout the States.

Mr. Bata said that the type and price of American shoes would be determined only after a survey of the needs and possibilities of the American market. This was taken as an indication that Bata shoes would invade the market far above the $2.00 retail field such as the Czech plant has been exporting to this country in the past months.

Graduate of Berlin University.

Dr. Mayer-Hermann is a graduate of Berlin University. He was the head physician of the ear and nose department of one of Berlin's city hospitals. For the last several years he has been practicing in New York city.

His two patients, Mary, 7, and Jan Jr., 9, are the youngest of the five Bata children. Mr. Bata has three other daughters, aged 15, 17 and 19.

Said Dr. Mayer-Hermann today: "I was on the wrong side before. I am ready to go to war for the Allies today."

The doctor is a personal physician for Maria Jeritza, the Metropolitan soprano; Lauritz Melchoir, Elisabeth Rethberg, Julia Peters, Michael Bohnen, Marian Anderson, Maurice Evans, Jan Kiepura, Lotte Lehmann, Yarmilla Novotna, Petei Lorre.

Three 1911 Battleships Listed for Soviet Fleet

The principal vessels of the Soviet fleet are listed in Jane's Fighting Ships, standard publication of the navies of the world, as three battleships, all built in 1911, two aircraft carriers, seven cruisers, thirteen destroyers and at least 134 submarines. In addition, there are many small ships, including thirteen mine layers and about twenty torpedo boats.

Reports on the number of submarines are admittedly speculative, but Japanese sources have reported that the Soviet fleet based at Vladivostock includes seventy submarines, in addition to small patrol vessels. Most of the larger ships are concentrated in the Baltic Sea.

SEP 20 1939

Three new battleships of 35,000 tons were reported planned, but the first was just started this year. The personnel of the fleet is estimated at about 23,600 men, of whom 10,000 are sea-going.

Salvation Army Operates 'Huts' Near Trenches

SEP 20 1939

Minister Says Use of Soldiers of All Nations, as It Did in the Last War

N.Y.-SEPT. 19 (TRIB.)

The Salvation Army has already started to muster its forces for service on the present battlefields of Europe to minister to the welfare of soldiers of all belligerents just as it did in the last world war, George L. Carpenter, sixty-seven-year-old general-elect of the organization, announced yesterday.

Gen. Carpenter, who will succeed Gen. Evangeline Booth as international head of the Salvation Army on Nov. 1, said that the organization had already opened thirty-two "huts" for soldiers behind the lines on the western front and in the British Isles. These shelters are already providing food, recreation, correspondence materials and spiritual guidance for recruits and men i nthe trenches "as effectively" as this was accomplished in the "huts" the organization established behind the front lines during the World War," he said.

Gen. Carpenter arrived in New York yesterday morning from Toronto on his way to London to assume his new duties at the international headquarters of the Salvation Army there. He and Mrs. Carpenter, who has also devoted her life to the Salvation Army's work, came to New York solely to take advantage of the safety of a United States ship for their Atlantic crossing. They had planned to sail today on the United States liner Washington, but departure of this ship was postponed last night until Friday.

Gen. Carpenter emphasized that the Salvation Army's war-time work with soldiers would be carried on without regard for the nationality of the soldiers served. He said that the practice of the last war of having the Army's units in each nation minister primarily to their own nationals would be continued in the persent conflict.

He asserted that Fuehrer Adolf Hitler had issued a special order to allow Salvation Army workers to carry on their work and wear the organization's uniforms in Germany. He said he believed that Salvation Army was the only non-Nazi organization in Germany to have its own uniform and predicted that the war-time work of the German units of the organization would be similar to that done in England and France.

Gen Carpenter said that appeals for funds had already been issued in belligerent countries, including Canada, to support the organization's shelters. He said the cost of fifty-seven "huts" opened or planned would total about $720,000. No appeal for financial aid in the United States and other neutral countries has as yet been planned by the Salvation Army, he said.

Gen. Carpenter condemned the present war as "folly," but said that the Salvation Army, as an international organization, was not concerned with what country might be to blame for starting the conflict. He added that he had a three-point program for administering the affairs of the Salvation Army and that each point was "religion."

Gen Carpenter was interviewed at the Evangeline House, 123 West Thirteenth Street.

Polish Jews' Federation Meets Here on Refugees

Author Suggests Australia and South America as Havens

N.Y.-SEPT. 19 (TIMES)

The World Federation of Polish Jews Abroad met for its third biennial conference yesterday at the Hotel Astor, considering problems of Jewish immigration into uncongested countries. More than two hundred delegates from fourteen countries were represented at the conference, which will continue through Sunday. Zelig Tygel, chairman, announced that M. Maldwin Fertig, a member of the Transit Commission, had been appointed chairman of the executive committee of the emergency campaign for relief in Poland, which will function under the federation.

Melvin Ravitch, author, of Melbourne, Australia, said that his country, with a population of 7,000,000, could easily provide for 100,000,000. He observed that there were about 8,000,000 Jews living under terroristic conditions in Europe who could easily be absorbed into underpopulated countries such as Australia and South America.

"There is no doubt that the Nazis will force the Jews to migrate from that portion of Poland which they have captured," Mr. Ravitch said. "Just what Russia will do is very uncertain."

Mr. Ravitch emigrated from Poland to Australia five years ago.

Wolf Orzech, of Argentina, secretary of the Federation of Polish Jews in South America, said that while South American governments "were disinclined to permit immigration indiscriminately" they might permit entry of skilled Jewish professional men and tradesmen under a selective immigration system.

U. S. Practices Laying Mines in Narragansett

Tells Shipping to Give Wide Berth to Dummies

N.Y.-SEPT. 19 (HERALD TRIB.)

Mine-laying practice has been started by the War Department off the Rhode Island coast in Narragansett Bay and the bay's west passage, it was disclosed yesterday by Comdr. John P. Barrett, of the Navy Department's hydrographic bureau.

The operations began Sept. 13 and will be continued until Oct. 5. All shipping has been instructed to pass to the east of the easternmost buoys marking the area in which the dummy mines are being laid down. The tops of the mines are seven feet below the surface at low water. Comdr. Barrett described the mine-laying activity as "routine" and said it had not been ordered as a result of the situation in Europe.

SOUTH EUROPE NEUTRAL BLOC LEANS TO ROME

SEP 20 1939

Italy Is Seen Assuming Leadership Of Front Reaching Black Sea

New Tightening Of Relations With Spain Reported Among Diplomats

EDWARD KENNEDY

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Sept. 19—Italy, continuing preparations for possible war, but preserving her non-belligerent status, appeared tonight to be assuming the leadership of a great neutral bloc in southern Europe stretching from the Atlantic to the Black Sea.

Reports from Balkan capitals indicated those states, striving to keep out of the European war, were looking more and more toward Rome for leadership and protection. A new tightening of Italian-Spanish relations also was reported among diplomats.

Call Role Natural One

Authoritative Italians said it was only natural that Italy, the most powerful European nation not involved in the war, should assume the role of guiding southern Europe, for the present at least.

Indications increased, meanwhile, that Italy had no idea of entering the war in the near future.

Italian ships are on all seas. The appointment of Guiseppe Bastianini, hitherto Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, as Ambassador to London was accepted as evidence that Italy was not expecting war with that country. Bastianini was appointed last night to fill a vacancy existing since July.

Spain Reported Warm

Observers here believed Italy likely would strive to strengthen her position as leader of European neutrals.

After the German-Soviet Russian non-aggression pact was signed, Spain recoiled from the Rome-Berlin Axis. Now, however, with Italy steering clear of the war, Spain was reported more distant toward Germany, but warm to Italy.

The scheduled visit of Generalissimo Franco of Spain to Italy this month was postponed indefinitely tonight.

An official communique said:

"As was known, El Caudillo was coming to Italy for an official visit at the end of September.

"Because of international developments that visit to which the Italian people have been looking forward with pleasure will be postponed until a date to be fixed."

Would Study Pact Import

The first reaction of foreign observers was that the Spanish chieftain wished time to study the full import of the Russian-German non-aggression pact and their occupation of Poland.

Fascist officials have suggested that Mussolini and Franco have kept in close contact.

The belief was expressed that the bloc would refrain from signing a formal pact. The neutral front was described rather as an "unwritten community of interest," with Italy the frontal nation in close diplomatic relationship with Spain, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Rumania and Greece.

Trade gains for Italy among these nations have been reported in recent days.

Talks to Recognize Soviets Reported; Belgrade Sees Shift in Balkin Balance

BELGRADE, Sept. 19 (AP).—Negotiations for recognition of the Soviet government by Yugoslavia and the conclusion of a non-aggression pact were reliably reported under way tonight. Hitherto, Yugoslavia has had no diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union.

Voja Gorgevic, former Yugoslav Agriculture Minister and now president of the Serb peasant cooperatives, flew to Moscow a few days ago accompanied by a general and a diplomat. He returned to Belgrade yesterday, but today took an airplane again for an "unknown desination." Authoritative sources said the negotiations were nearly completed. The government, however, maintained an official silence.

Belgrade diplomats saw a sudden improvement of relations between the world's greatest Slav power and the small Slav kingdom on the Adriatic as affecting the balance of power in the whole of the Balkans.

The Yugoslav Regent, Prince Paul, always has been considered a stern opponent of an accord with Soviet Russia. Thousands of Russian monarchists still are harbored in Yugoslavia, and some have risen to important positions in the civil service.

There is a historic precedent for Yugoslav-Russian friendship, however. It was Czaristic Russia which came to the help of little Serbia—the nucleus of post-war Yugoslavia—when Austria laid down her ultimatum in 1914.

A friendship with Bulgaria has been cultivated assiduously by Soviet leaders, and a Russo-Yugoslav entente would put Pan-Slavism virtually on the plane of twenty-five years ago.

5 Nations Vow Neutral Stand At Copenhagen

SEP 20 1939

Denmark, Sweden, Finland, Norway and Iceland End Parley on War's Effects

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 19 (AP).—Northern European neutral states reaffirmed today their determination to remain outside the European conflict.

A joint communique, issued at the close of a two-day conference of Danish, Swedish, Norwegian and Finnish Prime Ministers and Foreign Ministers and a representative of Iceland, also stressed the determination of their countries to "uphold their right to continue their traditional commercial relations with all states, including belligerent powers."

The text of the communique follows:

"The Prime Ministers and Foreign Minister of Denmark, Finland, Norway, Sweden and the Minister of Iceland to Denmark discussed at a meeting in Copenhagen Sept. 18 and Sept. 19 the conditions of their countries in the calamitous war which has broken out.

"They confirm once again the steadfast will of their countries to carry on a strictly equitable policy of neutrality in their relations with parties in the conflict. They are determined to pursue this policy in close collaboration with each other and to co-operate in its execution with other states inspired by similar intentions.

"In the face of manifold difficulties and losses which war in any circumtances will inflict also upon the northern peoples in their daily existence and in their economic life, they intend by intimate co-operation to alleviate difficulties to the greatest possible extent.

"It has been decided that special committees, set up in view of war conditions, shall enter at the earliest date into mutual negotiations on all appropriate issues.

"The ministers taking part in the discussions appeal to their peoples to face the anxieties and privations of wartime and with calmness and composure give expression to their conviction that it is in the interest not only of the northern peoples, but of all nations, that throughout the war there remains a group of states which may facilitate that reconciliation of belligerent nations which the future must bring."

Queen Repeats Neutral Stand Of Netherlands

Envoys of Allies Sit Apart From Nazi as Wilhelmina Opens Dutch Parliament

THE HAGUE, Sept. 19 (AP).—British and French envoys kept an aisle between them and the German envoy here today at the opening of Parliament, before which Queen Wilhelmina expressed pity for war victims and reaffirmed the Netherlands' neutrality. Envoys customarily sit together.

The Queen, who rode to Parliament in a historic golden coach with Princess Juliana and Prince Bernhard, read her throne speech herself, holding a lorgnette throughout. Speaking at the Hall of Knights under what she described as "somber circumstances," she expressed the hope that her country might be saved from "the horrors of war."

Two Socialist ministers sat on Cabinet benches for the first time. Six National Socialist members of Parliament greeted one another with outstretched hands in Nazi fashion. All members of Parliament joined in the traditional three cheers for the Queen.

SEP 20 1939

"I rejoice that our friendly relations with all powers continue unimpaired," the Queen said. "This refers especially to our relations with those neutral countries with which we established closer contact in previous periods."

She expressed conviction that better international conditions might be established by negotiations. This conviction, she said, was based on widespread approval of the offers of King Leopold III of the Belgians and herself to mediate the European dispute, and of the peace appeals of the northern European neutral countries.

While declaring food stocks in the Netherlands were ample, the Queen said navigation, fishing and agriculture were in an unfavorable position, the latter because of the dislocation of exports.

Finance Minister D. J. de Geer told Parliament, in submitting the budget, that the heavy cost of mobilization and defense measures in the Netherlands would make necessary increased income taxes and new profits taxes to cover expected deficits in the calendar years 1940 and 1941. ORDINARY EXPENSES for 1940 were estimated at 800,000,000 guilders ($425,120,000) and income at 745,000,000 ($395,893,000), leaving a deficit of 55,000,000 guilders ($29,227,000).

The ordinary budget includes 250,000,000 guilders ($132,850,000), for defense expenditures, which experts estimate will total 700,000,000 guilders ($371,980,000) in 1940, part of which may have to be met by borrowing.

The government has nearly 100,000,000 guilders ($53,140,000) voted for mobilization in the September, 1938, crisis, and will ask a special appropriation of another 100,000,000 guilders to cover the cost of keeping about 450,000 men under arms.

There was no indication of the amount of tax increases which may be submitted. Income tax rates now range from 2 to 70 per cent.

WILHELMINA STILL HOPES FOR PEACE

Queen Tells of Mobilizing of Dutch Forces.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 19 (A. P.).—Queen Wilhelmina, in a speech from the throne opening the Dutch Parliament today, expressed her gratefulness that the Netherlands remained at peace and the hope that the war between other nations could be ended by negotiations.

Voicing pity for the victims of war, the Queen said: "I rejoice that our friendly relations with all Powers continues unimpaired. This refers especially to our relations to those neutral countries with which we established closer contact in previous periods."

She alluded here to the peace

appeals of the Lord Executive neutral States before the outbreak of hostilities and of the offer of the good offices of King Leopold of the Belgians and herself toward the mediation of European disputes.

The fact that these appeals had been approved by many people, the Queen said, strengthened her conviction that, despite disappointments, many still hope that better international conditions may be established by peaceful negotiations.

Her Majesty said that mobilization of the Dutch army and navy (in order to maintain strict neutrality) had been carried out perfectly.

Referring to economic conditions in Holland, she said that the navigation and fishing industries were in a very unfavorable position as was also agriculture, the last because of the dislocation of exports. On the other hand, the Queen added, foodstuffs were ample and even if rationing were resorted to later, this would not mean that there was any food shortage.

Vatican City Paper Fears Soviet Designs on Europe

By The Associated Press.

VATICAN CITY, Sept. 19—The Osservatore Romano, Vatican City newspaper, expressed fear tonight that the Soviet Army might follow its thrust into Poland with an attempt to spread communism farther into Europe.

The Vatican newspaper said that a radio broadcast from Moscow asserted that the aim of the invasion was "not only to protect the White Russians and the Ukrainian minority, but to open the way of communism toward the Western world."

The paper asked why Russia "felt it necessary to renovate her entire program in the Far East" when one or two army corps of the millions she can mobilize would suffice to achieve the establishment of order in the regions once hers.

Naval Personnel Will Be Doubled, Air Force Training To Be Pushed

SEP 20 1939

[By the Canadian Press]

Ottawa, Sept. 19—Defense Minister Ian Mackenzie announced tonight that two divisions of Canadian troops would be organized to be available as an expeditionary force if and when they should be required in the war against Germany.

The Government announced that other measures for Canada's immediate program of cooperation with Britain would include doubling the naval personnel, intensified air-force training and construction of a large number of anti-submarine craft.

It was believed the first division, of 16,000 men, would be ready for service overseas early in next year.

The Government's statement said the first aid requested by the British Government in response to Canada's offer was the facilitation of purchases by the United Kingdom of essential supplies.

For this purpose, it was said, it would be necessary to make Canadian dollars available to the British Government, probably involving the repatriation of Canadian securities held in London and later the granting of credits.

It was said the British Government wants naval craft, personnel and facilities, trained air personnel, and, in the militia field, technical officers, medical and engineering services.

Announcement of details of the Government's war policy followed two days of long Cabinet sessions.

In a Cabinet shakeup Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced tonight that Defense Minister Mackenzie would become Minister of Pensions and National Health, and Labor Minister Norman Rogers would be Defense Minister.

Pensions Minister C. G. Power was made Postmaster General and Postmaster General Norman A. McLarty was appointed Minister of Labor.

Destroyer Hunts U-Boat Off Coast of Nova Scotia

Depth Charge Is Dropped in 'Suspicious Area'

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 19 (CP).—The commander of the naval dockyard here issued a statement tonight saying: "Fairly reliable reports indicated that a submarine may have been operating off the Nova Scotia coast today."

SEP 20 1939

During the search for the suspected submarine a Canadian destroyer dropped a depth charge in a "suspicious area," the statement by Comdr. H. E. Reid declared. It was not known whether the charge took effect on an enemy submersible.

The commander's announcement follows: "Fairly reliable reports indicate that a submarine may have been operating off the Nova Scotia coast today. Search by sea and air was instituted. As a result a destroyer dropped a depth charge in a suspicious area. Results of the attack by the destroyer are unknown."

The source of the report a submarine was operating off this port was not disclosed.

While the navy did not reveal the spot where the depth charge had been dropped, shore observers said a destroyed had discharged one off Chebucto Head, at the mouth of the outer Halifax harbor. A spout of water shot skyward behind the warship, they said.

SOME SURVIVORS SAID THEY LATER SAW THE CAPTAIN SWIMMING STRONGLY.

HITLER HIGHLIGHTS

DANZIG, SEPT. 19-(AP)-HIGHLIGHTS OF ADOLF HITLER'S SPEECH:

THE GERMAN PEOPLE ARE MUCH MORE ENTHUSIASTIC THAN IN 1914, BUT NOW IT IS NOT A SUPERFICIAL HURRAH PATRIOTISM BUT AN EMPHATIC DETERMINATION.

POLAND NEVER AGAIN WILL RISE IN THE FORM OF THE VERSAILLES TREATY. NOT ONLY GERMANY BUT ALSO RUSSIA GUARANTEE THAT.

-0-

THE GENTLEMEN (WINSTON CHURCHILL, ALFRED DUFF-COOPER, AND ANTHONY EDEN, BRITISH LEADERS) CAN BE ASSURED: THROUGH THEIR LAUGHABLE PROPAGANDA THEY NEVER AGAIN WILL DISINTEGRATE THE GERMAN PEOPLE. THESE PROPAGANDA BUNGLERS OUGHT FIRST OF ALL TO COME TO US AND UNDERGO A SCHOOLING.

-0-

WHEN THEY SAY THAT THIS WAR WILL LAST FOR THREE YEARS, THEN I CAN ONLY EXPRESS BY PITY FOR THE FRENCH POILU. X X X WHETHER THE WAR WILL LAST THREE YEARS ALSO DEPENDS ON US. IF IT SHOULD LAST FOR THREE YEARS THE WORD CAPITULATION (FOR GERMANY) WILL NOT APPEAR AT THE END OF THE THIRD YEAR, NEITHER AT THE END OF THE FOURTH NOR THE END OF THE SEVENTH YEAR.

-0-

THOSE WHO DREAMED OF SHATTERING GERMANY AND LAY IN RUINS GERMAN CITIES ARE NO LONGER TO BE HEARD FROM BECAUSE THEY KNOW THAT FOR EVERY BOMB FALLING ON A GERMAN CITY FIVE OR 10 WILL FALL ON THEIR CITIES.

AT THIS MOMENT ROUGHLY 300,000 POLISH SOLDIERS ARE IN GERMAN CAPTIVITY. NEARLY 2,000 OFFICERS ARE AMONGST THEM AND MANY GENERALS.

POLAND HAS NEVER BEEN A DEMOCRACY. A VERY THIN UPPERCRUST NOT ONLY RULED OVER FOREIGN NATIONALITIES BUT ALSO OVER THEIR SO-CALLED OWN PEOPLE.

I SHOULD LIKE TO EXPLAIN RIGHT HERE: RUSSIA REMAINS WHAT IT IS AND GERMANY WILL REMAIN WHAT IT IS. BUT BOTH REGIMES SEE CLEARLY THAT NEITHER THE RUSSIAN NOR THE GERMAN REGIMES WANT TO SACRIFICE EVEN A SINGLE MAN FOR THE INTERESTS OF THE WESTERN DEMOCRACIES.

HITLER HIGHLIGHTS (2SO)

DANZIG, SEPT 19-(AP)-HERE ARE SOME HIGHLIGHTS FROM ADOLF HITLER'S SPEECH HERE TODAY:

I HAVE NO WAR AIMS AGAINST EITHER ENGLAND OR FRANCE. I HAVE ALWAYS ENDEAVORED TO BRING ABOUT FRIENDLY RELATIONS.

-0-

SEP 20 1939

IT WILL BE DEPENDENT UPON US IF WAR LASTS THAT LONG (THREE YEARS, AS THE BRITISH HAVE ASSERTED). IF IT SHOULD LAST THREE YEARS THE WORD CAPITULATION WILL NOT STAND AT ITS END NOR WILL IT STAND AT THE END OF THE FOURTH, FIFTH, SIXTH OR SEVENTH YEAR.

-0-

THEY (BRITAIN AND FRANCE) ARE NOT FACING THE GERMANY OF BETHMANN-HOLLWEG (GERMAN CHANCELLOR WHEN THE FIRST WORLD WAR BEGAN), BUT A GERMANY OF FRIEDRICIAN TIME (MEANING FREDERICK THE GREAT).

I WANTED TO ACHIEVE REAL FRIENDSHIP X X X BUT IF ENGLAND TODAY THINKS IT IS NECESSARY TO MAKE WAR ON GERMANY IT WILL BE DISAPPOINTED.

POLAND NEVER AGAIN WILL RISE IN THE FORM IT ASSUMED UNDER THE VERSAILLES TREATY. NOT ONLY GERMANY GUARANTEES THIS BUT ALSO RUSSIA.

-0-

TO THE LAST BREATH WE WILL STAND FOR GREATER GERMANY AND PEOPLES OF GERMAN ORIGIN. DOWN DEEP THEY (GERMANS) HAVE THE ENTHUSIASM TO WIN THIS WAR.

SEP 20 1939

WE WILL FIGHT THE WAR IN THE SAME MANNER THAT OTHERS FIGHT. X X X THE ENGLISH ARE LEADING A WAR AGAINST THE WOMEN AND CHILDREN EVEN OF NEUTRAL STATES (BY BLOCKADE).

IF FOREIGN STATESMEN SAY THEY CAN NOT HAVE FAITH IN THE WORD OF GERMAN STATESMEN WE CAN SAY WE HAVE NO CONFIDENCE IN THE WORD OF THE MEN WHO MADE THE VERSAILLES TREATY.

GERMAN ACTIVITY, GERMAN LABOR AND GERMAN CULTURE WAS THE BASIS FOR THIS COUNTRY (POLAND). POLES DID NOT CREATE THEIR COUNTRY.

I DO NOT KNOW HOW ENGLAND OR FRANCE OR AMERICA WOULD HAVE DEALT WITH SUCH A PEACE SOLUTION (VERSAILLES).

-0-

SEP 20 1939

I ATTEMPTED TO FIND A WAY TO CONNECT EAST PRUSSIA WITH THE REICH AND PROVIDE AN OUTLET TO THE SEA FOR POLAND. I WAS TOO MODERATE. I DID IT BECAUSE I WANTED TO SPARE THE GERMAN AS WELL AS THE POLISH PEOPLE THE OTHER SOLUTION. IN RETURN FOR THESE I WAS READY TO GUARANTEE POLISH BORDERS DESPITE HARDLY BEARABLE CONDITIONS.

I DO NOT KNOW WHAT STATE OF MIND THE POLISH GOVERNMENT WAS IN WHEN IT REFUSED THIS OFFER X X X WHO COULD HAVE MADE POLAND SO BLIND?

THE GERMANY OF TODAY DOES NOT ACCEPT ULTIMATUMS. THIS SHOULD BE REMEMBERED X X X THE REICH WILL NOT BE TALKED TO IN SUCH TONE.

-0-

ENGLAND SHOULD BE HAPPY TO KNOW THAT GERMANY AND THE U.S.S.R. CAME TO TERMS. MOREOVER, IT SHOULD HAVE A QUIETING EFFECT UPON THE EDENS AND CHURCHILLS THAT GERMANY DOES NOT WANT TO CONQUER THE UKRAINE.

NEUTRALITY (PMS BUDGET)

WASHINGTON SEPT. 19-(AP)-IN RESPONSE TO A POLISH APPEAL, PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT HAS CALLED ON EUROPEAN BELLIGERENTS TO RENEW THEIR PLEDGE AGAINST THE BOMBING OF CIVILIANS FROM THE AIR.

HE EXPRESSED LAST NIGHT HIS "EARNEST HOPE" THAT WARRING NATIONS "WILL TAKE MEASURES TO ASSURE THEMSELVES THAT THEIR RESPECTIVE AIR FORCES ARE SHOWING THAT REGARD FOR THE LIVES OF NON-COMBATANTS WHICH THEIR REPLIES TO MY APPEAL OF SEPT. 1 HAVE LED THE WORLD TO EXPECT." SEP 20 1939

MR.ROOSEVELT'S STATEMENT REPLIED TO A MESSAGE FROM PRESIDENT MOSCICKI OF POLAND SAYING THAT "FOR SOME DAYS PAST GERMAN AIRCRAFT HAVE DELIBERATELY AND METHODICALLY BEEN BOMBING POLISH TOWNS AND VILLAGES WHICH CONTAIN NO CONCEIVABLE MILITARY OBJECTIVES."

MR.ROOSEVELT SAID HE WAS "DEEPLY SHOCKED" BY THIS STATEMENT AS WELL AS BY OTHER REPORTS HE HAD RECEIVED, INCLUDING SOME FROM AMERICAN OFFICIALS IN POLAND.

"IT HAD BEEN MY HOPE," HE SAID, "FOLLOWING THE RECEIPT FROM THE SEVERAL BELLIGERENT POWERS OF THE REPLIES TO MY APPEAL OF SEPT. 1, IN WHICH THEY STATED THEIR INTENTIONS TO LIMIT THE OPERATIONS OF THEIR AIR FORCES TO MILITARY OBJECTIVES, THAT THE WORLD WOULD BE SPARED THE HORROR OF WITNESSING DURING THIS WAR THE BOMBING OF OPEN TOWNS AND VILLAGES AND THE SLAUGHTERING OF THOUSANDS OF INNOCENT AND DEFENSELESS MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN."

(MR.ROOSEVELT'S APPEAL OF SEPT. 1 TO REFRAIN FROM BOMBING CIVILIAN POPULATIONS WAS ADDRESSED TO GERMANY, POLAND, GREAT BRITAIN, FRANCE AND ITALY. HE RECEIVED ASSURANCES FROM THE FOUR BELLIGERENTS.) SEP 20 1939

THE PRESIDENTIAL STATEMENT LAST NIGHT WAS ONLY ONE OF THE REPERCUSSIONS OF THE EUROPEAN WAR SOUNDED IN A CAPITAL ASTIR WITH PREPARATIONS FOR THE SPECIAL SESSION OF CONGRESS THURSDAY. OTHER DEVELOPMENTS:

1. SECRETARY MORGENTHAU SAID HE WAS DISTURBED BY THE DECLINE IN THE BRITISH POUND AND WAS SEEKING MEANS OF COMBATTING SPECULATION IN THE CURRENCY.

2. SECRETARY WALLACE CALLED HIS NEWLY APPOINTED AGRICULTURAL ADVISORY COUNCIL TODAY TO DISCUSS FARM AND FOOD SUPPLY SITUATIONS.

3. MR.ROOSEVELT ISSUED AN EXECUTIVE ORDER PROVIDING FOR AN INCREASE OF 2,000 MEN IN THE COAST GUARD. IT WAS UNDERSTOOD THE ADDITION WAS NECESSITATED BY THE EXTENSIVE PATROL OF THE ATLANTIC BY COAST GUARD AND NAVAL VESSELS, DESIGNED TO WATCH ACTIVITIES OF BELLIGERENT WAR VESSELS IN THE APPROACHES TO THE UNITED STATES AND THE PANAMA CANAL.

4. DISCUSS OF ADMINISTRATION PROPOSALS TO REVISE THE NEUTRALITY LAW CONTINUED, WITH SENATOR BORAH (R-IDAHO), OUTSPOKEN FOE OF THE SUGGESTED CHANGES, CONTENDING THAT A RIFT HAD DEVELOPED

30.24-3465 30.24 3465

IN THE RANKS OF ADMINISTRATION SUPPORTERS AS A RESULT OF THE RECENT SIGNS OF FRIENDLINESS BETWEEN GERMANY, RUSSIA AND JAPAN.

5. THE GERMAN EMBASSY ASSERTED IN A STATEMENT THAT RETREATING POLISH TROOPS LEFT MUSTARD GAS MINES ON A BRIDGE IN VIOLATION OF A 1925 PACT OUTLAWING POISONOUS GAS WARFARE.

MORGENTHAU TOLD REPORTERS THAT SOME ACTION MIGHT BE NECESSARY IN CONNECTION WITH THE DEPRECIATION OF THE BRITISH POUND BECAUSE OF ITS UNSETTLING EFFECT TO THE AMERICAN IMPORTER AND EXPORTER.

HE SAID HIS FIRST STEP WAS TO DEMAND MORE INFORMATION FROM THE NEW YORK FEDERAL RESERVE BANK ABOUT SALES OF THE BRITISH MONEY ON THE NEW-YORK MARKET. HE ADDED "HE HAD A PRETTY GOOD IDEA" THAT SOME OF THE SELLING HAD BEEN DONE BY CENTRAL BANKS OF CERTAIN UNNAMED COUNTRIES.

SEP 20 1939

SENATOR BORAH SAID HE BELIEVED THE RUSSIAN ACTION IN POLAND INCREASED THE CHANCES FOR PEACE "BUT NOT RIGHT AWAY." HE THOUGHT THIS MIGHT COME ABOUT THROUGH BRITISH AND FRENCH ACCEPTANCE OF GERMAN PEACE PROPOSALS AFTER THE FORMER HAD CONCLUDED "THEY HAD DISCHARGED THEIR OBLIGATION TO POLAND."

THE ADMINISTRATION'S PROPOSAL TO REPEAL THE EMBARGO PROVISIONS OF THE NEUTRALITY LAW, BORAH ASSERTED, HAS LOST SUPPORT IN THE LAST TWO WEEKS BECAUSE OF THE POSSIBILITY THAT WAR GOODS MIGHT BE SHIPPED FROM THIS COUNTRY TO GERMANY BY WAY OF RUSSIA OR JAPAN.

THE ADMINISTRATION PLAN WOULD ALLOW WARRING NATIONS TO BUY SUPPLIES HERE IF THEY PAID CASH AND TRANSPORTED THEM IN THEIR OWN SHIPS. IT HAS BEEN BELIEVED GENERALLY THAT BRITISH NAVAL POWER WOULD PREVENT GERMANY'S OBTAINING AMERICAN SUPPLIES UNDER SUCH CONDITIONS.

BORAH EXPRESSED THE OPINION THAT ENGLAND AND FRANCE HAD BEEN "PULLING THEIR PUNCHES" ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

"THERE IS SOMETHING PHONEY ABOUT THIS WAR," HE SAID. IT WOULD HAVE BEEN EXPECTED, HE ADDED, THAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE WOULD MAKE THEIR BIG ATTACK WHILE GERMANY AND RUSSIA WERE "ENGAGED IN THE EAST."

SEP 20 1939

THE GERMAN EMBASSY STATEMENT CONTAINED AN OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT FROM THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND ASSERTING THAT POISON GAS MINES WERE UNCOVERED IN A BARRICADE OF TREES ON THE JASIOLKA BRIDGE IN JASLO, POLAND, ON SEPT. 8. THE STATEMENT SAID THAT 14 "GERMAN PIONEERS" WERE INJURED AND TWO OF THEM DIED.

THE STATEMENT CONCLUDED THAT A THOROUGH INVESTIGATION DISCLOSED "DEFINITE PROOF" THAT THE MINES CONTAINED MUSTARD GAS AND "THUS POLAND VIOLATED THE CONVENTION OF JUNE 17TH, 1925, WHICH FORBIDS ANY USE OF POISONOUS GAS."

SENATOR CONNALLY [illegible], A MEMBER OF THE FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE, TOLD REPOR[illegible] THAT THE UNITED STATES SHOULD FURTHER INCREASE ITS MILITARY [illegible]AVAL STRENGTH "IN ORDER TO PREVENT ATTACKS FROM AMBITIOUS PO[illegible] AND PRESERVE PEACE FOR THIS COUNTRY."

"IN THE PRESENT CONDI[illegible]N OF THE WORLD," CONNALLY ADDED, "WE MIGHT AS WELL RECOGNIZE W[illegible] HAVE GOT TO ARM TO THE TEETH AND STAY ARMED."

SEP 20 1939

CONNALLY SAID HE FAVORED REPEAL OF THE EXISTING ARMS EMBARGO AND THE SUBSTITUTION OF A SYSTEM UNDER WHICH FOREIGN PURCHASERS OF ARMS WOULD TRANSPORT THEM FROM THE UNITED STATES IN THEIR OWN

SHIPS. HE SAID THE METHOD OF PAYMENT FOR THE ARMS "WHETHER IN CASH OR CREDIT BY PRIVATE FIRMS IS NOT VITAL."

CONNALLY PREDICTED THERE WOULD BE SUFFICIENT SENATE VOTES TO REPEAL THE ARMS EMBARGO.

NIGHT LEAD NEUTRALITY (BUDGET)

WASHINGTON, SEPT. 19-(AP)-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT DISCLOSED TODAY THAT HE WOULD GO BEFORE CONGRESS ON THURSDAY TO DELIVER AN ADDRESS OFFICIALLY OPENING THE HISTORIC CONTEST OVER THE NEUTRALITY LAW.

HE BEGAN DRAFTING THAT SIGNIFICANT DOCUMENT--WHICH IS TO BE SHORT BECAUSE CONGRESS ALREADY HAS MUCH INFORMATION ON THE SUBJECT --AS MEMBERS OF HOUSE AND SENATE STARTED ARRIVING IN THE CITY FOR THE SPECIAL SESSION.

SEP 20 1939

AMONG THOSE WHO REACHED THE CAPITOL, SENATORS VANDENBERG (R-MICH) AND HOLT (D-WVA) IMMEDIATELY ANNOUNCED THEIR OPPOSITION TO CHANGING THE NEUTRALITY STATUTE AT THIS TIME, WHILE SENATORS CONNALLY (D-TEX) AND GUFFEY (D-PA) SAID THEY WOULD SUPPORT THE ADMINISTRATION'S PROPOSAL THAT THE EMBARGO ON ARMS SHIPMENTS TO EUROPEAN BELLIGERENTS BE REPEALED.

ASSERTING THAT HIS MIND WAS STILL OPEN ON THAT QUESTION, SENATOR REYNOLDS (D-NC), JUST RETURNED FROM EUROPE, CHARGED THE ADMINISTRATION HAD "FALLEN DOWN MISERABLY" IN PROVIDING TRANSPORTATION FOR AMERICANS STRANDED IN WAR ZONES. THE U.S. MANHATTAN ON WHICH HE REACHED NEW YORK YESTERDAY CARRIED, HE SAID, A LARGE NUMBER OF ALIENS, WHOSE ACCOMMODATIONS SHOULD HAVE BEEN OCCUPIED BY AMERICAN CITIZENS.

WITH THE SPECIAL SESSION SCHEDULED TO CONVENE THURSDAY, A REAL INFLUX OF LEGISLATORS AND OUTPOURING OF STATEMENTS ON THE NEUTRALITY ISSUE IS EXPECTED TOMORROW. TOMORROW, TOO, MR. ROOSEVELT PLANS TO HOLD HIS "NATIONAL UNITY" CONFERENCE AT THE WHITE HOUSE ON THE ADMINISTRATION'S NEUTRALITY PROGRAM.

TO THIS GATHERING HE HAS INVITED NOT ONLY THE DEMOCRATIC LEADERSHIP IN CONGRESS, BUT THE REPUBLICAN LEADERS AS WELL, AND TO THIS GROUP HE HAS ADDED THE NAMES OF ALF M.LANDON AND COL. FRANK KNOX, THE 1936 PRESIDENTIAL AND VICE PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

WHILE THE ROW WAS DEVELOPING AT THE CAPITOL, OTHER RELATED DEVELOPMENTS WERE OCCURRING IN THE CITY:

THE TREASURY ASKED FOR BIDS ON MANGANESE ORE, ITS FIRST PURCHASE IN THE $100,000,000 PROGRAM AUTHORIZED BY CONGRESS LAST SESSION FOR THE ACQUISITION AND STORING OF VITAL WAR MATERIALS NOT FREELY PRODUCED IN THIS COUNTRY.

SECRETARY WALLACE ASKED LEADERS OF THE FARM, FOOD AND CLOTHING INDUSTRIES TO COOPERATE WITH THE GOVERNMENT IN PREVENTING "PROFITEERING." HIS REQUEST WAS MADE AT A MEETING OF THE AGRICULTURE DEPARTMENT'S ADVISORY COUNCIL, MADE UP OF 30 FARM AND BUSINESS LEADERS.

SEP 20 1939

ADDRESSING A SPECIAL CONFERENCE OF MAYORS, MAYOR F.H.LAGUARDIA OF NEW YORK CITY, ASSERTED THAT NATIONAL LEGISLATION WAS NEEDED TO KEEP THE WAR ABROAD FROM BEING MADE AN EXCUSE FOR "UNCONSCIONABLE" PROFITEERING IN FOODSTUFFS.

30.24- 3467

VANDENBERG, WHO IS EXPECTED TO ASSUME A POSITION OF LEADERSHIP IN THE BATTLE AGAINST THE ADMINISTRATION'S NEUTRALITY PROGRAM, TOOK THE POSITION THAT NOW THAT THE WAR HAS STARTED ANY ALTERATION IN THE STATUTE WOULD BE OF ITSELF AN UNNEUTRAL ACT. THIS POSITION, HE SAID, WAS BASED ON "ONE FUNDAMENTAL RULE":

"THE ONLY WAY YOU CAN HAVE A NEUTRAL ATTITUDE IS TO DEFINE IT IN ADVANCE OF ITS APPLICATION."

CHANGES MADE AFTER A WAR STARTS, HE SAID, WERE BOUND TO BE CONSIDERED UNNEUTRAL ACTS BY ONE SIDE OR THE OTHER.

"I BELIEVE IN NEUTRALITY REGARDLESS OF MY SYMPATHIES," HE SAID, "AND I HAVE PLENTY OF SYMPATHIES." SEP 20 1939

NOTING THAT SOME PERSONS WERE PREDICTING A LONG AND BITTER DEBATE, HE SAID THAT HE WOULD BE "NEITHER LONG NOR BITTER" BUT WOULD SIMPLY PRESENT HIS REASONS FOR BELIEVING THAT THE EMBARGO IS A SAFER WAY TO KEEP OUT OF THE WAR THAN CASH AND CARRY.

NOR, SAID VANDENBERG, WOULD HE PERMIT PARTISANSHIP TO ENTER INTO HIS DISCUSSION. HE WAS REFUSING, HE SAID, ALL INVITATIONS TO MAKE POLITICAL SPEECHES, AND WOULD CONTINUE TO DO SO.

AS FOR THE ACTUAL LEGISLATION TO BE CONSIDERED, HE SAID THAT IF THE BLOOM BILL IS PUT FORWARD IT INVOLVED NUMEROUS ISSUES WHICH MAY PROLONG THE SPECIAL SESSION. IT CONTAINS HE ADDED "AT LEAST A DOZEN NEW PRESIDENTIAL POWERS."

SENATOR CONNALLY BACKED REPEAL AND THE CASH AND CARRY SYSTEM, WITH SOME RESERVATIONS AS TO THE "CASH" PART OF THAT PROPOSITION.

30.24 3467

"THE IMPORTANT THING," HE SAID, "IS THE CARRIAGE IN FOREIGN SHIPS OF SUPPLIES PURCHASED HERE. THE METHODS OF PAYMENT--WHETHER IN CASH OR IN CREDIT EXTENDED BY PRIVATE FIRMS--IS NOT VITAL."

HE DECLARED HIMSELF IN FAVOR OF AN ADDITIONAL INCREASE IN "OUR NAVAL AND MILITARY STRENGTH," ADDING:

"IN THE CONDITION OF THE WORLD, WE MIGHT AS WELL RECOGNIZE THAT WE HAVE GOT TO ARM TO THE TEETH AND STAY ARMED TO THE TEETH TO PREVENT ATTACK FROM AMBITIOUS POWERS." #

THE WAR TODAY

BY

DEWITT MACKENZIE

SEP. 19

BELIEF IS GENERAL IN EUROPEAN CAPITALS, AND WASHINGTON AS WELL, THAT HERR HITLER WILL OFFER THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES PEACE IN THE IMMEDIATE FUTURE--AS SOON AS THE DOGGED REMNANTS OF THE POLISH ARMY HAVE GIVEN UP THEIR LAST DITCH.

SEP 20 1939

SUCH A PROPOSAL MIGHT BE MADE THROUGH MOSCOW, THROUGH SIGNOR MUSSOLINI OR THROUGH SOME NEUTRAL STATE OR GROUP OF STATES.

HITLER'S STRATEGY HAS BEEN DIRECTED TO THIS END SINCE THE BEGINNING OF THE WAR, AT LEAST UP TO THE RUSSIAN OCCUPATION OF EASTERN POLAND. WE HAVE HAD THE REMARKABLE CIRCUMSTANCE OF HIS DECLINING TO ATTACK ON THE WESTERN FRONT EXCEPTING WHERE FORCED TO IT, CLAIMING THAT HIS QUARREL WAS WITH POLAND AND NOT THE ALLIES.

THIS POLICY OF APPEASEMENT HAS BEEN DIRECTED ESPECIALLY TOWARD FRANCE, IN AN APPARENT EFFORT TO SPLIT THE ANGLO-FRENCH COMBINE. HITLER HAS BEEN BITTER TOWARD ENGLAND, CLAIMING THAT SHE EGGED POLAND ON TO FIGHT.

HOWEVER, IF THE SPOKEN AND WRITTEN WORD STILL RETAINS ANY MEANING AT ALL, THEN A GERMAN PEACE PROPOSAL NOW WILL FALL ON DEAF EARS. THE ALLIES ARE PLEDGED TO STICK WITH POLAND, DISMEMBERED OR OTHERWISE.

BRITAIN'S PEACE-MINDED BUT SPIRITED PREMIER CHAMBERLAIN HAS DECLARED THAT ENGLAND WOULDN'T MAKE TERMS WHILE GERMAC TROOPS REMAINED ON POLISH SOIL. MORE THAN ALL THAT, HE HAS ANNOUNCED THAT HIS COUNTRY WON'T QUIT UNTIL "HITLERISM HAS BEEN SMASHED."

THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT'S INTENTION TO FIGHT ON FOR POLAND WAS OFFICIALLY REAFFIRMED LAST NIGHT IN A STATEMENT WHICH CONDEMNED THE RUSSIAN OCCUPATION.

SEP 20 1939

THE TREND OF THIS VERY TERRIBLE CONFLICT WILL DEPEND IN LARGE DEGREE ON RUSSIA'S FUTURE ATTITUDE.

SOVIET PREMIER MOLOTOFF HAS ANNOUNCED THAT RUSSIA WILL REMAIN NEUTRAL. LIKE THE SCOTSMAN WHO WAS BEING SUED FOR BREACH OF PROMISE, HOWEVER, THE PREMIER WASN'T AS SPECIFIC AS THE ALLIES PERHAPS WOULD HAVE LIKED.

SANDY WAS ASKED BY THE JUDGE IF HE HAD PROMISED TO MARRY THE GIRL, TO WHICH THE DEFENDANT REPLIED:

"YES, YOUR HONOR, BUT I DIDN'T SAY WHEN."

THE SOVIET ANNOUNCEMENT DOESN'T SPECIFY THE DURATION OF NEUTRALITY, THOUGH IT MIGHT BE EXPECTED TO BE INDEFINITE UNLESS CHANGED CONDITIONS IMPELLED RUSSIA TO GET INTO THE MELEE.

IN ANY EVENT, PREMIER MOLOTOFF'S STATEMENT IS A LOGICAL ANSWER TO THE WIDESPREAD SPECULATION AS TO WHETHER THE SOVIET'S INTERVENTION IN POLAND MEANS PARTICIPATION IN THE EUROPEAN WAR. THAT IS, WHETHER RUSSIA INTENDS TO JOIN GERMANY AGAINST THE ALLIES.

LOOKING AT THE SITUATION IMPARTIALLY, NEUTRALITY IS GENERALLY REGARDED AS THE STAND BEST CALCULATED TO SERVE RUSSIA'S OWN INTERESTS IN THIS EMERGENCY. IT IS THE POSITION TOWARD WHICH SHE WOULD APPEAR TO HAVE BEEN HEADING ALL ALONG, AND UNLESS SHE CHANGES HORSES IN THE MIDDLE OF A VERY FAST RUNNING STREAM SHE WON'T DESERT HER POLICY UNLESS CONDITIONS ALTER GREATLY.

THE POINT OF THE THING ISN'T AT ALL OBSCURE. IF RUSSIA REMAINS NEUTRAL WHILE GERMANY, FRANCE AND ENGLAND BEAT THEIR HEADS AGAINST THE IRON WALL OF WAR, THE END OF THE CONFLICT LIKELY WILL FIND THE SOVIET THE DOMINANT POWER OF ALL EUROPE AND THE FAR EAST.

NOW THAT THE WAR IN POLAND IS VIRTUALLY OVER, THE FIGHTING IN THE WESTERN THEATER BETWEEN GERMANY AND THE ANGLO-FRANCH ALLIES MAY BE EXPECTED TO INCREASE IN INTENSITY. ALREADY, THE NAZIS HAVE BEEN ABLE TO WITHDRAW GREAT NUMBERS OF SOLDIERS FROM POLAND AND RUSH THEM TO THE WESTERN FRONT. THEY ALSO HAVE DETACHED SEVERAL THOUSAND WARPLANES TO SWELL THEIR ARMADA OPERATING AGAINST THE FRENCH AND ENGLISH.

THE CONFLICT MAY EASILY PROVE FAR MORE BLOODY THAN THE WORLD WAR. THE SIEGFRIED AND MAGINOT LINES, WHICH MUST BE CRACKED RESPECTIVELY BY THE ALLIES AND GERMANS BEFORE AN ADVANCE CAN BE MADE, ARE THE STRONGEST DEFENSES OF THEIR KIND EVER CONCEIVED BY MAN. THEORETICALLY THEY ARE WELL-NIGH IMPREGNABLE.

SEP 20 1939

AND THE NO-MAN'S-LAND WHICH LIES BETWEEN THEM--TWELVE TO FOURTEEN MILES OF GROUND FILLED WITH PILL-BOXES, MACHINE-GUN NESTS, MINES, BARBED-WIRE--IS A VERITABLE VALLEY OF DEATH. IN THE MIDST OF THIS NEST OF TRAPS THOUSANDS OF TROOPS MUST STRUGGLE AND DIE BEFORE THE MAIN LINES CAN EVEN BE ASSAULTED.

30.24 3469

THIS IS AT LEAST A PARTIAL ANSWER TO THE QUERY AS TO WHY THE ALLIES HAVEN'T WORKED FASTER IN THE WESTERN THEATER.

Prime Minister Scores Soviet Invasion ---Forbids Rash Adventures--- U-boats Are Being Sunk.

SEP 21 1939

LONDON, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Chamberlain declared today in the House of Commons that no threats could deter Great Britain and her allies from achieving their war aims, but that "what we will not do is to rush into adventures that offer little prospect of success."

With the obvious purpose of allaying public anxiety as to whether the western allies were striking vigorously enough against Germany, he declared:

"There is no sacrifice from which we will shrink. There is no operation we will not undertake, provided our responsible advisers, our allies and we ourselves are convinced that it will make an appropriate contribution to victory."

After the Prime Minister had spoken, Arthur Greenwood, leader of the Laborite opposition, declared that Russia, by marching into Poland, had become an aggressor.

"It is a matter of very deep regret that Poland was not provided more generously with sorely needed assistance," he said.

Answers Hitler's Danzig Speech.

Replying to Adolf Hitler's speech in Danzig yesterday, Mr. Chamberlain said that Great Britain's general war purpose was to "redeem Europe from the perpetual fear of German aggression and enable the peoples of Europe to preserve their independence and liberties." He added that "no threats will deter us or our French allies from this purpose."

He declared against uncertain adventures "calculated to impair our resources and to postpone ultimate victory."

"One lesson which military history teaches is that that road leads to disaster," he said.

Strategy, he went on, is "the art of concentrating decisive force at the decisive point at the decisive moment."

Says Strength Will Increase.

He said that he would "not hazard a guess at this stage of the war as to when or where the decisive force will be assembled or when the decisive moment will arrive." He said this must depend upon events and added:

"The scale of our preparations and the fact already announced that we are basing them on the assumption that duration of the war may be at least three years insures that our strength will increase progressively to meet whatever may come."

"Herr Hitler says much in his speech about the humane methods with which he has waged war," Mr. Chamberlain declared at one point in his speech.

"I can only say that methods are not made humane by calling them so and that accounts of German bombing of open towns and machine-gunning of refugees have shocked the whole world."

It was the Prime Minister's third weekly report on the conflict.

He announced that the Government calculated that 139 British and neutral lives had been lost so far from submarine attacks, excluding the sinking of the aircraft carrier Courageous, and that an additional forty-four persons were reported missing. The Admiralty reported 578 missing from the Courageous.

Mr. Chamberlain began by asserting that "it is still too early to pronounce any final verdict" on what he termed Russia's "cynical attack" on Poland.

With the Soviet Ambassador, Ivan Maisky, leaning forward from the gallery, he asserted that for Poland, "the unhappy victim" of Russia's attack, "the result has been a tragedy of the grimmest character."

Blow Not Unexpected.

"On September 17 an event occurred which has inevitably had a decisive effect on the war on the eastern front," he said. "On the morning of September 17 Russian troops crossed the Polish frontier at points along its whole length and advanced into Poland.

"I cannot say that the action of

By J. C. STARK

London, Sept. 20 (AP).—Prime Minister Chamberlain assured the nation today that Britain's war effort would be "the utmost of which it is capable" and declared " our advance must be orderly, but the pace of the advance will steadily quicken."

"There is no sacrifice from which we will shrink," he told the House of Commons in his third war report, "no operation we will not undertake, provided our responsible advisers, our allies and we ourselves are convinced it will make a appropriate contribution to victory.

"But what we will not do is to rush into adventures which offer little prospect of success and are calculated to impair our resources and postpone that ultimate victory. One lesson that military history teaches is that that road leads to disaster."

Reports on Progress.

Dealing with the progress of the war on both the Eastern and Western Fronts and on the seas, the Prime Minister made these principal points:

One, Soviet Russia's military intervention in Poland was not a complete surprise to the British Government, that this "cynical attack" was a tragedy to Poland, but that it was still too early to "pronounce any final verdict" on the motives or consequences of the Russian action.

Two, neither the Russian action nor Hitler's speech yesterday "changes the situation."

Three, while Hitler emphasized "humane methods by which he has waged war," methods "are not made humane by calling them so" and "accounts of German bombing of open towns and machine gunning of refugees have shocked the whole world."

Four, Britain's general war purpose is "to redeem Europe from the perpetual and recurring fear of German aggression and enable the peoples of Europe to preserve their independence and their liberties" and "no threats will deter us or our French allies from this purpose."

Five, if Britain and France have been unable to "avert the defeat of the armies of Poland, they have assured her that they have not forgotten their obligations to her nor weakened in their determination to carry on the struggle."

Six, A White Paper tomorrow "will make plain the true course of events" in contrast to what Chamberlain described as "many misstatements of fact" by Hitler.

Seven, Britain which in the last war was "on the defensive against the U-boat campaign" is now "carrying out an offensive against German submarines" and "already six or seven German submarines have paid the full penalty for their attacks on British shipping."

He admitted that 139 lives of British and neutrals had been lost to submarine attacks, excluding the sinking of the Courageous. But he pointed out that the submarin... were less effective than in the l... war.

"In April, 1917", he recalled, "the peak month of action by enemy U-boats and mines in the last war, the average weekly sinkings of British tonnage amounted to 127,000, or 39 ships. During the week ended Sept. 12, the total was 95,000 tons, or 17 ships and for the week ended Sept 19, it was 45,848 tons or 13 ships".

"It must be remembered," Chamberlain said, "that in all military preparations, the great initial advantage rests with the aggressor. Nevertheless, our resources are being steadily and surely marshaled. We must not become impatient because results do not become immediately apparent."

the Soviet Government was unexpected. For some time past Soviet troops have mobilized and concentrated on the western frontiers of the Soviet Union, and statements have appeared in the Soviet press and wireless referring to the position of White Russians and Ukrainians in Poland which bore the interpretation that the Soviet Government were preparing the ground for intervention."

Half Dozen U-Boats Bagged.

Mr. Chamberlain said that, despite the fact that Great Britain and France had been unable to save Poland from defeat "they have assured her that they have not forgotten their obligations to her nor weakened in their determination to carry on the struggle."

He then declared that the navy's anti-submarine campaign in two weeks had achieved more results than were accomplished "over much longer periods in the last war" and added that "already six or seven submarines have paid the full penalty."

In some cases, the Prime Minister said, "crews of U-boats have been captured."

Mr. Chamberlain asserted that "It is already clear that the navy and merchant marine will be able to maintain essential supplies of raw materials and food for this country."

Dealing with Hitler's speech, he said:

SEP 21 1939

"It is not our way in this country to speak with boasts and threats."

Promises New White Paper.

Mr. Chamberlain said that Hitler's "misstatements of fact" included his declaration that, France had agreed to Italian mediation, while Great Britain refused it. The Prime Minister said that a new white paper would be issued tomorrow, "so that public opinion may have no difficulty in forming its final judgments."

"The British Government did not seek this war," declared the Prime Minister, "but their hopes were shattered by the unprovoked and brutal aggression of Germany upon our Polish allies."

He said that on the Western Front "valuable strategic and tactical objectives have been secured by the French and ground gained has been held in the face of increasingly severe German resistance."

Winston Churchill Heard.

Of the war at sea, Mr. Chamberlain said that there had been "intense and continual naval activity, mainly in the form of attacks on U-boats carried out by destroyers, small craft and the fleet air arm acting under cover of the main fleets and squadrons." These attacks, he declared, had been made "night and day."

"The great difference between the last war and this one," he explained, "is that, whereas in the last war we were on the defensive against the U-boat campaign, we are now carrying out an offensive against the U-boats and they are continuously and relentlessly attacked whenever they disclose themselves."

Earlier Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, said that there was every reason to believe that the submarine which sank the aircraft carrier Courageous on Sunday had been sunk subsequently.

The Prime Minister said that in April, 1917, which marked the peak of submarine warfare in the world war, average weekly sinkings of British shipping amounted to 127,000 tons, or thirty-nine ships.

"During the week ended September 12 this year, it was 95,000 tons, or seventeen ships, and for the week ended September 19 it was 45,848 tons, or thirteen ships," he said. "Undoubtedly this decrease was partly due to working of the convoy system which now is increasingly in operation." He said that Great Britain's attitude toward the neutral nations was "in striking contrast to the policy pursued by Germany."

"The primary aim of British policy at sea is to destroy or render ineffective warships of the enemy, to prevent the enemy from augmenting their warlike resources from overseas and at the same time protect our own and neutral commerce," he said.

"The interests of neutrals are the same as our own. In war as in peace we depend for our life upon an uninterrupted flow of trade and it is our fundamental policy to preserve as far as possible the conditions of normal trading.

"The suppression of traffic in contraband of war must of necessity cause some inconvenience to neutrals. It is our intention to reduce this to a minimum."

Still Fears Air Raids.

Of the conduct of the war the Prime Minister said:

"Our advance must be orderly, but the pace of the advance will steadily quicken.

"I can assure the House that the effort of this country will be the utmost of which it is capable and therefore, of course, is no whit inferior to that made even in the most strenuous days of the great war.

"In the meantime, the fact that during these first weeks of war we have not yet experienced the ordeal of aerial bombardment affords no reason whatever for any overhasty or wholesale dispersal of our home defense forces.

"The whole of the British commonwealth of nations and empire is indeed at this moment intensively engaged in mobilizing strength under the cover of our naval, military and air forces—forces which in the aggregate are stronger and more powerful than at the outset of any past war."

Meanwhile Great Britain took two steps today to assure sufficient food supplies: The War Office extended permission for soldiers to help farmers with the crops until September 30 and the Board of Education ap ealed to schools to start vegetable gardens.

Virtual collapse of Britain's ally, Poland, under the double invasion—from Germany on the west and Russia on the east—and the torpedoing of the aircraft carrier Courageous Monday with a loss of perhaps 578 men were chalked up as outstanding initial successes by the Nazis.

But the British man on the street pointed out the last battle—which tradition has Britain always winning—is still to be fought.

The British still thrilled to tales of heroism brought ashore from the Courageous by the 682 survivors. They told how Capt. W. T. Makeig-Jones stood at salute on the bridge of the ship, facing her white ensign fluttering astern, as she sank.

"Take Your Time, Boys"

A few minutes before, directing the abandoning of ship, the captain called out: "Take your time, boys, there is no hurry."

Makelg-Jones' name was not among those which the Admiralty said "from all the inforamtion available must be regarded as the final list of survivors from H. M. S. Courageous." Among the 578 not accounted for were 17 other officers; the remainder were seamen.

Nazis Indicate Sub Escaped

The British found some consolation in the Admirality's original announcement that the Courageous' attacker was "heavily attacked b... destroyers and is believed to have been sunk."

IN ENGLAND

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 20—With authoritative quarters reiterating a determined "no" to any Nazi peace offer, members of Parliament gathered today to hear Prime Minister Chamberlain in the third of his reports on the European War.

SEP 21 1939

Chamberlain's statement to the House of Commons, convening at 2.45 P. M., was expected to touch on Adolf Hitler's Danzig speech yesterday which a British communique already had described as "full of crass misstatements."

Comment On Russia Awaited

Parliamentary interest, however, centered on the prospective announcement by the Prime Minister of the British attitude toward the Soviet Russian invasion of Poland, started last Sunday. The truth of Hitler's declaration that Poland had been conquered in the first eighteen days of the war was conceded generally.

A statement paralleling Chamberlain's was to be made by Lord Stanhope, Lord President of the Council, in the House of Lords.

The admittedly dark picture appeared to have strengthened British determination to wage a finish fight to destroy "Hitlerism" as Chamberlain himself has put it repeatedly.

Initial Successes By Nazis

Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, was expected to answer questions in Commons on the loss of the Courageous, as well as inquries on the progress of the anti-submarine campaign.

130,000 Tons Of Shipping Lost

Merchant shipping losses from U-boats have mounted to more than 130,000 tons, but these are considerably fewer than losses suffered in any comparable period of the World War.

Survivors from the 4,060-ton Furness cargo steamer Aviemore reported today the vessel was sunk by a submarine last week. Eleven survivors of the crew of forty were landed at Liverpool Monday.

Regarding Hitler Threat

Hitler's Danzig threat to use a certain unspecified "weapon" against the British—apparently the German air force—to counter the British blockade drew a retort from the Daily Mail.

"It is a safe assumption that the British Government and their research experts are not completely in the dark about the potentialities of this weapon and of means to counteract it effectively," the newspaper said.

England Seizes 110,000 Tons Of Contraband Goods

London, Sept. 20 (AP)—The British Government announced today that 110,000 tons of contraband goods were seized by Britain during the week ended September 16.

Total value of goods was estimated at more than $2,000,000.

This brought to nearly 200,000 tons the amount of contraband seized since the outbreak of the war. The bulk of the goods was manganese ore, petroleum products, iron ore and aluminum ore.

SEP 21 1939

The amount of manganese ore seized since war started was said to be about 30,000 tons, about seven per cent. of Germany's total annual imports. Manganese ore is of great importance in preparation of special steels.

The communique said "some misconception appears to exist" regarding seizure of neutral ships.

"The position is that normally only cargoes of suspected contraband are seized and that as soon as these have been unloaded the ships carrying them are allowed to proceed on their voyage.

"No neutral ship has been seized since the outbreak of hostilities and it can be taken as certain that no ship would ever be seized which had loaded her cargo before war began.

"Even ships which had loaded their cargo since that date would normally only be seized if there was evidence that they were being used with the knowledge of the owners for carriage of contraband to the enemy."

Sinking Three U-Boats a Week

LONDON, Sept. 20 (AP).—The Information Ministry asserted today that Great Britain's campaign against submarines during the first two weeks of the war compared "most favorably" with World War figures. Authorities said Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's report that six or seven submarines destroyed meant an average of three or more weekly, against the World War average at the height of submarine warfare of one to one and a half.

SEP 21 1939

Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, told the House of Commons that 1,202 instead of 1,260 were aboard the torpedoed Courageous, reducing the total missing to 515. INSTEAD OF 578 X

The ministry estimated that Germany had thirty submarines of 500 tons or more ready for the sea when war started.

Big Guns Roar Off Danish Coast; New Battle of Jutland Suspected

Firing Heard for 7 Hours Along 70-Mile Shore; Line of Ships Seen Far at Sea; Watch Is Kept During the Night for Possible Survivors

SEP 21 1939

By The Associated Press

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 20.—The possibility that a second Battle of Jutland was taking place off Denmark today excited the whole eastern coast of the Jutland Peninsula. Sounds, which hearers said were unmistakably those of gunfire, were heard from Skagen, at the northern tip of the peninsula which is Denmark's only continental province, to points northeast of Aalborg, fifty miles to the south. The sounds were particularly loud on the northern shore of the Island of Laesoe, off the Jutland east coast.

At Berlin the German high command said it knew nothing of a reported sea battle.

The Swedish Naval Attache at Berlin suggested the possibility that Swedish ships were holding target practice, but at Stockholm the admiral of the western Swedish naval division said there were no exercises by his ships today.

The fighting, if such it was, continued more than seven hours, ending at 5 p. m.

(The Battle of Jutland, in the World War, commenced on May 31, 1916. It started at 3:45 p. m., continuing until some time after 7 p. m. Germans claimed a victory in that the British, with far greater strength, did not inflict a defeat and suffered greater losses in men and ships. However, the German fleet did not appear in the North Sea again until it came out to surrender in November and December, 1918.)

Few of those who sought signs of ships had any success. An exception was the police chief of Laesoe Island, off the coast, who mounted a high tower and used binoculars to view the area from which the sounds seemed to come. He said he saw indistinctly, on the far horizon northeast-by-east, a thin line of ships, but they were at such a distance that he was unable to tell whether they were fighting ships, whether they were firing, and the direction in which they were moving.

During the firing, fishermen intrepid enough to push into the Strait of Cattegatt, between Sweden and Denmark, despite the danger of mines, hurried to port and added their accounts of the sounds of firing. First arrivals among the fishermen said they had seen no ships. There were several reports that the sounds might have been from blasting on Laesoe, but these theories were eliminated as contact with the island was established.

Danish ships were keeping in port. The Danish Marine Ministry, which had all its reporting points telephone their observations, did not send any airplanes into the area, and private planes would not venture there.

Two reporters of an Aalborg newspaper ventured seaward in the direction of the sounds, using a fast motorboat. After more than two hours' search they returned to report they had heard the firing continue, but failed to reach a point of observation.

Listeners agreed that at least 200 shots were given or exchanged, and they thought the sounds were gunfire and not bombs. The fact that the shots were heard along the whole of a seventy-mile stretch of coast indicated that if it was a battle it was a terrific one.

A watch was kept along the coast during the night for possible survivors who might need help or have information.

A possible explanation for the cannonade was given by the Ritzau (Danish) news agency, which reported that a Swedish artillery regiment held target practice on an island off the Swedish coast during the day with a ship towed out to sea as the target. The artillery ranges were reported to be about three miles northeast of Laesoe, but whether the reports of these guns could be heard over such an area of the Jutland Peninsula was questioned.

Engagement Reported Off Sweden and Denmark—Paris Firm for War.

AERIAL COMBAT INCREASING

Allied Forces Reported Taking Two More German Villages in Saar Sector.

SEP 21 1939

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—Danish fishermen and a police official reported indications today that a naval engagement between warring European Powers may have occurred in the Strait of Kattegatt, between Sweden and Denmark.

A line of ships northeast of Laesoe Island was sighted by the island's police chief, who said that the sounds of cannonading came from the vessels. About 200 shots were fired before the sounds stopped, the police official said after watching with binoculars. He was unable to determine the character of the line of vessels.

Fishermen who ply the strait, an arm of the North Sea leading to the Baltic, said that they heard cannonading which could have come only from warships, not from aerial bombs.

Reports from Aalborg told of cannon fire, too heavy to be practice firing, from points east of Laesoe from midnight until noon today. British warships have been reported patrolling in that area.

France Pledges Victory.

PARIS, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—The French Government, facing the collapse of its Polish ally under combined German and Russian assaults, adopted measures today to pursue the war "to definite victory."

SEP 21 1939

Premier Daladier's War Ministry at the same time reaffirmed its union with Great Britain and pledged that Poland, now facing dismemberment, would "find in common victory the just redress of the right."

Tonight the French general staff reported that French and German planes had fought "several battles" today in increasingly serious aerial warfare on the western front. The night communique said that a German plane had been shot down within the French lines.

German guns, the communique added, were pounding French positions on various sectors of the front.

French attention shifted to the Aachen sector opposite Belgium, where the Germans were reported massing re-enforcements moving in from Poland. French advices asserted that precautions had already been taken to meet any German repetition of the 1914 attack through Belgium to outflank the Maginot Line.

Reply to Hitler.

The Cabinet communique, which was the first formal statement of French policy since the start of the European conflict on September 3, implied firm rejection of any German overtures for peace on Nazi terms such as were read here into Adolf Hitler's speech at Danzig yesterday.

The new measures approved by the Cabinet were described in the communique as "military, economic and financial." Their exact nature will become known only upon publication in the Official Journal.

It was the Cabinet's first meeting since Premier Daladier formed his War Government one week ago today.

Later today Premier Daladier and Leslie Hore-Belisha, the British War Secretary, conferred here on the general conduct of the war. Immediately after the conference, held in the War Ministry, Mr. Daladier held a council of the highest French military and diplomatic chiefs.

A communique issued after this Council gave no details of what was discussed. Those attending included Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, chief of the British-French land forces; Gen. Louis Colson, the French Army Chief of Staff; Gen. Marcel Tetu, chief of the Air Force Staff; Admiral Jean Darlan, Naval Chief of Staff; Auguste Champetier de Ribes, Foreign Under-Secretary, and Robert Coulondre, former French Ambassador to Belin.

Scattered fighting, meanwhile, occurred along France's northeastern frontier as French military leaders studied reports that German troops were massing near Aachen, opposite the eastern frontier of Belgium, through which country the Germans marched in 1914. It was noted that Aachen is not on any direct route to the front where the French and Germans are now fighting.

The French press published dispatches from Brussels reporting the German concentration around Aachen. The French General Staff, watching the situation closely, was reported taking precautions to meet "any eventuality."

What measures were being taken remained a military secret, but informed persons believed that they included the strengthening of French positions along the Franco-Belgian frontier with the British army co-operating.

On the West Front a major Nazi offensive was expected with the arrival of troops released from the German campaign in Poland. Official reports on the progress of hostilities claimed minor successes and voiced satisfaction with operations at sea. A semi-official announcement said that "four or five" German submarines had been sunk by French warships—these in addition to a U-boat destroyed on Monday night.

East of Saarbruecken.

The War Ministry communique for today said "The night was calm on the whole front. There was enemy artillery activity east of the Blies."

The armies appeared to have been held in leash pending clarification of the diplomatic situation.

A General Staff communique last night reported that a German attack had been turned back "east of the Blies." This communique also said that the German air force had been active in the same region.

The Blies River is roughly eleven miles east of Saarbruecken, industrial center of the rich Saar Basin, the scene of some of the heaviest fighting on the western front. The stream flows northeast from the French town of Sarraguemines toward the German town of Blieskastel.

[Dispatches from Basle, Switzerland, said the French troops had captured the German village of Bebelsheim, three miles east of Sarreguemines, after artillery fire had reduced the German defenses, and that the French had also captured the village of Wittersheim, a mile and a half deeper in German territory. Both villages are on the main highway between Sarreguemines and Zweibrucken, and between them is a hill which commands the left flank of the German trenches and the forts defending Saarbruecken.

that the German forces on the east bank of the Saar and south of Saarbruecken were in an untenable position, and Nazi troops in fact were reported moving out of the villages in this area.]

Cards from Germany.

French dispatches from the western front said that the Germans along the Rhine were distributing thousands of cards bearing crossed French and German flags and the words: "Frenchmen—do not fire and we will not fire."

The dispatches did not say how the cards had reached the French, but it was presumed that they were dropped from airplanes.

Observation balloons were flying on both sides of the river, unmolested by enemy fire.

The text of the Cabinet communique:

"The ministers met this morning in Council at Elysee Palace under the presidency of M. Albert Lebrun.

SEP 21 1939

"M. Edouard Daladier, President of the Council, gave an amply documented account of the entire military and diplomatic situation.

"Adopting unanimously the conclusions of this account, the Cabinet paid homage to the heroism of Poland, which will find in common victory the just redress of the right.

"It approved military, economic and financial measures destined to carry on the war to definite victory.

"It reaffirmed with this intention the solidarity, closer daily, of France and Great Britain."

Although France and Great Britain have accepted Russia's declaration of neutrality and are maintaining diplomatic relations with Moscow, persons close to the Paris Government said that the allies had refused to let Soviet intervention in Poland affect their wary policy.

A commentary issued to the press rejected an offer of peace on Germany's own terms, which offer was implied, the French said, in Hitler's Danzig speech yesterday.

Says Poles Will Carry On.

"France and Great Britain will not let the dictatorship of Hitler condemn the world to slavery and a ruin of all moral values and the destruction of liberty," the commentary said.

Newspapers declared that Hitler's "peace offer" was fallacious," and one said: "Our answer is 'No, a thousand times No,' because we do not want to begin the war again in six months under even worse conditions. Hitlerism must be destroyed."

The press warned that the war would be long and hard, and that it was really just beginning.

East of Saarbruecken.

The War Ministry communique for today said "The night was calm on the whole front. There was enemy artillery activity east of the Blies."

The armies appeared to have been held in leash pending clarification of the diplomatic situation.

Says Poles Will Carry On.

Operations on the Polish front were acknowledged in Paris to be virtually ended, with only sixteen or seventeen Polish divisions reported in a position to carry on the fight against an estimated seventy Nazi divisions.

The Polish Ambassador to Paris, Jules Lukasiewic, declared in a radio broadcast, however, that Poles were being recruited abroad, and that the troops still resisting at home would "continue the war under new conditions with an unyielding determination to vanquish the enemy."

Military restrictions on civilian life are meanwhile being relaxed behind the French war front.

Police censorship of telegrams inside France, in effect since mobilization, has been canceled. Telephone service to all departments except those on the frontier or in military zones has been re-established, although callers must speak French.

The French Association for the Protection of Animals announced that gas masks are now available for dogs, cats and other pets.

New fast trains are now being run on most major lines since the railroads have finished the huge job of transporting reserves to their concentration centers. Freight trains continued to supply the Paris markets amply with food, including much meat. Many farm products are being sold at prices lower than usual.

Test by Fire.

BASLE, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—Swiss observers reported today that the French and German forces are apparently now ready for a tremendous "test by fire" of the Siegfried Line.

The French, these observers said, have completed a mass movement of men and materials preliminary to a major offensive against the heavy fortifications guarding the Reich's western frontier. At the same time the Germans were said to have concentrated behind the defenses all the men and equipment that could be spared from the rapidly waning Polish campaign.

Action along the Blies River and Mandel Creek east of Saarbruecken, where the French met a fiery resistance yesterday, led Swiss military men to conclude that the French may have gone as far as they can with the use of patrols. To advance further, it was said, the French must soon show the full strength of their offensive power.

All along the western front between the Moselle River and the Vosges foothills at Wisembourg, a distance of about sixty miles, the French are meeting a determined resistance which can be smashed only by a large scale attack, observers declared.

French Methods Praised.

Swiss tacticians strongly praised the French military methods to date. They said that Gen. Gamelin, commander of the Franco-British forces, had gained offensive positions for his troops with minimum losses by the adroit use of small patrols.

It was the general view of Swiss observers that the French and British may strike through the hills in any one or all of three main sectors: 1. North of Sierck, with the Moselle River and neutral Luxemburg protecting the left bank and the Saar River the right; 2. Northwest from Sarreguemines, which lies in the center of the front between the Blies and Saar rivers, and 3. North from Bitche on the extreme right.

In front of the French lines near Bitche lie the flat Rhine Plains and the rich palantinate city of Landau but military experts call that path into Germany "a death trap." Powerfully armed Siegfried Line forts which dot the east side of the Rhine, and similar forts in the Haardt Hills to the west, would concentrate a withering crossfire on any force moving up the Rhine valley, it was said.

Military persons here agree that despite the apparent readiness of the French and British, days or even weeks might elapse before a drive is started. They believe, however, that the push—from the French view—should come while the Germans are occupied in Poland and before Polish lines of communication can be established as a supply lane from Soviet Russia.

The Rhine frontier to the south, between Lauterbourg and the Swiss border, remained so quiet that the Swiss expected no immediate action here. The military commander at Basle, where the French, German and Swiss frontiers meet, said he had no immediate plans for the removal of the city's population. Even if the French forts at nearby Hunnique and the German forts at Weil began firing at each other; only a few water-front blocks along the Rhine would be cleared, he said.

Nazi Planes Entice French

PARIS, Sept. 20 (AP).—The French General Staff communique issued tonight said:

"Activity of the enemy artillery at various points of the front. French and German pursuit planes fought several battles. An enemy plane was shot down within our lines."

SEP 21 1939

While German tank forces were trying to feel their way forward behind a protective screen of artillery fire, Nazi planes roared into the air, apparently bent on the double mission of enticing the French into battle and straffing French advance positions. German aircraft were reported to have taken the lead in an attack on the northern flank of the western front as a result of a new German air base established at Aachen (Aix-la-Chapelle), far north of the fighting front.

A curtain of artillery fire shielded Nazi infantry which scoured the wooded hills which mark the sector east of the industrial city of Saarbruecken. The Germans, who have been sending out patrols in this area for the last three days, were reported now to be using units as large as companies in their advance guard actions.

The French admitted they had lost one advanced position yesterday in the face of a German surprise attack. The Germans, however, apparently were interested only in taking prisoners in order to question them. A French counter-attack led by tanks was reported to have had little difficulty in retaking the post a few hours later.

There was every indication that the Germans were preparing for an offensive thrust. They methodically felt out French strength along the twenty-five-mile front east of Saarbruecken.

This sector is split by rivers into three natural rectangles. The Germans have given their attention to one of these rectangles each day and submitted it to a thorough going over. The first lies just east of Saarbruecken, between the Saar and the Mandel Rivers. The second is bordered by the Mandel and Blies Rivers, while the Blies and the Bickenhall form the third rectangle, in which the Germans were operating today.

German batteries were not only laying a heavy fire on the French advance lines, which are in German territory, but were sending some shells on the Maginot Line, which lies close to the frontier in this sector.

Berlin Reveals Russian Deal

Dividing Line in Poland Agreed On—Nazi Generals in Moscow—Russia Calls Troops.

SEP 21 1939

BERLIN, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—The Supreme High Command disclosed today that Germany and Soviet Russia have reached an agreement on the partition of Poland, at least so far as their armies of occupation are concerned. That the demarcation line has been set was announced in a high command communique which, however, did not say where the line runs.

It asserted the German forces would withdraw from their present positions after "destruction of the last remnants of the Polish Army there" to the "demarcation line definitely fixed between the German and Russian governments."

Whether this line lies east or west of Warsaw was not indicated. The communique said German forces had advanced to a line running from Stryj, in southeast Poland, north near the industrial city of Lwow, thence almost straight north to Brzesc (Brest-Litovsk), about 160 miles from the Soviet frontier and up to Bialystok, about 150 miles from the Russian border.

The entire Rumanian frontier, bordering southeast Poland, is in Russian hands.

New Boundaries Are Uncertain.

Presumably as the Germans retire, the Red Army will take their place by advancing westward from their present positions. Whether the army occupation areas later will become the new boundaries between Germany and Russia was a moot question. In informed quarters it was intimated that this question was not yet completely solved.

[Four German Army officers arrived by plane in Moscow to take part in consultations, presumably concerning the future of Poland. The Moscow communique reported the Russian occupation of both Lwow, in the southeast, and Wilno, in northeastern Poland.]

Germany's "blitzkrieg" (lightning war) was considered here at an end except for mopping up activities in Poland. The Poles, however, were still fighting in and south of the fortified town of Modlin, immediately north of Warsaw. Warsaw itself also has not capitulated to German arms.

Poles Near Gdynia Give Up.

The handful of Polish troops who gave the Germans some trouble yesterday on the heights back of Gdynia, Polish port at the end of the corridor, gave up last night under the pressure of shelling from the cadet ship Schleswig-Holstein and a minesweeping flotilla. Several thousand prisoners were reported taken.

The battle north of Lodz by Kutno and the Bzura River, about sixty-five miles west of Warsaw, which ended yesterday, was termed by the High Command "one of the biggest destructive battles of all times." The number of captives was reported at 105,000 and still growing. The amount of war materials seized was said to be enormous.

The fourth of the Poles' fighting resistance surprised even German officers, who first calculated the enemy had 50,000 or 60,000 men participating in the nine-day battle. This apparently was the largest grouping of troops the Poles brought together on any single battlefield of the war.

The high command communique again today paid scant attention to the western front, asserting that operations there were limited and of a scouting nature.

Russia Calls More Reservists.

MOSCOW, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—Soviet Russia was reported authoritatively today to have called up more army reservists, although the number was not disclosed.

In unofficial quarters it was intimated that they were sent to some sector of the western frontier, beyond which Red Army forces were officially announced as having occupied the industrial city of Lwow [illegible] Polish Ukraine.

At the same time Soviet and German officers started conferences arising from their joint military occupation of Poland.

[German communiques for several days had said that German troops had penetrated to Lwow outskirts on three sides of the city. Lwow is in southeastern Poland.]

The same war communique which told of the entry of Soviet Russian troops into Lwow also said the Russians had captured Wilno (Vilna) in northeastern Poland, near the Lithuanian border, after "a two-hour battle."

Four German officers arrived yesterday to assist the German military attache in Moscow, Lieut.-Gen. Ernst Koestring, in discussions with the Russians. It was rumored that the Soviet military attache in Berlin, who also holds a general's rank, came here for the talks.

The British and French embassies, meanwhile, expected to learn from Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement in the House of Commons today whether they would leave Moscow. The Polish diplomatic mission is leaving tomorrow for Rumania.

It was learned Rumania had switched ambassadors in Moscow, in what was interpreted unofficially as meaning that Rumania seeks to improve her relations with the Soviet. Nicholas Dianu, the retiring Ambassador, paid a farewell call at the Foreign Office. His successor, Davidscu, was expected to arrive shortly.

Lithuanians, who consider Wilno their ancient capital, have shown an interest in the fate of the city. Tass, Russian official news, reported today in a dispatch from Kaunas that Lithuanian authorities had instructed their army to co-operate fully with Soviet troops in determining boundary lines between Poland and Lthuania.

Tass also said that two leaders of the Estonian Navy had resigned their commands.

Soviet newspapers yesterday criticized Estonian officials severely for allegedly permitting a Polish submarine to escape internment at Tallinn.

'Liberation' of Brothers Hailed.

The Government organ Izvestia said editorially today, commenting on the Russion occupation of Poland, that "our liberated brothers know and see that the Red Army is bringing them on its banners peace and a new, free, happy life."

"Polish magnates transformed the western Ukraine and western White Russia into a suppressed colony, robbed with impunity by Polish landlords and merchants," the newspaper said.

"The entire national policy of the Polish ruling class was based on punitive expeditions, forcible colonization, the fanning of national enmity and white terrorism in no way different from the policy of oppression pursued by Russian Czarism."

Izvestia said inhabitants of the occupied area greeted the Soviet armies as liberators and that "it is difficult to find words to describe the feelings of western Ukrainians and western White Russians for whom came the bright hour of liberation from the yoke of the Polish gentry."

Dispatches yesterday to the army newspaper, Red Star, disclosed that a policy of breaking up large estates in the area was already under way. Army commanders instructed peasants to "take the land for the people," and to "turn your cattle on the landlord's land."

Latvia Strengthens Defenses.

RIGA, Latvia, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—A Polish regiment of 900 men crossed the frontier today, joining approximately 1,000 other Polish refugees in Latvia. The troops were disarmed and confined.

Latvian coastal defenses were strengthened following foreign reports that Polish and other submarines were cruising the Baltic Sea.

Estonia Denies Blockade Report.

TALLINN, Estonia, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—Foreign reports that Soviet Russian ships had blockaded Estonia's coast were described here today as unfounded.

The Russian fleet was acknowledged to be at sea near Estonian waters, but it was said it had not yet interfered with Estonian trade.

Reports reaching Stockholm Tuesday said Russia blockaded Estonia presumably in retaliation for failure to prevent an interned Polish submarine from sailing from Tallinn.

Soviet Troops Sweep West.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—Fast-moving Soviet mechanized forces pushing further westward into Poland were reported today to have blockaded the entire Polish-Rumanian frontier.

Severe fighting was reported in the Bug River district.

The massing of Russian troops along the Rumanian border cut the stream of refugees from Poland, but thousands, finding their way barred on that border, poured into Hungary. Soldiers among them were disarmed and civilians were sent to special camps.

A Hungarian agency estimated 30,000 civilians and 10,000 soldiers had reached the Rumanian border town of Cernauti before the Soviet lines were drawn.

BRAUCHITSCH IS ON WAY TO TAKE COMMAND

Hitler, After Few Days In Danzig, To Visit Western Front

SEP 21 1939

German Officers To Go To Moscow To Discuss Further Collaboration

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 20—The German army turned its attention tonight to liquidation of its virtually completed campaign in Poland and to strengthening its forces in the west.

The situation in the East was so well in hand that Col. Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch was reported to have left Poland yesterday and to have assumed personal direction of Nazi forces on the Western front.

Adolf Hitler remained at Danzig for a few days and was expected to visit the Western front shortly.

Troops Move Westward

Nazi troops were known to be moving from Poland westward, leaving behind only enough strength to finish the cleaning-up process and man garrisons.

Few soldiers are being kept in western Polish provinces where the former German minority is thickest.

A delegation of German officers left for Moscow, presumably to settle further Russian-German collaboration in eastern Europe, while the foreign offices of the two countries discussed plans for division of their interests in Poland.

Agreement Reached

The Nazi supreme high command disclosed an agreement had been reached on the partition of Poland, at least as far as their armies of occupation are concerned. A high command communique said the demarcation line had been set up, but did not say where the line runs.

German forces, it said, would withdraw from their present positions after "destruction of the last remnants of the Polish army there" to the "demarcation line definitely fixed between the German and Russian governments."

Termed Local Tasks

Mopping up of remnants of the Polish army continued and possibly will go on for a week, but these were termed local tasks of minor importance, now that the biggest assembly of Polish troops was said to have been defeated in the bend of the Vistula river north of Lodz.

The high command described this battle as "one of the biggest destructive battles of all time."

Warsaw, the besieged Polish capital, remained a thorn in the German side. Poles also still were fighting in and south of the fortified town of Modlin, immediately north of Warsaw.

Termed "Sheer Folly"

Germans regarded the attitude of the Warsaw population, which doggedly refused to surrender, as "sheer folly, having nothing to do with heroism" in view of the fact that the Polish army has been routed and can not aid the city.

The German army has announced resumption of large-scale hostilities against Warsaw, following a halt when the population was given a chance to capitulate and get out, but advices here indicated the Nazis still were holding off from heavily shelling the city.

Warsaw radio broadcasts received in Budapest told of heavy bombings and the rumbling of big guns which were described as doing enormous damage to the city.

Hopes For Surrender

The army was represented as clinging to the hope that surrender would come without a great deal more destruction and additional misery to the hundreds of thousands remaining in the besieged Polish capital.

Authoritative sources said the release of civilian prisoners had started and that war prisoners were being sorted and put into camps where they will be used on farms and roads. The international convention of July 27, 1929, prevents the use of war prisoners for making and transporting munitions and other war materials.

Officers dealing with the prisoners said the convention was being strictly observed by Germany.

The Nazi slogan was "Germany's war aims are fulfilled" as the Government assumed the task of reconstruction in Poland and settling spheres of influence with Russia.

Blasted "Hopes Abroad"

Informed German quarters pointed out with satisfaction that the German-Soviet accord had contradicted "hopes abroad that strong German forces would be mired in Poland's eastern swamp lands where there is no German minority, thus diminishing Nazi fighting strength in the West."

Russia is relieving Germany of the job of patrolling this region, inhabited chiefly by Ukrainians and White Russians, the Germans said.

The decision of Scandinavian neutrals meeting in Copenhagen to defend their neutral rights against what the Germans called "encroachments" upon their foreign trade brought about by the blockade of Germany met full agreement in Berlin.

Gives Clear Picture

The high command communique for the first time today gave a clear picture of the enormity of the battle in the bend of the Vistula. It said the fighting covered 969 square miles and was waged from September 10 to September 19.

The Germans were reported authoritatively to have taken a total of 420,000 Polish prisoners up to today. More than 100,000 of these were said to have been caught in the egg-shaped area fifty miles long and fifteen to thirty miles wide north of Lodz in the vicinities of Kutno, Leczyca, Ozorkow, Lowicz, Sochaczew and Syszogrod.

BERLIN REPORTS HEAVY SEIZURE OF WAR STOCKS

Poles, However, Cling to Warsaw — Worshipers Machine-Gunned

SEP 21 1939

BERLIN, Sept. 20 (AP).—The supreme army command issued the following communique this noon:

"A battle in the big bend of the Vistula River which began about a week ago near Kutno and later moved east toward the Bzura River has now proved to be one of the biggest destructive battles of all times. The number of captives at Bzura alone yesterday increased to 105,000 and is still growing.

"In addition, there are extremely high losses of the enemy. The amount of captured war materials is immense. Strong resistance in the entire part of Poland occupied by us was offered merely in and south of Modlin as well as at Warsaw.

Gdynia Fighting Ends

"Our troops which, in pursuit of the opponent, have advanced to the line Stryj - Lwow - Brest - Bialystok, will, after destruction of the last remnants of the Polish army there, be taken back again to that demarcation line which was definitely fixed between the German and Russian governments.

"The fights at Gdynia were concluded yesterday with the occupation of the war harbor. Here, too, several thousand prisoners were taken. The cadet ship Schleswig-Holstein and units of the minesweeping flotilla effectively participated in these engagements.

"Operations of the air force along the entire front was limited to reconnoitering activity."

RUSS ADVANCE TO POINT NEAR EAST PRUSSIA

Occupy Grodno, Only 16 Miles From German Border And Capture Wilno

Report Seizure Of 60,000 Prisoners, 280 Guns And 120 Airplanes

SEP 21 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Sept. 20—The Soviet Russian high command reported tonigh its troops driving through Poland hac occupied Grodno, about sixteen miles from the East Prussian border.

Grodno is ninety miles southwest of Wilno (Vilna), in northeas Poland near the Lithuanian borde and forty-five miles northeast o Bialystok, communications center reported occupied by German forces. A previous communique announced the capture of Wilno.

In southeast Poland the Soviet army reported the occupation of Kovel, Ukrainian town one-hundred miles north of Lwow, industrial center which the Red army command announced was occupied earlier in the day.

Captured 60,000, Claim

The Soviet high command announced that during the four days since the Red Army marched into Poland more than 60,000 Polish troops had been taken prisoner.

In this period, the communique said, three Polish infantry divisions, two cavalry brigades and a number of smaller army units were disarmed.

"All armaments, artillery and ammunition" were said to have been taken with the occupation of the fortified areas of Wilno, Baranowicze, Molodeczno and Sarny.

Baranowicze is thirty-five miles from the Russian frontier and about 120 miles east of Bialystok. Molodeczno is eighteen miles from the Russian border and sixty-five miles east of Wilno. Sarny is in the Pripet marshes eighty-five miles east of Kovel.

Seize 120 Airplanes

War materials seized by the Russians were reported to include 280 military guns and 120 airplanes.

Meanwhile, the Russian Government was reported to have called up reserves for its huge army already in service.

No official inkling of the number of additional reserves was forthcoming. It was reported in an unofficial quarter, however, they were to be sent to some point beyond Lwow on the western frontier in Poland.

Include Four Germans

The conferees on the Polish situation included four German officers who arrived yesterday to assist the German military attache in Moscow, Lieut. Gen. Ernst Koestring. It was reported also that the Soviet military attache in Berlin, holder of a general's rank, also was here for the talks.

In diplomatic quarters it was learned that Rumania, in what appeared a move to strengthen her relations with the Soviets, had changed her ambassador to Moscow.

The retiring ambassador, Nicolas Dianu, paid his farewell call at the Russian Foreign Office and it was expected his successor, Davidscu, would be here before long.

The Polish Embassy staff made haste to leave Moscow but was unable to complete its visa arrangements and will not leave before the day after tomorrow.

Hope To Get To France

The Polish officials hope to reach Rumania and then get through to France where they said an extra territorial division would be established for the benefit of the Polish Government.

British and French embassies said they still had no instructions on whether they would be recalled. They had expected to learn from Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement in Commons today whether they would leave Moscow as a result of the Russian invasion of Poland.

It was reported reliably that French Counsellor Jean Payart called on the Soviet Foreign Office today but whether it was in connection with the Russian march into Poland was not known.

The chauffeurs of at least three of the relatively small group of foreign correspondents in Moscow were summoned to military service today.

Says Fight Is Continuing Against Superior German Troops—Hundreds Of Slovaks Reported Executed

Berlin, Sept. 29 (AP)—A spokesman for Baron Konstantin von Neurath, Reichsprotector for Bohemia and Moravia, tonight described as "nonsense" reports abroad of an organized revolt in the protectorate.

He extended an invitation to Berlin correspondents to visit Prague and convince themselves.

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 20—The British Ministry of Information said tonight a revolutionary movement was authoritatively reported to have started last Sunday in Bohemia and Moravia, which became a German protectorate in the breakup of Czecho-Slovakia last March.

The movement was said to have followed labor demonstrations in Prague, which developed into "serious" clashes.

The Ministry said it was reported that in spite of "ruthless repressive measures by Germans the fight against superior forces was continuing.

"Considerable" Casualties

A Ministry communique said:

"Firearms were used on both sides and the casualties are said to have been considerable.

"Between September 17 and 18 riots took place at a number of places in Bohemia and Moravia, among others at Parduce, Prisbran, Pilsen, Tabor, Pisek and Bruenn."

The communique said that September 19 Slovak garrisons at several places revolted and "about 15,000 troops have been disarmed."

Hundreds Executed

It stated that arrests throughout the protectorate ran "into thousands, those executed into hundreds."

"The fact that this is not just a flash in the pan is shown by the unanimity of purpose, the tenacity and the discipline of the participants," the statement continued.

"Those who had no firearms seized any weapon handy. Laborers' wives in Prague were content with boards studded with nails with which to strike the enemy.

No Quarter Given

"While it lasted the fight was relentless and grim with no quarter given by either side."

"In the course of the revolt considerable material damage was done. Bridges on important railways and roads have been demolished, fire stations put out of action, railway rolling stock and material damaged, workshops of important factories bombed and machinery destroyed."

Nazi Government Acted Wisely, Berlin Asserts

Berlin, Sept. 20 (AP)—German officials defended today arrests in Bohemia and Moravia of "several hundred" Czechs at the beginning of the war.

That the Government acted wisely, they said, was proved by the fact that Dr. Eduard Benes, former President of Czecho-Slovakia, made a radio appeal from London last night in Czech appealing to Czechs to fight and that "no blood sacrifice was too great."

Followers of Dr. Benes were among those arrested in Bohemia and Moravia, which Germany took under its wing as a protectorate after the breakup of Czecho-Slovakia.

"We want to live peacefully with the Czechs," German officials said. "Hence we could not permit a few hundred Czechs to create trouble which inevitably would fall on the heads of the entire Czech population."

Warsaw Bombed Four Times

SEP 21 1939

Mayor Over Radio Asks When Britain and France Will Aid Besieged City.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—Radio broadcasts today from Warsaw, entering the thirteenth day of siege, presented a graphic picture of a city whose defenders had vowed to resist the Germans to the death and seemed to be doing it.

Warsaw was raided four times today by German air squadrons, it was announced over the radio.

"Incendiary bombs were dropped on the Red Cross hospital, which caught fire," the Warsaw announcer said.

Despite continued heavy bombing and machine-gunning, he said, volunteers rushed into the building to remove patients.

The heaviest raid was said to have started at 5:30 P. M. (12:30 P. M., New York time), lasting for more than thirty minutes.

Has Confidence in Allies.

"Warsaw will resist," said a communique read over the capital's radio station last night. "We have confidence in our Government and confidence in our great Allies, France and Britain. Warsaw is doing its duty."

The communique went on to tell of widespread destruction from German bombs and shells, of bombs that fell before St. John's Cathedral as worshipers emerged from mass, of machine-gun attacks from the air on the churchgoers.

The communique ended: "Many war cemeteries are now in the public parks of Warsaw."

The broadcast said that the royal palace of Belvedere, the Parliament building and "hundreds" of other structures had been destroyed.

Later, the Polish commander, a Gen. Czuma, came on the air and broadcast a report his men had inflicted heavy losses on German infantrymen in the Praga suburban district to the east and also on the west.

Asks Allies to Help.

Mayor Stefan Starzinski asked: "When will Britain and France give such aid to Poland as will save us from the fury of German barbarism, from new deaths, from destruction of the remaining buildings of our city?"

The announcer explained that "death of hundreds of thousands of women and children and other defenseless civilians of Warsaw" had "forced" the Mayor to put that question to Poland's allies.

Another broadcast said: "Warsaw will continue to resist so long as her men are able to carry arms."

The declarations of continued resistance came despite the fact Polish Government leaders, including President Ignace Moscicki, had left the country.

On Air All Night.

Every one of the speakers who alternated at the Warsaw microphone declared "we will not surrender."

The station remained on the air throughout the night. Most of the broadcasts apparently were designed to keep up the courage of Warsaw citizens for whom sleep must have been nearly impossible in the city of death.

Between the speeches rousing Polish marches were played. As the night wore on it became apparent the announcer had been instructed at half-hour intervals to read, in Polish, French and English, the Mayor's message asking when allied help would reach Poland.

The tragedy that was Warsaw's was emphasized by the matter-of-fact reading of a list of hundreds of missing men, women and children who were asked to communicate with their families—if they still were alive.

No attempt was made to hide the havoc wrought in the city by bombs and shells.

Text of Mayor's Appeal.

The text of Mayor Starzinski's appeal follows:

"In the name of the Polish people and the citizens of Warsaw, the Mayor of Warsaw thanks most heartily the British people for their words of assurance and encouragement in the struggle to beat back the barbaric attack of the Germans who have been ceaselessly and ruthlessly bombing and shelling historic buildings in Warsaw and the royal castle of Belvedere.

"The nation's most precious art treasures, the holiest relics, foreign embassies and workers' dwellings have been destroyed and women, children and helpless civilians have been slaughtered.

"When will Britain and France give such aid to Poland as will save us from the fury of German barbarism, from new deaths, from destruction of the remaining buildings of our city?"

Chopin Still Played.

Apparently the radio staff wearied as dawn approached. Announcements were reduced in number and the station reverted to its novel device of letting the world know that Warsaw was still in Polish hands by playing the opening bars of Chopin's "Polonaise" every thirty seconds.

A message last night from Mayor Starzinski to President Moscicki, "wherever you may be," said Warsaw citizens were "doing their duty in a heroic manner.

"Warsaw exists and will exist. We know nothing about the situation created by the Russian intervention, only reports of foreign stations reaching us.

"They cannot break our spirit. We know that our allies' help cannot come suddenly, but we know it will surely come. . . . We will hold out for the honor of the nation."

Sleep on Billiard Tables.

From Cernauti, Rumania, came stories of wealthy Polish aristocrats forced to sleep on billiard tables in the town's main coffee house.

Streams of Poles poured into Hungary through the Tatar, Vereckе and Uzok passes. Polish automobiles were backed up in long lines at frontier stations. Most refugees, however, came afoot over the Carpathian Mountain routes, climbing to heights of 3,000 feet at some places.

There were touching scenes as Hungarians welcomed their traditional friends. There was warm food for all from temporary kitchens and sweets for the children.

Poles who had passed through the Ukraine said that Ukrainian uprisings had started as soon as Russian intervention was announced. The area twelve miles within the Polish frontier was said to be in lawless confusion.

So hasty was the flight of the Poles that children lacked proper clothing. Some of them wore only night shirts. Few families had more than a handful of Polish currency and even that was of little value now.

At least five Polish battalions, fully equipped and followed by a supply train and field kitchens, crossed the border into Hungary and laid down their rifles.

Polish railroad men said they were bringing 400 locomotives to Hungary when they were cut off by German armored cars. With the line blocked, the railroad men fled, leaving the locomotives to their enemy.

Reports Cavalry Beats Back Tanks; Poles Win With Bayonets

Tells Of Bombings And Terror In 13-Day Siege Of City

SEP 21 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Sept. 20—Defenders of warsaw were reported tonight to have driven back besieging German forces with a calvary counterattack and bitter hand-to-hand fighting.

Col. Vaclava Lipinski declared over the Warsaw radio that the calvary beat back a tank attack in the western section of the city late in the thireenth day of siege.

We again smashed the German attack," he said. "The Germans started to make a bayonet charge, but the Poles are better in a hand-to-hand struggle and proved stronger, capturing three heavy and two light machine guns.

Claims Air Raids On Hotels

"Today there were several air raids on the center of the city, especially on Pilsudski Square and the big hotels.

"Between 5 and 6 P. M. thirty planes made a terrific concentrated attack. Seven were shot down.

"Meanwhile heavy artillery fire was aimed at the center of the city, and there was great loss among women and children."

Mayor Stefan Starzinski appealed to citizens to work for final victory. He announced the bombing and destruction of the national museum, two grammar schools, a theological seminary, a girls' college and other schools.

Says Treasures Are Destroyed

He said there were many women and children among the casualties.

"When German bombs fall, we feel the power of German cultural superiority," the Mayor said in an apparent reference to Führer Hitler's Danzig speech of yesterday. "The Germans can destroy our historical treasures but cannot impair our Polish souls."

SEP 21 1939

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Sept. 20 (AP)—A story of rumbling guns, the terror of thirteen days of siege, and still the determination "to hold out to the bitter end to defeat our enemy" blared out of the Warsaw radio tonight.

"Big guns are rumbling heavily and probably soon there will be a big offensive against us," said a military communiqué read at 8:15 P. M.

"Let the Germans not nurse any illusions as to constantly growing successes of our Warsaw army. We will put an end to German domination. Nobody doubts that Warsaw will come out of this bloody struggle victorious."

Although Polish Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz has been in Rumania several days, the Warsaw announcer said: "Smigly-Rydz is now on the front and his presence cheered our soldiers."

City Bombed Four Times

The Polish capital was bombed four times during the afternoon and incendiary bombs set the Red Cross Hospital on fire, it was announced.

A notice to Warsaw butchers to go to military headquarters to receive allotments of horse meat was broadcast. Wounded horses, the announcer said, would be butchered for the "near-starving million inhabitants" of the battered city.

Throughout the day long lists of persons missing inside the city were read. Women and children were told: "Don't worry if you don't get letters from your men at the front. Those who are fighting haven't time to write these days."

It was apparent here that the directors of the radio station decided it was unwise to tell the city the whole truth of its plight, for several times the announcer referred to President Ignace Moscicki and other members of the government as if they still were in Poland.

Fewer Casualties Reported

"Warsaw still is being bombed and shelled," it was announced at 8:30 P. M. "The Germans cannot resist the temptation to destroy lovely parks, museums and art galleries. The number of people killed and wounded is smaller today because they are learning how to take care of themselves.

"Yesterday a German shell landed in a hospital filled with forty wounded soldiers, but failed to explode. Nurses are showing unbelievable heroism. I have seen them dash into buildings from which the bricks had not yet stopped falling to rescue patients. In many cases, when all stretchers were filled, I have seen tiny nurses carry brawny wounded soldiers out of burning buildings on their backs.

"All Warsaw priests spend much of their time at the front, bringing Christ's comfort to the wounded and dying."

The station issued an appeal early in the evening to the British Labor party.

"We are fighting under the most difficult conditions," it said. "We ask that you come to the aid of your city as soon as possible. We count heavily on your aircraft and your fleet. We ask your aid for our beleaguered city."

Th eappeal was signed by the president of the Polish Socialist party.

Mayor Renews Plea for Aid

Mayor Stefan Starzinski pleaded with Poland's allies for help, saying: "When will Britain and France save us from the fury of German barbarism, from new deaths from the destruction of the remaining buildings of our city?"

Jan Gura, a Warsaw Councillor, described over the radio a visit to the front line. There, he said, he talked with boys between 12 and 18 wearing steel helmets. One was toothless, he said, another had his head bandaged and a third was wounded in the legs, but "all were cheerful and determined."

The communiqué went on to tell of widespread destruction from German bombs and shells, of bombs that fell before St. John's Cathedral as worshippers emerged from mass, of machine-gun attacks from the air on the churchgoers.

"Many war cemeteries are now in the public parks of Warsaw," the communiqué ended.

The broadcast said the Royal Palace of Belvedere, the Parliament building and "hundreds" of other structures had been destroyed. Later the Polish commander, a General Czuma, broadcast a report that his men had inflicted heavy losses on German infantrymen in the Praga suburban district to the east and also on the west.

GERMAN SHIP SAID TO BE IN ENGLISH PORT

Story Of Crack Liner's Seizure Not Denied In London

SEP 22 1939

Crew Of 800 Aboard Vessel Is Believed To Have Been Interned

[By the Associated Press]

London, Thursday, Sept. 21—The British Press Association said that according to reports prevalent today and not denied, Germany's crack liner Bremen had reached a British port under the escort of naval vessels.

The Press Association said "for some days various stories have circulated that the Bremen had been captured and was on her way to England. Though no official confirmation was forthcoming in London this morning the story of the liner's capture was not denied."

Mystery has surrounded the Bremen since she left New York August 20.

Reports that the liner had reached a neutral port were never confirmed.

The Bremen sailed from New York August 30, two days before Germany invaded Poland, and has not been definitely reported since.

Last Saturday the German Ambassador to Russia, Count Friedrich von der Schulenberg, intimated the $20,000,000 pride of the German merchant marine had been captured by Britain.

He said questions concerning the ship should be referred to Winston Churchill, First Lord of the British Admiralty.

Cites Delay In U. S.

"American authorities," he said, "were so kind as to hold up the Bremen for twenty-two hours and so far as I know the British have rather fast destroyers."

The Bremen sailed from New York without passengers after being held up for lifeboat and other inspections.

On September 12 the British Ministry of Information authorized publication of a several-day-old Rotterdam report that the Bremen had acquired status as an Italian ship and was heading for an Italian port. This was denied in Rome.

Reported In Iceland

There were reports the vessel had gone to Iceland, but the Iceland telegraph agency denied these.

Next, on September 14, informants close to Germany's navy said the Bremen had arrived at Murmansk, Russia, after crosing the Atlantic by the most northern route.

Two days later Hermann Wilhelm Goering, in a speech to munitions workers, made a vague reference to the Bremen by stating a British attempt to capture her had "misfired." He said no more.

The funeral was made another occasion for emphasis on Germany's oft-repeated protestation that it feels no animosity toward France and wants no war in the West.

"We, at the West frontier, have a special responsibility to carry out the spirit of the Führer's desire for peace.

Berlin, Sept. 20—The German army buried Louis Paul Deschanel, son of a former President of the French Republic, with impressive ceremonies yesterday at Ottweiler, in the Saar region.

A lieutenant in the French army, 30 years old, Deschanel was killed while leading a patrol near Germany's Siegfried Line. His companions, under fire, were unable to take the body back to French positions.

Honor Guard Fires Salute

The Germans chose the most attractive spot in the Naumuenster Cemetery for Deschanel's grave. The coffin was covered with the tri-color and on it lay a Frenchman's helmet. It was carried by six German non-commissioned officers.

BERLIN, Sept. 19 (AP).—Modern mechanized warfare has made the transportation of the wounded, of medicine, food, gasoline and other supplies an important function of the German air force.

Three special hospital planes, painted white with a large red cross on the side, make regular trips into Poland from their Breslau base to remove the most seriously wounded from first aid stations to hospitals in Germany. Each of these special planes can carry eighteen wounded men.

SEP 20 1939

Huge [illegible] transport planes make steady trips to the front from Breslau, transporting gasoline to the far advanced armored car and tank units which would be unable to proceed without this aid because of the breakdown of rail communications and slow travel over poor roads. Crews of supply planes drop their large bomblike loads as near as possible to troops. Each load is equipped with a parachute.

At the Breslau airport, where these transports base, there is a constant bustle. Three or four planes no sooner leave than others return.

The Germans were said to have brought 250 wounded men by plane to Breslau alone. Others have been taken to various other points depending upon bed space and the type of attention needed.

Rumania Shuts Border; Seizes Reich Plotters

Germans Reported Planning Uprising, Foiled by Arrival of Russians at Frontier

CERNAUTI, Rumania (Near the Polish border), Sept. 20 (AP).—Rumania closed her Polish frontier today, amid rumors of the arrest of German plotters in this country and executions of Polish [illegible] across the border.

SEP 21 1939

Although officials here would neither confirm nor deny the report, it was learned on high authority that Rumanian police arrested a group of German residents of Bukowina (Bucovina) Province charged with plotting a rising when and if German troops in Poland reached the Rumanian frontier. Bukiwina was a part of pre-World War Austria which was awarded to Rumania.

This source said the Germans planned—under the direction of Berlin quarters—to start the armed insurrection and join the Nazi troops. Arrival of Russian forces at the border instead of Germans foiled the alleged plot, the source said.

Police were understood to have ordered the German minority's headquarters here closed.

The Rumanian commanding officer at the Cristeatic bridgehead opposite Zaleszczyki, Poland, told of reports from across the border that Russian troops were disarming all Polish soldiers and placing them in internment camps. The report said "some Polish leaders" were executed. Many of the victims were believed to be Ukrainians who held responsible positions in the former Warsaw government. They therefore were shot as traitors, it was said.

High Polish officials said they had received information that Gen. Kozlowski, now leading the Polish defense of Lwow (Lemberg), may be chosen by the Russians and Germans to negotiate peace with their governments and to head a new Polish buffer state reported to have been agreed upon.

It also was learned that the Russians had established a military commission to govern the areas occupied in Poland near the Rumanian border, with headquarters at Sniatyn. Information in military circles declared Russia had sent 110 divisions into Poland.

Before closing the frontier at Zaleszczyki, Rumanian authorities declared more than 60,000 Polish military and civilian refugees had arrived here since Sunday. They said negotiations would begin soon among the Rumanian, Russian and German governments for the repatriation of a large number of civilians who expressed a desire to return to their homes.

No reason was given for the latest closing of the frontier. Yesterday the Rumanians had reached an accord with the Russians to open it to traffic originating in frontier districts. A cordon also was thrown around Cernauti to forestall any refugees who might want to leave the city without permission.

Refugees Pour Into Hungary Over Icy Pass

Chilled and Famished Poles Tell How Nazi Troops and Planes Harassed Flight

SEP 21 1939

NAGY BERESZNA, Hungary (near the Polish border), Sept. 20 (AP).—More than 3,000 Polish infantrymen crossed the Uzsok pass, in the Carpathian Mountains on the southeastern Polish border, to reach safety in Hungary today. The new arrivals swelled to nearly 20,000 the number of Polish troops and civilians taking refuge in Hungary.

The infantry brought wagon trains bearing many sick and wounded. They were escorted by Hungarian soldiers to Ungvar, thirty miles from the border, where schools were converted into hospitals.

The civilian and military refugees trudged through bitter cold over the windy, 3,000 foot-high mountain pass, near the spot where Polish, Slovak and Hungarian borders meet. It was through this ancient pass that Hungarians and Poles went to the aid of each other in times of stress during past centuries. History repeated itself as Hungarians met the Polish refugees with warm food, clothing and money. Hungarian trains were sent to the pass and other border points to pick up the weary, footsore Poles.

Among the refugees was a group of children from three to fifteen years old, thinly clad and suffering from cold. They were brought here by Hungarian soldiers, who wrapped them in their own uniform coats. All had been separated from their parents.

An epidemic of typhoid was reported in Polish Galicia following destruction of sanitation and water supply systems by German bombs. Refugees arriving from many parts of Galicia were quarantined and special isolation hospitals were set up by Hungarian authorities in rural school buildings.

Late this afternoon a Polish train with sixteen cars loaded with refugees arrived at Uzsok. The locomotive was driven by a soldier, who said the engineer and fireman had been machine-gunned by German armored cars speeding along a road parallel to the train. Many refugees were said to have been killed or wounded by the armored-car fire. The cars were reported to have been chased away by Polish troops who halted in their flight to Hungary to repel the Germans.

A twelve-year-old girl was taken to a hospital by physicians, who said she lost her reason when her parents were killed in a bombing raid.

A Polish captain who came here with his company yesterday committed suicide, officers said, when more recent arrivals told him that his wife had been killed in a raid.

Mowrer Flees From Russians

Correspondent Wades Dniester and Enters Rumania—Executions Are Reported.

SEP 21 1939

By LLOYD LEHRBAS.

CERNAUTI, Rumania, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—Richard Mowrer, correspondent for the Chicago Daily News, escaped from the Russian-occupied section of Poland last night by wading the Dniester River.

Mowrer, was reported yesterday to have been under arrest by Soviet soldiers at the Polish frontier town of Zaleszczyki, and William Morton, United States vice-consul in Warsaw, were caught on the Polish side of the river by the Russian occupation. Morton still is in Zaleszczyki, unable to get Russian permission to enter Rumania.

Frank Morton, an American cameraman, and I found Mowrer on a dusty road nine miles inside the Rumanian border and brought him into Cernauti today.

Wears His Spanish Beret.

Mowrer and I left Warsaw together when the Polish Government moved from the capital. I drove to the Cristeatic bridgehead opposite Zaleszczyki early this morning and attempted to get news of Mowrer, but Rumanian officials refused permission to walk across the bridge and question the Soviet military.

Soon after turning back, I spotted the familiar blue Basque beret Mowrer acquired in Spain. After walking all night and early in the morning to keep off the main highway, because Rumanians once arrested him, Mowrer was footsore and weary.

After wading the river he hid near a bluff until daylight. Then he struck out overland toward Cernauti.

Poles Being Disarmed.

While at the bridgehead I learned that a Soviet tank column occupied Kuty early today after disarming Polish soldiers.

[Kuty is on the Polish-Rumanian frontier, forty miles west of Cernauti.]

The Rumanian commanding officer at the bridgehead informed us of reports from across the border that the Russians were disarming all Polish troops and sending them to internment camps. It was reported that Polish forces near Horodenka fought two hours before being disarmed.

Ukrainian officials, these reports said, placed all Polish officers under arrest and "some Polish leaders have been executed."

Using speedy modern tanks flying the red flag instead of cavalry forces riding under yak-tail banners, the Russians are repeating the Tartars' invasions of past centuries.

110 Divisions in Poland.

Batu, grandson of Genghis Kahn, led his Mongol forces from Russia in 1241 in one of the greatest invasions of what is now—or was—Poland. This was many times repeated.

Information from military sources said that 110 Russian divisions had entered Poland in the current invasion.

Rumanian authorities again closed the frontier this morning at Zaleszczyki. Yesterday they had reached an accord with the Russians to open it to traffic riginating in frontier districts. No reason was given for the newest action.

The Rumanians threw a cordon around Cernauti to prevent civilian and military refugees from leaving the city without permission.

BALKANS SEE RUSS CURBING NAZI SWAY

Report Of Revived Soviet Interest Hailed As Chance To Break Grip

SEP 21 1939

Nations Believed Intent on To Play Off Moscow, Rome And Berlin

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Sept. 20—The six little nations of southeastern Europe were said in diplomatic circles today to be in a position now to play Italy, Germany and Soviet Russia against each other in Balkan affairs.

The reasons diplomats gave for this shift from German sway were an Italian bid for an increased share of Balkan trade while Germany is preoccupied with the war and the apparent renewal of Russian interest in Balkan affairs after a lapse of twenty-five years.

SEP 21 1939

Heretofore, they said, the southeastern European nations—Yugoslavia, Greece, Rumania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Turkey—had little with which to oppose German ideas that the Balkans were part of Germany's economic living space. Italian trade efforts were said to have countered these ideas somewhat, and Russian moves gave this idea a third interested party to use in political jockeying.

To Leave For Moscow

The Turkish Government announced at Ankara today that Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu would leave for Moscow for friendship talks at the Kremlin. There were diplomatic reports that he also would seek better relations between Rumania and Russia in order to offset Nazi influence in Bucharest.

Although most southeastern nations had opposed the Russian regime bitterly, reports that Moscow again would play an active part in Balkan affairs were hailed by them as a chance to break Germany's economic stranglehold in this part of Europe.

"History certainly does repeat itself," said one official. "Russia will counter Germany here."

Czarist Russia had considered herself a protector of all the Slavs. This attitude, in opposition to Germanic aspirations, was a part of the background of Balkan disturbances leading up to the World War.

Besides the Ankara reports, diplomatic circles based their assumption of renewed Russian interest in the southeastern nations on reports of negotiations at Belgrade for Yugoslav recognition of the Soviet Government and a non-aggression pact with Moscow.

There were, in addition, reports of negotiations on a renewal of close relations between Russia and Bulgaria.

For twenty-five years relations between Russia and Yugoslavia have been strained. Yugoslavia is the only small nation which has failed to recognize the Soviet regime.

Turkey, likewise, has been a refuge for great numbers of Russians who opposed the Soviet regime, including many of the Czarist nobility.

A press report from Belgrade said that "the new role of Soviet Russia changes vastly the position of the Balkans. From the viewpoint of the balance of power the development is not without its advantages . . . it will have a counterbalancing effect."

Now Borders On Hungary

In Bulgaria, where before the World War Russia had been known as "Uncle Ivan," one paper said this of Russian occupation of eastern Poland, which extended the Soviet frontier with Rumania and gave her a border with another Balkan country, Hungary:

"Russia is only correcting the injustice done by the Allies in 1919."

Bulgarian diplomatic circles thought that Soviet moves would turn the stream of war away from southeastern Europe. One reason for a warm feeling between Russia and Bulgaria was a report that Bulgarian representatives had been told at Moscow that Russia would aid Bulgaria in regaining territory she lost to Rumania after the World War.

Hungarian diplomats were said to be looking with considerable concern on reported Russian reentry into the Balkan picture, especially in view of the newly created Russian-Hungarian border.

In greatest fear of new moves, diplomats said, was Rumania, which gained the largest amount of territory of any nation after the World War—part of it from Russia and part from Bulgaria. The reported Russian pledge to help Bulgaria gain back the Dobruja region of Rumania has caused uneasiness in Bucharest Government circles.

Another cause of concern in Bucharest has been the massing of Soviet troops on the Rumanian northern border.

ITALY WITHDRAWS HER TROOPS FROM BORDER OF GREECE

Action in Albania Is Taken to Show Complete Mutual Trust.

ROME, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—Italy announced today the withdrawal of her troops from the Albanian-Greek frontier as evidence of "complete reciprocal trust" between Italy and Greece.

The gesture came as Italy appeared to be solidifying her position as leader of the neutral States of southern Europe.

SEP 21 1939

"The Italian Government and the Greek Government in the present European situation have agreed upon the utility of examining relations between the two countries and are happy to state that they continue to be sincerely friendly and inspired by complete reciprocal trust," the communique said. "Concrete proof of this sentiment has been given by the decision of the Italian Government to withdraw its military forces from the Graeco-Albanian frontier in line with analogous provisions which the Greek Government is adopting on its part."

[A communique issued in Athens said that Greece and Italy "now consider that all danger of border incidents and their accompanying implications which could arise from the presence of two armies facing each other . . . are now completely removed." Greece also withdrew troops from her Albanian border and ordered the demobilization of her 1937 class of reservists on October 1 as a result of the agreement.]

Italy occupied Albania in a brief Easter week-end campaign which carried Italian troops to the Greek frontier.

Italian circles revived the suggestion of an armistice and mediation to end the European war now that Polish resistance to Germany appears ending. They admitted only faint hope of such a settlement, however, because of Great Britain's "intransigeance" after Hitler's speech at Danzig yesterday.

Polish Cardinal Reports.

At the same time Pope Pius XII at Castel Gandolfo heard from Cardinal Hlond, the Primate of Poland, a report on the situation as it affects the priests and church in Poland, predominantly a Catholic country.

Vatican prelates have indicated considerable concern at what may await the church in a country now controlled jointly by Nazi Germany and Soviet Russia.

The newspaper Il Piccolo, as did all the Italian papers, asked what was the use of fighting any longer in view of Hitler's announcement that he had no demands in western or southern Europe. Il Piccolo said that a long war would benefit neither side.

"Today neither democratic preponderance nor totalitarian preponderance is any longer possible," it said.

This was believed to be the first time the Fascist press had raised the possibility of neither side gaining in the struggle for a balance of power, since it usually had predicted ultimate victory for the totalitarians.

The Fascist press described Hitler's speech as moderate, persuasive and calm.

Il Messagero commented that the reason given by Great Britain and France for going to war—protection of Poland—no longer existed. Without predicting what might happen on the western front, the newspaper said: "Positions so clearly and decisively fixed can allow everybody to turn back several steps and seek a saving solution with renewed good will."

Powerful Neutral Bloc.

Reports from Balkan capitals and tightening Italo-Spanish relations indicated today that Italy is gradually assuming a leadership of a neutral bloc extending from the Black Sea to the Atlantic Ocean.

Authoritative Italian sources said that it was only natural that Italy, as the most powerful European neutral, should undertake the role of guiding southern Europe.

Observers expressed doubt, however, that any formal pact would result.

The neutral bloc was described as merely "an unwritten community of interests," with Italy the frontal nation in close diplomatic relationship with Spain, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Rumania and Greece.

Although continuing her preparations for possible war, Italy gave evidence she has no idea of involving herself in the near future. Italian ships were reported on all seas.

While Generalissimo Franco of Spain has called off a scheduled visit to Rome this month, Fascist officials suggested that he and Premier Mussolini were keeping in close touch. There was a belief that he might visit Rome in November.

In Belgrade negotiations for the recognition of Soviet Russia by Yugoslavia and conclusion of a non-aggression pact were reported reliably to be under way. Hitherto Yugoslavia and Russia have not had diplomatic relations.

DUCE'S PAPER ASKS PEACE IN THE WEST

Calls Conflict Useless and Points to Poland.

SEP 21 1939

ROME, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—Premier Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo d'Italia, published today an implied appeal to Great Britain and France to come to terms with Germany. It called the war in the west "useless."

"Italian sensibility, tempered by thousands of years, again points out the right road," the paper said, referring to earlier peace suggestions made in Rome.

"The whole civilized world may once more see how correct were the vision and proposals of Rome." Il Popolo declared. "The war was as disastrous for Poland as it was tragically useless. Now that that prediction is fulfilled in the east, the same word of good sense may be repeated for the west."

MILITARY MEN PROFIT FROM WAR IN POLAND

Officers Say They Have New Regard For German Army's Skill

SEP 21 1939

By Drew Middleton

London, Sept. 20 (AP)—Military men in London drew from the first two weeks of the Polish campaign some of the initial lessons of the 1939 war as Polish resistance crumbled before German and Soviet Russian armies.

They said they included:

1. The mechanized arm of the German Army proved itself capable of swift, sure advances. The legend, carefully cultivated after the Austrian invasion, of its structural deficencies has been dissipated. The speed with which its forces took military objectives was staggering in comparison with similar attacks in Spain's civil war.

2. Afforded every opportunity by the rolling, dry terrain of Poland, the mechanized forces nevertheless had to be followed by cavalry and infantry. The former arm was especially useful in moving speedily to positions already stormed by tanks and armed cars.

3. It was established that aerial bombardment is a most effective weapon against the preparation of counter-attacks in open country and that the air strength of warring powers must be somewhere near equal if the war is to be fought on anything like even terms.

They said that to those points must be added three observations on a broader scale.

SEP 21 1939

German Staff Flexible

First, that the German general staff appears more flexible and adaptable in strategy than in 1914.

Second, that the sweep through Poland might have been accomplished in a week had the Poles not exhibited desperate bravery throughout.

Thirdly, that the downfall of the Polish armies was accomplished as much through the superior—often uncanny—work of the German intelligence service as through any other agency.

Speaking of the mechanized arm, one neutral officer who fought through the World War said:

"I was skeptical of its efficiency until the last two weeks. But its performances, attested by neutrals, have been prodigious. It performs today many functions of cavalry in the nineteenth century, but it moves faster than any cavalry, even your Jeb Stuarts, ever moved.

Value In Rough Terrain

"If the Maginot Line is ever broken," the same officer continued, "this mechanized arm will be of inestimable value even in the rougher terrain of the Western front. It may be early to make the prediction, but I believe that in mechanized columns, such as the German, the World War advantage of the defense over the offense in casualties has been adjusted."

Although the advancing Germans used cavalry to follow tanks and armored cars into new positions in Poland, observers pointed out this was made possible by the character of the country.

"In the rugged terrain of Western Europe these same cavalry divisions would be slowed down to the pace of infantry," said one, "but cavalry always will be useful over such ground."

The German air force was used chiefly to bomb and strafe with machine guns the concentration of Polish infantry and artillery for counter-assaults. In this it was invaluable.

Success Of Planes

"A large part of the German success must be laid to this source," said a soldier who had just returned from Germany.

"The Poles planned counter-offensive after counter-offensive only to see them broken up as German planes swooped on troops getting ready for these offensives and scattered them."

To this task military men add invaluable aid in reconnaissance and bombing preparation for German offenses as the main work of the German air force.

"Perhaps it is too early to say," reported an officer who had followed Ludendorff in the World War, "but I believe the German general staff's policy today is more flexible than it was in the World War. It was able to divert a direct assault on Warsaw into a flanking movement on both flanks which would encircle the enemy and at the same time consolidate gains made by other armies.

"This shows staff work of a high degree of imagination as well as thoroughness—the German forte."

Polish Staff Harassed

The military intelligence service of the Germans received high praise. Observers noted that the whereabouts of the Polish general staff appeared never unknown to the Germans, that Polish generals were continually on the move, harassed by German bombers and artillery.

Allied and neutral observers alike swore by the steady courage of the Polish soldier.

"Their bravery was almost unbelievable," said one report. "Strafed and bombed from the air without ever seeing effective aerial resistance to the German air force, their communications disorganized, their country overrun, their generals committed to a policy of retreat and defense, they nevertheless kept their courage and their morale high. As a French observer said of General Pickett's charge at your battle of Gettysburg: 'It was magnificent, but it was not war.'"

Canada Calls Flyers for War

Also Announces Plan for Expeditionary Force of 32,000 Volunteers.

SEP 21 1939

OTTAWA, Sept. 20 (Canadian Press).—Canada summoned trained flyers today for immediate overseas duty, and began the organization of a volunteer expeditionary force of 32,000 men to be available in event they are needed in the European war.

At the same time the Government ordered the doubling of the naval personnel and the construction of "a large number of anti-submarine craft" as additional measures of co-operation with Great Britain.

The Defense Ministry said that the expeditionary force would consist of two war-strength divisions of 16,000 men each. They will be recruited by volunteers from the 50,000 men now under arms in Canada, the Ministry explained. It was expected that the first division would be ready for overseas service early in the new year.

Announcement of plans for the expansion of the naval forces disclosed that Canada has been co-operating with the British Navy in defense of Canadian ports and in convoy work off the coast.

Submarine Scare.

While Canada stepped up her war preparations a naval dockyard commander at Halifax, N. S., issued a statement saying: "Fairly reliable reports indicated that a submarine may have been operating off the Nova Scotian coast." A Canadian destroyer engaged in a search for the suspected submarine, the commander said, and dropped a depth bomb "in a suspicious area." The effect was not known.

The Government said it was expected that civilian pilots would co-operate with the Royal Canadian Air Force in meeting the immediate demands for trained flyers abroad.

To maintain a constant supply of airmen the Government authorized "a plan of intensified training."

The first aid requested by Great Britain in answer to Canada's offer of assistance, a Government statement said, was facilitation of purchases of essential war materials. To meet this request, the statement added, the first step will be the establishment of credits here, probably involving a "repatriation" of Canadian securities held in London.

A British Government mission is now in Ottawa with authority to place orders for munitions and supplies.

Announcement of the new war-time measures was accompanied by a Cabinet shake-up in which Labor Minister Norman M. Rogers assumed the defense portfolio. Former Defense Minister Ian Mackenzie becomes Minister of Pensions and National Health. Postmaster-General Norman A. McLarty was named Minister of Labor, and his former post was taken over by C. G. Power, until now Minister of Pensions.

Mr. Rogers, a former professor at Queen's University, now 45 years old, served overseas in the ranks during the world war. He abandoned an academic career to enter politics in 1935.

Enlistment Inquiries from U. S.

VICTORIA, B. C., Sept. 20 (Canadian Press). Premier T. D. Pattullo said that his office is receiving "scores of inquiries" from residents of the United States regarding enlistment in the Canadian army for service overseas. He said that all enlistment inquiries were being referred to the military authorities.

SMIGLY-RYDZ MUST STAY IN RUMANIA

SEP 21 1939

Bucharest to Intern Him as Nazis Demanded.

BUCHAREST, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—The Rumanian Government announced today that Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, chief of Poland's scattered military forces, would be interned in Rumania for the duration of the European war, despite appeals from Britain and France.

The Nazis have insisted that the Marshal, like other soldiers, should be forced to stay in the country to which he fled.

It was understood that British and French diplomats had tried to induce the Government to permit Marshal Smigly-Rydz to proceed to Paris with President Moscicki, Foreign Minister Beck and other Polish civilian leaders.

In the interests of Rumanian neutrality the President and Foreign Minister, however, were urged to move on as quickly as possible.

A new decree law ordering all Czech and Polish civilians to quit Rumania within two weeks was announced. It was understood that the Poles and Czechs were trying to arrange new havens in Britain and France.

From Cernauti, Rumania, it was reported reliably that Gen. Josef Haller, founder of the Polish Legion in France during the world war, had been interned by the Rumanian authorities. This followed a complaint to the Rumanian police by the German Consul at Cernauti. It had been reported that Gen. Haller was planning to go to France.

FLEEING POLISH LEADERS' PLANS ARE DISRUPTED

President Moscicki And Others Face Difficulty In Leaving Rumania

SEP 21 1939

Marshal Smigly - Rydz, Chief Of Military Forces, Is Interned

[By the Associated Press]

Bucharest, Sept. 20—Last minute difficulties disrupted tonight the plans of President Ignace Moscicki, Foreign Minister Josef Beck and other members of the fleeing Polish Government to leave Rumania for France.

Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, chief of Poland's scattered military forces, was interned and sent to enforced domicile at Craiova near the junction of the Rumanian-Yugoslav-Bulgarian frontiers.

Moscicki and his civilian officials were notified they must obtain permission from Yugoslavia and Italy to travel to France by train.

The sea route was barred to them because it was feared Russian warships patrolling the Black Sea might seize the President and his Government.

Must Leave In Two Weeks

All Czech and Polish civilians were ordered in a new decree law to leave Rumania within two weeks.

Another move to strengthen Rumania's neutrality and avoid controversy with Berlin, it was announced, was the handing back to the German minority in Bessarabia of fifty-seven elementary schools taken over several years ago. The schools were authorized to teach in German. Previously all schools have had to teach in Rumanian.

After a complaint to the Rumanian police by the German consul at Cernauti it was reported reliably that Gen. Josef Haller, founder of the Polish Legion in France during the World War, had been interned by Rumanian authorities.

50 Seized as Bulgarians Storm Stores of Jews

Windows Smashed in Nation's First Serious Anti-Semitism

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Sept. 20 (AP).—Fifty persons were arrested and sent to concentration camps after an outbreak of anti-Jewish rioting here today. Crowds raided the business section, breaking hundreds of windows in Jewish stores. It was the first serious anti-Jewish rioting in Bulgaria recently, and police, apparently surprised, had difficulty restoring order.

Police said the demonstrations were staged by a small Nazi-type party called Ratnizi which, although twice dissolved by the government, has maintained an underground existence.

Bulgaria, although generally in close relations with Nazi Germany, has been known hitherto for the absence of anti-Semitic feeling. The country has only about 50,000 Jews in a total population of over 6,000,000.

Police said the demonstrations broke out after an incident between a Gentile reserve officer and a Jewish toy store merchant. The officer told the police the merchant refused to redeem a broken toy and then insulted him. In a fist fight the officer was severely beaten.

Later, printed signs like those used during Germany's anti-Semitic campaign appeared in shop windows. They read, "This is a Bulgarian store." Most Jewish stores re-

Rumanian Schools Being Germanized

BUCHAREST, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—The Rumanian Government, anxious to maintain its neutrality, has handed back to the German minority in Bessarabia fifty-seven elementary schools which it confiscated several years ago.

SHAW ASKS CHEER FOR STALIN'S COUP

SEP 21 1939

Says Red Leader Made Hitler Divide the Booty.

LONDON, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—George Bernard Shaw, the playwright, wrote to the editor of the London Times today that he considered the news from Soviet Russia "good news for us, as far as any war news can be called good."

"The question," Shaw said, "is not whether Mr. Molotov's speech resembles certain utterances of Herr Hitler's or not. What concerns us is whether Mr. Molotov's statements are true or not. They are obviously true to the last syllable."

Shaw added:

"We have encouraged Poland to fight by our pledge to support her; and we have encouraged ourselves by silly reports that the Polish Army was unbroken and that the Poles were performing prodigies of valor. The truth, as we now have to admit, and as Mr. Molotov notes, is that our support has so entirely failed that the Polish resistance has been wiped out, and with it the Polish Army and the Polish Government, leaving Poland derelict, to be picked up and put on by Herr Hitler as a shepherd putteth on his garment.

"At this point, we being helpless, Mr. Stalin steps in and says: 'Not quite. If the Ukraine and White Russia are going begging, Russia will occupy them, Hitler or no Hitler.'

"No sooner said than done. The Red Army is in occupation. Mr. Stalin, who was very explicit as to his objection to being made a catspaw to take our chestnuts off the fire, has no objection whatever to using Herr Hitler as a catspaw. The unfortunate Fuehrer is compelled to disgorge half his booty and to face yet another army saying: 'Thus far and no farther.'

"And instead of giving three cheers for Stalin, we are shrieking that all is lost.

"Mr. Stalin lately sent us a photograph of himself laughing at us. When will we learn to laugh at ourselves?"

Two U. S. Freighters Searched

British Report Seizing Parts of Both Cargoes as Contraband.

LONDON, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—It was reported authoritatively today that the United States freighters Saccarappa and Shickshinny had been searched by the British for contraband and that part of their cargoes had been confiscated. The nature of the cargoes was not disclosed.

The Saccarappa was said to be on the way back to the United States. The Shickshinny arrived at Hamburg.

Survivors from the 4,060-ton Furness cargo steamship Aviemore reported at Liverpool today that the vessel was sunk by a submarine last week. Eleven survivors of the crew of forty were landed.

Meanwhile today the British people still thrilled to the tales of heroism brought ashore by the 682 survivors of H. M. S. Courageous. They told how, as the ship sank, Capt. W. T. Makeig-Jones stood on the bridge at salute, facing her white ensign fluttering astern.

A few minutes before, directing the abandoning of ship, the captain called out: "Take your time, boys, there's no hurry."

Capt. Makeig-Jones's name was not among those which "from all the information available must be regarded as the final list of survivors from H. M. S. Courageous." Among the 578 not accounted for were seventeen other officers; the remainder were seamen.

Carried Naval Stores.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Sept. 20 (A. P.).—The 4,965-ton Saccarappa and the 5,103-ton Shickshinny are both owned by the South Atlantic Steamship Company and both sailed from this port. Their cargoes included phosphate rock and naval stores, destined for delivery at Hamburg, Germany, and English ports.

The Naval Stores Review said that 1,110 barrels of rosin were taken from the Saccarappa, which sailed from Savannah about August 15. The trade paper said it was understood that the shippers of the naval stores were protected by war risk insurance.

The Shickshinny sailed near the end of August.

Continental Solidarity Is Seen by Welles

CRISTOBAL, Canal Zone, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—Sumner Welles, United States Under-Secretary of State, expressed confidence today that the neutrality conference of twenty-one nations at Panama City would bring a practical demonstration of continental solidarity which had "in fact been attained."

Mr. Welles and his party en route to the conference, arrived today aboard the Santa Clara after a voyage in which spotlights played on American flags painted on both sides and top deck of the Grace liner.

Dutch Barges on Rhine Sail Past Rival Forts

BASLE, Switzerland, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—A score of barges flying the Netherlands flag sailed calmly down the Rhine today between guns of the powerful French and German forts, en route to Rotterdam.

Governor of Lwow.

MUNKACS, Hungary, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—Alfred Bitja, Governor of Lwow, capital of the Polish Ukraine, was found dead in a hotel room here yesterday.

A letter found before his body contained instructions for the distribution of $1,500 cash which Bitja had carried with him and directed that his automobile be given to his chauffeur.

SEP 21 1939

Bitja, who was 50 years old, arrived here early yesterday from Poland. Hotel employees said they heard the sound of a pistol shot shortly after he entered his room.

Bitja's wife was reported missing after troops had occupied the health resort, where she had been under treatment. Several of their sons are officers in the Polish Army.

RIOTING IN BULGARIA

Anti-Jewish Demonstrations Laid to Nazi Party.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—Fifty persons were arrested and sent to concentration camps after an outbreak of anti-Jewish rioting here today.

SEP 21 1939

Crowds raided the business section, breaking hundreds of windows in Jewish stores. It was the first serious outbreak of anti-Jewish rioting in Bulgaria recently and the police, apparently surprised, had difficulty restoring order.

The police said that the demonstrations were staged by a small Nazi-type party called Ratnizi which, although twice dissolved by the Government, has maintained underground existence. According to the police, the demonstrations broke out after an incident between a non-Jewish reserve officer and a Jewish toy store merchant. The officer told the police that the merchant had refused to redeem a broken toy and then insulted him. In a fist fight the officer was severely beaten.

Bulgaria, although generally in close relations with Germany, has been known hitherto for the absence of anti-Semitic feeling. The country has only about 50,000 Jews in a total population of 6,000,000.

Representatives in Reich Will See That British and French Get a Fair Deal

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP).—One of the extraordinary duties thrust upon the American government by the war is to see that British and French prisoners of war get fair treatment in Germany.

In consenting to represent British and French interests in the Reich, the government also agreed to look after the condition of p[illegible] oners from those countries.

The American Embassy in Berlin and various consulates will carry on the necessary inspections, which in time may embrace tens of thousands of men. They will expect German treatment to follow the provisions of a treaty regarding prisoners of war signed in Geneva in 1929 by Germany, Great Britain, France, the United States and forty-three other nations. Under this agreement prisoners are given a wide range of rights over which the "protecting power"—in this case the United States—has the duty of inspection.

Prisoners of war must at all times be humanely treated and protected. Reprisals against them are prohibited. No coercion may be used to obtain information about their army or country. All their personal effects, including money, remain their property.

Prisoners may not be placed in prisons but in buildings or barracks affording all possible guarantees of healthfulness. Their living quarters, food and water must be equal to those of troops at German base camps. They have the right to medical attention and to admission to hospitals.

Prisoners of different nationalities and races may not be commingled and officers must be separated from the rank and file.

Germany may utilize the labor of British and French prisoners, but the labor must have no direct relation with war operations. Conditions of work must not be heavier than for the civil workers employed in the same work. Wages must be paid.

The prisoners are permitted to send mail and to receive mail and parcels containing food, clothing and books. Prisoners may be punished for infraction of camp rules, but the punishment may not be corporal; it may not be more severe than that provided for German soldiers for the same offense.

If a judicial proceeding is instituted against a British or French prisoner for a serious offense, American diplomatic representatives must be notified at least three weeks before the opening of the trial. If the prisoner does not choose a defense counsel, the American Embassy or Consulate may name one.

Germany will be obligated to send back to Britain and France seriously sick or injured soldiers as soon as possible.

The American diplomatic corps in Germany, is now under the direction of Alexander C. Kirk, Charge D'Affaires, of Chicago, there being no ambassador.

[Hugh R. Wilson resigned as American Ambassador to Germany on Sept. 1, and was subsequently placed second in command of a special division of the State Department created to help evacuate Americans from Europe.]

Trouble With Russia Not Expected By Latvia

Dictator Ulmanis, In Phone Talk With Omaha Paper, Says "All Is Quiet Here"

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 20 (AP) — The World-Herald said today Karlis Ulmanis, University of Nebraska graduate and now dictator of Latvia, told the paper in a transatlantic telephone interview today he does not anticipate trouble with Russia.

The paper quoted him as saying "everything is quiet here, the only trouble is in Poland." He spoke from Riga, the Latvian capital. Asked if the Latvian army had mobilized, he replied "there is no chance of any trouble; everything is quiet." Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia are the three Baltic nations some observers say are menaced by the Soviet sudden move to expand.

Ulmanis graduated in 1905 from the University of Nebraska Agricultural College when he specialized in dairying. He came to this country because of disagreement with the Russian Government, which then controlled his native Latvia. He went to Texas following his graduation, returning to Latvia after the Russian revolution.

Lumber Chief German Impor[illegible] From Both Nations

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (AP).—The Commerce Department made public statistics today showing that Germany last year imported $38,392,000 worth of food and other merchandise from Poland and $19,036,000 from Russia.

The tabulation, made public by the department "in view of the general interest in Soviet Russia and Poland as sources of supply of important foodstuffs and raw materials for Germany," showed that lumber was the biggest individual item bought by Germany from either Poland or Russia last year. Lumber purchases from Russia totaled $7,647,000, and from Poland, $6,364,000.

Other purchases from Poland included $5,705,000 of livestock, $1,098,000 of butter, $5,083,000 of meat, $2,058,000 of woodpulp, and $2,167,000 of zinc.

How British Answer Hitler

Contrasting Excerpts From Fuehrer's Speech and Official Reply by London.

By Associated Press. SEP 21 1939

Adolf Hitler's speech accepting Danzig into Greater Germany and blaming Great Britain for the war brought a quick reply last night from London. Contrasting excerpts from the speech and from the official British reply follow:

GERMAN-SOVIET RELATIONS.

HITLER: We see that in England and France this collaboration of Germany and Russia (in Poland) is looked upon as a tremendous crime. . . .

Russia remains what it is and Germany will remain what it is. . . .

We are of the opinion from now on to look after our interests ourselves and we find we can represent them best if the two greatest peoples and States come to terms with each other. . . .

The basis of understanding between Germany and Soviet Russia is the removal of this nightmare (European war) which bore heavily upon British statesmen. . . .

BRITISH: Now compare what Herr Hitler tells us of Russia with what he told us when it was Herr von Ribbentrop's mission to persuade Great Britain of the Russian peril. This is what he said then in the Reichstag January 30, 1937):

"We look upon Bolshevism as upon an intolerable danger to the world. We shall try to keep this danger away from the German people by every means at our command. . . . Any treaty links between Germany and present-day Bolshevist Russia would be without any value whatsoever."

LIMIT OF GERMAN AIMS.

HITLER: Let us hope they (British statesmen) are calming down now that they know it is not true that Germany wants to conquer the Ukraine. . . .

In the west and south of its Reich territory Germany has accepted final boundaries through serious renunciations. . . . Neither against England nor against France have I any kind of war aim. . . .

BRITISH: "Germany has no further territorial ambitions in Europe" was an undertaking which had been broken too flagrantly and too often. The tale of Herr Hitler's broken promises is so long that he can scarcely expect Great Britain to believe that German aspirations are limited and that Germany has no further aspirations in the West. . . .

MODE OF WAR.

HITLER: Those who dreamed of shattering Germany and laying its ruins German cities are no longer to be heard from because they know that for every bomb falling on a German city, five or ten will fall on their cities.

We accept the gantlet and we shall fight in the same manner as our opponents. England already has begun to fight against women and children with hypocrisy and lies. On the seas they say England cannot be attacked and that they are justified in waging a war with that weapon against women and children not only of the enemy but also of neutrals. The time could rapidly come when we apply a weapon against which we cannot be attacked. Let us hope that they then do not suddenly remember humanity.

It is also up to England to lead the blockade along lines which comply with international law or along lines which contradict international law. We shall adapt ourselves to this warfare. The English aim logically is no longer a war against a regime, but a war against the German people, against German women and children.

BRITISH: There is no question of Great Britain waging war, as Herr Hitler declares, on German women and children. The German Government has already declared that there are ample stocks of food in Germany, but the restriction of the import of raw materials is not a measure of which the German Government can legitimately complain. . . .

LENGTH OF WAR.

HITLER: When they say that this war will last for three years, then I can only express my pity for the French poilu. At present he knows only that he will have to fight for at least three years. Whether the war will last three years also depends on us. If it should last for three years the word capitulation will not appear at the end of the third year—neither at the end of the fourth nor the end of the seventh year. . . .

GERMAN SOLIDARITY.

HITLER: National Socialism has not educated the people in the last twenty years for nothing. . . . What our enemies did to us only increased our followers and created this indissoluble unity. . . . The gentlemen (British leaders) can be assured: through their laughable propaganda they never again will disintegrate the German people. These propaganda bunglers ought to come to us and undergo a schooling. . . .

POLAND.

HITLER: Poland never again will rise in the form of the Versailles Treaty. Not only Germany but also Russia guaranteed that. . . .

Poland has never been a democracy. . . . It was a State of force governed by the nightstick, by police and last but not least by the military. The lot of Germans in this State was terrible. . . .

As long as the Marshal (Pilsudski) lived it seemed as if this attempt (to settle borders and further peace) would lead to a diminishing of tension. Immediately after his death, however, an intensified fight against Germandom set in. . . .

BRITISH: The world remained dumb in the face of this ill treatment (of Germans in Poland) for the very good reasons that from the time of Marshal Pilsudski's death until this spring Herr Hitler represented his relations with Poland as excellent.

No word was said in Germany of the maltreatment of Germans in Poland. On the contrary . . . Herr Hitler himself described his friendship for Poland. . . .

START OF THE WAR.

HITLER: Uutimatums cannot be presented to the Germany of today. The German Reich is not willing to be talked to in such a tone. . . . Poland chose to fight because certain statesmen of the West had assured it that they possessed concrete evidence of the worthlessness of the German Army, . . . of a discrepancy which was said to exist between the German people and its leadership. . . .

They racked their brains in Poland whether they should destroy our army before or behind Berlin. The Polish Marshal who now has lamentably left his army in the lurch declared that he would hack Germany and the German Army to pieces. . . .

BRITISH: Herr Hitler's account of the circumstances attending the outbreak of war is a travesty of the facts. It was only two days after the invasion of Poland when no reply had been received to the British communication, that an ultimatum (from Britain) was addressed to the German Government.

Nazis Give Out Enlarged List Of Contraband

SEP 21 1939

HAR TRIB

Consulate Here Includes All Fuel, Cash, Bonds; Hits British 'Hunger Blockade'

The German Consulate in New York made public yesterday a list of articles which the Reich will consider unconditional contraband in accordance with an act amending the German prize law of Sept. 12, 1939, and increasing its scope.

Germany, the Consulate said, was merely giving "tit for tat," since the British Admiralty had modified its prize law so as to "disregard all of those limitations established by international law."

In its endeavor to spare as far as possible peaceful maritime trade, the German government, the Consulate said, in its earlier prize law had declared as unconditional contraban donly such objects and materials destined for enemy territory or enemy armed forces as serve directly the land, sea or air armament.

"However, after the British government had issued a list of unconditional contraband far exceeding that limitation, the German government feels compelled likewise to enlarge the scope of unconditional contraband," the Consulate said.

The statement listed the following objects and materials as unconditional contraband if they are destined for enemy territory or for enemy armed forces:

1. Weapons of all kinds, their parts and accessories.
2. Munitions and munition parts; bombs, torpedoes, mines, and other kinds of projectiles, contrivances destined for shooting or throwing such projectiles; powder and explosives including explosive caps and igniting materials.
3. Warships of all types, their parts and accessories.
4. War planes of all types, their parts and accessories, airplane motors.
5. Tanks, armored cars, and armored trains, armour plates of all kinds.
6. Chemical battle materials and contrivances, and machines used to throw or blow such chemicals.
7. Military uniforms and equipment.
8. Communication, signal, and military lighting mediums and their parts draught animals, animals of burden, and animals for riding.
9. Transport and communication equipment and their parts.
10. Material for producing energy and heat of all kinds, lubricat[illegible] oils.
11. Gold, silver, currency, c[illegible] cates of debts.
12. Implements, tools, mac[illegible] and material for the manufactu[illegible] use of the objects and produc[illegible] enumerated in the foregoing.

Under conditional contraband were listed foodstuffs, including live stock clothing and objects and materials used for their manufacture.

Germany has knowledge of the official British contraband list, a statement supplementing the translation of the Reich's present prize law said. The goods on the British list, the statement said, "is so all embracing that it is a revelation of unscrupulous violation of law, furnishing proof of the reckless British warfare.

"For, according to generally recognized principles of law, only such goods are contraband which directly serve the armament of the belligerent forces; moreover, other merchandise is contraband if it be proven that it is destined for the use of an enemy army or navy."

The German Consulate charged that the British list "contains a large number of objects which England would seize as sea booty, although they are destined for the use of civilian populations," and that England "now formally declares a hunger blockade from the effects of which woman and children of the whole European continent must suffer."

British measures will cause starvation and famine of adolescents and premature death of elderly persons, the statement said.

"There is no doubt that the economic life of the neutral countries will be strangled by these British methods," the consulate asserted.

LONDON, SEPT. 20-(AP)-THE MOST IMPORTANT PASSAGES OF PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN'S THIRD WAR STATEMENT TO THE HOUSE OF COMMONS, DELIVERED TODAY, FOLLOW (ABOUT 1,500):

SEP 21 1939

ON SEPT. 17TH, AN EVENT OCCURRED WHICH HAS INEVITABLY HAD A DECISIVE EFFECT ON THE WAR ON THE EASTERN FRONT. ON THE MORNING OF SEPT. 17 RUSSIAN TROOPS CROSSED THE POLISH FRONTIER AT POINTS ALONG ITS WHOLE LENGTH AND ADVANCED INTO POLAND.

I CANNOT SAY THAT THE ACTION OF THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT WAS UNEXPECTED. FOR SOME TIME PAST SOVIET TROOPS HAVE MOBILIZED AND CON-

CENTRATED ON THE WESTERN FRONTIERS OF THE SOVIET UNION, AND STATE-MENTS HAVE APPEARED IN THE SOVIET PRESS AND WIRELESS REFERRING TO THE POSITION OF WHITE RUSSIANS AND UKRAINIANS IN POLAND WHICH BORE THE INTERPRETATION THAT THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT WERE PREPARING THE GROUND
FOR INTERVENTION. X X X

IT IS STILL TOO EARLY TO PRONOUNCE ANY FINAL VERDICT ON THE MOVE
OR CONSEQUENCES OF THE RUSSIAN ACTION. FOR THE UNHAPPY VICTIMES OF THIS CYNICAL ATTACK THE RESULT HAS BEEN A TRAGEDY OF THE GRIMMEST CHARACTER.

SEP 21 1939

THE WORLD, WHICH HAS WATCHED THE VANIN TRUGGLE OF THE POLISH
NATION AGAINST OVERWHELMING ODDS, WITH PROFOUND PITY AND SYMPATHY, ADMIRES THEIR VALOR, WHICH EVEN NOW REFUSES TO ADMIT DEKEAT.

IF BRITAIN AND FRANCE HAVE BEEN UNABLE TO AVERT THE DEFEAT OF THE ARMIES OF POLAND, THEY HAVE ASSURED HER THAT THEY HAVE NOT FORGOTTEN THEIR OBLIGATIONS TO HER NOR WEAKENED IN THEIR DETERMIN-ATION TO CARRY ON THE STRUGGLE.

AINST THE BACKGROUND OF THESE EVENTS, HERR HITLER CHOSE
YESTERDAY TO ADDRESS ANOTHER SPEECH TO THE WORLD. IT IS NOT OUR WAY
IN THIS COUNTRY TO SPEAK WITH BOASTS AND THREATS. PERHAPS FOR THAT VERY REASON THE GERMAN LEADERS HAVE DIFFICULTY IN UNDERSTANDING US.
BUT IN SUCH COMMENTS AS I HAVE TO MAKE ON THE CHANCELLORS SPEECH,
I SHALL NOT DEPART FROM OUR CUSTOM OF SPEAKING SOBERLY AND QUIETLY.

THE SPEECH WHICH HERRR HITLER MADE YESTERDAY AT DANZIG DOES NOT CHANGE THE SITUATION WITH WHICH WE ARE CONFRONTED.

IT GAVE AN ACCOUNT OF RECENT EVENTS WHICH WE CANNOT ACCEPT AS ACCURATE AND, AS THE COMMENTARY BROADCAST BY THE BBC LAST NIGHT CLEARLY SHOWED, IT CONTAINED CERTAIN ASSURANCES OF THE KIND WHICH IN RECENT YEARS HERR HITLER HAS REPUDIATED WHEN IT SUITED HIS PURPOSE.

AMONG THE MANY MISSTATEMENTS OF FACT, I WISH TO REFER IN PARTICULAR TO THE STATEMENT THAT THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT AGREED TO ITALIAN MEDIATION WHILE HIS MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT REFUSED IT. THE REPLY TO THIS STATEMENT IS CONTAINED IN THE COMMUNIQUE ISSUED BY THE OFFICIAL ITALIAN NEWS AGENCY ON SEPT. 4, WHICH WAS REPRODUCED IN THE RECENT WHITE PAPER AND WHICH CLEARLY BROUGHT OUT THE COMMON ATTITUDE ADOPTED BY THE BRITISH AND FRENCH GOVERNMENTS.

I HAVE SINCE NOTED THE STRONG COMMUNIQUE ISSUED TODAY BY THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT, WHICH EMPHATICALLY SUPPORTS OUR ATTITUDE. I HOPE THAT A SUPPLEMENTARY WHITE PAPER, WHICH WILL BE ISSUED TOMORROW, WILL MAKE PLAIN THE TRUE COURSE OF RECENT EVENTS SO THAT PUBLIC OPINION MAY HAVE NO DIFFICULTY IN FORMING ITS FINAL JUDGMENT.

HERR HITLER SAYS MUCH IN HIS SPEECH ABOUT THE HUMANE METHODS BY WHICH HE HAS WAGED WAR. I CAN ONLY SAY THAT METHODS ARE NOT MADE HUMANE BY CALLING THEM SO AND THAT THE ACCOUNTS OF GERMAN BOMBING OF OPEN TOWNS AND MACHINE-GUNNING OF REFUGEES HAVE SHOCKED THE WHOLE WORLD.

SEP 21 1939

I HAVE ONLY ONE GENERAL COMMENT TO MAKE. OUR GENERAL PURPOSE IN THIS STRUGGLE IS WELL KNOWN. IT IS TO REDEEM EUROPE FROM THE PERPETUAL AND RECURRING FEAR OF GERMAN AGGRESSION AND ENABLE THE PEOPLES OF EUROPE TO PRESERVE THEIR INDEPENDENCE AND THEIR LIBERTIES.
NO THREATS WILL DETER US OR OUR FRENCH ALLIES FROM THIS PURPOSE.

LONDON--FIRST ADD CHAMBERLAIN ABSTRACT XXX THIS PURPOSE.
PIS MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT DID NOT SEEK THIS WAR. THEY DID,

AS THE PUBLISHED DOCUMENTS SHOW, REPEATEDLY STATE THEIR READINESS FOR A PEACEFUL SETTLEMENT BY NEGOTIATION. THEY PERSEVERED IN THEIR ATTEMPTS TO SECURE THIS UP TO, AND EVEN AFTER, THE STRIKING OF THE FIRST BLOW BUT THEIR EFFORTS WERE SET AT NOUGHT, AND THEIR HOPES SHATTERED, BY THE UNPROVOKED AND BRUTAL AGGRESSION OF GERMANY UPON OUR POLISH ALLIES.

ON THE WESTERN FRONTIER THE FRENCH HAVE CONTINUED TO MAKE METHODICAL AND SUCCESSFUL PROGRESS. THE LACONIC BUT ADMIRABLY CLEAR ANNOUNCEMENTS OF THE FRENCH HIGHER COMMAND INDICATE THAT VALUABLE STRATEGIC AND TACTICAL OBJECTIVES HAVE BEEN SECURED, AND THAT THE GROUND GAINED HAS BEEN HELD IN FACE OF INCREASINGLY SEVERE GERMAN RESISTANCE.

SEP 21 1939

SINCE MY LAST STATEMENT TO THE HOUSE ON THE WAR AT SEA, THE SITUATION HAS BEEN ONE OF INTENSE AND CONTINUOUS NAVAL ACTIVITY, MAINLY IN THE FORM OF ATTACKS ON U-BOATS CARRIED OUT BY DESTROYERS, SMALL CRAFT AND THE FLEET AIR ARM, ACTING UNDER COVER OF THE MAIN FLEETS AND SQUADRONS.

THESE ATTACKS HAVE BEEN MADE BOTH BY DAY AND BY NIGHT AND THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF THE ANTI-SUBMARINE CAMPAIGN AFTER A LITTLE OVER A FORTNIGHT OF WAR HAVE EXCEEDED ANYTHING WHICH THE BRITISH NAVY ACCOMPLISHED EVEN OVER MUCH LONGER PERIODS IN THE LAST WAR.

THE GREAT DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE LAST WAR AND THIS ONE IS THAT, WHEREAS IN THE LAST WAR WE WERE ON THE DEFENSIVE AGAINST THE U-BOAT CAMPAIGN, WE ARE NOW CARRYING OUT AN OFFENSIVE AGAINST THE U-BOATS AND THEY ARE CONTINUALLY AND RELENTLESSLY ATTACKED WHENEVER THEY DISCLOSE THEMSELVES.

IT IS FREQUENTLY IMPOSSIBLE TO BE CERTAIN AFTER DEPTH CHARGES HAVE BEEN DROPPED THAT THE SUBMARINE ATTACKED HAS BEEN DESTROYED.

BUT THERE ARE OCCASIONALLY QUITE UNMISTAKEABLE SIGNS THAT THE VESSEL HAS BEEN HOLED AND SUNK AND I AM CONFIDENT THAT I AM UNDERSTATING THE CASE WHEN I SAY THAT ALREADY SIX OR SEVEN GERMAN SUBMARINES HAVE PAID THE FULL PENALTY FOR THEIR ATTACKS ON BRITISH SHIPPING. IN SOME CASES THEIR CREWS HAVE BEEN CAPTURED.

I AM QUITE CONFIDENT THAT, WITH THE FULL OPERATION OF THE CONVOY SYSTEM AND THE RAPID INCREASE IN THE NUMBERS, POWER AND EFFICIENCY OF OUR HUNTING CRAFT, THIS SUBMARINE MENACE WILL DWINDLE WITH CORRESPONDING SPEED.

SEP 21 1939

IT IS ALREADY CLEAR THAT THE NAVY AND THE MERCHANT SERVICE BY THEIR UNCEASING EFFORTS WILL BE ABLE TO MAINTAIN ESSENTIAL SUPPLIES OF RAW MATERIALS AND FOOD FOR OUR POPULATION AND OUR INDUSTRIES.

IN APRIL, 1917, THE PEAK MONTH OF ACTION BY ENEMY U-BOATS AND MINES IN THE LAST WAR THE AVERAGE WEEKLY SINKINGS OF BRITISH TONNAGE AMOUNTED TO 127,000 OR 39 SHIPS.

DURING THE WEEK ENDED THE 12TH OF SEPTEMBER LAST IT WAS 95,000 TONS OR 17 SHIPS AND FOR THE WEEK ENDED THE 19TH OF SEPTEMBER 45,848 TONS OR 13 SHIPS.

UNDOUBTEDLY THIS DECREASE HAS BEEN PARTLY DUE TO THE WORKING OF THE CONVOY SYSTEM, A NOW INCREASINGLY IN OPERATION.

SO FAR AS OUR INFORMATION GOES, 139 LIVES BOTH BRITISH AND NEUTRAL, HAVE UP TO NOW BEEN LOST FROM SUBMARINE ATTACK EXCLUDING THE LOSSES INCURRED BY THE SINKING OF H.M.S. COURAGEOUS: THERE ARE, IN ADDITION, 44 PERSONS REPORTED MISSING.

THE PRIMARY AIM OF BRITISH POLICY AT SEA IS TO DESTROY OR RENDER

INEFFECTIVE THE WARSHIPS OF THE ENEMY AND, AS A RESULT, TO PREVENT THE ENEMY AUGMENTING THEIR WARLIKE RESOURCES FROM OVERSEAS, WHILST AT THE SAME TIME PROTECTING OUR OWN AND NEUTRAL COMMERCE.

THE INTERESTS OF NEUTRALS ARE INDEED THE SAME AS OUR OWN. IN WAR AS IN PEACE WE DEPEND FOR OUR LIFE UPON THE UNINTERRUPTED FLOW OF TRADE AND IT IS OUR FUNDAMENTAL POLICY TO PRESERVE AS FAR AS POSSIBLE THE CONDITIONS OF NORMAL TRADING.

THE SUPPRESSION OF TRAFFIC IN CONTRABAND OF WAR MUST OF NECESSITY CAUSE SOME INCONVENIENCE TO NEUTRALS. OUR CONTROL IS USED ONLY IN CASES WHERE THERE IS GOOD REASON TO SUSPECT THE PRESENCE OF CONTRABAND CARGO DESTINED FOR THE ENEMY.

THE STRICT ADHERENCE OF HIS MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT TO THE RULES OF LAW IS IN STRIKING CONTRAST TO THE POLICY PURSUED BY GERMANY. NO LOSS OF LIFE HAS BEEN CAUSED BY THE EXERCISE OF BRITISH SEAPOWER AND NO NEUTRAL PROPERTY HAS BEEN UNLAWFULLY DETAINED.

GERMANY'S METHOD OF SUBMARINE WARFARE AND THE LAYING OF MINES ON THE HIGH SEAS HAS ALREADY RESULTED IN THE DEATH OF MANY INNOCENT VICTIMS, REGARDLESS OF NATIONALITY, AND IN THE UNWARRANTED DESTRUCTION OF NEUTRAL PROPERTY ASTERISKS.

OUR ADVANCE MUST BE ORDERLY BUT THE PACE OF THE ADVANCE WILL STEADILY QUICKEN.

SEP 21 1939

I CAN ASSURE THE HOUSE THAT THE EFFORT OF THIS COUNTRY WILL BE THE UTMOST OF WHICH IT IS CAPABLE AND THEREFORE, OF COURSE, IS NO WHIT INFERIOR TO THAT MADE EVEN IN THE MOST STRENUOUS DAYS OF THE GREAT WAR X X X.

IN THE MEANTIME, THE FACT THAT DURING THESE FIRST WEEKS OF WAR WE HAVE NOT YET EXPERIENCED THE ORDEAL OF AERIAL BOMBARDMENT AFFORDS NO REASON WHATEVER FOR ANY OVERHASTY OR WHOLESALE DISPERSAL OF OUR HOME DEFENSE FORCES X X X.

THE WHOLE OF THE BRITISH COMMONWEALTH OF NATIONS AND EMPIRE IS INDEED AT THIS MOMENT INTENSIVELY ENGAGED IN MOBILIZING STRENGTH UNDER THE COVER OF OUR NAVAL MILITARY AND AIR FORCES--FORCES WHICH IN THE AGGREGATE ARE STRONGER AND MORE POWERFUL THAN AT THE OUTSET OF ANY PAST WAR.

THUS THE EXTENT OF OUR EFFORT IS RAPIDLY INCREASING IN EVERY DIRECTION, BUT I WANT MY FINAL WORD TODAY TO BE A WORD OF WARNING.

WE AS A GOVERNMENT WILL NOT BE RUSHED INTO COURSES WHICH OUR MILITARY ADVISERS, WITH WHOM WE WORK IN THE CLOSEST POSSIBLE CONTACT AND MUTUAL CONFIDENCE, DO NOT APPROVE.

THERE IS NO SACRIFICE FROM WHICH WE WILL SHRINK, THERE IS NO OPERATION WE WILL NOT UNDERTAKE PROVIDED OUR RESPONSIBLE ADVISERS, OUR ALLIES AND WE OURSELVES ARE CONVINCED THAT IT WILL MAKE AN APPROPRIATE CONTRIBUTION TO VICTORY. BUT WHAT WE WILL NOT DO IS TO RUSH INTO ADVENTURES THAT OFFER LITTLE PROSPECT OF SUCCESS AND ARE CALCULATED TO IMPAIR OUR RESOURCES AND TO POSTPONE ULTIMATE VICTORY. ONE LESSON WHICH MILITARY HISTORY TEACHES IS THAT THAT ROAD LEADS TO DISASTER.

STRATEGY IS THE ART OF CONCENTRATING DECISIVE FORCE AT THE DECISIVE POINT AT THE DECISIVE MOMENT.

I WILL NOT HAZARD A GUESS AT THIS STAGE OF THE WAR AS TO WHEN OR WHERE THE DECISIVE FORCE WILL BE ASSEMBLED OR WHEN THE DECISIVE MOMENT WILL ARRIVE. THAT MUST DEPEND UPON EVENTS WHICH NO ONE CAN FORESEE. BUT THE SCALE OF OUR PREPARATIONS AND THE FACT ALREADY ANNOUNCED THAT WE ARE BASING THEM ON THE ASSUMPTION THAT THE DURATION

OF THE WAR MAY BE AT LEAST THREE YEARS, ENSURES THAT OUR STRENGTH WILL INCREASE PROGRESSIVELY TO MEET WHATEVER MAY COME.

LET ME CONCLUDE BY QUOTING THE WORDS OF A FAMOUS POLISH GENERAL WHO, IN BIDDING GOODBYE TO A RECENT ALLIED MILITARY MISSION, SAID: "WE SHALL FIGHT. A LARGE PART OF OUR COUNTRY WILL BE OVER-RUN AND WE SHALL SUFFER TERRIBLY. BUT IF YOU COME IN, WE KNOW THAT WE SHALL RISE AGAIN."

NIGHT LEAD ITALIAN

BY RICHARD G.MASSOCK

ROME, SEPT. 20-(AP)-PREMIER MUSSOLINI'S NEWSPAPER IL POPOLO D'ITALIA TODAY PUBLISHED AN IMPLIED APPEAL TO BRITAIN AND FRANCE TO COME TO TERMS WITH GERMANY AND END THE "USELESS" WAR IN THE WEST.

"AGAIN ITALY POINTS OUT THE RIGHT ROAD," THE NEWSPAPER DECLARED, RECALLING ITALIAN PREDICTIONS THAT POLAND WOULD MEET ONLY DISASTER IN RESISTING GERMANY.

SEP 21 1939

THE APPEAL CAME IN A DAY MARKED BY ANOTHER MOVE BY IL DUCE IN HIS PRESENT ROLE OF PEACE CHAMPION IN SOUTHERN EUROPE. ITALY AND GREECE ANNOUNCED THEY HAD WITHDRAWN THEIR TROOPS FROM THE GREEK-ALBANIAN BORDER, WHERE THEY HAD FACED EACH OTHER SINCE MUSSOLINI'S EASTER-SEASON OCCUPATION OF ALBANIA.

BOTH NATIONS SAID THE WITHDRAWAL WAS EVIDENCE OF "COMPLETE RECIPROCAL TRUST."

SEP 21 1939

IL POPOLO D'ITALIA SAID THAT, IN LINE WITH THE "VISION" OF ROME, THE WAR IN THE EAST WAS AS "DISASTROUS" FOR POLAND AS IT WAS "TRAGICALLY USELESS."

"NOW THAT THAT PREDICTION IS FULFILLED IN THE EAST THE SAME WORD OF GOOD SENSE MAY BE REPEATED FOR THE WEST," IT WENT ON. "WAR IN THE WEST IS NOW USELESS. X X X IF DESTINY HAS LENT JUDGMENT IT IS VAIN TO PROVOKE ANOTHER STRUGGLE AND MORE DESTRUCTION FOR THE DEFENSE OF A STATE OF THINGS WHICH NO LONGER EXISTS AND WHICH EVIDENTLY HAS FALLEN BECAUSE IT LACKED A REAL BASIS.

"ROME HAS ALWAYS SEEN THE RIGHT ROAD IN THE QUESTION OF ETHIOPIA, OF SPAIN AND OF POLAND. WE ARE ONCE MORE AT THE CROSSROADS AND ITALIAN SENSIBILITY, TEMPERED BY THOUSANDS OF YEARS, AGAIN POINTS OUT THE RIGHT ROAD."

SEP 21 1939

ANXIETY WAS EXPRESSED IN GOVERNMENT CIRCLES THAT ALL EUROPE MIGHT EVENTUALLY BE AT WAR IF THE CONFLICT INVOLVING GERMANY, BRITAIN AND FRANCE SETTLED INTO A LONG STRUGGLE.

ASIDE FROM THE POSSIBILITY OF A DESPERATE EXTENSION OF BATTLE LINES TO OTHER FRONTS, THE ITALIANS FOUND FURTHER DANGER IN THE THREAT OF HUNGER EVEN FOR NON-BELLIGERENTS THAT LIES IN BLOCKADES.

APPARENTLY WITH AN EYE TOWARD THIS, GOVERNMENT CIRCLES EXPRESSED THE WISH THAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE WOULD ACCEPT AN ARMISTICE AND MEDIATE WITHOUT FURTHER FIGHTING.

THE ALBANIAN TROOP WITHDRAWALS WERE DESCRIBED OFFICIALLY AS A SIGN OF MUTUAL TRUST BETWEEN ITALY AND GREECE BUT FOREIGN OBSERVERS ASSIGNED A GREATER SIGNIFICANCE TO IT.

THEY THOUGHT IT FURTHER REFLECTED MUSSOLINI'S INTENTION TO PREVENT AS LONG AS POSSIBLE THE WAR IN WESTERN EUROPE FROM SPREADING TO THE BALKANS AND THE MEDITERRANEAN.

(THE GREEK COMMUNIQUE ON THE ALBANIAN FRONTIER WITHDRAWALS SAID THE TWO COUNTRIES CONSIDERED "ALL DANGER OF BORDER INCIDENTS X X X

COMPLETELY REMOVED." IT ADDED THAT GREECE'S 1937 CLASS OF RESERVISTS WOULD BE DEMOBILIZED ON OCTOBER 1.)

BERNE,SEPT.20-(AP)-PARTY LEADERS OF BOTH HOUSES OF SWITZERLAND'S PARLIAMENT ASKED THE ARMY HIGH COMMAND TODAY TO SEND SOME OF THE MOBILIZED MEN AND MATERIALS BACK TO CIVIL LIFE.

ALL SPEAKERS PRAISED THE SPEED AND EFFICIENCY OF THE SWISS MOBILIZATION, WHICH PUT 500,000 MEN, OR ONE OF EVERY EIGHT INHABITANTS OF THE COUNTRY, INTO UNIFORM.

THE PARTY LEADERS URGED, HOWEVER, THAT THE ARMY NOW RELEASE MEN AND MORE TRUCKS, TRACTORS AND HORSES FOR FARM WORK.

SPEAKERS IN BOTH HOUSES WERE ALMOST UNANIMOUS IN STATING THAT SWITZERLAND'S ECONOMIC INDEPENDENCE WAS THREATENED FAR MORE BY THE WAR BETWEEN FRANCE AND GERMANY THAN HER POLITICAL INDEPENDENCE.

IT WAS POINTED OUT THAT THE ONLY WAY THE SWISS COULD GET FOOD FROM FRANCE AND FUEL FROM GERMANY WAS THROUGH EXCHANGE OF SWISS MANUFACTURED GOODS, AND YET SWISS FACTORIES ARE HARD HIT BY THE MOBILIZATION.

NIGHT LEAD BASEL

BY CHARLES FOLTZ, JR.

BASEL, SWITZERLAND, SEPT.20-(AP)-THE FRENCH ARMY WAS REPORTED IN ADVICES REACHING HERE TONIGHT TO HAVE STRENGTHENED ITS DEFENSIVE POSITIONS UNDER FIRE OF GERMANY'S SIEGFRIED LINE FORTS.

MILITARY OBSERVERS BELIEVED THIS ACTION WOULD BE FOLLOWED BY A

30.24 3485

PERIOD OF WAITING UNTIL THE FRENCH HIGH COMMAND ORDERS THE FIRST BIG OFFENSIVE DESIGNED TO CRACK THE GERMAN FORTIFICATIONS.

THE GERMANS GAVE FRENCH KEY POSITIONS LITTLE REST, CONSTANTLY HARRYING OUTPOSTS IN THE MOSELLE AND NIED CREEK SECTORS WEST OF THE SAAR, BLIES RIVER, EAST OF THE SAAR AND IN THE BITCHE AREA.

THE FRENCH WERE REPORTED TO HAVE LOST SOME GROUND, BUT WERE SAID TO HAVE COUNTERATTACKED AND REGAINED THEIR POSITIONS.

RUDOLPH HESS, GERMANY'S NO.3 NAZI AND HITLER'S DEPUTY FOR PARTY AFFAIRS, WAS SAID TO HAVE COMPLETED A TOUR OF THE SIEGFRIED FORTIFICATION AREA WHICH TOOK HIM THROUGH THE SAAR INTO BADEN BY WAY OF KAISERLAUTERN.

SEP 21 1939

MORE TRAINED UNITS OF FRENCH TROOPS RELEASED FROM DUTY NEAR THE ITALIAN FRONTIER BY REGIMENTS FROM CENTRAL FRANCE WERE REPORTED HERE TO HAVE ARRIVED ON THE WESTERN FRONT. A NUMBER OF NORTH AFRICAN LABOR BATTALIONS ALREADY ARE ASSIGNED TO THE MAGINOT ZONE.

FRENCH AND GERMAN OBSERVATION PLANES WHICH REGULARLY PATROL BOTH BANKS OF THE RHINE WHERE IT FORMS THE FRONTIER BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES FORMED AN ESCORT TODAY FOR A LITTLE FLEET OF NETHERLANDS BARGES WHICH FLOATED CALMLY DOWN THE RIVER BETWEEN THE SIEGFRIED AND MAGINOT FORTS.

NETHERLANDS RHINE NAVIGATION COMPANIES HAD OBTAINED PERMISSION FROM FRENCH AND GERMAN AUTHORITIES TO TAKE THEIR BARGES FROM THE STRASBOURG DOCKS, WHERE THEY HAD BEEN STRANDED SINCE THE START OF THE WAR, TO ROTTERDAM.

SWISS, NETHERLANDS AND BELGIAN SHIPPERS HAVE ASKED PERMISSION FOR NEUTRAL BARGES TO RESUME SHIPPING IN NON-CONTRABAND GOODS DOWN THE RHINE.

SEP 21 1938

THE ESCORTING PLANES KEPT WELL ON THEIR OWN SIDES OF THE RIVER. THE FRENCH AND GERMAN AVIATION, LIKE THE LAND FORCES FACING EACH OTHER ACROSS THE RHINE, HAVE BEEN OBSERVING AN UNOFFICIAL "ARMISTICE" WHICH HAS KEPT THE RHINE QUIET SINCE THE WAR BEGAN.

A SWISS CITIZEN-SOLDIER WHOSE WEDDING WAS POSTPONED BY MOBILIZATION WAS MARRIED TODAY IN AN OPEN AIR WEDDING IN FRONT OF SWISS PILL BOXES ON THE FRENCH FRONTIER AT BASEL.

THE BRIDE SAID "I DO" WITHIN SIGHT OF THE GERMAN SIEGFRIED FORTS UP THE RHINE AND WITHIN A FEW YARDS OF FRENCH FRONTIER GUARDS' POSITIONS. THE COUPLE RECEIVED CONGRATULATIONS FROM BOTH SWISS AND FRENCH OFFICERS.

HITLER (PMS BUDGET)

BY ALVIN J.STEINKOPF

BERLIN,SEPT.20-(AP)-ADOLF HITLER'S WAR POLICY SPEECH IN RECLAIMED DANZIG WAS TAKEN TODAY BY SOME OBSERVERS AS A WARNING THAT THE POWERFUL GERMAN AIR FLEET MAY BE DISPATCHED TO ENGLAND, IF THE BRITISH NAVAL BLOCKADE IS CONSIDERED TO BE WORKING HARDSHIPS ON THE GERMAN PEOPLE.

SEP 21 1939

THE FUEHRER WAS BELIEVED BY THOSE OBSERVERS TO BE PLANNING AN "EYE-FOR-AN-EYE" WAR, IF NECESSARY.

IN DANZIG YESTERDAY, HE THREATENED TO FIGHT "IN THE SAME MANNER AS OUR OPPONENTS." OUT OF HIS LONG ADDRESS TO THE CHEERING THRONG THAT AND OTHER SALIENT INDICATIONS OF GERMAN POLICY WERE DRAWN:

1-GERMANY IS READY TO FIGHT SEVEN YEARS.

2-"FOR EVERY BOMB FALLING ON A GERMAN CITY, FIVE OR TEN WILL FALL IN THEIR (ENEMY) CITIES."

3-GERMANY AND SOVIET RUSSIA, "THE TWO GREATEST PEOPLES AND STATES," ALONE WILL DECIDE THE FATE OF POLAND AND ESTABLISH PEACE AND ORDER IN EASTERN EUROPE.

4-GERMANY REGARDS THE WESTERN BOUNDARY OF THE REICH AS "FINAL," AND HAS NO "WAR AIMS" AGAINST BRITAIN OR FRANCE.

5-TWENTY YEARS OF NATIONAL SOCIALISM HAVE UNIFIED THE GERMAN PEOPLE SO FIRMLY THAT FOREIGN PROPAGANDA EFFORTS TO CAUSE DISSENTION ARE "LAUGHABLE."

THE IMPASSIONED HOUR AND 14-MINUTE SPEECH, REGARDED BY MANY AS HITLER'S MOST FORCEFUL, WAS CONSIDERED NOT A "PEACE OFFER"--BUT A FIRM OUTLINE OF TERMS UNDER WHICH GERMANY WOULD REFRAIN FROM TURNING THE PRESENT LIMITED WAR INTO A BLOODIER CONFLICT.

A FEW HOURS AFTER HITLER RECOUNTED THE PROGRESS OF GERMAN ARMS ON THE POLISH FRONT WHICH HE HAS BEEN TOURING FOR 18 DAYS, THE ARMY HIGH COMMAND REPORTED NEW ADVANCES.

SEP 21 1939

A COMMUNIQUE SAID THE BATTLE NEAR KUTNO ENDED WITH MORE THAN 105,000 PRISONERS TAKEN AND "ENORMOUS" LOSSES TO THE ENEMY IN DEAD AND WOUNDED. HITLER HAD TOLD OF 300,000 PRISONERS CAPTURED.

THE COMMUNIQUE ADDED:

"ALONG OTHER FRONTS THE ENEMY HAS PRACTICALLY GIVEN UP RESISTA WITH THE EXCEPTION OF A POINT NORTHWEST OF LWOW WHERE FIGHTING WITH STRONG SCATTERED ENEMY FORCES STILL CONTINUES."

30.24 3487

OBSERVERS SAID HITLER'S SPEECH, OFFERING NO COMPROMISE WITH THE WESTERN POWERS, WAS IN EFFECT HIS LAST WORD TO THE NATIONS OF EUROPE. HIS WORDS WERE BOARDCAST BY RADIO THROUGHOUT EUROPE AND TO THE UNITED STATES.

THE BERLIN NEWSPAPER BOERSEN ZEITUNG CALLED THE ADDRESS A "LAST CLARIFICATION" OF THE REICH'S STAND.

HITLER'S REFERENCE TO A "WEAPON" WITH WHICH TO COUNTER THE BRITISH BLOCKADE WAS CHEERED WILDLY.

SEP 21 1939

"ENGLAND ALREADY HAS BEGUN THE FIGHT AGAINST WOMEN AND CHILDREN," HE SAID. "THEY HAVE A WEAPON WHICH THEY THINK IS UNBEATABLE--NAMELY, DOMINATION OF THE SEAS. ON THE SEA THEY SAY ENGLAND CANNOT BE ATTACKED AND THEREFORE THEY ARE JUSTIFIED IN WAGING A WAR WITH THAT WEAPON AGAINST WOMEN AND CHILDREN NOT ONLY OF THE ENEMY BUT ALSO OF NEUTRALS

"THEY SHOULD HAVE NO ILLUSIONS. THE TIME COULD RAPIDLY COME WHEN WE APPLY A WEAPON AGAINST WHICH WE CANNOT BE ATTACKED. LET US HOPE THAT THEY THEN SUDDENLY DO NOT REMEMBER HUMANITY."

GERMANY DID NOT WANT THAT TYPE OF WARFARE, HE SAID, ADDING THAT DURING THE POLISH CAMPAIGN HE HAD GIVEN ORDERS TO "SPARE CITIES IF POSSIBLE."

HE WARNED, HOWEVER, THAT GERMANY WOULD "ACCEPT THE GAUNTLET" AND "FIGHT IN THE SAME MANNER AS OUR OPPONENTS."

"THOSE WHO DREAMED OF SHATTERING GERMANY AND LAYING IN RUINS GERMAN CITIES," HE SAID, "ARE NO LONGER TO BE HEARD FROM BECAUSE THEY KNOW THAT FOR EVERY BOMB FALLING ON A GERMAN CITY, FIVE OR TEN WILL FALL ON THEIR CITIES."

JH-FH614AED

THE FUEHRER, WHO CAME INTO DANZIG OVER FLOWER-STREWN STREETS LINED WITH WILDLY-CHEERING TOWNSPEOPLE, SAID GERMANY DOES NOT FEEL OBLIGED TO WAGE WAR WITH FRANCE OR WITH BRITAIN--WHOSE STATESMEN HE SAID "AGITATED" FOR WAR.

HE CRITICIZED SOME OF THE BRITISH LEADERS BITTERLY, BUT WAS PARTICULARLY MODERATE IN HIS REFERENCES TO FRANCE.

GERMANY WANTS NOTHING OF FRANCE, HE SAID, ADDING THAT THE FRONTIER BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES COULD REMAIN AS IT IS FOR ALL TIME. FROM ENGLAND HE SAID HE HAD SOUGHT NOTHING BUT FRIENDSHIP.

HIS AIMS IN EASTERN EUROPE HITLER DESCRIBED AS SO MODERATE THEY WOULD SURPRISE THE WORLD WHEN THEY BECAME KNOWN. TO THAT HE ADDED THAT THE FATE OF POLAND MUST BE LEFT TO GERMANY AND RUSSIA AND SAID:

"POLAND NEVER AGAIN WILL RISE IN THE FORM OF THE VERSAILLES TREATY."

MILITARY DISPATCHES RECEIVED AFTER HIS SPEECH TOLD OF STEADY OCCUPATION OF THE FEW SECTIONS OF POLAND STILL HELD BY DEFENDERS.

LINES AROUND BELEAGUERED WARSAW APPARENTLY WERE TIGHTENING--STILL WITHOUT HAVING BROUGHT SURRENDER OF THE CAPITAL.

"OCCUPATION OF THE CITY OF 1,000,000, ESPECIALLY WHEN EVERY CONSIDERATION IS BEING SHOWN FOR THE NON-FIGHTING CIVILIAN POPULATION, IS A TECHNICAL PROBLEM OF GREAT DELICACY," A DISPATCH FROM THE FRONT SAID.

SEP 21 1939

IT WAS NOTED HITLER SPOKE OF THE "FORMER FOREIGN MINISTER OF POLAND" IN REFERENCE TO JOZEF BECK, WHO WITH OTHER OFFICIALS OF THE GOVERNMENT HAS LEFT POLAND. THERE WERE OTHER ALLUSIONS TO THE GERMAN-RUSSIAN CONTENTION THAT THE REPUBLIC OF POLAND IS A THING OF THE PAST.

1939

THE BERLIN PRESS CONSEQUENTLY LAID ASIDE SOME RESTRAINT IN RESPECT TO MENTION OF IGNACE MOSCICKI, POLAND'S PRESIDENT WHO ALSO HAS FLED TO NEUTRAL SOIL.

THE LOKAL ANZEIGER REFERRED TO HIM AS "THIS BENES OF POLAND, THIS NEGUS OF POLAND, THIS NEGRIN OF POLAND."

SEP 21 1939

NOTHING WAS DISCLOSED AS TO HITLER'S IMMEDIATE PLANS. AN IMPRESSION THAT HE MIGHT SOON TURN HIS ATTENTION TO THE WESTERN FRONT--POSSIBLY GOING THERE AS HE DID TO THE GERMAN LINES IN POLAND--WAS STRENGTHENED BY THE DEPARTURE OF HIS DEPUTY, RUDOLF HESS, FOR THE WESTERN FRONTIER.

MOSCOW, SEPT.20-(AP)-THE FOLLOWING IS THE TEXT OF THE SOVIET RUSSIAN COMMUNIQUE ON TODAY'S OPERATIONS IN POLAND:

DURING THE DAY RED ARMY TROOPS CONTINUED PRESSING POLISH TROOPS AND BY THE END OF THE DAY OCCUPIED: IN THE NORTH, IN WESTERN BYELORUSSIA (WHITE RUSSIA), GRODNO; IN THE SOUTH, IN THE WESTERN UKRAINE, KOVEL AND LWOW.

IN THE PERIOD SEPT.17 TO 20 RED ARMY TROOPS DISARMED THREE POLISH INFANTRY DIVISIONS, TWO CAVALRY BRIGADES AND MANY SMALL POLISH ARMY UNITS.

SEP 21 1939

ACCORDING TO FAR INCOMPLETE DATA OVER 60,000 PRIVATES AND OFFICERS WERE TAKEN PRISONER. THE FORTIFIED AREAS OF WILNO (VILNA), BARANOWICZE, MOLODECZNO AND SARNY WERE TAKEN WITH ALL ARMAMENTS, ARTILLERY AND AMMUNITION.

OF THE LARGE QUANTITY OF CAPTURED WAR MATERIAL SO FAR REGISTERED THERE ARE 280 ARTILLERY GUNS AND 120 AIRPLANES. REGISTRATION OF TROPHIES IS IN PROGRESS.

BUDAPEST, SEPT.20-(AP)-THE FOLLOWING COMMUNIQUE FROM THE COMMANDER OF WARSAW'S DEFENSE WAS READ LAST NIGHT OVER THE WARSAW RADIO (11:50 P.M.--5:50 P.M. EST):

THE DAY OF SEPTEMBER 19 BROUGHT NO CHANGES IN THE MODLIN AND WARSAW ZONES.

IN THE CENTRAL ZONE OUR TROOPS ARE FIGHTING VALIANTLY.

THE MILITARY COMMAND ANNOUNCES THAT SOVIET TROOPS HAVE ARRIVED IN THE ENVIRONS OF LWOW.

SEP 21 1939

WE ARE FORCED AGAIN TO PROTEST THE BOMBARDMENT OF WARSAW'S CENTRAL PART. AMONG THE EDIFICES DESTROYED ARE THE ROYAL PALACE OF BELVEDERE, THE PARLIAMENT BUILDING, AND SEVERAL OLD CHURCHES AS WELL AS HUNDREDS OF OTHER BUILDINGS, HOSPITALS AND LEGATIONS.

WARSAW WILL RESIST. WE HAVE CONFIDENCE IN OUR GOVERNMENT AND CONFIDENCE IN OUR GREAT ALLIES, FRANCE AND BRITAIN. WARSAW IS DOING ITS DUTY.

ST.JOHN'S CATHEDRAL HAS BEEN BOMBED. THE PROJECTILES CONTINUED TO FALL BEFORE THE CHURCH DURING MASS. WHEN CROWDS OF THE FAITHFUL WERE EMERGING GERMAN AIRPLANES MACHINE-GUNNED THEM.

A GUARDIAN OF THE BELVEDERE ART TREASURES WAS KILLED IN THE PARK. MANY WAR CEMETERIES ARE NOW IN THE PUBLIC PARKS OF WARSAW.

A GREAT VICTORY IN A BEND OF THE VISTULA, HE SAID, RESULTED IN "DESTRUCTION OF THE POLISH ARMY AND THEREBY THE CONCLUSION OF OPERATIONS AGAINST THE POLES."

VON BRAUCHITSCH SAID TO SOLDIERS OF THE WESTERN FRONT, "THANKS TO YOUR READINESS FOR FIRM DEFENSE, OPERATIONS IN THE EAST CONTINUED UNDISTURBED BY OUR WESTERN OPPONENTS. BY YOUR STRONG PROTECTION YOU ENABLED THE LEADERSHIP TO CONCENTRATE WAR EFFORTS ON THE EAST FRONT. STEADILY AND SURELY THE LEADERSHIP WERE COULD ACCOMPLISH A QUICK MILITARY DECISION."

LOOKING TO THE FUTURE, VON BRAUCHITSCH CONCLUDED:

"YOU SOLDIERS OF THE EAST AND WEST HAVE GIVEN GLOWING PROOF OF THE SPIRIT AND STRENGTH OF THE GERMAN ARMY. OUR OPPONENT OUGHT TO KNOW BY NOW THAT THE GERMAN SOLDIER WILL FIGHT IN THE SAME SPIRIT AND EMERGE VICTORIOUS IF DEFENSE OF THE VITAL RIGHTS OF THE GERMAN PEOPLE FURTHER DEMAND IT AND THE FUEHRER COMMANDS IT."

THE STATESMAN-MUSICIAN IN A FORMAL STATEMENT SAID DURING THE PAST THREE WEEKS "POLAND ALL ALONE VALIANTLY SUPPORTED THE WEIGHT OF HITLER SHOCK TROOPS AND PERMITTED OUR ALLIES TO CARRY OUT THE IMMENSE PREPARATIONS NECESSARY TO MODERN WAR." SEP 21 1939

POLAND KNEW WHEN THE WAR STARTED, HE ASSERTED, THAT SHE WAS FIGHTING AGAINST "ALL HOPE OF POSSIBLE SUCCESS AND AGAINST OVER-WHELMING SUPERIORITY" BUT WAS READY TO FIGHT "NO MATTER WHAT THE COST WITH HER GLORIOUS ALLIES FOR THE FINAL TRIUMPH OF RIGHT AND JUSTICE."

FROM CANADA TO AID THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT IN THE WAR AGAINST GERMANY, WITH THE DOMINION SERVING MAINLY AS A RESERVOIR OF SUBMARINE FIGHTERS, MUNITIONS, MATERIALS, AND POSSIBLY OF LARGER WAR VESSELS, ACCORDING TO THE GOVERNMENT'S NEW STATEMENT OF POLICY.

TWO DIVISIONS OF VOLUNTEERS WILL BE ORGANIZED AT ONCE TO BE AVAILABLE IF AND WHEN THE NEED ARISES TO SEND AN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, AND TRAINED AIR PERSONNEL WILL BE SENT AT ONCE, FORMER DEFENCE MINISTER MACKENZIE (SMALL K) ANNOUNCED LAST NIGHT.

A STATEMENT TO THE PRESS LATE IN THE EVENING, THE LAST OFFICIAL RELEASE FROM MR. MACKENZIE IN HIS CAPACITY OF DEFENCE MINISTER, OUTLINED THE NEW DETAILS OF POLICY. LESS THAN AN HOUR LATER MR. MACKENZIE WAS SWORN IN AS MINISTER OF PENSIONS AND NATIONAL HEALTH, AND WAS SUCCEEDED BY FORMER LABOR MINISTER ROGERS IN THE DEFENCE PORTFOLIO.

THE STATEMENT OUTLINED THE FOLLOWING MAJOR PROPOSALS FOR CO-OPERATING WITH THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT: MORE212A 4

1. FACILITATING THE PURCHASE OF SUPPLIES IN CANADA BY THE UNITED KINGDOM GOVERNMENT, PROBABLY INVOLVING IN THE FIRST INSTANCE "REPATRIATION" OF CANADIAN SECURITIES HELD IN LONDON, AND PROBABLY GRANTING OF CREDITS.

2. DOUBLING OF NAVAL PERSONNEL, INCREASING NAVAL STORES, IMPROVEMENT OF NAVAL FACILITIES, AND CONSTRUCTION IN CANADA OF "A LARGE NUMBER OF ANTI-SUBMARINE AND MINE-SWEEPING CRAFT."

3. IMMEDIATE CONTRIBUTION OF TRAINED AIR ERSONNEL, INVOLVING INTENSIFIED TRAINING IN CANADA TO MAINTAIN A PROGRESSIVELY INCREASING SUPPLY OF PILOTS AND AIRMEN.

4. ORGANIZATION OF TWO COMPLETE DIVISIONS WHICH WILL BE AVAILABLE AS AN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IF REQUIRED, THESE TO BE ADDITIONAL TO THE TROOPS REQUIRED FOR COAST AND FORTRESS DEFENCE AND GUARD DUTY, AND TO BE RE-ATTESTED IF ALREADY ENLISTED.

CONSULTATIONS WITH THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT HAD REVEALED THAT THE CANADA COULD BE MOST EFFECTIVE AT ONCE BY FACILITATING THE PURCHASE BY THE UNITED KINGDOM OF ESSENTIAL SUPPLIES IN THIS COUNTRY.

A BRITISH GOVERNMENT MISSION OF HIGH OFFICIALS IS NOW IN OTTAWA WITH AUTHORITY TO PLACE ORDERS FOR MUNITIONS AND SUPPLIES, AND WORKING CLOSELY WITH THE GOVERNMENT.

SEP 21 1939

FIRST NECESSITY IN THIS CONNECTION WILL BE THE ESTABLISHMENT OF CREDITS HERE, AND IT WILL PROBABLY INVOLVE, THE STATEMENT SAID, "REPATRIATION" OF CANADIAN SECURITIES HELD IN LONDON. LATER THERE WOULD BE CREDITS GRANTED. MORE216A 4

IMMEDIATE COOPERATION FROM THE STANDPOINT OF SERVICE WILL REQUIRE CONTRIBUTION OF TRAINED AIR PERSONNEL, SOME OF WHICH IS NOW READY AND MAY BE SENT SHORTLY, THE VOLUME BEING GOVERNED BY THE NEEDS FOR TRAINING IN CANADA.

TO MAINTAIN A CONSTANT SUPPLY OF TRAINED AIRMEN AND PILOTS THE GOVERNMENT YESTERDAY AUTHORIZED "A PLAN OF INTENSIFIED TRAINING" AND ANTICIPATES THAT CIVILIAN PILOTS WILL COOPERATE WITH THE ROYAL CANADIAN AIR FORCE BOTH IN THE INITIAL CONTRIBUTION AND IN TRAINING.

FROM THE 50,000 MEN NOW UNDER ARMS IN CANADA IT IS PROPOSED TO ASK FOR VOLUNTEERS FOR THE TWO DIVISIONS TO FORM AN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE AVAILABLE WHEN NEEDED.

THOSE VOLUNTEERING WILL BE RE-ATTESTED. PENDING THIS ORGANIZATION

FURTHER RECRUITING WILL BE DEFERRED. NO DETAILS WERE GIVEN, BUT IT WAS ASSUMED THE APPROXIMATELY 32,000 MEN REQUIRED FOR THE TWO DIVISIONS WILL BE TAKEN, IF AVAILABLE, FROM THOSE NOW IN UNIFORM, THE REMAINING 18,000 BEING LEFT FOR FORTRESS AND COAST DEFENCE, AND GUARDING VULNERABLE PROPERTY.

THE STATEMENT REVEALED THAT CANADA'S NAVAL SERVICE IS NOW CO-OPERATING WITH BRITISH NAVAL FORCES IN DEFENCE OF EASTERN CANADA PORTS, ASSISTING IN PROTECTION OF CONVOYS FOR "A CONSIDERABLE DISTANCE" FROM THE CANADIAN COAST AND MINE SWEEPING. MORE221A 4

THIS SERVICE IS TO BE EXPANDED BY PROVISION OF ADDITIONAL ESCORT VESSELS, INCREASING ANTI-SUBMARINE CRAFT AND EXTENDING THE SCOPE OF OPERATIONS, IMPROVEMENT OF PORT FACILITIES AND INC-REASING NAVAL SUPPLIES.

POSSIBILITY OF A LARGE SHIPBUILDING PROGRAM WAS MENTIONED, BUT THIS WILL BE ATTEMPTED ONLY AFTER FURTHER AND "CAREFUL" CONSULTA-TION WITH THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT.

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

SEPT-20 SEP 21 1939

HERR HITLER HAS MADE HIS PEACE GESTURE--PEACE ON MY TERMS, TAKE IT OR LEAVE IT--TO BE REJECTED BY THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES ALMOST BEFORE HIS EMOTIONAL VOICE STOPPED VIBRATING THROUGH THE WORLD'S RADIOS FROM DANZIG.

WHETHER SOME THIRD PARTY--MUSSOLINI, FOR INSTANCE--MAY STILL VENTURE TO PROPOSE PEACE NEGOTIATIONS HASN'T YET BEEN MADE CLEAR.

THE ALLIED ANSWER, HOWEVER, MUST ALWAYS REMAIN THE SAME UNLESS THERE IS A REVOLUTIONARY CHANGE EITHER IN THEIR VIEWS OR THOSE OF HITLER.

THE ANGLO-FRENCH PLEDGE TO POLAND PLACES THEM IN THE SAME POSITION THEY OCCUPIED AS REGARDS LITTLE BELGIUM IN THE WORLD WAR. A BIT MORE THAN A YEAR AFTER THAT CONFLICT BEGAN, WHEN PEACE TALK WAS GOING THE ROUNDS, THE DISTINGUISHED COMMENTATOR FRANKISIMONDS (NOW DEAD) WROTE IN THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE:

"FIRST OF ALL, THERE IS NO MISTAKING THE FACT THAT NEITHER FRANCE NOR GREAT BRITAIN WILL TODAY MAKE PEACE OR DISCUSS PEACE UNTIL THEY ARE ASSURED THAT THE EVACUATION OF BELGIUM BY THE GERMANS IS TO BE THE FIRST ARTICLE OF THE TREATY. THE DEBT OF HONOR WHICH FRANCE AND ENGLAND OWE BELGIUM IS ALONE SUFFICIENT TO COMPEL THESE NATIONS TO CONTINUE THE FIGHT FOR THE DELIVERANCE OF THE COUNTRY OF KING ALBERT FROM THE INVADER UNTIL THEY ARE UTTERLY EXHAUSTED."

THE ANGLO-FRENCH BOND WITH POLAND COMMITS THEM TO THE TASK OF EXPELLING GERMANY OR ANY OTHER INVADER. AND THEY HAVE WIDENED THE FIELD BY DECLARING THAT THEY WILL NOT QUIT UNTIL "HITLERISM IS SMASHED."

SO IT LOOKS AS THOUGH THERE IS A LONG AND NASTY WAR AHEAD.

ENGLAND SOME DAYS AGO LET IT BE KNOWN THAT SHE WAS PREPARING FOR A THREE YEARS WAR. HITLER TOSSED THAT OVER HIS SHOULDER IN HIS DANZIG SPEECH, AND DECLARED THAT SEVEN YEARS WOULD FIND GERMANY STILL ON THE JOB.

SEP 21 1939

EXPERTS SAY THAT IN HERSELF GERMANY COULDN'T HOLD OUT OVER ANY SUCH PERIOD OF WAR. SHE LACKS THE FOODSTUFFS, THE WAR MATERIALS AND THE MONEY. SHE MUST HAVE HELP FROM OUTSIDE NATIONS.

THE NAZI FUEHRER'S ASSURANCE PRESUMABLY COMES IN LARGE DEGREE FROM THE ASSISTANCE HE EXPECTS TO GET FROM RUSSIA IN THE WAY OF SUPPLIES. THE OPENING UP OF THE RUSSIAN GRANERIES AND OIL WELLS AND MINERAL WEALTH TO GERMANY WOULD TEND TO PROTRACT THE WAR INDEFINITELY.

MANY OBSERVERS BELIEVE THE ALLIES' CHIEF HOPE OF SHORTENING THE CONFLICT MUST LIE IN THEIR CAMPAIGN TO CAUSE THE GERMAN PEOPLE TO REVOLT AGAINST THE HITLER REGIME. IN THIS CONNECTION HITLER IN HIS DANZIG SPEECH CHARGED ENGLAND WITH MAKING WAR ON WOMEN AND CHILDREN WITH ITS NAVAL BLOCKADE AGAINST GERMANY.

IT WAS THEN THAT HITLER MADE A DECLARATION WHICH WAS INTERPRETED AS A THREAT TO EXACT AN EYE FOR AN EYE IN THE WARFARE IF NECESSARY.

"ENGLAND HYPOCRITICALLY BEGAN WAR AGAINST WOMEN AND CHILDREN WITH THE WEAPON THEY DEEM INVINCIBLE," HE CRIED. "WE COULD APPLY SOME WEAPON IN WHICH WE ARE INVINCIBLE. LET THEM WHINE FOR A HUMANE WAR. I ORDERED A HUMANE CAMPAIGN IN THIS WAR. WE WILL ACT THE SAME AS THE ENEMY."

THE "WEAPON IN WHICH WE ARE INVINCIBLE" WAS GENERALLY TAKEN TO MEAN THE AIR FORCE. IF THAT IS WHAT HE HAD IN MIND, HE OBVIOUSLY WAS REFERRING TO THE BOMBING WHICH BOTH THE ALLIES AND THE GERMANS HAVE BEEN AVOIDING THUS FAR IN THE WAR IN THE WESTERN THEATRE. NO ONE HAS WANTED TO BE THE FIRST TO EMPLOY THIS TERRIBLE WEAPON, TO START WHAT MUST DEVELOP INTO A CONTEST OF REPRISALS WHICH WOULD TAKE A HORRIBLE TOLL OF CIVILIAN LIFE.

THE WAR IN THE EAST IS NEAR ITS END, AND GERMAN TROOPS AND EQUIPMENT ARE BEING SHUNTED ACROSS TO THE WESTERN FRONT TO FACE THE ALLIES. THE POLES STILL CLING TO WARSAW, BUT THAT IS JUST A HEROIC SWAN-SONG, FOR THEIR ARMY AS A WHOLE IS CRUSHED BENEATH THE WEIGHT OF TWO GREAT INVADERS.

SEP 21 1939

FROM WARSAW THIS MORNING, VIA BUDAPEST, COMES WHAT SURELY WILL GO DOWN IN HISTORY AS ONE OF THE EPICS OF ALL TIME. IT IS A FORMAL COMMUNIQUE, RELATING IN MATTER OF FACT LANGUAGE THE DEFENSE OF THE LONG BELEAGUERED CAPITAL. IT WAS ISSUED BY THE COMMANDER OF THE WARSAW DEFENSE--A CHAP WHO MOST ASSUREDLY WOULD BE AN INTERESTING CHARACTER TO MEET.

HE TOLD IN STRAIGHT-AWAY MILITARY TERMS OF THE DESTRUCTION OF VARIOUS LANDMARKS OF THE CITY--AND WALLS LIKELY WERE FALLING NEAR HIM AT THE TIME.

"WARSAW WILL RESIST," HE SAID SIMPLY. "WARSAW IS DOING ITS DUTY."

A THREE-LINE RING OF DEFENSE WORKS WHOSE BACKBONE IS A CANAL AND WHOSE KEY IS THE FORTIFIED CITY OF LIEGE HAS BEEN BUILT BY BELGIUM TO HOLD UP ANY GERMAN ATTEMPT TO USE THE COUNTRY AS A MILITARY HIGHWAY TO FRANCE A SECOND TIME.

FRANCE HERSELF HAS EXTENDED THE MAGINOT LINE ALONG THE BELGIAN FRONTIER WITH A COMPLICATED TRENCH SYSTEM, JUST IN CASE GERMANY DECIDES TO TAKE THE BELGIAN ROUTE AND BREAKS THROUGH.

THAT POSSIBILITY NOW HAS BECOME OF GRAVE CONCERN FOR THE FRENCH, WHO HEAR REPORTS OF GERMAN TROOP CONCENTRATIONS NEAR AACHEN (AIX-LA-CHAPPELLE), FACING BELGIUM ON THE ROUTE GERMAN TROOPS TOOK IN 1914.

Tells Congress It Is Best Way to Keep America Out of European Conflict.

Senator La Follette Says "We'll Fight It Out Well to Breakfast" Against Neutrality Revision

Washington, Sept. 21.—(AP)—President Roosevelt signalled the start of a grim congressional struggle today with an appeal that the embargo on arms shipments to belligerents be abolished and a "cash and carry" system substituted for it.

Earnestly and gravely he presented his program to the newly convened special session as a means of preventing those "incidents and controversies which tend to draw us into conflict, as they did in the last war," and as "the road to peace" for America.

But it became immediately apparent that his eloquence had left unimpressed the leaders of the group which has sworn to fight to the end any change in the neutrality laws.

"That is the road to war," said Senator Ernest Lundeen, (F-L.-Minn.) directly contradicting the President.

The speech was a "miserable failure," said Senator Gerald P. Nye, Rep., N. D.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Rep., Mich., declared he disagreed with the President.

Commenting on the coming fight, Senator Robert M. La Follette, Prog., Wis., observed:

"The milk in this cocoanut is the arms embargo. On that we're going to fight from hell to breakfast."

Senator Hiram W. Johnson, Rep., Cal., seconded this with a statement that "there can be no compromise on this question."

Many others, including some Democrats and Republicans who often have differed with the President, praised the speech.

"Very conclusive," was the terse, approving comment of Senator Carter Glass, Dem., Va.

To the repeal of the embargo, the President said he would add action to require that belligerents pay cash for supplies bought here, that they carry their purchases away in their own ships, that American ships and citizens be kept out of war zones, that "war credits" to the belligerents be prevented, that the collection of funds [redacted] be regulated and that a system of licensing arms exports be continued.

It made little difference to him, he said, whether these things were accomplished by specific act of Congress or by proclamation or other executive action. In any event he pledged himself that they would be done.

30.24-3503

"To those who say that this program would involve a step toward war on our part," he asserted, "I reply that it offers far greater safeguards than we now possess or have ever possessed to protect American lives and property from danger.

He called the embargo "most vitally dangerous to American neutrality, American security and American peace," and asserted that by its repeal "the United States will more probably remain at peace than if the law remains" in its present form.

"I say this," he continued, "because with the repeal of the embargo this Government clearly and definitely will insist that American citizens and American ships keep away from the immediate perils of the actual zones of conflict.

"Repeal of the embargo and a return to international law are the crux of this issue."

In addition he asked that neutrality be made the only subject of the session, with adjournment following its disposition. Between sessions, he said, the leaders of both parties in Congress had agreed to stay in town and he promised to consult with them, and in case of new emergencies call together special session.

Mr. Roosevelt spoke to both branches of Congress, gathered in joint session in the big chamber of the House, to galleries packed with spectators, to a little group of foreign diplomats—which did not include the representatives of Germany, Russia and Italy—and to the country as a whole by radio.

And, it was an unsmiling President who delivered his message. Not even a prolonged ovation, thunderous handclapping punctuated by shrill "rebel yells" upon his entrance, evoked from him the broad grin and sweeping wave of the arm with which, on such occasions, he usually acknowledges the greetings of the legislators.

Applause Becomes Restrained

The applause was more restrained as he proceeded, solemnly, with his address. To gallery sitters it obviously came predominantly from the Democratic seats, except when Mr. Roosevelt firmly declared his intention of doing everything possible to keep America at peace, and asserted his belief that that could and would be done. Then the applause burst spontaneously from all sides.

Two hours before Mr. Roosevelt's arrival at the capital, both branches met separately for the formalities incident to the convening of Congress. Almost immediately the Senate ran into a sharp little incident indicative of the feeling which underlies the issue of repealing the arms embargo.

Senator Charles W. Tobey, Rep., N. H., asked unanimous consent to insert in the congressional record the recent speech of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh urging a position of strict aloofness for the United States. Senator Key Pittman, Dem., Nev., chairman of the foreign relations committee, abruptly objected. But later, when the Senate met again after hearing Mr. Roosevelt, the Lindbergh text was inserted. Pittman made it clear his purpose was merely to preserve the first place in the record for Mr. Roosevelt's address.

And, perhaps indicative of the sharp division of sentiment among the folk back home, the Senators encountered an unexpected outburst of anti-repeal opinion on their way to the House chamber. A crowd of Philadelphians had gathered under the capital rotunda, behind the velvet covered cables which marked off a narrow passageway.

"Don't Touch the Embargo"

Energetically waving small American flags they shouted at the passing Senators: "No cash and carry"—"don't touch the embargo" — "we want peace"—and similar slogans. The group was closely watched by an augmented detail of capital police. In fact, the police and secret service men were out in force. Unusual precautions were taken for the President's safety, to the point of searching nearby shrubbery to be certain it contained no lurking persons of sinister intentions.

Back at the White House, Mr. Roosevelt turned at once to the battle for his neutrality program. He talked with Senator Glass, inveterate opponent of the President on most other issues, but his firm supporter on this one. Then, Senator Alben W. Barkley, Dem., Ky., Senator Sherman Minton, Dem., Ind., and Senator James F. Byrnes, Dem., S. C., entered the presidential office. Barkley and Minton are the Senate's Democratic leader and assistant leader, and Byrnes is to join them in carrying the brunt of the battle in the Senate.

Almost simultaneously, the foes of the President's policies were meeting at the Capitol. Twenty-four attended—15 Republicans, six Democrats, two Farmer-Laborites and one Progressive. They discussed strategy, but all they would say afterward was that there would be no filibuster—"thorough debate and it will take some time"—but "no filibuster."

Further Conferences Today

Tomorrow, it was announced, Mr Roosevelt's conferences will continue, with a call from Senator Pittman, another by Senators Charles L. McNary, Rep., Ore., and Warren R. Austin, Rep., Vt., the Republican leader and assistant leader, and a third from Senator Tom Connally, Dem., Tex., who supports the President's position. Austin is for the President's program, McNary against it. Their scheduled conference was in line with the President's recent call for an "adjournment" of politics, a point which he stressed again in today's message.

"These perilous days demand cooperation between us without trace of partisanship," he said. "Our acts must be guided by one single hard-headed thought—keeping America out of this war."

The address included many references to the war abroad, without a single mention of any country participating in it. The speech reminded many hearers, however, of a fundamental point in the controversy which will be thoroughly and probably more explicitly explored in the coming debate.

This is: The repeal of the embargo would permit England and France to buy arms, ammunition and airplanes here. At the same time British supremacy at sea would prevent German purchases. Administration spokesmen contend that the embargo unneutrally deprives England of the advantage derived from her sea forces, and by act of Congress provides Germany with the equivalent of an Atlantic fleet. The opposition contends that, nevertheless, to make a change at this time would be considered an unneutral act by Germany inviting retaliations which might involve us in the war.

Recalls January Address

So, these arguments were recalled when the President reminded Congress that he said last January:

"We have learned that when we deliberately try to legislate neutrality, our neutrality laws may operate unevenly and unfairly—may actually give aid to an aggressor and deny it to the victim. The instinct for self-preservation should warn us that we ought not to let that happen any more."

Continuing, the President said:

"The essentials for American peace in the world have not changed since January. That is why I ask you again to re-examine our own legislation."

And again, in the same connection, Mr. Roosevelt asserted:

"The enactment of the embargo provisions did more than merely reverse our traditional policy. It had the effect of putting land powers on the same footing as naval powers, so far as sea-borne commerce was concerned.

"A land power which threatened war could thus feel assured in advance that any prospective sea-power antagonist would be weakened through denial of its ancient right to buy anything anywhere. This, four years ago (when the embargo was originally enacted) gave a definite advantage to one belligerent as against another, not through his own strength or geographic position, but through an affirmative act of ours.

War Attitudes "Not the Issue"

"Removal of this embargo is merely reverting to the sounder international practice, and pursuing in time of war as in time of peace our ordinary trade policies. This will be liked by some and disliked by others, depending on the view they take of the present war, but that is not the issue.

"The step I recommend is to put this country back on the solid footing of real and traditional neutrality."

In addition, the President criticized the embargo as a "paradox." This was true, he said, since it forbade America to sell arms and ammunition to the belligerents, but nevertheless permitted the sale of raw materials and foodstuffs.

"Let those who seek to retain the present embargo position be wholly consistent and seek new legislation to cut off cloth and copper and meat and wheat and a thousand other articles from all of the nations at war," he said.

The President asked why, if raw materials were to be sold to the belligerents for processing in their own factories, they should not be processed here with resulting economic betterment for the United States.

"From a purely material point of view what is the advantage to us in sending all manner of articles across the ocean for final processing there when we could give employment to thousands by doing it here?" Mr. Roosevelt asked.

"We Aid Our Own Defence."

"Incidentally and aside from the material point of view, by such employment we automatically aid our own defence. And, if abnormal profit appears in our midst even in time of peace, as a result of this increase of industry, I feel certain that the subject will be adequately dealt with at the coming regular session of the Congress."

The President said he would like to "offer the hope that the shadow over the world might swiftly pass," but that he could not.

"The facts compel my stating," he said, "that darker periods may lie ahead. The disaster is not of our making; no act of ours engendered the forces which assault the foundations of civilization. Yet, we find ourselves affected to the core; our currents of commerce are changing, our minds are filled with new problems, our position in world affairs has already been altered.

"In such circumstances, our policy must be to appreciate in the deepest sense the true American interest. Rightly considered, this interest is not selfish. Destiny first made us, with our sister nations on this hemisphere, joint heirs of European culture.

"Fate seems now to compel us to assume the task of helping to maintain in the Western world a citadel, wherein that civilization may be kept alive. The peace, the integrity and the safety of the Americas—these must be kept firm and serene.

"One People, of One Mind"

"In a period when it is sometimes said that free discussion is no longer compatible with national safety, may you by your deeds show the world that we of the United States are one people, of one mind, one spirit, one clear resolution, walking before God in the light of the living."

Leaving the later conference with the President, Senator Barkley said the Democratic steering and policy committee, of which he is chairman, would meet tomorrow to consider limiting the scope of the session to neutrality legislation. Virtually all expressions of opinion received thus far from members of the Senate, he added, were favorable to such a restriction.

Two meetings of opponents of the President's program were held today.

Thirteen Republicans who attended one or both of the meetings were Senators William E. Borah, of Idaho; Styles Bridges, of New Hampshire; Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan; Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., of Massachusetts; Lynn J. Frazier, of North Dakota; Chan Gurney, of South Dakota; Clyde M. Reed, of Kansas; Charles W. Tobey, of New Hampshire; John A. Danaher, of Connecticut; Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota; Arthur Capper, of Kansas; W. Warren Barbour, of New Jersey, and Hiram W. Johnson, of California.

Eight Democrats at the meetings were Bennett C. Clark, of Missouri; D. Worth Clark, of Idaho; Pat McCarran, of Nevada; Sheridan Downey, of California; John H. Overton, of Louisiana; David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts; Rush Holt, of West Virginia, and William J. Bulow, of South Dakota.

Two Farmer-Laborites present were Ernest Lundeen and Henrick Shipstead, of Minnesota. Senator La Follette attended both sessions.

The President's Address

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21—Following is the text of the address which President Roosevelt made before Congress today:

I have asked the Congress to reassemble in extraordinary session in order that it may consider and act on the amendment of certain legislation, which, in my best judgment, so alters the historic foreign policy of the United States that it impairs the peaceful relations of the United States with foreign nations.

At the outset I proceed on the assumption that every member of the Senate and of the House of Representatives, and every member of the executive branch of the government, including the President and his associates, personally and officially, are equally and without reservation in favor of such measures as will protect the neutrality, the safety and the integrity of our country and at the same time keep us out of war.

Because I am wholly willing to ascribe an honorable desire for peace to those who hold different views from my own as to what those measures should be, I trust that these gentlemen will be sufficiently generous to ascribe equally lofty purposes to those with whom they disagree.

Let no man or group in any walk of life assume exclusive protectorate over the future well-being of America—because I conceive that regardless of party or section the mantle of peace and of patriotism is wide enough to cover us all.

All Belong to Peace 'Bloc'

Let no group assume the exclusive label of the peace "bloc." We all belong to it.

I have at all times kept the Congress and the American people informed of events and trends in foreign affairs. I now review them in a spirit of understatement.

Since 1931 the use of force instead of the council table has constantly increased in the settlement of disputes between nations, except in the Western Hemisphere, where there has been only one war, now happily terminated.

During these years also the building up of vast armies, navies and storehouses of war has proceeded abroad with growing speed and intensity. But, during these years, and extending back even to the days of the Kellogg-Briand pact, the United States has constantly, consistently and conscientiously done all in its power to encourage peaceful settlements, to bring about reduction of armaments and to avert threatened wars.

We have done this not only because any war anywhere necessarily hurts American security and American prosperity, but because of the more important fact that any war anywhere retards the progress of morality and religion and impairs the security of civilization itself.

For many years the primary purpose of our foreign policy has been that this nation and this government should strive to the utmost to aid in avoiding war among other nations. But if and when war unhappily comes, the government and the nation must exert every possible effort to avoid being drawn into the war.

The executive branch of the government did its utmost, within our traditional policy of non-involvement, to aid in averting the present appalling war. Having thus striven and failed, this government must lose no time or effort to keep the nation from being drawn into the war. In my candid judgment we shall succeed in these efforts.

We are proud of the historical record of the United States and of all the Americas during all these years because we have thrown every ounce of our influence for peace into the scale of peace.

Past Debates on Aggression

I note in passing what you will all remember, the long debates on the subject of what constitutes aggression, on the methods of determining who the aggressor might be, and on who the aggressor in past wars had been. Academically this may have been instructive as it may have been of interest to historians to discuss the pros and cons and the rights and wrongs of the World War during the decade that followed it. But in the light of problems of today and tomorrow responsibility for acts of aggression is not concealed, and the writing of the record can safely be left to future historians.

There has been sufficient realism in the United States to see how close to our own shores came dangerous paths which were being followed on other continents.

Last January I told the Congress that "A war which threatened to envelop the world in flames has been averted, but it has become increasingly clear that peace is not assured." By April new tensions had developed; a new crisis was in the making. Several nations with whom we had friendly, diplomatic and commercial relations had lost, or were in the process of losing, their independent identity and sovereignty.

During the Spring and Summer the trend was definitely toward further acts of military conquest and away from peace. As late as the end of July I spoke to members of the Congress about the definite possibility of war. I should have called it the probability of war.

Last January, also, I spoke to this Congress of the need for further warning of new threats of conquest, military and economic; of challenge to religion, to democracy and to international good faith. I said:

"An ordering of society which relegates religion, democracy and good faith among nations to the background can find no place within it for the ideals of the Prince of Peace. The United States rejects an ordering and retains its ancient faith.

"We know what might happen to us of the United States if the new philosophies of force were to encompass the other continents and invade our own. We, no more than other nations, can afford to be surrounded by the enemies of our faith and our humanity. Fortunate it is, therefore, that in this Western Hemisphere we have, under a common ideal of democratic government, a rich diversity of resources and of peoples functioning together in mutual respect and peace."

Warned Congress on Neutrality

Last January, in the same message, I also said:

"We have learned that when we deliberately try to legislate neutrality our neutrality laws may operate unevenly and unfairly—may actually give aid to an aggressor and deny it to the victim. The instinct of self-preservation should warn us that we ought not to let that happen any more."

It was because of what I foresaw last January from watching the trend of foreign affairs and their probable effect upon us that I recommended to the Congress in July of this year that changes be enacted in our Neutrality Law. The essentials for American peace in the world have not changed since January. That is why I ask you again to re-examine our own legislation.

Beginning with the foundation of our constitutional government in the year 1789, the American policy in respect to belligerent nations, with one notable exception, has been based on international law. Be it remembered that what we call international law has had as its primary objectives the avoidance of causes of war and the prevention of the extension of war.

The single exception was the policy adopted by this nation during the Napoleonic wars, when, seeking to avoid involvement, we acted for some years under the so-called Embargo and Non-Intercourse Acts. That policy turned out to be a disastrous failure —First, because it brought our own nation close to ruin, and second, because it was the major cause of bringing us into active participation in European wars in our own War of 1812. It is merely reciting history to recall to you that one of the results of the policy of embargo and non-intercourse was the burning in 1814 of part of this Capitol in which we are assembled.

Our next deviation by statute from the sound principles of neutrality and peace through international law did not come for one hundred and thirty years. It was the so-called Neutrality Act of 1935—only four years ago—an act continued in force by the joint resolution of May 1, 1937, despite grave doubts expressed as to its wisdom by many Senators and Representatives and by officials charged with the conduct of our foreign relations, including myself. I regret that the Congress passed that act. I regret equally that I signed that act.

Asks That Embargo Be Lifted

On July 14 of this year I asked the Congress in the course of peace and in the interest of real American neutrality and security to take action to change that act. I now ask again that such action be taken in respect to that part of the act which is wholly inconsistent with ancient precepts of the law of nations—the embargo provisions. I ask it because they are, in my opinion, most vitally dangerous to American neutrality, American security and American peace.

These embargo provisions, as they exist today, prevent the sale to a belligerent by an American factory of any completed implements of war but they allow the sale of many types of uncompleted implements of war, as well as all kinds of general material and supplies. They, furthermore, allow such products of industry and agriculture to be taken in American-flag ships to belligerent nations. There in itself—under the present law—lies definite danger to our neutrality and our peace.

From a purely material point of view, what is the advantage to us in sending all manner of articles across the ocean for final processing there, when we could give employment to thousands by doing it here? Incidentally, and again from the material point of view, by such employment we automatically aid our own national defense. And if abnormal profits appear in our midst even in time of peace, as a result of this increase of industry, I feel certain that the subject will be adequately dealt with at the coming regular session of the Congress.

Paradox of Existing Legislation

Let me set forth the present paradox of the existing legislation in its simplest terms: If, prior to 1935, a general war had broken out in Europe, the United States would have sold to and bought from belligerent nations such goods and products of all kinds as the belligerent nations, with their existing facilities and geographical situations, were able to buy from us or sell to us. This would have been the normal practice under the age-old doctrines of international law. Our prior position accepted the facts of geography and of conditions of land power and sea power alike as they existed in all parts of the world.

If a war in Europe had broken out prior to 1935, there would have been no difference, for example, between our exports of sheets of aluminum and airplane wings; today there is an artificial legal difference. Before 1935 there would have been no difference between the export of cotton and the export of gun cotton. Today there is. Before 1935 there would have been no difference between the shipment of brass tubing in piece form and brass tubing in shell form. Today there is. Before 1935 there would have been no difference between the export of a motor truck and an armored motor truck. Today there is.

Let us be factual and recognize that a belligerent nation often needs wheat and lard and cotton for the survival of its population just as much as it needs anti-aircraft guns and anti-submarine depth-charges. Let those who seek to retain the present embargo position be wholly consistent and seek new legislation to cut off cloth and copper and meat and wheat and a thousand other articles from all of the nations at war.

I seek a greater consistency through the repeal of the embargo provisions, and a return to international law. I seek reenactment of the historic and traditional American policy which, except for the disastrous interlude of the Embargo and Non-Intercourse Acts, has served us well for nearly a century and a half.

Says It Would Be a Move for Peace

It has been erroneously said that return to that policy might bring us nearer to war. I give to you my deep and unalterable conviction, based on years of experience as a worker in the field of international peace, that by the repeal of the embargo the United States will more probably remain at peace than if the law remains as it stands today. I say this because with the repeal of the embargo this government clearly and definitely will insist that American citizens and American ships keep away from the immediate perils of the actual zones of conflict.

Repeal of the embargo and a return to international law are the crux of this issue. The enactment of the embargo provisions did more than merely reverse our traditional policy. It had the effect of putting land powers on the same footing as naval powers, so far as sea-borne commerce was concerned. A land power which threatened war could thus feel assured in advance that any prospective sea-power antagonist would be weakened through denial of its ancient right to buy anything anywhere.

This, four years ago, gave a definite advantage to one belligerent as against another, not through his own strength or geographic position, but through an affirmative act of ours. Removal of the embargo is merely reverting to the sounder international practice, and pursuing in time of war as in time of peace our ordinary trade policies. This will be liked by some and disliked by others, depending on the view they take of the present war, but that is not the issue. The step I recommend is to put this country back on the solid footing of real and traditional neutrality.

SEP 22 1939

Other Phases of Policy to Consider

When and if repeal of the embargo is accomplished, certain other phases of policy reinforcing American safety should be considered. While nearly all of us are in agreement on their objectives, the only question relates to method.

I believe that American merchant vessels should, so far as possible, be restricted from entering danger zones. War zones may change so swiftly and so frequently in the days to come that it is impossible to fix them permanently by act of Congress; specific tantially achieved through due notice by proclamation.

The fourth objective is the preventing of war credits to belligerents. This can be accomplished by maintaining in force existing provisions of law, or by proclamation making it clear that if credits are granted by American citizens to belligerents our government will take no steps in the future to relieve them of risk or loss. The result of these last two will be to require all purchases to be made in cash and cargoes to be carried in the purchasers' own ships, at the purchasers' own risk.

Two other objectives have been amply attained by existing law, namely, regulating collection of funds in this country for belligerents, and the maintenance of a license system covering import and export of arms, ammunition and implements of war. Under present enactments, such arms cannot be carried to belligerent countries on American vessels, and this provision should not be disturbed.

traveling on belligerent vessels, or in danger areas. This can also be accomplished either by legislation, through continuance in force of certain provisions of existing law, or by proclamation making it clear to all Americans that any such travel is at their own risk.

The third objective, requiring the foreign buyer to take transfer of title in this country to commodities purchased by belligerents, is also a result which can be attained by legislation or sub-

Congress Should Make Own Choice

The Congress, of course, should make its own choice of the method by which these safeguards are to be attained, so long as the method chosen will meet the needs of new and changing day to day situations and dangers.

To those who say that this program would involve a step toward war on our part, I reply that it offers far greater safeguards than we now possess or have ever possessed to protect American lives and property from danger. It is a positive program for giving safety. This means less likelihood of incidents and controversies which tend to draw us into conflict, as they did in the last World War. There lies the road to peace.

The position of the executive branch of the government is that the age-old and time-honored doctrine of international law, coupled with these positive safeguards, is better calculated than any other means to keep us out of this war.

In respect to our own defense, you are aware that I have issued a proclamation setting forth "a national emergency in connection with the observance, safeguarding and enforcement of neutrality and the strengthening of the national defense within the limits of peace-time authorizations." This was done solely to make wholly constitutional and legal certain obviously necessary measures. I have authorized increases in the personnel of the army, navy, marine corps and Coast Guard, which will bring all four to a total still below peace-time strength as authorized by the Congress.

I have authorized the State Department to use, for the repatriation of Americans caught in the war zone, $500,000 already authorized by the Congress.

I have authorized the addition of one hundred and fifty persons to the Department of Justice to be used for the protection of the United States against subversive foreign activities within our borders.

Asks for No Other Authority

At this time I ask for no other authority from the Congress. At this time I see no need for further executive action under the proclamation of limited national emergency. Therefore, I see no valid reason for the consideration of other legislation at this extraordinary session of the Congress.

It is, of course, possible that in the months to come unforeseen needs for further legislation may develop but they are not imperative today.

These perilous days demand cooperation between us without trace of partisanship. Our acts must be guided by one single hard-headed thought—keeping America out of this war. In that spirit, I am asking the leaders of the two major parties in the Senate and in the House of Representatives to remain in Washington between the close of this extraordinary session and the beginning of the regular session on January 3. They have assured me that they will do so, and I expect to consult with them at frequent intervals on the course of events in foreign affairs and on the need for future action in this field, whether it be executive or legislative action.

Further, in the event of any future danger to the security of the United States or in the event of need for any new legislation of importance, I will immediately reconvene the Congress in another extraordinary session.

I should like to be able to offer the hope that the shadow over the world might swiftly pass. I cannot. The facts compel my stating, with candor, that darker periods may lie ahead. The disaster is not of our making; no act of ours engendered the forces which assault the foundations of civilization. Yet we find ourselves affected to the core; our currents of commerce are changing, our minds are filled with new problems, our position in world affairs has already been altered.

In such circumstances our policy must be to appreciate in the deepest sense the true American interest. Rightly considered, this interest is not selfish. Destiny first made us, with our sister nations on this hemisphere, joint heirs of European culture. Fate seems now to compel us to assume the task of helping to maintain in the Western World a citadel wherein that civilization may be kept alive. The peace, the integrity and the safety of the Americas—these must be kept firm and serene.

In a period when it is sometimes said that free discussion is no longer compatible with national safety, may you by your deeds show the world that we of the United States are one people, of one mind, one spirit, one clear resolution, walking before God in the light of the living.

Points in Roosevelt Talk

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21—These are some of the highlights of President Roosevelt's address on neutrality:

Regardless of party or section the mantle of peace and of patriotism is wide enough to cover us all. Let no group assume the exclusive label of the peace "bloc." We all belong to it.

Any war anywhere retards the progress of morality and religion and impairs the security of civilization itself.

This government must lose no time or effort to keep the nation from being drawn into the war. In my candid judgment we shall succeed in these efforts.

One of the results of the policy of embargo and non-intercourse was the burning in 1814 of part of this Capitol.

I regret that Congress passed that (the Neutrality) act. I regret equally that I signed it.

Let those who seek to retain the present embargo position be wholly consistent and seek new legislation to cut off cloth and copper and meat and wheat and a thousand other articles from all of the nations at war.

Repeal of the embargo and return to international law are the crux of this issue.

HULL EXPLAINS EMBARGO VIEWS

Denies Repeal Now Would Be Unneutral Act.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21 (A. P.).—Secretary of State Hull asserted today that lifting of the arms embargo after the outbreak of war abroad would not be an unneutral act. In a long statement at his press conference he said belligerents constantly changed their position during a war and that a neutral could too. Otherwise, he suggested, the belligerents would have all the rights and a neutral none.

Mr. Hull contended that lifting the embargo would, in fact, constitute a return to a neutral position under international law from an unneutral position in which he said the neutrality act had placed the nation.

He recalled that when Congress last adjourned before the European war began, there had been widespread notice in advance of contemplated changes in the neutrality policy.

At that time, he related, the President gave due notice that if war should occur Congress would be reconvened for the purpose of resuming its consideration of pending neutrality legislation.

If neutrals were allowed to set some policy in advance of war on condition that they could not change at all, he said, this would make them rigid throughout the war while the belligerents adopted any new policy they wanted, no matter how damaging it was to the rights of neutrals.

BUCHAREST, Sept. 21 (Via Copenhagen) (A. P.).—Premier Armand Calinescu was shot and killed today by men officially identified as Iron Guardists and troops were called up at once to prevent a coup.

The assassination of Calinescu—known as Rumania's "strong man" for his suppression of the outlawed, pro-Nazi Iron Guard organization—was attributed to conflicting national interests arising from the European war.

It came as German and Russian troops approached the Rumanian frontier in their occupation of Poland. Rumania got one-seventh of her territory from Russia in the world war settlement.

Calinescu was machine-gunned in his automobile by masked men. Other masked men seized the Bucharest radio station but were subsequently arrested. Late today a communique read over the station formally accused the slayers as being members of the pro-Nazi Iron Guard.

"This afternoon, Premier Calinescu was murdered in a cowardly manner near his home," the communique said. "The murderers, who are members of the former Iron Guard, have been arrested."

Rumanian Nazis Kill Premier

RUMANIAN PREMIER SHOT DEAD IN CAR

Troops Called to Put Down Pro-Nazi Coup by Iron Guardists as Germans and Russians Near Border.

Crown Council Is Called.

The communique said that a new Premier already had been chosen, but failed to give his name. He was to be sworn in late in the afternoon, after which a meeting of the new Cabinet would be held.

The communique announced that "perfect order and calm reigns throughout the country."

Immediately after the death of the Premier a Crown Council was called by King Carol to meet the resultant crisis in Rumania's position in internal and international affairs. It was still sitting late today.

The Anglo-French allies and Germany were engaged in a bitter struggle, each side attempting to influence Rumania's policy to their advantage. Calinescu had been known as an advocate of political and economic co-operation with Great Britain and France.

Rumania's oil, needed by Germany's mechanized army and her air force, was the major prize.

The Premier was driving in his car on Bucharest's main street, on his way to the Royal Palace, when he was shot. His car was suddenly blocked by three other machines which converged on that of the Premier while a peasant cart blocked the road ahead.

One car drew alongside. Masked men jumped out and opened fire with sub-machine guns. Calinescu slumped in his seat. Bullets had riddled his chest and abdomen from side to side. The shots were fired at 2:16 P. M. (8:16 A. M., New York time).

The Premier's chauffeur was killed instantly. Calinescu was rushed to University Hospital, but he died en route in a motor car.

Eight of the alleged assassins and accomplices have been arrested.

Two Assassins Die Suicides.

Two members of the assassination band who were not arrested were said to have barricaded themselves in an unoccupied mansion in Boulevard Bratinau and then to have committed suicide.

Thirty cartridge shells were found around Calinescu's car, indicating that the slayers had fired wildly before hitting the Premier. The police said that six shots were found in his body.

After the slaying the assassins sped by automobile to the Bucharest radio station. There they shot the doorman in the leg and rushed past him into the building, tossing explosive rockets.

They broke into the announcer's room, and covered him with their revolvers while one man shouted into the crophone:

"Premier Armand Calinescu has been shot by a group of Iron Guardists."

The wounded doorman gave the alarm and the police and troops surrounded the building, arresting seven youths waiting on the first floor.

Then they went to the announcer's room, where the intruders surrendered without a fight.

An investigation was started immediately by the political police. By 6:30 P. M. all public buildings were surrounded by troops with fixed bayonets.

Rumanian officials announced at 6:20 that dispatches could be sent out, but warned all correspondents that communications would be cut, unless an accurate recital of events were given.

Choice for a new Premier was said authoritatively to have rested between Victor Iamandi, Minister of Justice, and Gen. Gabrial Marinescu, both known as fierce opponents of the Iron Guard and friendly to France and Great Britain.

M. Iamandi has been a close collaborator with M. Calinescu in the fight against the Iron Guard and was also close to former Premier Ion Duca, who was assassinated on December 29, 1933, by men alleged to have been Iron Guardists.

[In Berlin, DNB, the official news agency, reported from Bucharest that Gen. Ernst Baliff had been appointed temporary premier and Marinescu Minister of the Interior.]

The Government announced that Calinescu would have a national funeral and ordered the closing of all theaters, cafes and concert halls.

While the assassins were carrying out their assignment, another band of armed, masked men seized the Bucharest radio station, shooting and wounding the announcer and interrupting the scheduled program. Then one of them announced that Calinescu had been killed in a revolt.

All he said was:

"This morning a successful attempt was made on the life of Premier Calinescu. Throughout Rumania there is terrible excitement and"—

Then he was cut off.

Meanwhile the police rushed to the scene of the shooting, where two of the alleged killers were arrested.

The Rumanian authorities quickly clamped on rigid censorship until the facts were established.

Poles to Be Interned.

Early today it was reported authoritatively that the Rumanian Government had decided to intern the Polish President, Ignace Moscicki, Foreign Minister Joseph Beck and other high civil officials as well as Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, the Polish army commander. All had crossed the frontier from Poland into Rumania.

Marshal Smigly-Rydz was interned yesterday and sent to enforced domicile at Craiova, near the junction of the Rumanian-Bulgarian frontiers.

Both Great Britain and France had appealed that he be allowed to leave the country, while the Nazis insisted that he be interned like any other soldier.

It was also reported reliably yesterday that, after a complaint to the Rumanian police by the German Consul at Cernauti, Gen. Joseph Haller, founder of the Polish Legion in France during the world war, had been interned by the Rumanian authorities.

Foreign Envoys Going Home.

Authoritaitve sources said that the new decision of the Rumanian Government would be announced officially soon, together with an explanation of the action as one of "strict neutrality" under international law.

Foreign envoys who had been accredited to Poland and who had followed the Polish Government from Warsaw made plans to return to their native countries.

Anthony Drexel Biddle Jr., United States Ambassador to Warsaw, arranged to leave tomorrow for Paris.

Polish Government officials, including between 150 and 200 Foreign Office officials, are to be provided with "restricted residence" in a location yet to be designated, according to the Rumanian plan.

It already had been announced that all Polish officers and soldiers who had fled into Rumania would be interned. All have been disarmed and some already have been put into camps.

On a highway between Kuty, on the Rumanian-Polish border, and Bucharest, Rumanian patrols could be seen stopping and questioning all motorists. Cars containing Polish officers and men were shunted into roadside camps, where they were escorted by armed patrols to an internment camp.

Polish civilian refugees who surged into Rumania by the thousands were "requested" to migrate elsewhere as soon as possible, so as not to become a problem of maintenance to the Rumanian Government or a disturbing influence in the present delicate international situation.

Of the leading Poles, President Moscicki was in Bicaz, where he was living in King Carol's hunting lodge. The lodge was occupied by the late King Ferdinand and Queen Marie during the German occupation of Rumania during the world war.

While the Rumanian Government was said to be acting in accordance with a strict interpretation of international law in interning members of the Polish civil government, some observers said the action may have resulted from strong German pressure.

It was taken despite the Rumanian-Polish treaty of March 3, 1921, which provided for mutual assistance in the event of an unprovoked attack upon either party on their eastern frontier. The Rumanian-Polish alliance resulted from the mutual desire of the two countries to protect themselves from possible invasion by Russia. The pact has not been made effective by Rumania, despite Germany's invasion of Poland and the Russian occupation of a large section of eastern and southern Poland.

It was reported that Polish officials came to Rumania, when they were forced to flee from their land, under the impression that, because of the Rumanian-Polish pact, they would be permitted to function here or at least be permitted to proceed through Rumania to Paris to establish new headquarters.

The Rumanian Government today prohibited the purchase from Polish refugees of cars, horses, guns, foreign currency and jewelry. It ordered that animals or banned items which had been bought before the prohibition must be surrendered to the authorities within three days. Offenders, it decreed, would be punished severely.

Many Plots Reported.

Premier Calinescu's campaign against the Iron Guard came to a head in the fall of 1938 and since then the police have announced the discovery of a half-dozen "revenge" plots against him. He became head of the government on March 7, 1939, succeeding the late Dr. Miron Cristea, patriarch of the Rumanian Church.

On June 17 the police said that Iron Guards planned to assassinate M. Calinescu and King Carol with hand grenades at a race track.

M. Calinescu was Minister of Interior in charge of the police on November 30, 1938, when Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, Iron Guard leader and so-called "Little Hitler" of Rumania, was shot dead "while attempting to escape" during a transfer from one prison to another, according to the official version.

Refused to Have Bodyguard.

Besides Codreanu, [illegible] fourteen chief aids were shot. At that time there were reports that Iron Guards had taken an oath to assassinate M. Calinescu in revenge.

The Iron Guard at the outset was largely anti-Semitic. Codreanu, its youthful leader, rallied many university students to its standard. One of his earliest exploits as Iron Guard leader was the shooting of the police prefect of Jassy for severity in suppressing anti-Jewish student riots.

Despite the frequent reported discovery of such plots against him, the Premier steadfastly refused to have a bodyguard.

It was said that M. Calinescu told King Carol when the monarch begged him to employ guards: "No man can escape his fate."

'Something Bigger' Expected.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 21 (A. P.).—Rumanian diplomats in Hungary said today they interpreted the assassination of their Premier as "highly significant just at the moment when German and Russian troops are approaching Rumania's northern frontier."

"Maybe the murder of Calinescu is only the beginning of something much bigger," said one Rumanian official.

These Rumanians disclosed that the Bucharest government had suppressed rigidly news of Iron Guard agitation throughout Rumania, which they said began as soon as German forces began their eastward march through Poland near the Rumanian border.

Rumania Sealed From World.

Premier Calinescu's assassination was followed by action to seal Rumania from the rest of the world. Soon after the radio announcement it was reported that Rumania's frontiers had been closed tightly on orders from Bucharest.

All telephone communication with Rumania ceased a few minutes later, and the Government radio station in Bucharest went off the air.

The Rumanian legation here said that before the station stopped broadcasting there were "some minutes of wild and confused shouting."

In reports of pro-Nazi agitation in Rumania it was recalled that only yesterday a Rumanian official at Cernauti disclosed that the police had arrested a group of German residents of Bukovina Province for plotting to join Germany if Nazi troops in Poland arrived at the Rumanian frontier.

Axis and Tokio Diplomats Stay Away From Capitol

Hornbouchi Very Busy, Others Have Prior Engagements

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21 (A.P.).—The representatives of Germany, Italy and Japan were absent from the diplomatic gallery today when President Roosevelt made his appeal to Congress to repeal the arms embargo.

However, it was explained at the Embassies of the three countries that the absences had no significance. Italian diplomats said that Prince Ascanio Colonna, the Ambassador, had a luncheon engagement. It was added that the Embassy had inquired yesterday about a ticket to the gallery for another member of the Embassy staff, but was informed all tickets were gone.

Dr. Hans Thomsen, German Charge d'Affaires, also had a luncheon engagement, it was explained. The Japanese Embassy said that Ambassador Kensuke Horinouchi was very busy, but that, while he could not go to the Capitol, he did listen in on the radio.

King Installs New Government Headed By Army Leaders Noted For Their Stern Discipline, Following Assassination

By LLOYD LEHRBAS
Associated Press Correspondent

Bucharest, Sept. [illegible]ing Carol took swift and extreme measures tonight to fight the threat of a coup by the pro-Nazi Iron Guard, which he blamed for the assassination earlier in the day of his anti-Nazi Premier, Armand Calinescu.

Eight Iron Guardists alleged to have participated in the slaying were executed publicly in one of Bucharest's main streets on the spot where the crime was committed.

Regime Of Army Leaders Installed

Carol called up troops, declared a state of emergency throughout the nation and within a few hours after the assassination installed a new Government headed by army leaders noted for stern discipline.

Nation-wide raids were made against suspected members of the illegal Iron Guard.

Calinescu, a foe of the Iron Guardists and a proponent of closer economic cooperation with Britain and France, was shot down in an automobile about noon by masked men.

Huge Crowd Watches Execution

At this same spot tonight, the eight alleged slayers were executed by firing squads in the presence of a huge crowd. Their bodies were left lying on the pavement in pools of blood while thousands of onlookers were permitted to file past.

An official announcement said the execution was thus arranged as a "public example" to all "who would follow the Iron Guard." A loud cry went up from thousands of men, women and children as the shots rang out and the men toppled one by one to the pavement.

Throughout the late evening long lines of rich and poor alike filed past the sprawled bodies in the flicker of huge arc lights set up by military squads.

"This For Murderers"

A post erected near the spot said: "This is what happened to those who murdered."

Bucharest itself was quiet, but under the bayonets of thousands of soldiers.

King Carol acted swiftly, mindful of the massed armies of Russia, Bulgaria and Hungary at his frontiers and of the army of Germany not so far away in southern Poland.

The first three countries turned territory over to Rumania after the World War, and demands have been made for the return of some of it.

Germany seeks more Rumanian oil now that her war equipment is burning it up faster.

New Regime In 8 Hours

Deciding speedy action was necessary, Carol named the new Government within eight hours after the assassination.

Gen. George Argesanu, 56, a former War Minister and now commander of the Second Army Corps, was named Premier. He is one of Rumania's outstanding soldiers and known as a "tough disciplinarian."

Gen. Ion Ilcus, a close personal friend of Carol's, who received the King at the Bucharest airport when he flew back to Rumania from exile in 1930, was made Minister of the Interior in charge of the nation's police.

Allies' Friend Is War Chief

The vital post of War Minister was assigned to Gen. Gabriel Marinescu, known as a bitter opponent of the Iron Guard and as a friend of France and Great Britain. All other Cabinet posts will remain as they were under Calinescu, it was announced.

General Argesanu was appointed at a crown council meeting over which Carol presided. The new Premier immediately held a Cabinet council session which still was meeting late tonight.

The Cabinet was expected to issue an appeal to the nation for calm and loyalty and to promise to crush the remnants of the outlawed Iron Guard.

Calinescu often had accused the organization of taking money and orders from Berlin.

In the early evening the gendarmerie placed heavy guard reinforcements around all ministries, the general post office and other public buildings.

Police went through the streets halting automobiles and demanding identification of passengers, who often were searched for arms. Many pedestrians were subjected to the same examination.

Carol decreed a huge public funeral for Calinescu. Meanwhile his body lay in state.

The press department of the Premier's office issued a communique during the evening declaring that "investigation thus far has failed to show any ramifications in the plot which can be traced to a foreign country." It continued:

"Political circles think it is not likely that an international explanation can be given to the plot, the less so as Calinescu was correct and strict in his policy of a neutral international program."

Returned From Ukraine

However, a phrase in an early Government statement that the leader of Calinescu's assassins had returned to Rumania six weeks ago from the Ukraine caught the eye of foreign diplomats.

They kept attention glued to Rumania's borders, with the massed troops opposite. The Bulgarian and Hungarian Governments have openly proclaimed territorial demands on Rumania.

And Germany's diplomatic attempts to get more of Rumania's oil have been unsuccessful. A mission here for the purpose has been told the oil already is pledged to British, French and American companies.

Oil For Four Months

Oil experts here have said that Germany has only enough petroleum to last for four months of war. At Cernauti, on the Polish-Rumanian frontier, foreign military observers said many German planes and tanks had been immobilized in Poland because of rationing of fuel by high army authorities.

The capital waited anxiously to see what night would bring after one of Calinescu's assassins screamed over the radio:

"The time for revenge has come!"

It was feared by some that this may have been the rallying cry to Iron Guard members throughout the country to rise.

Troops were held to barracks throughout the nation and frontier guards were heavily reinforced.

Organized By Lawyer

The Government communique said that the assassination of the Premier was organized by a lawyer named George Dumitrescu.

Dumitrescu was said to have succeeded the late Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, Rumanian "Little Hitler" and Iron Guard leader who was killed with a group of his followers in a reported attempt to escape prison November 30. Calinescu, as Minister of the Interior, directed the Government campaign against the Iron Guard at that time.

The communique said Dumitrescu had returned secretly to Bucharest six weeks ago.

Calinescu was riding in his automobile to the royal palace when the assassins sprang their plot.

Pushcart Blocks Auto

A pushcart was shoved into the path of the Premier's car, blocking it. Police said this was done by a young woman.

Other automobiles, bearing the masked slayers, converged on the Premier's.

One car drew alongside. Masked men jumped out and opened fire. First reports said they had used machine guns but the Government communique told of the shooting in this way:

"At this moment, unknown persons fired their automatic pistols. A police officer jumped from Premier Calinescu's car, but was killed immediately with fourteen bullets.

"The Premier had two bullets through the heart, while one went through an eye."

Six Shots Found In Body

Calinescu was rushed to University Hospital but died on the way. Altogether, police said, six shots were found in his body.

After the slaying, the assassins were said to have jumped into two automobiles, in which they sped to the radio station. There they shot the doorman in the leg, rushed past him into the building, and tossed "explosive rockets."

Waving revolvers, the assassins broke into the announcer's room and one man shouted into the microphone:

"Premier Armand Calinescu has been shot by a group of Iron Guardists."

A woman announcer who was in the station at the time of the raid was said to have fainted and failed to recover consciousness for more than two hours.

"Codreanu Avenged"

During the tumult in the station, one of the killers cried:

"Codreanu has been avenged!"

While the slayers were inside, the wounded doorman gave the alarm. Police and troops surrounded the building. Seven youths waiting on the first floor were arrested.

Immediately an investigation was started by the political police. By 6.30 P. M. all public buildings were surrounded with troops, including the cells which held the alleged assassins.

Two suspects were arrested at the scene of the shooting, which was near a bridge over Damboulviza river only five minutes' walk from Cotroceni Castle, where King Carol is living during repairs to the royal residence in the center of the city.

Two Others Kill Selves

Two other members of the assassination band, who were not arrested, were said to have barricaded themselves in a [illegible] mansion in Boulevard [illegible]u, then committed suicide.

A national funeral was announced for the Premier and theaters, cafes and concert halls were closed.

Police said one of the assassins was only 19 years old and burst out laughing when they began to question him. Those who were captured in the radio station were taken by an unarmed attendant there, police stated.

The attendant walked up behind them and cried:

"Hands up, you are all under arrest."

The masked men then dropped their revolvers to the floor.

Seek Long-Term Credits

The German economic mission was here attempting to get long-term credits.

Germans, it was said, were putting pressure on the Rumanian National Bank to extend such loans for oil purchases. The oil companies, owned chiefly by British, American, French and Netherlands interests, were demanding cash. Thus, if the Germans bought, the national bank would have to finance the operation.

RUMANIA TO INTERN MOSCICKI AND BECK

Meets Nazi Demand to Hold Polish Officials, as Against Allies' Plea for Release

Reich Troops Close Border—U. S. Vice Consul to Warsaw Within Soviet Army Lines

SEP 22 1939

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Sept. 21 (AP)—Authoritative sources said today that the Rumanian Government had decided to intern President Ignaz Moscicki, Foreign Minister Jozef Beck and other high civil officials of Poland as well as Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, Polish army commander. All had crossed the frontier from Poland into Rumania.

Marshal Smigly-Rydz was interned yesterday and sent to enforced domicile at Craiova, near the junction of the Rumanian-Bulgarian frontiers.

Britain and France had appealed that the Polish leaders be allowed to leave the country, but Nazis insisted on their internment.

President Moscicki was in Bicaz, where [illegible]ving in King Carol's hunti[illegible]ge, and Colonel Beck was in Slanic, a resort north of Bucharest.

Authoritative sources said the new decision of the Rumanian Government would be announced officially soon, together with an explanation of the action as one of "strict neutrality" under international law.

Foreign envoys who had been accredited to Poland and who had followed the Polish Government from Warsaw made plans to return to their respective countries. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Jr., United States Ambassador to Warsaw, arranged to leave tomorrow for Paris.

Civilians "Requested" to Leave

Polish Government officials, including between 150 and 200 Foreign Office officials, are to be provided with "restricted residence" in a location yet to be designated, according to the Rumanian plan. All Polish officers and soldiers are being interned.

Polish civilian refugees who surged into Rumania by the thousands were "requested" to migrate elsewhere as soon as possible so as not to become a problem of maintenance to the Rumanian Government or a disturbing influence in the present delicate international situation.

American authorities were expected to take diplomatc action probably in Moscow, to obtain the release of William Morton, United States vice consul in Warsaw, caught on the Polish side of the Dniester River during the Soviet Russian occupation.

Mrs. Morton was unable to leave Zaleszczyki, Polish frontier town, because of restrictions imposed by Russian Army officials. He had no permit to cross the border and said he had no way to obtain one.

Richard Mowrer, correspondent for The Chicago Daily News, who escaped Tuesday night by wading the Dniester, made a full report to Franklin Mott Gunther, American Minister here. The report will be forwarded to Washington for possible action in Mr. Morton's case.

Calinescu's Testament

Bucharest, Sept. 21 (AP)—The testament of the assassinated Premier, Armand Calinescu, read by King Carol at the Crown Council meeting tonight, asked that he be carried to his grave in a peasant cart drawn by six oxen.

"I beg my son to be wise and think of the name I leave him," Cabinet ministers said Carol read in a trembling voice. "I leave him an honorable name I inherited from my father. . . .

"I wish to be buried at Arges by the side of my father.

"I ask to be taken to the tomb in a peasant cart drawn by six oxen."

Arges is where King Ferdinand and Queen Marie are buried in southern Rumania.

BALKANS PERILED BY ASSASSINATION OF RUMANIA CHIEF

Turkey, Greece, And Yugoslavia Dismayed At Threat to Peace

Calinescu's Death Weakens Carol Regime; May Signal Spread of War Into South

SEP 22 1939

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Associated Press Correspondent

BUDAPEST, Sept. 21—The assassination of Rumania's premier, Armand Calinescu, by pro-Nazi extremists, threatened tonight to push all of southeastern Europe off a delicate balance between peace and chaos.

Dismay and consternation were the immediate reaction in the capitals of Turkey, Greece, and Yugoslavia where Calinescu was regarded as a strong friend.

The first comment in Bulgarian and Hungarian political circles was, "Rumania depended more on Calinescu than on any other man except King Carol."

Waged Diplomatic Game

All the Balkans knew Calinescu was waging a grim game of diplomacy to save his country's frontiers from a possible "undeclared invasion" as his Polish allies fell under the twin onslaught of Russia and Germany.

Neutrality was Calinescu's best card.

Tonight the question was whether the Iron Guard, an organization with long-acknowledged Nazi leanings, had trumped it with bullets.

Diplomats said no country at the moment at peace was in a more precarious position than Rumania. On the north and east, Soviet Russia, which never had been reconciled to the loss of Bessarabia to Rumania in settlements ofter the World War, now holds a border with Rumania from the Black Sea to the easternmost tip of Hungary.

Although a Bucharest communique declared no foreign complications were expected from Calinescu's slaying, diplomats pointed out another communique said George Dumitrescu, new head of the Iron Guard, which is charged by the Rumanian government with organizing the assassination plot, had returned to Bucharest six weeks ago "from the Ukraine."

German Nazism—inspiration of the Iron Guard movement—has been aggressive in Rumania since the start of the Polish war. The Germans have been pressing for Rumanian oil for the Reich's motorized army and Rumanian wheat for the Reich's vast industrial population. In resisting exploitation of his country's resources by any foreign power which might seek to use the advantage for political profit, Calinescu was a key man.

Diplomats had believed a peaceful, productive Rumania would be to war-pressed Germany's advantage. The sudden Russian occupation of the common Polish-Rumania frontier ahead of advancing German columns deprived Germany of ability to exert more than verbal pressure from that quarter, the diplomats had conjectured.

There have been indications that Germany has been displeased with Rumania's "lack of co-operation" in facilitating exports to the Reich. Diplomats assert Germany frequently made use of Bulgaria and Hungary, both of which claim pre-World War territory from Rumania, to "persuade" the Bucharest government to make a show of appeasing German economic demands. That appeasement has not gone far enough has been apparent from reports of recurrent German-Rumanian consultations on trade.

Bulgaria's pet dream is to regain the Dobrudja. Hungarian demands center on Transylvania. The slightest appearance of weakness in the Rumanian government—especially if accompanied by suspicion that it originated from German-Soviet pressure—might be taken as a signal by a neighboring power for "territorial adjustments," diplomats said.

Partly as a result of Calinescu's diplomacy, Rumania remains tied with Turkey, Greece and Yugoslavia in the Balkan Entente. But Yugoslavia's friendship with Bulgaria now is generally considered even stronger than her ties with Rumania, and it is considered by some diplomats problematic how much help Turkey and Greece could or would give Rumania if it came to a showdown. Moreover, Greece and Germany's axis partner, Italy, reached yesterday an apparent accord in which Italian troops in Albania have been withdrawn from the Greek frontier.

Turkey has indicated she places reliance on friendship with Soviet Russia as well as on mutual guaranties with Britain and France. Rumania and Greece also have British-

French guaranties, but with Poland's example fresh in their minds, most Balkan observers are afraid such assistance would not prevent their countries from being overrun, at least in the first months of an invasion.

Because Hungarian feeling always was so high over disputes affecting 1,500,000 Hungarians in Transylvania, Calinescu started a semi-Maginot line of fortifications along the Hungarian frontier this summer.

In the present confused state of affairs no little power has been willing to risk embroilment in war to fulfill treaty obligations to a friend.

According to diplomats, Rumania must save herself alone—if possible. If Russia and Germany march against Rumania then Bulgaria and Hungary are likely to follow, and the inner collapse of Rumania might well be the signal to swing the war of the great powers into the Balkans.

BUCHAREST-SEPT-21

MANY DIPLOMATS REGARDED CALINESCU'S GOVERNMENT AS HAVING BEEN IN AN EXTREMELY TIGHT POSITION, WITH GERMAN POLITICAL PRESSURE INCREASING.

ONE SIGN OF THIS WAS SEEN IN THE DISCLOSURE BY AUTHORITATIVE SOURCES THAT THE GOVERNMENT HAD DECIDED TO INTERN POLISH PRESIDENT IGNACE MOSCICKI, FOREIGN MINISTER JOZEF BECK AND OTHER HIGH CIVIL OFFICIALS AS WELL AS MARSHAL EDWARD SMIGLY-RIDZ, POLISH ARMY COMMANDER.

British 'Blue Book' Reveals Efforts to Preserve Peace

Document of Exchanges With Germany Discloses Hitler At One Time Suggested London-Berlin Alliance, Failed to Enthuse Over Russian Pact

London, Sept. 21.—(AP)—An historic behind the scenes account of the 1939 peace negotiations that failed was published tonight by the British Government.

Documenting [redacted] between Great Brita[redacted] Germany in the final effort [redacted] reserve the peace of Europe a 195-page Blue Book disclosed:

1. Adolf Hitler at one time during the discussions asked if Great

A summary of the "Bluebook" is on Page 6.

Britain would be willing to accept an alliance with Germany.

2. British Ambassador Sir Nevile Henderson said Hitler did not seem "over enthusiastic" about Germany's pact with Russia.

3. Sir Nevile, on his own responsibility, suggested to Hitler that Poland's Foreign Minister Jozef Beck and Germany's Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop "meet somewhere and discuss the way out which alone might save Europe from war. Herr Hitler's reply was that he had invited M. Beck to come and talk the matter over last March only to have his invitation flatly refused."

Detailed reports by Sir Nevile to Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax gave a diplomat's eye view of the vital interviews with Hitler.

On Aug. 22 when he carried to Hitler Prime Minister Chamberlain's letter suggesting a truce to permit direct discussions between Poland and Germany in regard to minority populations, Henderson said Hitler was "excitable and uncompromising * * * his language was violent and exaggerated both as regards England and Poland."

Later that day, Henderson said, Hitler "was quite calm * * * and never raised his voice once," adding that the German Chancellor was "far more categoric than in written reply as to his determination to attack Poland 'if another German were ill-treated in Poland.'"

In this second interview Henderson said he "spoke of the tragedy of war and of his (Hitler's) immense responsibility but his answer was that it would all be England's fault. I refuted this only to learn from him that England was determined to destroy and exterminate Germany. He was, he said, 50 years old: he preferred war now rather than when he would be 55 or 60."

Would Have Been Different

Hitler, Henderson continued, said "it was England who was fighting for lesser races whereas he (Hitler) was fighting only for Germany: the Germans would this time fight to the last man: it would have been different in 1914 if he had been Chancellor then."

During the interview, Henderson reported, Hitler observed that England had forced him into an agreement with Russia. Sir Nevile said Hitler "did not seem enthusiastic over it but added that once he made an agreement it would be for a long period. "The text of the agreement signed * * * confirms this and I shall be surprised if it is not supplemented later by something more than mere non-aggression."

To Britain's suggestion for discussions in a peaceful atmosphere, the Ambassador said Hitler announced his intention to mobilize the German forces and concluded "I have all my life fought for Anglo-German friendship; the attitude adopted by British diplomacy—at any rate up to the present—has, however, convinced me of the futility of such an attempt. Should there be any change in this respect in the future nobody would be happier than I."

Other Sidelights

Other sidelights on Hitler given in Sir Nevile's reports:

"Among various points mentioned by Herr Hitler were: That the only winner of another European war would be Japan; that he was by nature an artist and once the Polish question was settled he would end his life as an artist and not a warmonger."

Hitler said "his army was ready and eager for battle" and the final communication from the German Government—20 minutes after Britain had declared war—said "the German Government and the German people refuse to receive, accept, let alone to fulfill demands in the nature of ultimata made by the British Government."

The British Press Association commented on the publication that "many quarters regard it as the best possible piece of propaganda for the Allied cause because paradoxically it is not propaganda but hard fact."

British Reveal Crisis Papers

Blue Book Contains Account of Hitler's Historic Talk With Henderson.

LONDON, Sept. 21 (A. P.)—The British Government tonight issued a 195-page blue book of documents on the pre-war crisis of 1939 in which Reichsfuehrer Hitler was quoted as pledging he would "settle down" once the Polish question was settled and as warning that Japan would be "the only winner in another European war."

Documents in the book ranged all the way from a first-hand account of Hitler's August bid for an alliance with Great Britain at the expense of Poland to a description by Sir Nevile Henderson, then British Ambassador to Berlin, of Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering's collection of nude drawings.

It also contained Sir Nevile's reports that Hitler repeatedly refused to guarantee that he would negotiate a settlement of the Polish question.

The Ambassador quoted Der Fuehrer as declaring Britain forced him into his pact with Soviet Russia, but "he did not seem enthusiastic over it."

In warning that Japan would be "the only winner in another European war." Sir Nevile said that Hitler told him that after he settled the Polish question he intended to "end his life as an artist and not as a war monger."

Sir Nevile, in telling how Britain sought to arrange direct Polish-German negotiations over their difficulties, said that Hitler repeatedly reiterated that negotiations would be bound to fail.

The envoy said that he then sought to impress upon Der Fuehrer "that an attempt to impose his will on Poland by force would inevitably bring him into direct conflict with us."

The blue book also said that the German reply to the British ultimatum of September 3 stated a refusal "to receive, accept, let alone fulfill, demands in the nature of ultimata made by the British Government."

The German reply also said: "We shall answer any aggressive action on the part of England with the same weapons and in the same form." It declared that Great Britain had rejected proposals from Premier Mussolini which might have saved peace and added: "The British Government therefore bear responsibility for all the unhappiness and misery which have now overtaken and are about to overtake many peoples."

Tells of Historic Meeting.

The book contained the report of Sir Nevile of his interview with Hitler on August 25 when Hitler asked him to fly to London and put his case before the British Government.

Excerpts from the report follow:

"He (Hitler) was absolutely calm and normal and spoke with great earnestness and apparent sincerity.

"Herr Hitler began by saying that he had always and still desired good relations with Great Britain and his conscience compelled him to make this final effort to secure them. It was his last attempt. . . .

"The conversation lasted an hour, my attitude being that the Russian pact in no way altered the standpoint of His Majesty's Government and that I must tell him quite honestly that Britain could not go back on her word to Poland and that I knew his offer would not be considered unless it meant a negotiated settlement of the Polish question. Herr Hitler refused to guarantee this on grounds that polish provocation might at any moment render German intervention to protect German nationals inevitable. I again and again returned to this point but always got the same answer.

Suggested Way Out.

"* * * I told Herr Hitler we could not abandon Poland to her fate, but I made the entirely personal suggestion that M. Beck (Polish Foreign Minister) and Herr Von Ribbentrop (German Foreign Minister) should meet somewhere and discuss the way out which alone might save Europe from war.

"Herr Hitler's reply was that he had invited M. Beck to come and talk the matter over last March only to have his invitation flatly refused.

"The only intervention by Herr von Ribbentrop in this discussion was to confirm this and to say that M. Lipski (Polish Ambassador to Berlin) who had had to convey this message was obliged to put it in other words to soften the abruptness of it.

"When I kept saying that his Majesty's Government could not in my opinion consider his offer unless it meant at the same time a peaceful settlement with Poland, Herr Hitler said:

"'If you think it useless then do not send my offer at all.

Said Only Tokio Would Win.

"Among various points mentioned by Herr Hitler were: That the only winner in another European war would be Japan, that he was by nature an artist, not a politician, and that once the Polish question was settled he would end his life as an artist and not as a warmonger.

"He did not want to turn Germany into nothing but a military barracks and he would only do so if forced to do so; that once the Polish question was settled he himself would settle down; that he had no interest in making Britain break her word to Poland; that he had no wish to be small-minded in any settlement with Poland and that all he required for an agreement with her was a gesture from Britain to indicate that she would not be unreasonable.

Flies to London.

Sir Nevile then flew to London. The document went on to relate Sir Nevile's receipt of Hitler's answer to a British suggestion for direct discussions between the German and Polish governments.

Sir Neville reported that he had told Hitler that the German demands for a Polish plenipotentiary to visit Hitler the following day sounded like an ultimatum.

"After some heated remarks," he said, both Hitler and Ribbentrop assured Sir Nevile they only intended to stress the urgency of the moment.

Sir Nevile in a telegram to British Foreign Secretary Halifax said the interview "was of a stormy character and Herr Hitler was far less reasonable than yesterday.

He kept saying that he wanted British friendship more than anything in the world, but he could not sacrifice Germany's vital interests for it and that for the British Government to make a bargain over such a matter was an unendurable proposition. All my attempts to correct this complete misrepresentation of the case did not seem to impress him. . . .

What He Told Hitler.

"In reply to his reiterated statements that direct negotiations with Poland, even though accepted by him, would be bound to fail, I told him that their success or failure depended on his good will or the reverse and that the choice lay with him. It was, however, my bounden duty to leave him in no doubt that an attempt to impose his will on Poland by force would inevitably bring him into direct conflict with us."

At an earlier interview Sir Nevile reported that Hitler told him that England had forced him into an agreement with Russia.

Sir Nevile added "he did not seem enthusiastic over it but added that once he had made the agreement it woul be for a long period."

Sir Nevile at the time informed Halifax "I shall not be surprised if it (the Russian-German non-aggression pact) is not supplemented later by something more than mere non-aggression."

Sir Nevile at another point relating an interview with Goering, reported:

Says Ribbentrop Aped Hitler.

"He produced with pride drawings of tapestries, mostly representing naked ladies labeled with the names of various virtues, such as goodness, mercy, purity, &c.

"I told him that they looked at least pacific but that I failed to see patience among them."

The Ambassador and Goering also discussed the outcome of a war between Germany and Britain, Goering saying Germany's history was one of ups and downs and that this was an up period.

On his fateful interview with Von Ribbentrop on August 30 Sir Nevile reported:

"His whole demeanor during an unpleasant interview was aping Herr Hitler at his worst."

He also described to Halifax an interview with Goering last May and said he warned the Field Marshal of the consequences of Hitler yielding to advice of his "wild men." Goering, the envoy said, changed the subject.

The position after the German occupation of Czechoslovakia was summarized in speeches by the Prime Minister at Birmingham on the 17th March and by Viscount Halifax, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, in the House of Lords on the 20th March, 1939. Mr. Chamberlain described the German occupation as "in complete disregard of the principles laid down by the German Government itself," and asked: "Is this the end of an old adventure, or is it the beginning of a new? Is this the last attack upon a small State, or is it to be followed by others?" Lord Halifax stated that the action of the German Government was "a complete repudiation of the Munich agreement and a denial of the spirit in which the negotiators of that agreement bound themselves to co-operate for a peaceful settlement."

SUMMARY OF BRITISH BLUE BOOK

London, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Following is an official summary of the British Government's 195-page "Blue Book" on the final exchanges between Britain and Germany in the last few days before Britain's declaration of war Sept. 3:

GERMAN - POLISH RELATIONS FROM JANUARY, 1934, TO JANUARY, 1939

The governing factor in the relations between Germany and Poland during this period was the German-Polish agreement of 26th January, 1934. This agreement, which was valid for years, provided that in no circumstances would either party "proceed to the application of force for the purpose of reaching a decision" in any dispute between them.

In the five years after the signature of this pact Herr Hitler made a number of speeches friendly to Poland. Poland was the "home of a great nationally-conscious people."

21st May, 1935

It would be "unreasonable and impossible," so Herr Hitler acknowledged, "to deny a state of such a size as this any outlet to the sea."

The agreement "has worked out to the advantage of both sides."

30th January, 1937

Deterioration in the European situation resulting from German action against Czechoslovakia on March 15, 1939.

On the 23rd March the Prime Minister stated in the House of Commons that while not wishing "to stand in the way of any reasonable efforts on the part of Germany to expand her export trade," was resolved "by all means in our power" to oppose a "procedure under which independent States are subjected to such pressure under threat of force as to be obliged to yield up their independence."

In a conversation of the 27th May between Sir Nevile Henderson, His Majesty's Ambassador in Berlin, and Field Marshal Goering, the Ambassador warned the Field Marshal that Great Britain and France would be involved in war with Germany if Germany attempted to settle German-Polish differences "by unilateral action such as would compel the Poles to resort to arms to safeguard their independence."

German-Polish Discussions, April-May, 1939

In a speech to the Reichstag on the 28th April, Herr Hitler announced that he had made proposals to the Polish Government that Danzig should return as a free city into the framework of the Reich, and that Germany should receive a route and railway with extra-territorial status through the Corridor in exchange for a 25-year pact of non-aggression and a recognition of the existing German-Polish boundaries as "ultimate." On the same day a memorandum to this effect was given to the Polish Government. The German proposals, which had been presented for the first time on the 21st March, 1939, i. e., less than a week after the German occupation of Prague were now described as "the very minimum which must be demanded from the point of view of German interests."

Herr Hitler also claimed that the German-Polish agreement of January, 1934, was incompatible with the Anglo-Polish promises of mutual assistance and therefore was no longer binding.

On the 5th May the Polish Government replied to the German Government with an explanation of their point of view. The Polish note repeated the counter-proposals which the Polish Government had put forward as a basis for negotiation in reply to the German proposals, and refuted the German argument that the Anglo-Polish guarantee was in any way incompatible with the German-Polish agreement.

The Polish Minister for Foreign Affairs elaborated his country's case in a speech made in the Polish Parliament on the 5th May. The Minister said that the Polish Government regarded the German proposals as a demand for "unilateral concessions." He added that Poland was ready to approach "objectively" and with "their utmost goodwill" any points raised for discussion by the German Government. But that two conditions were necessary if the discussions were to be of real value: (1) peaceful intentions, (2) peaceful methods of procedure.

The Polish memorandum reminded the German Government that no formal reply to the Polish counter-proposals had been received for a month, and that only on the 28th April the Polish Government learned that "the mere fact of the formulation of counter-proposals instead of the acceptance of the verbal German suggestions without alteration or reservation had been regarded by the Reich as a refusal of discussions."

The Anglo-Polish Agreement, March 31, 1939.

On the 31st of March, 1939, the Prime Minister announced the assurance of British and French support to Poland "in the event of any action which clearly threatened Polish independence, and which the Polish Government accordingly considered it vital to resist." An Anglo-Polish communique issued on the 6th of April recorded the assurances of mutual support agreed upon by the British and Polish Governments, "pending the completion of the permanent agreement." The agreement of mutual assistance was signed on the 25th of August. The articles defined the mutual guarantee in case of aggression by a European power.

Developments in Anglo-German relations and in the general British attitude towards the international situation, April-June, 1939.

Anglo-German as well as German-Polish relations deteriorated after the German occupation of Czecho-Slovakia. On the 1st April Herr Hitler made a speech at Wilhelmshaven in which he attacked Great Britain and British policy towards Germany, and attempted a justification of German policy. Herr Hitler spoke in the Reichstag on the 28th April, announcing the denunciation by Germany of the Anglo-German naval agreements. On the 27th April a memorandum to this effect was sent to the British Government. On the 16th June Viscount Halifax again denied to the German Ambassador in London that Great Britain or any other Power was "encircling" Germany. A week later (23rd June) His Majesty's Government sent a reasoned protest to the German Government denying the validity of the German unilateral denunciation of the Anglo-German naval agreements, and also refuting the arguments of fact, i. e., (persistent British hostility to Germany) by which Herr Hitler attempted to justify his denunciation of the naval agreements.

In view of these facts and of the increasing international tension, Viscount Halifax took the opportunity, in a speech at Chatham House on the 29th June, to define at some length the attitude and policy of Great Britain. He explained the reason for the obligations which Great Britain had undertaken in the Continent of Europe. He discussed Anglo-German relations and stated that Great Britain had no wish to isolate Germany, and that, if Germany wished, "a policy of co-operation" could be adopted at once. "British policy rests on twin foundations of purpose. One is determination to resist force. The other is our recognition of the world's desire to get on with constructive work of building peace."

Deterioration in the Local Situation at Danzig, June 3-July 3, 1939.

With the increase of agitation in the Reich, the local situation at Danzig rapidly became worse. On the 3rd June the President of the Danzig Senate made accusations against Polish customs inspectors. The Polish Government on the 10th June replied with a denial of the accusations and a statement of the legal rights of Poland in relation to Danzig. On the 27th June the Polish Vice Minister for Foreign Affairs told Sir H. Kennard, His Majesty's Ambassador in Warsaw, that a free corps was being formed in Danzig, and on the 28th and 30th June, and on the 1st July, Mr. Shepherd, His Majesty's Consul General in Danzig, reported upon military preparations in the city. On the 30th June, in view of the gravity of the situation, Viscount Halifax suggested consultation between the British, French and Polish Governments for the co-ordination of their plans. Meanwhile, the Polish Government maintained a restrained attitude.

British Attitude Towards Developments in Danzig, July 10-15, 1939

On the 10th July, while the situation at Danzig appeared to be becoming critical, the Prime Minister defined the British attitude towards the Danzig problem in a statement in the House of Commons. He pointed out that it was before Poland had received any guarantee from Great Britain that the Polish Government, fearing to be faced with unilateral German action, had replied to the German proposals, by putting forward certain counter proposals, and that the cause of the Polish refusal to accept the German proposals was to be found in the character of these proposals and in the manner and timing of their presentation and not in the British guarantee of Poland.

On the 14th of July Sir Neville Henderson discussed with Baron Von Weizsacker, German State Secretary at the Ministry for Foreign Affairs, a statement by one of the German undersecretaries that "Herr Hitler was convinced that England would never fight over Danzig." Sir Neville Henderson repeated the affirmation already made by His Majesty's Government that, in the event of German aggression, Great Britain would support Poland in resisting force by force.

Temporary Easing in the Danzig Situation, July 19-Aug. 2, 1939

After the tension in Danzig at the end of June there was a temporary lull in the situation. The acting British Consul General at Danzig reported on the 19th July that Herr Forster, the leader of the National Socialist Party in Danzig, had stated, after an interview with Herr Hitler, that "nothing will be done on the German side to provoke a conflict," and that the Danzig question could "wait if necessary until next year or even longer." On the 21st July Viscount Halifax instructed Mr. Norton, His Majesty's Charge d'Affaires at Warsaw, to impress upon the Polish Government the need for caution. M. Beck replied, the 25th July, that the Polish Government was equally anxious for a detente. On the previous day Herr Forster had again stated that "the Danzig question could, if necessary, wait a year or more." On the 31st July and the 2nd August, however, Sir H. Kennard reported less hopefully about the position.

Further Deterioration in the Situation at Danzig, Aug. 4-16, 1939.

On the 4th August, M. Beck told His Majesty's Charge D'Affaires at Warsaw that the Danzig Senate had that day informed Polish customs inspectors at four posts in Danzig that henceforth they would not be allowed to carry out their duties. The Polish Government took "a very serious view" of the step. Similar news came from Mr. Shepherd at Danzig. On the 9th August, Sir H. Kennard reported that the Polish attitude was "firm but studiously moderate." A day later, Sir H. Kennard reported to His Majesty's Government a communication made by the German Government to the Polish Charge D'Affaires at Berlin on the Danzig question, and the Polish reply to this communication. M. Beck drew the attention of Sir H. Kennard to "the very serious nature of the German demarche as it was the first time that the Reich had directly intervened in the dispute between Poland and the Danzig Senate."

The Polish Government in their reply to the German note verbale stated that they would "react to any attempt by the authorities of the Free City which might tend to compromise the rights and interests which Poland possesses there in virtue of her agreements, by the employment of such means and measures as they alone shall think fit to adopt, and will consider any future intervention by the German Government to the detriment of these rights and interests as an act of aggression."

Sir Nevile Henderson on the 15th August discussed with Baron von Weizsacker the deterioration in the Danzig position and pointed out that if the Poles "were compelled by any act of Germany to resort to arms to defend themselves, there was not a shadow of doubt that we would give them our full armed support * * * Germany would be making a tragic mistake if she imagined the contrary."

Baron von Weizsacker himself observed that "the situation in one respect was even worse than last year, as Mr. Chamberlain could not again come out to Germany." Baron von Weizsacker also discounted the character of Russian help to Poland and "thought that the U. S. S. R. would even in the end join in [illegible] the Polish spoils."

Meanwhile, on the 12th August, M. Burckhardt had a conversation with Herr Hitler at Berchtesgaden at the latter's request, in which the question of Danzig and the general European situation were discussed. Viscount Halifax, who still hoped that Herr Hitler might avoid war, advised the Polish Government to make it clear that they remained ready for negotiations over Danzig.

Treatment of the German minority in Poland, Aug. 24-27, 1939.

During the course of the correspondence outlined in this section, Sir H. Kennard reported that the German press campaign about the persecution of the German minority in Poland was a "gross distortion and exaggeration of the facts." On the 26th of August Sir H. Kennard reported frontier incidents which had been provoked by the Germans. They had not caused the Poles to change their "calm and strong attitude of defense." Reports of unfounded German allegations against the Poles were also sent by Sir H. Kennard on the 26th and 27th August.

DEVELOPMENTS LEADING IMMEDIATELY TO THE OUTBREAK OF HOSTILITIES BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND GERMANY.

(Aug. 24—Sept. 3, 1939)

The Prime Minister's letter to Herr Hitler (Aug. 22) and Herr Hitler's interview with Sir Nevile Henderson (Aug. 23).

On the 22nd August, after the publication of the news of Herr Von Ribbentrop's visit to Moscow to sign a non-aggression pact with the USSR the Prime Minister sent a personal letter to Herr Hitler. Mr. Chamberlain once again gave a clear statement of the British obligations to Poland, and stated that "whatever may prove to be the nature of the German-Soviet agreement, it cannot alter Great Britain's obligation." He added that "it has been alleged that, if His Majesty's Government had made their position more clear in 1914, the great catastrophe would have been avoided. Whether or not there is any force in that allegation, His Majesty's Government are resolved that on this occasion there shall be no such tragic misunderstanding."

On the 23rd August Sir Nevile Henderson reported his first interview with Herr Hitler earlier in the day. Herr Hitle was "excitable and uncompromising;" his language was "violent and exaggerated both as regards England and Poland." Herr Hitler observed, in reply to His Majesty's Ambassador's repeated warnings that direct action against Poland would mean war with Great Britain, that "Germany had nothing to lose, and Great Britain much; that he did not desire war, but would not shrink from it if it was necessary and that his people were much more behind him than in September."

Herr Hitler was calmer at a second talk but no less uncompromising. He put the whole responsibility for war on Great Britain, and maintained that Great Britain was "determined to destroy and exterminate Germany. He was, he said, 50 years old; he preferred war now to when he would be 55 or 60." He said that "England was fighting for lesser races, whereas he was fighting only for Germany."

The German reply to the Prime Minister's letter was given to His Majesty's Ambassador on the 23rd August. Herr Hitler stated that the British promise to assist Poland would make no difference to the determination of the Reich to safeguard German interests, and that the precautionary British military measures announced in the Prime Minister's letter of the 22nd August would be followed by the mobilization of the German forces.

Appointment of Herr Forster as head of the State of the Free City of Danzig, Aug. 23.

Herr Forster was declared by decree of the Danzig Senate, on the 23rd August, head of the State (Staatsoberhaupt) of the Free City of Danzig. The Polish Government protested to the Senate against the illegality of this appointment.

(Speeches by the Prime Minister and Viscount Halifax on the Danzig and general German-Polish situation and the determination of Great Britain to honor British obligations to Poland, Aug. 24.)

Attempts by the Polish Government to establish contact with the German Government, Aug. 24.

In view of the increasing tension in Danzig, M. Beck told Sir H. Kennard that he considered the situation "most grave," and that he had asked the Polish Ambassador in Berlin to seek an immediate interview with the German State Secretary. This interview could not, however, be arranged, since Baron von Weizsacker was at Berchtesgaden, but the Polish Ambassador had an interview in the afternoon of the 24th of August with Field Marshal Goering. The field marshal regretted that "his policy of maintaining friendly relations with Poland should have come to nought, and admitted that he no longer had influence to do much in the matter." The field marshal hinted that Poland should abandon her alliance with Great Britain, and left the Polish Government with the impression that Germany was aiming at a free hand in eastern Europe.

Interview Between Sir N. Henderson and Herr Hitler, and German Official Communication" of August 25.

On the 25th August, Herr Hitler sent for Sir Neville Henderson and asked him to fly to London to "put the case" to His Majesty's Government. The "case," which included an offer of friendship with Great Britain, once the Polish question had been solved, was contained in a verbal communication made to His Majesty's Ambassador. During the discussion with Herr Hitler, Sir Neville Henderson stated once more that Great Britain "could not go back on her word to Poland," and would insist upon a settlement by negotiation. Herr Hitler refused to guarantee a negotiated settlement on the ground that "Polish provocation might at any moment render German intervention to protect German nationals inevitable."

Correspondence Between the British and Polish Governments, August 25-27.

On the 25th August, Viscount Halifax suggested to the Polish Government the establishment of a corps of neutral observers, who would enter upon their functions if it were found possible to open negotiations. He also suggested the possibility of negotiating over an exchange of populations. M. Beck raised no objection in principle to either proposal.

Reply of His Majesty's Government, dated August 28, to Herr Hitler's communications of August 23 and 25: Interview of August 28 between Sir Nevile Henderson and Herr Hitler: Speech of the Prime Minister in the House of Commons on August 29.

On the 28th August Viscount Halifax informed the Polish Government through Sir H. Kennard that in the British reply to Herr Hitler "a clear distinction" would be drawn between "the method of reaching agreement on German-Polish differences and the nature of the solution to be arrived at. As to the method, we (His Majesty's Government) wish to express our clear view that direct discussion on equal terms between the parties is the proper means."

The reply of His Majesty's Government, suggesting direct discussion between the German and Polish Governments, was presented to Herr Hitler by Sir N. Henderson on the 28th August. His Majesty's Government stated they had "already received a definite assurance from the Polish Government that they are prepared to enter into discussions," and that, if such direct discussion led, as they hoped, to agreement "the way would be open to the negotiation of that wider and more complete understanding between Great Britain and Germany which both countries desire."

In his interview of the 28th August with Herr Hitler, Sir N. Henderson repeated the British readiness to reach an Anglo-German understanding, "but only on the basis of a peaceful solution of the Polish question." Sir Neville Henderson pointed out to

Herr Hitler that "it lay with him (Herr Hitler) as to whether he preferred a unilateral solution which would mean war as regards Poland, or British friendship." Herr Hitler, who said that "his army was ready and eager for battle," would not answer at once whether he would negotiate directly with Poland.

On the 29th August the Prime Minister once more explained in the House of Commons the British standpoint.

Interview of Aug. 29 between Sir Nevile Henderson and Herr Hitler, and German demand for the arrival of a Polish representative in Berlin by Aug. 30.

At 7:15 p. m. on the 29th August Sir Nevile Henderson received from Herr Hitler the German answer that the German Government was prepared to accept the British proposals for direct German-Polish negotiations, but counted on the arrival of a Polish plenipotentiary by the 30th August. The British Ambassador remarked that the latter demand "sounded like an ultimatum," but, after some heated remarks, both Herr Hitler and Herr Von Ribbentrop assured the Ambassador "that it was only intended to stress the urgency of the moment." The interview was "of a stormy character." Sir N. Henderson thought that Herr Hitler was "far less reasonable" than on the 28th August.

At 4 a. m. on Aug. 30 Sir N. Henderson, on instructions from His Majesty's Government, informed the German Government that it would be "unreasonable to expect the British Government to produce a Polish representative in Berlin" by the 30th August, and that "the German Government must not expect this."

Exchange of correspondence between His Majesty's Government and the Polish Government on Aug. 30.

Sir H. Kennard also reported his opinion that the Polish Government could not be induced to send a representative immediately to Berlin to discuss a settlement on the basis proposed by Herr Hitler. "They would certainly sooner fight and perish rather than submit to such humiliation, especially after the examples of Czecho-Slovakia, Lithuania and Austria." On this same day the Polish Government gave their assurance, in reply to advice from Viscount Halifax, to avoid any kind of provocation, that they had no intention of provoking any incidents, in spite of the provocation at Danzig, which was becoming "more and more intolerable."

Exchange of correspondence between the British and German Governments with regard to the opening of direct German-Polish negotiations (Aug. 30).

At 2:45 p. m. and again at 5:30 p. m. on the 30th August His Majesty's Government instructed Sir N. Henderson to inform the German Government of the representations which the British Government had made in Warsaw for the avoidance of all frontier incidents and urged the German Government to reciprocate. They repeated at 6:50 p. m. in view of the German insistence on the point, that it was "wholly unreasonable" for the German Government to insist upon the arrival in Berlin of a Polish representative with full powers to receive German proposals, and that they could not advise the Polish Government in this sense. They suggested the normal procedure of giving the Polish Ambassador the German proposals for transmission to Warsaw.

At midnight on the 30th-31st August Sir N. Henderson handed to Her von Ribbentrop the full British reply to the German letter of the 29th August.

The reply noted the German Government's acceptance of the British proposal for direct German-Polish discussions, and of the "position of His Majesty's government as to Poland's vital interests and independence." The reply also noted that the German Government accepted "in principle the condition that any settlement should be made the subject of an international guarantee." His Majesty's Government stated that they were informing the Polish Government of the German Government's reply. "The method of contact and arrangements for discussions must obviously be agreed with all urgency between the German and Polish governments," but in His Majesty's Government's view it would be impracticable to establish contact so early as today (I. E., the 30th August).

The British reply was also telegraphed to the Polish Government, and Viscount Halifax hoped that "provided the method and general arrangement for discussion can be satisfactorily agreed," the Polish Government, which had authorized His Majesty's Government to say that they were prepared to enter into direct discussions, would be ready to do so without delay.

In his interview at midnight the 30th-31st August with Herr Von Ribbentrop, Sir N. Henderson suggested that the German Government should adopt the normal procedure of making contact with the Polish Government, i. e., that when the German proposals were ready the Polish Ambassador should be invited to call and to receive these proposals "for transmission to his government with a view to the immediate opening of negotiations."

"Herr Von Ribbentrop's reply was to produce a lengthy document which he read out in German aloud at top speed." When His Majesty's Ambassador asked for the text of the proposals in the document, he was told that it was "now too late" as the Polish representative had not arrived in Berlin by midnight (the 30-31st August). Sir N. Henderson described this procedure as an "ultimatum," in spite of the assurances previously given by the German Government. He asked why Herr von Ribbentrop could not adopt the normal procedure, give him a copy of the proposals, and ask the Polish Ambassador to call on him (Herr Von Ribbentrop) to receive them. "In the most violent terms Herr Von Ribbentrop said that he would never ask the Polish Ambassador to visit him," though he hinted that it might be different if the Polish Ambassador asked for an interview.

Exchange of correspondence between the British and Polish Governments on August 31 with regard to direct negotiations.

On hearing of the reply of His Majesty's Government to the German Government on the subject of direct German-Polish negotiations, M. Beck said that he would do "everything possible to facilitate the efforts of His Majesty's Government" by midday on the 31st August. Later on the 31st August, Viscount Halifax advised the Polish Government immediately to instruct the Polish Ambassador in Berlin to say that he was ready to transmit to his Government any proposals made by the German Government so that they (the Polish Government) "may at once consider them and make suggestions for early discussions."

At 6:30 p. m. the 31st August Sir H. Kennard communicated to London the formal Polish confirmation of the readiness of the Polish Government to enter into direct discussions with the German Government on the basis proposed by Great Britain. M. Beck said that "he would now instruct M. Lipski (Polish Ambassador in Berlin) to seek an interview either with the (German) Minister for Foreign Affairs or the State Secretary "in order to establish contact for the initiation of direct discussions, but that the Polish Ambassador would not be authorized to receive a document containing the German proposals, since, "in view of past experience, it might be accompanied by some sort of ultimatum." In M. Beck's view "it was essential that contact should be made in the first instance," for the discussion of details "as to where, with whom, and on what basis negotiations should be commenced."

German proposals for German-Polish settlement, presented to the British Ambassador in Berlin at 8:15 p. m. on Aug. 31, and German invasion of Poland on Sept. 1.

It was not until 9:15 p. m. on the 31st August that the German Government gave Sir N. Henderson a copy of their proposals, which had been read to him so rapidly by Herr von Ribbentrop on the previous night. The German Government stated that the note contianed the 16 points of their proposed settlement, but that, as the Polish plenipotentiary, with powers "not only to discuss but to conduct and conclude negotiations," had not arrived in Berlin they regarded their proposals as "to all intents and purposes rejected."

At 11 p. m., Viscount Halifax telephoned instructions to Sir N. Henderson to inform the German Government that the Polish Government were taking steps to establish contact with them through the Polish Ambassador in Berlin. At 9 p. m. (British summer time) the German Government had, however, broadcast their proposals together with the statement that they regarded them as having been rejected. They had, however, never been communicated to the Polish Government and all means of communication between the Polish Ambassador in Berlin and the Polish Government had been cut off.

As a final attempt to meet the German demands Viscount Halifax telegraphed to Sir H. Kennard the night of Aug. 31-Sept. 1 his view that the Polish Ambassador in Berlin might receive a document for transmission to his Government and might say that "(A) If it contained anything like an ultimatum, the Polish Government would certainly be unable to discuss on such a basis; and (B) that in any case, in the view of the Polish Government, questions to the venue of the negotiations, the basis on which they should be held, and the persons to take part in them, must be discussed and decided between the two Governments."

In answer to this telegram, Sir H. Kennard replied on the first of September that M. Lipski "had already called on the German Minister at 6:30 p. m. on the 31st of August." "In view of this fact, which was followed by the German invasion of Poland at dawn today (1st September) it was clearly useless for me to take the action suggested."

These facts were announced to the House of Commons by the Premier on the 1st September. A further "explanatory note, upon the actual course of events," reprinted from White Paper (Misc. No. 8, 1939,) should be read in connection with Herr Hitler's version of events as given in his speech on the 1st September to the Reichstag and in his proclamation to the German army.

Reunion of Danzig with the Reich, Sept. 1

On the 1st September, Herr Forster announced in a proclamation to the people of Danzig reunion with the Reich. He telegraphed an account of his action to Herr Hitler, who replied at once accepting the reunion and ratifying the so-called legal act by which it was brought about.

Action taken by His Majesty's Government after the receipt of news of the German attack on Poland, Sept. 1-3.

On the 1st September, after His Majesty's Government had received news of the German invasion of Poland, Viscount Halifax instructed Sir N. Henderson to inform the German Government that the governments of the United Kingdom and France considered that the German action had "created conditions (viz., an aggressive act of force against Poland, threatening the independence of Poland) which call for the implementation by the governments of the United Kingdom and France of the undertaking to Poland to come to her assistance." Unless the German Government suspended all aggressive action against Poland, and promptly withdrew their forces from Polish territory, His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom would "without hesitation fulfil their obligations to Poland." Sir N. Henderson was authorized to explain, if asked, that this communication was "in the nature of a warning," and was "not to be considered as an ultimatum," but Viscount Halifax added, for Sir N. Henderson's own information, that, "if the German reply is unsatisfactory, the next stage will be either an ultimatum with time-limit or an immediate declaration of war."

On the night of the 1st-2nd September Sir N. Henderson reported that he had made the necessary communication to Herr Von Ribbentrop at 9:30 p. m. and had asked for an immediate answer. Herr Von Ribbentrop replied that he would submit the communication to Herr Hitler. Meanwhile, on the 1st September, the Polish Government announced to His Majesty's Government that, although the Polish Ambassador in Berlin had seen Herr Von Ribbentrop at 6:30 p. m. on the 31st August, and had expressed the readiness of the Polish Government to enter into direct negotiations, Polish territory had been invaded, and the Polish Government had therefore been compelled to break off relations with Germany. At 10:30 a. m. on the 1st September Viscount Halifax sent for the German Charge D'Affaires in London, drew his attention to the reports which had reached His Majesty's Government about German action against Poland and informed him that these reports "created a very serious situation."

The Prime Minister on the 2nd September made a statement in the House of Commons, in the course of which he said that no answer had been received to the message sent to the German Government on the 1st September, requesting the cessation of German aggression and the withdrawal of German troops from Poland.

The Prime Minister also informed the House of proposals put forward by the Italian Government for a cessation of hostilities, but made it clear that His Majesty's Government could not take part in any conference unless German aggression ceased and German troops were withdrawn from Poland. On the 3rd September Sir N. Henderson was instructed to ask for an interview at 9 a. m. with Herr Von Ribbentrop and to inform him that, although His Majesty's Government had warned the German Government of the results which would follow if Germany did not suspend all aggressive action against Poland, no answer had been received from the German Government. His Majesty's Government therefore stated that unless satisfactory assurances were received from the German Government not later than 11 a. m. a state of war would exist between the United Kingdom and Germany.

At 11:20 a. m. on the 3rd September the German Government replied with a statement of their case, concluding with the suggestion that His Majesty's Government desired the destruction of the German people, and with the words, "We shall answer any aggressive action on the part of England with the same weapons and in the same form." Shortly afterwards the Prime Minister announced in the House of Commons that Great Britain was at war with Germany. This section of the documents concludes with Herr Hitler's proclamations of the 3d September to the German people and the German army.

DALADIER RENEWS PLEDGE TO BATTLE HITLER TO A FINISH

...nies Stiffen Lines ...xpected Onslaught ...ong West...

PARIS, Sept. 21 (A. P.).—Premier Daladier, in a broadcast to the world tonight on France's determination not to abandon her fight against Adolf Hitler, associated the United States with his own country and with Great Britain in the failure to prevent "the German destruction of Poland."

The French Premier interrupted a world broadcast by President Roosevelt on American neutrality to make an appeal to the world, in which he declared:

"The generous efforts of the highest moral and political authorities of the United States and Europe have been checked. The Reich's world terror which is now sweeping Poland was decided upon in advance."

France to Push War.

The Premier declared that France never would abandon her fight until Hitler's efforts "to dominate the world" had been crushed by a "complete victory" over the Nazi forces.

The Premier added that France never would make peace until peace was established on a "solid,

Herr Hitler that "it lay with him (Herr Hitler) as to whether he preferred a unilateral solution which would mean war as regards Poland, or British friendship." Herr Hitler, who said that "his army was ready and eager for battle," would not answer at once whether he would negotiate directly with Poland.

On the 29th August the Prime Minister once more explained in the House of Commons the British standpoint.

Interview of Aug. 29 between Sir Nevile Henderson and Herr Hitler, and German demand for the arrival of a Polish representative in Berlin by Aug. 30.

At 7:15 p. m. on the 29th August Sir Nevile Henderson received from Herr Hitler the German answer that the German Government was prepared to accept the British proposals for direct German-Polish negotiations, but counted on the arrival of a Polish plenipotentiary by the 30th August. Henderson suggested that the German Government should adopt the normal procedure of making contact with the Polish Government, i. e., that when the German proposals were ready the Polish Ambassador should be invited to call and to receive these proposals "for transmission to his government with a view to the immediate opening of negotiations."

"Herr Von Ribbentrop's reply was to produce a lengthy document which he read out in German aloud at top speed." When His Majesty's Ambassador asked for the text of the proposals in the document, he was told that it was "now too late" as the Polish representative had not arrived in Berlin by midnight (the 30-31st August). Sir N. Henderson described this procedure as an "ultimatum," in spite of the assurances previously given by the German Government. He asked why Herr von Ribbentrop could not adopt the normal procedure, give him a copy of the proposals, and ask the Polish Ambassador to call on him (Herr Von Ribbentrop) to receive them. "In the most violent terms Herr Von Ribbentrop said that he would never ask the Polish Ambassador to visit him," though he hinted that it might be different if the Polish Ambassador asked for an interview.

Exchange of correspondence between the British and Polish Governments on August 31 with regard to direct negotiations.

On hearing of the reply of His Majesty's Government to the German Government on the subject of direct German-Polish negotiations, M. Beck said that he would do "everything possible to facilitate the efforts of His Majesty's Government" by midday on the 31st August. Later on the 31st August, Viscount Halifax advised the Polish Government immediately to instruct the Polish Ambassador in Berlin to say that he was ready to transmit to his Government any proposals made by the German Government so that they (the Polish Government) "may at once consider them and make suggestions for early discussions."

At 6:30 p. m. the 31st August Sir H. Kennard communicated to London the formal Polish confirmation of the readiness of the Polish Government to enter into direct discussions with the German Government on the basis proposed by Great Britain. M. Beck said that "he would now instruct M. Lipski (Polish Ambassador in Berlin) to seek an interview either with the (German) Minister for Foreign Affairs or the State Secretary "in order to establish contact for the initiation of direct discussions, but that the Polish Ambassador would not be authorized to receive a document containing the German proposals, since, "in view of past experience, it might be accompanied by some sort of ultimatum." In M. Beck's view "it was essential that contact should be made in the first instance," for the discussion of details "as to where, with whom, and on what basis negotiations should be commenced."

German proposals for German-Polish settlement, presented to the British Ambassador in Berlin at 8:15 p. m. on Aug. 31, and German invasion of Poland on Sept. 1.

It was not until 9:15 p. m. on the 31st August that the German Government gave Sir N. Henderson a copy of their proposals, which had been read to him so rapidly by Herr von Ribbentrop on the previous night. The German Government stated that the note contianed the 16 points of their proposed settlement, but that, as the Polish plenipotentiary, with powers "not only to discuss but to conduct and conclude negotiations," had not arrived in Berlin they regarded their proposals as "to all intents and purposes rejected."

At 11 p. m., Viscount Halifax telephoned instructions to Sir N. Henderson to inform the German Government that the Polish Government were taking steps to establish contact with them through the Polish Ambassador in Berlin. At 9 p. m. (British summer time) the German Government had, however, broadcast their proposals together with the statement that they regarded them as having been rejected. They had, however, never been communicated to the Polish Government and all means of communication between the Polish Ambassador in Berlin and the Polish Government had been cut off.

As a final attempt to meet the German demands Viscount Halifax telegraphed to Sir H. Kennard the night of Aug. 31-Sept. 1 his view that the Polish Ambassador in Berlin might receive a document for transmission to his Government and might say that "(A) If it contained anything like an ultimatum, the Polish Government would certainly be unable to discuss on such a basis; and (B) that in any case, in the view of the Polish Government, questions to the venue of the negotiations, the basis on which they should be held, and the persons to take part in them, must be discussed and decided between the two Governments."

In answer to this telegram, Sir H. Kennard replied on the first of September that M. Lipski "had already called on the German Minister at 6:30 p. m. on the 31st of August." "In view of this fact, which was followed by the German invasion of Poland at dawn today (1st September) it was clearly useless for me to take the action suggested."

These facts were announced to the House of Commons by the Premier on the 1st September. A further "explanatory note, upon the actual course of events," reprinted from White Paper (Misc. No. 8, 1939,) should be read in connection with Herr Hitler's version of events as given in his speech on the 1st September to the Reichstag and in his proclamation to the German army.

Reunion of Danzig with the Reich, Sept. 1.

On the 1st September, Herr Forster announced in a proclamation to the people of Danzig reunion with the Reich. He telegraphed an account of his action to Herr Hitler, who replied at once accepting the reunion and ratifying the so-called legal act by which it was brought about.

Action taken by His Majesty's Government after the receipt of news of the German attack on Poland, Sept. 1-3.

On the 1st September, after His Majesty's Government had received news of the German invasion of Poland, Viscount Halifax instructed Sir N. Henderson to inform the German Government that the governments of the United Kingdom and France considered that the German action had "created conditions (viz., an aggressive act of force against Poland, threatening the independence of Poland) which call for the implementation by the governments of the United Kingdom and France of the undertaking to Poland to come to her assistance." Unless the German Government suspended all aggressive action against Poland, and promptly withdrew their forces from Polish territory, His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom would "without hesitation fulfil their obligations to Poland." Sir N. Henderson was authorized to explain, if asked, that this communication was "in the nature of a warning," and was "not to be considered as an ultimatum," but Viscount Halifax added, for Sir N. Henderson's own information, that, "if the German reply is unsatisfactory, the next stage will be either an ultimatum with time-limit or an immediate declaration of war."

On the night of the 1st-2nd September Sir N. Henderson reported that he had made the necessary communication to Herr Von Ribbentrop at 9:30 p. m. and had asked for an immediate answer. Herr Von Ribbentrop replied that he would submit the communication to Herr Hitler. Meanwhile, on the 1st September, the Polish Government announced to His Majesty's Government that, although the Polish Ambassador in Berlin had seen Herr Von Ribbentrop at 6:30 p. m. on the 31st August, and had expressed the readiness of the Polish Government to enter into direct negotiations, Polish territory had been invaded, and the Polish Government had therefore been compelled to break off relations with Germany. At 10:30 a. m. on the 1st September Viscount Halifax sent for the German Charge D'Affaires in London, drew his attention to the reports which had reached His Majesty's Government about German action against Poland and informed him that these reports "created a very serious situation."

The Prime Minister on the 2nd September made a statement in the House of Commons, in the course of which he said that no answer had been received to the message sent to the German Government on the 1st September, requesting the cessation of German aggression and the withdrawal of German troops from Poland.

The Prime Minister also informed the House of proposals put forward by the Italian Government for a cessation of hostilities, but made it clear that His Majesty's Government could not take part in any conference unless German aggression ceased and German troops were withdrawn from Poland. On the 3rd September Sir N. Henderson was instructed to ask for an interview at 9 a. m. with Herr Von Ribbentrop and to inform him that, although His Majesty's Government had warned the German Government of the results which would follow if Germany did not suspend all aggressive action against Poland, no answer had been received from the German Government. His Majesty's Government therefore stated that unless satisfactory assurances were received from the German Government not later than 11 a. m. a state of war would exist between the United Kingdom and Germany.

At 11:20 a. m. on the 3rd September the German Government replied with a statement of their case, concluding with the suggestion that His Majesty's Government desired the destruction of the German people, and with the words, "We shall answer any aggressive action on the part of England with the same weapons and in the same form." Shortly afterwards the Prime Minister announced in the House of Commons that Great Britain was at war with Germany. This section of the documents concludes with Herr Hitler's proclamations of the 3d September to the German people and the German army.

DALADIER RENEWS PLEDGE TO BATTLE HITLER TO A FINISH

Both Armies Stiffen Lines for Expected Onslaught along West Front

PARIS, Sept. 21 (A. P.).—Premier Daladier, in a broadcast to the world tonight on France's determination not to abandon her fight against Adolf Hitler, associated the United States with his own country and with Great Britain in the failure to prevent "the German destruction of Poland."

The French Premier interrupted a world broadcast by President Roosevelt on American neutrality to make an appeal to the world, in which he declared:

"The generous efforts of the highest moral and political authorities of the United States and Europe have been checked. The Reich's world terror which is now sweeping Poland was decided upon in advance."

France to Push War.

The Premier declared that France never would abandon her fight until Hitler's efforts "to dominate the world" had been crushed by a "complete victory" over the Nazi forces.

The Premier added that France never would make peace until peace was established on a "solid, lasting basis."

30.24-3513

In a highly emotional appeal, he urged the nation to fight to the last man against "the German menace" which wants to "destroy France like it destroyed Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland."

When the Premier had finished his fifteen-minute speech, delivered from his private office at the War Ministry, all French stations went silent for a moment. Then a military band crashed into the strains of the French national anthem.

Follows Council of War.

M. Daladier's declaration of war to the death against Hitler followed a dramatic Cabinet meeting yesterday and a series of conferences with British leaders, who flew to France to emphasize the French and British refusal to treat with Hitler merely because he had succeeded in a conquest of Poland.

M. Daladier minced no words in describing the reasons for the war. He said that despite Hitler's promises there were no German claims against France, this was a war to prevent the destruction of the French nation. Hitler, he said, had made similar promises after each of his conquests. The truth of the matter, Daladier declared, was that "Hitler wants to destroy France."

Meanwhile the French night communique reported "a calm day all along the front."

"Activity of the enemy's artillery south of Saarbruecken," it continued.

"Our reconnaissance missions were carried out despite bad weather and enemy fire."

German Patrols Engaged.

War dispatches still said that the French army was threatening the approaches to Zweibruecken, Germany, at the upper end of the Blies River valley, and that the French advance units had fought numerous pitched battles with German patrols in the Zweibruecken zone and near Saarbruecken, another German city further west, which the French were attempting to surround.

Zweibruecken, about sixteen miles from Saarbruecken, lies five miles inside the German border and Saarbruecken two miles.

These reports indicated that each side was seeking prisoners in the gun-bristling zone between the northern reaches of the Maginot and Siegfried lines from whom to pry secrets of strategy and troop dispositions.

Major Battle Still Due.

The War Ministry's communique for this morning said: "There was local activity by advance guards and artillery actions on both sides."

The French expected a major German offensive soon on the western front as a sequel to Germany's successful onslaught on Poland.

French and German aviation clashed yesterday in a series of battles for mastery of the air over the Siegfried and Maginot fortresses.

While land patrols thrust at the French behind a curtain of artillery fire, German planes took off apparently with the double purpose of strafing the French positions and enticing French airmen into combat. A Messerschmidt fighter was reported shot down behind the French line by defending pursuit planes.

Military dispatches today reported French and British air pilots had brought down an undetermined number of German planes in the past few days in a series of victorious dog fights with German flyers over the western front.

French communiques, military persons said, have been limited only to those enemy planes which have fallen behind the French lines. They said that the number of Germans who crashed was known to be "substantially more."

These persons also said it was "possible" that some French planes in the air battles might have been those manufactured by American aircraft firms and purchased by France.

[A German High Command communique issued in Berlin today reported that eight enemy warplanes and three captive balloons had been shot down on the western front.]

The British and French staffs were in constant contact, apparently studying a threat which many observers saw in the reported massing of German troops at Aachen, Germany, near the Belgian and the Dutch borders. It was from the Aachen sector that the Germans swept across Belgium and into northern France in a lightning attempt to grab all the channel ports and reach Paris in 1914.

Col.-Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, the German chief of staff, was reported to have left the Polish front for the west and the Germans were said to have concentrated from 1,500 to 2,000 heavy bombing planes near Aachen.

Yesterday's flying visit to France of the British War Secretary, Leslie Hore-Belisha, and the joint Franco-British staff talks were believed here to be results of the Aachen situation.

Aachen, about eighty-five miles north of the present fighting zone and 270 airline miles from London, was pictured as a key point of the German line facing neutral Belgium and The Netherlands. The latest advices from Holland said that captive balloons—apparently an aerial "barrage"—were strung out at intervals for 100 miles north of Aachen, their positions shifted each night.

The Aachen concentration was regarded by military observers as meaning one of three things—that a petition of the 1914 strategy might be attempted, that Aachen had merely become a transfer point for the movement of troops into the Siegfried Line, or that the Germans might try a "counter-blockade" against British and French ports through air attacks in conjunction with submarine operations in the English Channel.

The French appeared more concerned with the third possibility, on the ground that Germany was beginning to feel the pinch of the British naval blockade and might be on the verge of a major retaliatory blow.

Three major land routes pass through the Aachen district, paralleling each other until they reach the Meuse River where on the north they reach Liege, Belgium. It was there in 1914 that the Kaiser Wilhelm's great offensive started.

Aachen could also become a springboard for a drive by way of the Netherlands. The form of warfare henceforth on the western front undoubtedly depended on developments at Aachen.

One War Plan Awry.

On the Rhine frontier, the southern half of the Franco-German border, there was little activity—not even artillery action, according to war dispatches.

Many observers recalled that before the war started allied military experts favored a "defensive" war against Germany on land, while counting on the Anglo-French naval forces to strangle Germany economically. These experts favored the use of planes, warships and radio microphones for the "heavy work" against the Nazis over a long period, rather than the risk of millions of lives in a big land offensive.

Unclarified Russo-German relations, however, have since become the big question mark. The theory of a "defensive" war had been held in a belief that Russia would be on the allied side.

Whether Russia would or could keep Germany supplied with raw materials to fight a long war has now become a major consideration of Allied strategy.

The French point out that the Russian forces in Poland are occupying regions along the Rumanian and Hungarian frontiers and they wondered whether Russia would bar Germany from pressure on Rumania. At least, said the French, Russia now is in a position to exact a high price for co-operation with Germany in the Danubian Basin.

DALADIER AVERS HITLER HAS AIMS OF TAKING FRANCE

Says Maps Showing Nation Amputated Have Already Been Printed by Nazis.

PROMISES FINISH FIGHT

Accuses Russia and Germany of Deciding to Partition Poland Before War Started

Paris, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Premier Edouard Daladier told the world tonight that Adolf Hitler checked the peace efforts of the "highest moral and political" authorities of the United States at the same time he spurned those of the European nations now fighting him.

The French Premier's world broadcast declaring France would fight until "complete victory" crushed Hitler and Germany's dream of "world domination" was timed to coincide with President Roosevelt's message to Congress proposing repeal of the arms embargo.

(Daladier stressed the importance of a "complete victory" with the crushing of Hitlerism because "Germany has already prepared the dismemberment of France." He said "maps showing France amputated have already been printed" and accused Germany of "seeking to incite treason in Alsace and Brittany.")

As Daladier spoke, the French on the western front were reported strengthening their lines in German territory to withstand the shock of an offensive the Germans were believed preparing, now that the conquest of Poland, with the aid of Russian invasion, seemed complete.

Accuses Russia

Daladier said frankly that the reason President Roosevelt's appeals for peace failed was that a secret agreement on the partition of Poland had been concluded between Russia and Germany.

Until now Daladier, in an effort to avoid an open break with the Soviets, carefully had withheld official statements on the Russian invasion of Poland.

Showing the strain of the war and more sad-faced than usual, Daladier in an emotional appeal shouted to the French that "the destruction of Poland had been resolved secretly in advance."

In a reference to the abruptly broken negotiations between Russia, Britain and France which he once referred to as a "stop Hitler" move, the French Premier declared that "Poland's destruction was being prepared by arms and secret treaties even while there was a pretense of negotiations."

Cites Secret Treaty.

The Russian Army, Daladier said, struck Poland in the rear "as the result of a secret treaty."

"In reality," said Daladier, who is his own foreign minister, "an accord for the dismemberment of Poland was concluded between Germany and the U. S. S. R. on August 23.

"Hitler had pretended that he wanted only Danzig, a plebiscite for the Corridor, an autostrade (automobile road across the Polish Corridor)."

In an urgent appeal Daladier declared France would not make peace with Germany until a "solid, lasting basis" could be established.

Warning the nation against the "German menace," he said it wanted to "destroy France like it destroyed Austria, Czechoslovakia and Poland."

War for Protection

Despite Hitler's promises Germany wanted nothing from France, he said, the truth was that "Hitler wants to destroy France" and that the war was one to prevent the death of the French nation.

The French Premier's assertions put a vigorous punctuation to similar assertions from British Statesmen that the two countries did not propose to treat with Hitler simply because he had been successful in pushing his armies through Poland.

The speech followed a series of dramatic conferences with British leaders who flew to France in recent days to discuss further conduct of the war.

Front Statemated

The sudden stalemate which developed on the Western front where the French had been advancing until Russian intervention freed German divisions for operations in the west was reflected throughout Daladier's speech.

Tonight's official French communique told of "a calm day along the front and activity of the enemy's artillery south of Saarbruecken. Our reconnaissance missions were carried out despite bad weather and enemy fire."

In a series of sharp local actions French troops apparently advanced their lines closer to two important German cities, Saarbruecken and Zweibruecken, in the centre of the western front's northern flank.

French raiding parties were skirmishing with German patrols on all sectors of the 100-mile active front from the Luxembourg border on the north to the forest known as Bienwald where the Rhine ceases to form a common frontier between France and Germany.

No Heavy Fighting

There seemed to be no heavy fighting anywhere on the front. Both armies were jockeying for position in light of the new situation created by the Russian advance into Poland, permitting the Nazis to free large numbers of troops for action against France and Britain in the west.

German scouting operations of the last four days east of Saarbruecken obviously have been hampering French efforts to consolidate their positions. To offset this, French troops holding outposts now are reacting more vigorously.

They were reported not only to have curtailed results of German raids, but to have pushed their own lines slightly forward.

The most important result of this was not ground gained but that it gave the French main lines, which were being reinforced on the German side of the frontier, more "breathing space."

It meant that, should a German attack come, the Nazis would have to break through advance French positions organized in depth to absorb a larger percentage of shock before fighting could be carried to the main French positions.

Equally important, it meant that these main trenches could be deepened and better fortified without the constant danger of raiding parties. French reinforcements could be moved up in greater safety since they would be farther from German guns.

Daladier's Appeal to France

PARIS, Sept. 21 (AP).—The text of Premier Edouard Daladier's radio address to the nation today follows:

We have been at war twenty days. Each night I wish that I might speak with you directly to tell you the diplomatic and military situation and give you the reasons.

I have confidence in you, for I think of you unceasingly—young men who are fighting, anxious but stoic Frenchwomen whose thoughts are only love for your son, your husband or your fiance.

I am not the leader of fanatic masses. I am charged with direction of a nation of free men, a nation peaceful and humane, and in the hard duties which are mine I am still a man.

Several days ago I visted our front. I walked along the positions of one of our armies which has penetrated several kilometers in German territory. I was able to see for myself the worth of our commanders, who are profiting from the experience of the last war and have known how to avoid unconsidered and murederous offensives. I have seen with what calm courage and with what renewed vigor our troops were inspired.

Among them I felt myself to be their comrade of yesterday and of today. I watched them with tenderness and with pride.

They know why they are fighting. They are fighting because Germany has forced war on us, because for the last three years the devouring German ambition has not left Europe a single secure day.

They want to end this scheme of incessant menaces and alarms which has forced us to mobilize three times in a single year, snatching the farmer from his soil, paralyzing economic life and disorganizing homes.

They are fighting because they do not want France to be destroyed beneath a regime of terror and moral degradation which Hitler's domination already has carried to reign over so many betrayed and martyred peoples. This reign of terror has existed for years in Germany. It spread over Austria and over Czecho-Slovakia. Today it is spreading over Poland.

All the efforts we carried out to the end to save peace, all the generations of the highest moral and political authorities in Europe and the United States, the English effort, the initiative of the Italian government—all these could result only in defeat because the destruction of Poland was secretly resolved in advance.

This destruction was prepared by arms and secret treaties even while there was a pretense at negotiation. And at the chosen hour, when their accomplices were assured, a storm of steel and fire was rained on Poland.

But noble Poland did not heal-tate to give us an example of her martyrdom. She added the lesson of her heroism. After the first defeats, inevitable since Poland had not yet completed her mobilization, when she was abruptly seized by the throat, after retreats before forces superior in number and war material Polish soldiers dug in on the soil of their Fatherland.

They were succeeding in re-establishing a less extended front, but at the moment when infantry and cavalry were fighting at Kutno against motorized German divisions, when enemy advance guards were being halted before Lwow, when encircled Warsaw was shattering all attacks, the Red Army entered Poland in its turn as a result of a secret pact. In reality, since Aug. 23 an accord had been concluded between Germany and the Soviet Union for the dismemberment of Poland.

Mr. Hitler has pretended that he wanted only Danzig, plebiscite for the Corridor, an autostrade. He still broadcast his assurances even while he had in his hands the precious agreement by which Germany and Russia were to partition their living prey.

What honest man in no matter what country in the world could still believe in the word of those who today declare themselves satisfied or peaceful, now that they are covered with blood? What Frenchman could have faith in their promises today, since for years all engagements have been violated and all signatures torn up?

On March 17, 1934, Mr. Hitler declared the German government would not question the validity of the Treaty of Locarno. On the seventh of March, 1936, he tore up that treaty and remilitarized the Rhineland. So be it, was the reaction. The Rhineland is German land.

On the twenty-first of March, 1935, he affirmed to the Reichstag: "Germany has neither the intention nor the wish to intervene in Austrian internal politics, to annex Austria." On March 13, 1938, he annexed Austria by force. So be it, was the reaction. Austria is a country of Germanic race and tongue.

On the 26th of September, 1938, he said: "Sudeten Germans are the last of the problems which must be solved. I assure Mr. Chamberlain that once this problem is solved there will be no more territorial problems."

On the 29th of September, 1938, at the Munich conference, he told us many times that he never thought of annexing the Czechs, whom he would not want at any price because he wanted to maintain the purity of the German race intact. He demanded the Sudetenland; a majority of the people were of the German race and tongue. So be it, was the reaction.

But on the 13th of March, 1939, Prague was occupied, Bohemia was invaded and all Czecho-Slovakia reduced to slavery.

On the 20th of September, 1938, Mr. Hitler again said: Germany has decided and she has promised to consider the frontiers of Poland as irrevocable."

These are the reasons why, when Mr. Hitler tells us today after destroying Poland that he asks for nothing more, when he declares he wants nothing from France and will respect her frontiers, every Frenchman knows he will not hesitate if he can destroy France as he destroyed Austria, as he destroyed Czecho-Slovakia, as he seeks to destroy Poland.

"Mein Kampf" has warned us. Did he not write in it that it was necessary "to isolate France and defeat her"?

Germany has tried to develop within our country propaganda looking to the dismemberment of our country. She sought with money to stimulate pretended autonomist movements to separate our provinces one from another.

She printed maps showing our country amputated and split apart. She disguised Germans as Alsatians to parade in her congresses and celebrations. She sought with gold to find traitors in Brittany or Alsace. She does not change her methods. She hunted everywhere for a Seyss-Inquart (Austrian Chancellor who replaced Kurt Schuschnigg) to betray his country; she hoped to find a Hacha (Czecho-Slovak President) to sign the downfall and consecrate the servitude.

But all France was ready. Among us there are no traitors, but one people, unanimous, courageous and resolved, who have written on their banners: Liberty or death.

After so many lies and so many denials, German propaganda is left the last hope: That of splitting the forces which are going to shatter her march toward world domination. It is clear that German propaganda now has no more than two objectives. It wants to separate France from England. It wants to split the French among themselves.

But when the French listen to enemy broadcasts which tell them this war is England's war they reply: No, it's Hitler's war. How could one make Frenchmen who for months have felt the peril lieve they are fighting England's war?

German propaganda is wrong not to change its methods when it goes beyond the territory of the Reich. Frenchmen know from experience as well as sentiment the value of British friendship. They see the British navy chasing submarines, British planes fighting in our skies and British sons no longer volunteers but soldiers of duty joining our sons at French frontiers. They know as well that the same ideal of liberty and human dignity beats in the hearts of Englishmen and Frenchmen, and hundreds of millions of men who in their immense empires have devoted all their forces to a common cause.

Hitler's radio can repeat this theme to infinity. Not a single Frenchman will be his dupe.

Even more ridiculous is the hope of turning Frenchmen against their motherland. Goebbels or his successor can broadcast over his radio the voices of women who pretend to speak for French motherhood. These hirelings can read this appeal, which is but an insult to the sorrow of true mothers.

A dishonored Frenchman and a traitor to his country may be moved to pity in German studios about the destiny of our soldiers. None of you will be tricked into these stupid paths. This blackmail of the most noble sentiments can only inspire your disgust and reaffirm your will. For German propaganda can lie about everything, but there is one thing about which it cannot deceive you—your love for France.

Love of France has re-created a miracle which will assure our safety each time we are in peril. In testing of our national fellowship, each day it proves itself more ardent, more brotherly.

We wage war because we do not wish France to be enslaved. For her safety we will use all our forces. We will continue to take every measure in the interior to order discipline and economy so that the entire country shares in the common effort.

We will not permit certain individuals to enrich themselves while others give their lifeblood. We are calm and resolved. We are not haunted like our enemies by fear of a long war. We think only of one thing: Complete victory. That victory we will consider won when we can give France the security which Hitler's projects destroyed for three years.

The test is hard, but France has conquered greater perils Nothing has ever been able to destroy her. Always there comes the hour when moral forces which form the armor plate of great and peaceful nations can give them victory.

These moral forces inspire all our armies, which danger has not caught unawares. They are material means which permit us to resist and conquer. They are courage. They are science. They growing across their frontiers bear faith. They are fighting for independence and security of our motherland and to finish forever with German efforts at domination.

France has not taken up arms to burn towns, murder women and children and torture defenseless men. She has taken up arms for a just and humane cause.

It is for that reason that victory will be hers.

HERRIOT SPEAKS ON U. S. NEUTRALITY

Implies France Looks for Change in Our Law.

PARIS, Sept. 21 (A. P.).—France's elder statesman, Edouard Herriot, told the American Club of Paris today that he "awaits with confidence" America's judgment on the European war.

The former Premier, now President of the Chamber of Deputies, implied in his luncheon address that France expected revision of the neutrality act to bring aid to the Allies against Germany.

"Humanity has reached a decisive turning point in its history," M. Herriot said. "No nation is sure of its future."

Recalling Germany's annexation of Austria, the partition of Czecho-Slovakia and the invasion of Poland, he declared: "This murderous madness spreads all over Europe."

M. Herriot said that President Roosevelt was the "highest witness to truths I set forth," but that the President's appeals for peace "encountered an unyielding barrier on the other side."

"I await with confidence the judgment you will pass on this monstrous attack directed by deceit against what you cherish most: right and freedom."

French Report Calm Day Along Western Front

Advance Lines Closer To Important German Cities Of Saarbrücken And Zweibrücken

Paris, Sept. 21 (AP)—An official French communique tonight told of "a calm day along the front. Activity of the enemy's artillery south of Saarbrücken. Our reconnaissance missions were carried out despite bad weather and enemy fire."

In a series of sharp local actions, French troops apparently advanced their lines closer to two important German cities, Saarbrücken and Zweibrücken, in the center of the Western front's northern flank.

There seemed to be no heavy fighting anywhere on the front.

Planes Rescue Crew of Torpedoed Ship; Aircraft Find Some of 34 Men in Water

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 21—The British Government announced today that two Royal Air Force flying patrol boats had rescued the crew of thirty-four of the steamship Kensington Court, which sent out an S O S after having been attacked by a submarine.

A Ministry of Information announcement said that the rescue, somewhere in the Atlantic Ocean, was the first case in which an entire ship's crew had been picked up at sea by flying boats.

The Kensington Court was a 4,863-ton vessel owned by the Court Line. London was her port of registry.

The announcement said the flying boats arrived alongside a lifeboat from the Kensington Court ten minutes before the vessel sank. The announcement added:

"The pilots saw a tiny boat crowded with men while others were in the sea clinging to the sides.

"While one flying boat kept watch from the air the other came down on the water alongside the overloaded lifeboat. Fourteen of the men, some in a desperate condition, were pulled into the aircraft. When it had taken off with the heavy load, the other aircraft descended and picked up twenty more men.

"The two aircraft made a quick search for the attacking submarine but it was not located. The steamer crew said one of their two lifeboats had capsized and the other was in danger of sinking."

[The Kensington Court left Rosario, Argentina, on Aug. 15. Her destination then was Dakar, French West Africa, but apparently she had been diverted because of the outbreak of war. She was built in 1921 in Glasgow and was 396 feet long and had a 53-foot beam.]

BERLIN, Sept. 21 (AP).—Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, commander in chief of the German Navy, issued an order today praising the commander of the submarine which sank the British airplane carrier Courageous last Sunday.

[After the Courageous was sunk, a German communique asserted that the attacking submarine had reported its exploit, indicating the Nazi contention that the submarine escaped. The British Admiralty reported, however, that the submarine had been "heavily attacked by destroyers and is believed to have been sunk."]

Field Guns Hammer at Fortifications Called Key to Siegfried Line

Basel, Switzerland, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Reports reaching the Swiss border tonight said the French had driven deeper into the Moselle-Saar triangle just east of the Luxembourg border but the Germans had downed four French planes.

Swiss observers said the aerial warfare appeared to indicate that the Germans hold superiority in the air.

The infantry action behind the hills on the eastern bank of the Moselle river, was described as limited by the terrain of the country to small compact forces of troops. The positions won by the French, however, were said to be of the highest importance.

The main Siegfried forts in this area follow the east bank of the Saar, leaving a triangle whose apex at the junction of the Saar and Moselle rivers is protected only by small forts.

The French were reported to have captured Borg and important heights north of that village, commanding the junction of the main Sierck-Saarburg highway with the Luxembourg-Saarbruecken road.

The French field guns were said to be hammering at Nazi fortifications atop a high rock formation known as "The Key" which has been incorporated into the Siegfried line, although it stands on the western bank of the Saar in the forest of Saarburg.

Conquest of this strategic Saar-Moselle triangle would give the French an area of about 300 square miles.

German sources reported that four French planes were shot down in air battles today. A Berlin communique previously said eight French fighting planes had been shot down within two days along with three French observation balloons.

Neutral observers considered this evidence of the German advantage in the air.

Although there are some French and British types faster and more powerful than the German planes, only a few of these were said to be available.

Furthermore, German fliers on the Western Front include many of the Condor Legion who gained valuable fighting experience in the Spanish Civil War.

A great part of the German air force is concentrated underground in protected hangars behind the Siegfried line.

FULL SWISS ARMY KEPT UNDER ARMS

Partial Demobilization Is Barred by Generals.

BERNE, Sept. 21 (A. P.).—The army high command rejected today requests for partial demobilization of the Swiss Army, it was learned from an authoritative source.

30,24 3515

Troop concentrations of other nation's troops along the border forced the army to remain ready for "any eventuality," it was said.

An official note said that Swiss newspaper reports of such concentrations must be "considered as correct."

Party leaders had requested partial demobilization to return soldiers to the farms.

Rejection of the demobilization proposal was a victory for President Philippe Etter, who closed Parliament today with a warning that Switzerland stands ready to resist any invasion.

The normally staid lower house cheered his declaration.

President Etter declared that Swiss neutrality was recognized by all Europe by the treaty of Vienna of 1815, which guaranteed it "on condition that we defend it ourselves." He said the army had been "entirely mobilized on the first day of this war."

"We do not wish to doubt," he continued, "that neighboring States will keep their word. But if, contrary to all expectation, their word is violated and war extends to our country, it will find us ready—men, women, soldiers, civilians, old and young, all of whom swear to give their life to their country, preferring death rather than slavery."

Throughout the night German flares lighted up the no-man's land where activity by sappers and dynamiters must precede any infantry attack.

Night Attacks

French reports said a number of German night attacks had been repulsed in the vicinity of the Blies and Nied creeks east and west of Saarbrücken.

Accounts of air battles yesterday, mentioned in a French communique, indicated French pursuit ships had engaged German fighters escorting observation planes.

Three French planes were reported downed in dog fights over French territory, but it was said that the German flyers were engaged so quickly that observers could have gained little information concerning land troop movements.

Preparations Reported

The French, Belgian and Swiss press carried stories of elaborate German military preparations along the Belgian frontier. German sources insisted, however, these preparations were defensive, rather than offensive, and were designed to meet possible French assaults along the Moselle river.

SEP 22 1939

BIG PUSH?

[By the Associated Press]

Basel, Switzerland, Sept. 21—German batteries pounded enemy lines of communication along the Western front today as reports of swift night movements by French troops hinted at plans for a major offensive.

Swiss military observers expressed belief that the joint French-British command now has decided on the point to launch the first assault on the main forts of the Siegfried Line.

Increased activity was reported on the part of both French and German patrols, with the primary object of taking prisoners and gaining information concerning troop concentrations.

In The Making

These reports, and the fact that the French appeared to be consolidating their positions instead of attempting further local advances, increased Swiss belief a great battle is in the making.

Behind the Siegfried Line the Germans were said to have stationed motorized units in strategic reserve positions from which they can be rushed to any part of the front when additional strength is needed.

Life immediately behind the lines is beginning to reflect the strain of waiting for the next move of the French-British allies.

On the French side hundreds of families who have clung to their homes near the Maginot Line, avoiding removal orders by engaging in labor for the army, are beginning to drift to the rear. It was believed here this movement was influenced not so much by fear of German invasion as by the threat of the German air force.

German Families Move

On the German side an influx of families in the Baden area apparently indicated the Nazis were clearing out territory which might be threatened by shellfire in event of a major push by the French.

There also were reports that a number of large estates in the Black Forest behind Baden were being turned into hospitals, although few wounded were said to have arrived thus far.

In regions near the Swiss border French confidence in ability to crack the Siegfried Line and German assurance of strength of the fortifications to withstand assault appeared to have increased notably during the past week.

Rudolph Hess, Führer Hitler's deputy for party affairs and Germany's No. 3 Nazi, was reported to have completed a tour of the Siegfried Line which took him through the Saar into Baden by way of Kaiserlautern.

Still defiant, Mayor Stefan Starzinski had appealed to the capital's citizens to persevere until a final victory had been won against the Germans and told the outside world the "morale still is good."

Warsaw Radio Goes Off Air

Becomes Suddenly Silent After Sounds of Shell Explosions Are Heard

SEP 22 1939

BUDAPEST, Sept. 21 (A. P.)—The Warsaw radio lapsed into sudden silence today shortly after what sounded like the explosion of artillery shells was heard through its microphone.

The announcer had carried on far into the night despite the deep, periodic rumblings until the station suddenly went off the air halfway through the playing of a Polish military air.

Temporarily at least, the only communication between the German-besieged Polish capital and the rest of the world was ended.

Silence came after the station had broadcast a grim story of Warsaw being shelled and bombed as never before and predicted "there probably soon will be a big offensive against us."

The rest of Europe, which had been following the fourteen-day fight of Warsaw's defenders through almost ceaseless broadcasts from the station, was left to speculate on what might have happened.

The studio is in the center of Warsaw. Despite German aerial and artillery bombardment of that area for almost two weeks, the station had remained on the air day and night. It had gone on even while shells were falling all around it.

Air Raid Sirens Heard.

Four times yesterday the warning wail of air raid sirens could be heard above the calm voice of the announcer and four times the drone of diving airplanes came over the air. The broadcaster said that the raids were conducted by squadrons of thirty German planes.

His account of the siege included another appeal to Great Britain to help save the battered city.

Before silence again hid Warsaw's fate, the radio reported a successful attack against a German force, but it also admitted devastating blows from German cannon and warplanes.

Tank Attack Repulsed.

Col. Vaclava Lipinski described the battle in which he said Polish forces, particularly cavalry, drove back a German tank attack.

German infantry advanced in Warsaw's Praga district, the officer said, and engaged the Polish defenders in bayonet warfare.

"But the Poles are better in hand-to-hand fighting," he declared, "and proved stronger, capturing three heavy and two light machine guns."

The radio said that German aircraft made several raids over the center of Warsaw, especially in the neighborhood of Pilsudski Square and the city's largest hotels.

Between 5 and 6 o'clock last night, it said, thirty German planes made a terrific, concentrated attack while heavy artillery dumped shells into the center of the city, inflicting heavy casualties among women and children.

Seven German war planes were said to have been shot down.

Reports Palace Damaged.

Mayor Starzinski said that further damage had been inflicted on the royal palace and the national museum, the fine arts gallery, two grammar schools, the academy of physical culture, a theological seminary, a girls' college and many other schools had been destroyed by bombs. A broadcast last night had reported a Red Cross hospital set afire by incendiary bombs.

"When German shells fall we feel the power of German cultural superiority," the Mayor exclaimed. "Germans can destroy our historical treasures but cannot impair our Polish souls."

The Mayor promised to do all in his power to facilitate the departure of foreign diplomatic officers still in Warsaw. Following the request of the corps three days ago, he said, Germans sent over a plenipotentiary yesterday, but it was too late to negotiate and a conference was deferred until today.

Silent Mass Ordered.

A silent mass was called in Holy Cross Church where a shell yesterday destroyed the organ.

The Mayor's instructions, warnings and reports to his populace indicated the hardships Warsaw was undergoing.

He said that soldiers were receiving rations and were prohibited from buying clothing or food in stores. Special patrols are watching for soldiers who try to get double rations, he warned, and those caught will be "severely punished."

The Mayor declared the populace constantly was fighting fires, repairing damage and clearing away debris. He said the whole city was contributing self-secrificing service and priests were ever present to give the last sacrament.

Warsaw butchers were notified to go to military headquarters to receive allotments of horse meat. The announcer said wounded horses would be butchered for the "near-starving million inhabitants" of the city.

Apparently the directors of the radio had decided against letting the inhabitants know the full truth of their plight.

Several times the announcer referred to President Ignace Moscicki of Poland and other members of the Government as though they still were in the country, and said Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz's presence at the front "cheered our soldiers," although the Marshal has been in Rumania several days.

Reds and Nazis Dip Flags as They Meet

BUDAPEST, Sept. 21 (A. P.).—Russian and German motorized units met at many places in Poland today and dipped flags ceremoniously. One of these places was Turka, in south central Poland near the Hungarian frontier. Turka is nearly 150 miles east of the Polish-Russian border.

Between the two fast-moving forces great waves of refugees and remnants of the Polish armies swept over the frontiers into Rumania and Hungary.

30,000 Poles Enter Hungary

Trek of Refugees Is Called by Eyewitness a Parade of Tragic Faces.

By ELMER W. PETERSON

SEP 22 1939

MUNKACS, Hungary, Sept. 21 (A. P.)—As Soviet Russian troops were reported nearing the Hungarian border today in their sweep across eastern Poland, thousands of Polish soldiers and civilians continued to pour into Hungary, seeking sanctuary in the Carpathian Mountains. It was estimated that more than 30,000 Poles had reached Hungarian soil—and still they came.

Traveling over fifty miles of muddy and rain-puddled highways and roads branching through to three mountain passes, I witnessed the immigration. Hungary was the only southern refuge left, now that the Russian troops have blockaded the Rumanian border.

I saw small children, some half-naked, all of them hungry. Some of them, separated from their parents, had been taken in hand by Hungarian peasant women. Grown men wept at the sight of these youngsters trooping along in the mud.

I saw blood-spattered trains, bullet-torn automobiles and damaged military trucks—Polish military mementoes.

Tragic Faces.

I saw women whose faces were white with fatigue. They smiled wanly at the thought that crossing a frontier could give so much personal safety.

I heard young officers pleading for some way of getting information on the fate of their families.

In one ten-mile stretch of road there were more than 200 trucks, automobiles and motorcycles—all packed to overflowing with weary, homeless humanity. It was a parade of tragic faces.

Three weeks ago in Warsaw I saw the Polish Army gathering in confident readiness to fight. Yesterday, after a 1,500-mile round-about journey from the Polish capital, I saw a part of that same army in bedraggled retreat into a neutral country.

There is irony in this retreat. The rain for which the Poles prayed has started, but too late. Now, instead of bolstering the Polish strength, it adds to the general misery and confusion.

Fighting Tanks Barehanded.

Many of the Polish troops I saw had not experienced actual conflict. Others had, and their faces tightened when they spoke of it.

A shrug and: "What could we do against so many airplanes, tanks and armored cars with only machine guns?"

A note of sheer despair: "But what difference does all that make? What has become of my family?"

And seared in one officer's memory: "I saw hundreds of Polish soldiers killed . . . hundreds I tell you . . . trying to fight tanks and armored cars . . . trying to fight them with nothing but our bare hands."

For the most part they stood aloof, these Polish soldiers, or shuffled along quietly to be disarmed and interned in large fields near Munkacs.

As for civilians—very few peasant homes near the frontier are not sheltering at least one refugee. Hungarian women met the newcomers along the roads, giving them bread, fruit and water.

Villages Burned; Outbreaks Begun as Soon as Russians Started Invasion

By Elmer W. Peterson

Berezki, Poland (On the Hungarian Frontier), Sept. 21.—(AP)—Ukrainian bands enforced a wild rule over a small section of Poland at the base of the Carpathian Mountains today as German and Soviet Russian troops drew closer to the Hungarian frontier.

Accounts received here told of day-long battles between the Ukrainians and Polish police; of villages and Jews alike being slaughtered. Destruction started by German air raiders was said to have been completed with entire villages looted and burned.

This sudden burst of pent-up hate and violence added a new and tragic chapter to the three weeks of war in Poland.

Terrorists Armed

Young Ukrainian terrorists roaming the countryside were said to have apparently picked their arms and ammunition from thin air, with guns and cartridges in plentiful supply from mysterious sources.

Polish officers fleeing across the border into Hungary told of escaping from converging German and Soviet troops only to find themselves in small villages which fairly "dripped with blood" from the activities of these bands.

A young Polish reserve cavalry officer, speaking perfect English, gave me a vivid picture of what he and his comrades encountered.

"We fled small villages east of Lwow only two hours before the Russians arrived," he said. "Between Lwow and Stryj, to the south, we found the entrance to the village of Mikolajow barred by an enormous sign reading, 'Heil Hitler! Hail Ukrainian Republic!'

Savage Butchery

"In this village we found savage butchery of racial Poles and Jews—men, women and children alike.

"We found the proprietor of the hotel with his throat cut.

"We restored order as best we could, shooting all terrorists we could find before continuing on. It was a terrible scene of death and destruction.

"During that night as we rode south we passed several flaming villages, obviously fired by the terrorists."

The Ukrainians took possession of Lwow, Stryj and Stanislawow, reports reaching the frontier said, and for a time set up their own government.

One Polish officer told me that the terror outbreaks apparently were arranged to begin the moment Russian troops set foot on Polish soil last Sunday.

Meanwhile, the flight of Polish civilian and military refugees into Hungary all but stopped.

Refugees Ahead of Troops

The last of the refugees were but a few hours ahead of German troops who late today reached the border near here across from Volovec (Volocz), Hungary. This border point is about 80 miles northwest of the junction of the Hungarian, Roumanian and Polish frontiers.

A long tunnel runs through the mountains here. The Germans said they would take formal charge of the Polish-owned one-third of the tunnel tomorrow.

Before the Germans appeared, the latest advices reaching here said they were based at Stryj, about 50 miles to the north. The Russians were reported at Stanislawow, about 50 miles southeast of Stryj.

Travelling by automobile today high up in the Carpathian Mountain passes I found all communications into Poland cut off, indicating that villages and towns in Poland not yet occupied by the Germans and Russians had been abandoned under pressure of the terror.

Polish Soldiers Weep

Remarkable scenes persisted, however, in these picturesque mountains where small cemeteries with rows of crosses indicate battle lines of 1915 between the Russians and Hungarians.

I saw Polish cavalrymen weeping unashamed as they gave up their arms and said farewell to their horses.

There were cavalcades of Polish soldiers pouring into Hungary, some in trucks and busses—all with despair and tragedy written all over their unshaven faces.

I talked with a Polish army doctor as he bandaged a fresh bullet wound in the leg of a 20-year-old Polish soldier.

"To me it is all like a bad dream, something not real," he said.

"We had a good army but we could not cope with those endless floods of tanks and planes."

Warsaw Communique

Budapest, Sept. 21.—(AP)—The Warsaw radio broadcast the following communique tonight:

"The western sector of the city was quiet today as the enemy was pushed back several days ago.

"In the northern section armored cars attacked Polish lines but infantry and cavalry charges repulsed them, inflicting heavy losses.

"In the Praga district a Polish bayonet charge repulsed the Germans, netting nine machine guns."

Germans at Hungarian Border

VOLOVEC, Hungary, Sept 21 (AP)—German troops pushing through Poland reached the Hungarian border late today across from Volovec. There is a long tunnel through the Carpathian Mountains here, one-third of which is owned by Poland. Germans said the Polish section would be occupied formally tomorrow.

A committee of German officers visited Hungarian border guards and exchanged greetings.

SPLIT OF POLAND NEARLY SETTLED

Indications Are Nazi Army Will Withdraw to West Of Warsaw, Berlin Says

BERLIN, Sept. 21 (AP)—The demarcation line between German and Russian armies in Poland still has not been announced but it was said that it had been "practically settled."

Officials indicated Germany would withdraw to a line west of Warsaw, thus following Hitler's statement that the world would be surprised at how little he was demanding.

The fewest Poles possible, it was said, would be included in the German sphere of influence but it was added that the demarcation line would not necessarily mark the future frontier between Germany and Russia.

German staff officers now in Moscow are settling the details of the German withdrawal and the Russian occupation. The withdrawal apparently will be made by stages as the civil administration is created.

Whether the Poles would be permitted to have a state of their own—and if so under what conditions—could not be learned.

Claims For Vilna

Some sources, however, said they assumed that either the Russian or the German armies would occupy the purely Polish area at least until the Poles could get over war shock and set up a local government.

German army officials indicated that Germany had washed her hands of Lithuanian claims to Wilno (Vilna), ancient Lithuanian capital seized by Poles in 1920 and now occupied by Soviet Russians in their westward sweep into Poland.

They hinted that the Lithuanians "missed the boat," as one officer said, by not marching in before the Russians entered the city and the matter now was one for the Russians and Lithuanians to settle.

Battle Called "Greatest"

The German army tonight changed its qualification of yesterday that the battle in the bend of the Vistula river was "one of the greatest destructive battles of all time."

Responsible officers tonight asserted it was "the greatest of all time."

This assertion was based on the rapidly rising number of captives. Officers calculated that the prisoners and the captured vehicles and material would make a line 500 miles long.

They said Poland had about half of her peacetime army strength in that nine-day battle, which ended Tuesday.

Two of eight airplanes reported to have been shot down on the Western front were said to belong to the British Royal Air Force.

HALIFAX TELLS WHY POLAND GOT NO HELP

Says Britain Must Not Do What Does Not Directly Contribute to Victory.

$277,200,000 SPENT SO FAR

Vast Munitions Program Under Way With 700 Firms and 6500 Contractors on Job.

LONDON, Sept. 21 (A. P.).—In commenting today on Poland's failure to get help, the British Foreign Secretary, Lord Halifax, declared that "we must not undertake anything that does not directly contribute" to victory in the European war.

Speaking in the House of Lords, Lord Halifax said:

"One of the major tragedies of the last few weeks was that we should have had to watch the resistance of a gallant nation overborne, without ourselves being able to render such direct assistance as might have produced different results. I have felt it every hour and every moment.

"But we must not lose sight of our main objective in this war—victory—and we must not undertake anything that does not directly contribute to that victory or which might mitigate against it."

Vast Supply Service.

At the same time Leslie Burgin, the Minister of Supply, told the House of Commons of the creation of a War Supply Council and broad plans to use "every ounce of endeavor and ton of output" in Great Britain in the drive to win the war.

Giving the nation a glimpse of the extent of the weapons Great Britain was forging, Mr. Burgin declared that his department had placed orders for war supplies exceeding £70,000,000 (currently $277,200,000) since the outbreak of hostilities.

Mr. Burgin will head the Supply Council with Sir Harold Brown, director of munition production, and Lord Weir, director-general of explosives.

In an effort to allay fears of a repetition of the world war shell shortage, Mr. Burgin told the House that 700 firms were making shells or their component parts and that 6,500 contractors were working for the Ministry of Supply on a nationwide scale. Of the 700 firms making shells he said that that was "a number being added to every day."

Mr. Burgin said that the menace of air attack had made it necessary to give priority to the air defense of the country and outlined these other tasks: (1) Equipment of the fighting services; (2) organizing power to produce whatever the fighting forces would need at any time during the war; (3) provision for sufficient reserves and equipment for maintenance and expansion of the fighting forces, and (4) "extraction from the sources of production . . . of every ounce of endeavor and every ton of output likely to be of service to ourselves or our allies in the present and future. This task is one for the whole industry and man power of the nation."

Mr. Burgin said that the country had been divided into thirteen districts, each under a trained engineer, to "ensure that the whole capacity of the country is utilized." He also said that the nation now owned completely twenty-eight Royal ordnance factories, six of which had been opened since the start of the war.

He promised the House that "prices, profits and profiteering will be scrutinized carelessly."

Greenwood Attacks Set-up.

Arthur Greenwood, Laborite opposition leader, immediately attacked the set-up outlined by Mr. Burgin as bureaucratic and declared that "the dead hand of officialism is going to throttle the national effort."

"If the Government thinks it is going to mobilize the industrial power of this nation under thirteen ex-admirals, I tell them they have failed."

War Budget Next Week.

Meanwhile today Prime Minister Chamberlain set next Wednesday as the date for the introduction of a war budget in the House of Commons.

The House was told today by Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, that the Government was drafting a measure to prevent war profiteering. He said it also would extend the scope of price controls now in effect for some foodstuffs.

Tonight a British White Paper on exchanges with the German Government said that the German reply to the British ultimatum of September 3 stated a refusal "to receive or accept, let alone fulfill, demands in the nature of ultimata made by the British Government."

The German reply also said: "We shall answer any aggressive action on the part of England with the same weapons and in the same form." It declared that Great Britain had rejected proposals from Premier Mussolini which might have saved peace and added: "The British Government therefore bear responsibility for all the unhappiness and misery which have now overtaken and are about to overtake many peoples."

Ministry of Irritation.

Criticism of some phases of Great Britain's war set-up was voiced today by the London Times, which cited bitter complaints of food wastage and attacked the controlled system of fish distribution, now abandoned by the Government.

The fish control program was based on the theory of putting the main markets out of danger of air raids, but the Times said that it "produced a dislocation no less complete than would have followed a highly successful air raid."

"Who is responsible for framing these ill-conceived schemes?" the Times asked. "What great brain, for instance, thought out the organization of the Ministry of Information, which started its career rather as a Ministry of Irritation? Who conceived the so-called commercial war risk insurance scheme, which has thrown most of the trading community into ferment?"

More Nazi News Than British.

Demanding "Are We in Germany—Is This Berlin?" Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard declared that Hitler was filling the British front pages while there was only "a thin, vapid trickle from our Ministry of Information.

"The man in the street in New York is no better off. There are many first-rate American journalists in London, although some of them have already packed their bags for Amsterdam," the Standard said. "Here is one of their difficulties. A story printed on the front page of the Evening Standard may be censored for transmission to America. It may be picked up by the Paris radio, transcribed by the Tass (Soviet Russian) agency in Moscow, garbled perhaps somewhere in the Steppes of Siberia and then forwarded on to New York.

"Even so, the message by these means beats the trans-Atlantic cable plus the British censor. 'Round the world three days late' is our censor's motto. They've scarcely even heard of Jules Verne. So Hitler decorates America's front pages, too."

LONDON TELLS OF REVOLT IN SLOVAK ARMY

Communique Says 15,000 Garrison Troops Have Been Disarmed.

BERLIN FLATLY DENIES IT

Chamberlain Speech on War Receives Unanimous Praise in English Press.

LONDON, Sept. 21 (A. P.).—The British hope of enlisting Germany's anti-Nazis in the fight against Adolf Hitler was quickened today by reports of a "serious" revolt in two Czecho-Slovak provinces which last March became a Reich protectorate.

A Ministry of Information communique said that Great Britain had received authoritative information that a revolutionary movement had started in Bohemia and Moravia last Sunday and was continuing despite "ruthless" repressive measures.

"That this is not just a flash in the pan," the Ministry said, "is shown by the unanimity of purpose, the tenacity and the discipline of the participants."

It was recalled in London that Eduard Benes, former President of the Czecho-Slovak Republic, told Prime Minister Chamberlain only two days after Great Britain's declaration of war: "We Czecho-Slovak citizens also consider ourselves at war with Germany's military forces."

'Hundreds Executed.'

The Information Ministry, describing the uprising, said that "firearms were used on both sides and casualties are said to have been considerable."

On September 19, the communique went on, the Slovak garrisons at several places revolted and "about 15,000 troops have been disarmed." Arrests throughout the protectorate, the statement said "ran into thousands, those executed into hundreds."

[In Berlin, a spokesman for Baron Konstantin von Neurath, Reich's Protector for Bohemia and Moravia, said that reports of an organized revolt in the protectorate were "nonsense." He invited correspondents to visit Prague to see for themselves.]

Broadcast to Warsaw.

In a radio broadcast to the defenders of Warsaw, Count Raczynski, the Polish Ambassador in London, predicted last night that a new Polish Army being organized in France would "return with victorious banners" to the homeland.

The Ambassador asserted that "the armed hosts of Britain, France, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, India and Africa are rushing to our assistance."

In the course of the revolt, which began with labor disturbances in Prague, the Information Ministry said, "bridges on important railways and roads were damaged, fire stations put out of action, rolling stock and material damaged, workshops of important factories bombed and machinery destroyed."

[In Berlin, a spokesman for Baron Konstantin von Neurath, Reich's Protector for Bohemia and Moravia, said that reports of an organized revolt in the protectorate were "nonsense." He invited correspondents to visit Prague to see for themselves.]

Back Chamberlain Speech.

The British press, meanwhile, gave unanimous indorsement to Prime Minister Chamberlain's address before the House of Commons yesterday, in which he answered Hitler's Danzig speech and asserted that Great Britain's war efforts would be "the utmost of which she is capable."

Labor also gave its support to the aim outlined by Mr. Chamberlain, who said that Great Britain is fighting "to redeem Europe from the perpetual and recurring fear of German aggression and enable the peoples of Europe to preserve their independence and liberties."

In a speech broadcast to the empire, Arthur Greenwood, acting leader of the Labor Opposition in Parliament, declared that "the monster of tyranny must be strangled forever."

Broadcast to Warsaw.

In another broadcast to the defenders of Warsaw, Count Raczynski, the Polish Ambassador in London, predicted last night that a new Polish Army being organized in France would "return with victorious banners" to the homeland.

The Ambassador asserted that "the armed hosts of Britain, France, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, India and Africa are rushing to our assistance."

The British people, still smarting from the loss of the aircraft carrier Courageous, read with satisfaction Mr. Chamberlain's report that "six or seven" U-boats had been destroyed.

A Ministry of Information communique pointed out that meant an average of three or more a week as against a world war average of from 1 to 1½ a week at the height of the submarine warfare.

The press estimated that 30 of Germany's submarines large enough to operate on trade routes had been put out of action.

Another Government communique said that nearly 200,000 tons of contraband valued at about $2,000,000 had been seized since the outbreak of hostilities, depriving Germany of vital ores and petroleum products.

Gdynia Now Gotenhafen As Nazis Rename Port

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 21—Gydnia, Polish-built Baltic seaport captured by German forces in the invasion of Poland was disclosed today to have been renamed Gotenhafen by the Nazis.

[Gotenhafen, translated literally, means "Harbor of the Goths." The Goths were an ancient Teutonic race who originally lived between the Vistula and Elbe Rivers.]

DNB, German official news agency, used the name of Gotenhafen in an account of Chancellor Hitler's journey there today, during which he also visited the Danzig area, seeing troops, the former Polish munitions dump at Westerplatte and Gotenhafen.

At Gotenhafen, it said, he met Field Marshal Hermann Goering, who also was inspecting the coastal district and its harbor facilities.

CONSULS LEAVE WARSAW WITH NAZIS' CONSENT

Foreign Officials Believed To Include Half Dozen Americans

Soviet Legation Bombed "By Mistake," Mayor Declares

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Sept. 21—The Warsaw radio announced tonight that foreign consular officials left the besieged Polish capital this afternoon under an agreement reached with the Germans.

The announcement failed to name the officials, but it was believed they included a half dozen Americans headed by Consul General John K. Davis, veteran of thirty years in the foreign service.

Other American consular attaches who had remained in Warsaw with Davis were George J. Haering, New York; William M. Cramp, Pennsylvania; Douglas Jenkins, Jr., South Carolina; M. William Blake, Ohio, and E. Tomlin Bailey, New Jersey.

Broadcast By Mayor

In an earlier broadcast, Warsaw's Mayor, Stefan Starzinski, declared that the city was withstanding the siege "with unbroken spirit."

"Warsaw," he said, "was bombed all last night and part of today. Many women and children were killed.

"Many buildings were wrecked. The Royal Palace, the National Museum, schools, hospitals and workers' tenements were targets of the German planes.

"By mistake, the German air force bombed the Soviet Legation, demolishing the building."

Heroic Work Cited

The Mayor said volunteer fire brigades were doing heroic work in checking scores of fires started by incendiary bombs.

A communique broadcast from the besieged city said the western sector of the city was quiet "as the enemy was pushed back there several days ago."

In the northern section of the city, the communique said Nazi armored cars attacked Polish lines but were repulsed by an infantry and cavalry charge.

7 Planes Reported Shot Down

In the Praga district, a Polish bayonet charge was reported to have driven back a German advance.

The Warsaw radio announcer said seventy German planes took part in the day's raids, seven of which, he asserted, were shot down.

Col. Vaclava Lipinski, in tonight's broadcast said up until yesterday eighty-seven planes had been downed by Warsaw's defenders.

5 Americans Reported Safe At Brest-Litovsk

2 Women In Group In German Hospital After Flight From Warsaw

Berlin, Sept. 21 (AP)—The German news agency (DNB) reported tonight from Brest-Litovsk, Poland, that two American women and three men were recovering from exhaustion in a German military hospital after a "terrifying" flight from Warsaw.

According to DNB the Americans traveled afoot for long stretches and were menaced by "irresponsible bands" several times when their passports were not recognized.

In the group was youthful Miss D. Laura Hucheson, a New York dancer known in Germany as Delores Laurel; Josef Panck, an interior decorator, and his wife Sofia, of Santa Barbara, Cal.; a machinist, Waclaw Francuk, of Lynn (no State given), and a laborer, Peter Lodzinski, of Jamaica, Long Island, N. Y.

U. S. OFFICIAL HELD

Government to Act to Free Vice-consul Morton.

BUCHAREST, Sept. 21 (A. P.).—American authorities were expected today to take diplomatic action, probably in Moscow, to obtain the release of William Morton, United States vice-consul in Warsaw, caught on the Polish side of the Dniestr River during the Soviet Russian occupation.

Morton was unable to leave Zaleszczyki, Polish frontier town, because of restrictions imposed by Russian Army officials. He had no permit to cross the border and said he had no way to obtain one.

Count Radziwill Detained By Russians In Ukraine

Moscow, Sept. 21 (AP)—The Soviet radio announced shortly before midnight tonight that Count Radziwill, head of the famous Polish house and owner of huge estates in the western Ukraine, had been detained.

He had decided to remain, despite the defeat of Polish armies, the broadcast said, "in order to create diversions." He is a member of the Polish Parliament.

GOEBBELS SAYS NAZIS WILL NOT ENTER BELGIUM

Also Denies Rumors of Plans for Invasion of Holland.

BERLIN WATCHING CONGRESS

Desire Not to Arouse Americans Given as a Reason for Delay in Seizing Warsaw.

BERLIN, Sept. 21 (A. P.).—Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, Propaganda Minister, gave foreign correspondents today a vigorous denial of allegation that Germany intended to violate the neutrality of Belgium, the Netherlands or Luxemburg.

"I am in a position to give a categorical, unequivocal and unconditional denial," said the Propaganda Minister in his first appearance before foreign newspaper men since Germany started her invasion of Poland September 1.

"The German Government never had, does not have now nor intends in the future to violate the neutrality either of Belgium or Holland."

To a question whether this also applied to Luxemburg, the tiny duchy at the northern end of present German-French battle lines, Goebbels replied:

"Yes, you may also include Luxemburg."

Smiles at Rumors.

Dr. Goebbels alluded with a smile to his presence as evidence he was neither dead nor captive nor out of sympathy with Adolf Hitler's war aims, as some reports had alleged.

"I guess you don't need a denial about my person," said the propaganda chief. "My answer to British lying propaganda is my propaganda on which you have seen evidence in these past weeks, I think."

Dr. Goebbels called the propaganda of the British Information Ministry "childish and laughable."

"It does not in the least disturb our sovereign feeling of security," he said.

The Propaganda Minister, who looked rather tired, further denied "completely and unreservedly" all reports of uprisings in the protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia which the Reich established last March in breaking up Czecho-Slovakia.

"The situation there is absolutely quiet and satisfactory for our purposes," he said.

The Army High Command reported today only four centers of resistance to Nazi forces remained in Poland and German expected they would fall without shelling.

The command's belief that the remaining resistance was negligible already had been indicated by the departure for the western front of Col.-Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, commander of the German army, to assume direction of the struggle against Great Britain and France.

List Points Still Held.

The points still held by Poles, a high command communique said, included:

1. Warsaw, besieged capital of Poland. (Reports from Budapest said the Warsaw radio which had been maintaining contact with the outside world suddenly went dead during the playing of a Polish military air.)

2. Modlin, fortified center eighteen miles northwest of Warsaw.

3. Gora Kalvarja, on the left bank of the Vistula twenty-three miles southeast of Warsaw.

4. On the Hela Peninsula, narrow finger of land poking out into the Gulf of Danzig. Its extremity is nineteen miles northeast of Danzig. Some 3,000 Poles were believed isolated on this peninsula.

German officers indicated that no lightning strokes against these centers were planned, but rather, since they are surrounded, that the feeling in time will work for Germany and the Poles will surrender.

One of the generals in Reichsfuehrer Hitler's entourage, discussing the situation of Warsaw, said on Tuesday:

"Our Fuehrer does not think it worth while to risk the life of a single German soldier to take Warsaw. Cut off on all sides it has no alternative save to surrender. Why, then, should we shell it and give food—though unjustified—to anti-German propaganda that we are firing on women and children?"

In other quarters Germany's failure to strike a crushing blow at Warsaw so far was attributed to a policy of waiting on Congress's action in Washington.

Interest in influencing the United States' decision whether or not to revise her neutrality legislation at the special session of Congress brought the propagandists' batteries to the fore while front line activiites slackened.

As a result of the reported German policy toward Poland's capital, Germans believed there would be no violent attack there which might inflame opinion while vitally important decisions were being made in Washington.

Meanwhile Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz brought into the open a German complaint, previously whispered in Government circles, that Anthony Joseph Drexel Biddle Jr., United States Ambassador to Poland, was "serving British propaganda."

[The United States State Department made public September 13 two cablegrams from Mr. Biddle in which the Ambassador reported witnessing German aerial bombardment of defenseless towns in Poland as well as military objectives.]

Sees Plot to Inflame World.

Korrespondenz asserted the object of anti-German propaganda was to persuade Warsaw by radio to continue what it called useless resistance in the hope that Germans would bombard the city and thus arouse world, especially American, indignation. The German military command, it was said, hoped to bring about capitulation of the city through pressure that fell short of injuring the civilian population.

Friendly German gestures toward France and Hitler's strategically timed assurance to the world at Danizg Tuesday that the Reich has no war aims against either France or Great Britain were counted on here to be a big influence in keeping United States neutrality airtight.

The German press, meanwhile warned the world to be prepared for what the Hamburger Fremdenblatt called "another British propaganda torpedo."

It said some such "torpedoes" already had been fired, one being the report that German Army activity about Aachen had betrayed a plan to violate Belgian neutrality by attacking France through Belgium as Germany did in the world war.

Deny Menacing Belgium.

Officials and the press denied there was any German menace to Belgium.

"Germany has reached her war objective," declared the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung. "The west does not interest us. Of course, should some one attack us there, we would defend ourselves as effectively as possible."

Another gesture of German friendship toward France was a military funeral accorded Tuesday to French Lieut. Paul Deschanel, thirty-year-old son of a former president of the French republic. He was killed as he led a French patrol near the Siegfried Line.

The Germans recorded the playing of "Marseillaise," France's national anthem, by a German band at the funeral. At frequent intervals it has been broadcast to radio listeners in France.

"Why must this war go on?" the Boersen Zeitung asked.

Brauchitsch Goes West.

But while German propaganda worked to convince the United States and the world at large that further fighting was purposeless, the German Army was taking every precaution.

Col.-Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, commander of the German Army, went to the west front after issuing an order in which he observed that military action in the east was complete.

The western defenses steadily were being strengthened and Rudolf Hess, Hitler's party deputy, was on the scene as personal observer for Der Fuehrer.

Nazi troops were known to be moving westward from Poland, leaving behind only enough strength to finish the cleaning up processes and man garrisons.

Puts Prisoners at 350,000.

An army high command communique declared today the Polish Army as a whole has been "annihilated" and the total of Polish prisoners has risen to 350,000 including 170,000 on the northern Polish front.

The communique listed more than 300 cannon, 40 armored cars, 108 light and 22 heavy pieces of artillery as Polish armaments that had fallen into German hands.

It said the only remaining Polish resistance was in Warsaw and in and around Lwow.

Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels, whose name had not been heard in public for several weeks, emerged from eclipse last night to summon foreign correspondents to a conference today.

Berlin, which has had regular blackouts since the war started, decided to illuminate downtown streets slightly beginning tonight.

Berlin Keeping Close Watch on U. S. Congress

Calls Session Most Important War Event; Denies Plan to Invade Belgium or Holland

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—Germany listened her eyes tonight, across the Atlantic, on the special session of Congress, which the press here called "the most important event since the outbreak of the European conflict."

As the German point of view on what the United States stood to gain by staying out of the war was presented in elaborate articles these were developments nearer home.

Minister of Propaganda Paul Joseph Goebbels declared Germany "had no intention, has none now nor will have" of sending armies through the Netherlands, Belgium or Luxemburg.

A high command communique reported that only four centers of resistance to Nazi forces remained in Poland—Warsaw, Modlin, eighteen miles to the northwest; Gora Kalvarja, twenty-three miles southeast of Warsaw, and an area on the Hel peninsula in the Gulf of Danzig.

The communique said that, up to yesterday afternoon, 170,000 Polish prisoners had been captured on the northern front "and the number steadily is increasing." It is said that in the south 60,000 prisoners had been taken since Sept. 10.

As to the western front, it said there was "no activity" except for the shooting down by the Germans of "three captive balloons and eight enemy airplanes." Two of the airplanes, it was reported at Berlin, were machines of the British Royal Air Force.

Among the newspaper articles on the United States was one my Karl Megerle, foreign affairs expert of the "Boersen Zeitung," who said the United States had fallen heir to Anglo-Saxon world leadership.

"With her attack on Germany," wrote Megerle, who is close to the German Foreign Ministry, "England put the axe to the roots of her own world position.

"The American dollar falls heir.

"What far-seeing English statesmen saw and feared begins to show. However this war may end, England will be so weak that the leadership of the Anglo-Saxon world and all that went with it will pass to the United States.

"The United States need only wait and observe how England . . . pulverizes in a senseless, aimless war her riches and, in short, the very foundations of her government and economy, in order at the right moment to take the leadership from Great Britain's exhausted hand.

"After financial leadership, trade and business leadership falls in the lap, and the same troubled Englishmen see the time not far distant when, at certain places in the British Empire, the English flag will be taken down and that of the North American world empire will be raised."

Gives Neutrality Details

The Hamburg newspaper "Fremdenblatt" gave in detail the present United States neutrality law and asserted revision of it to provide for a cash-and-carry plan "touched the very fundamentals of neutrality which the American people, on the basis of their experience in the last war, had defined."

The great majority of Americans, the newspaper said, believed the United States loans to the Allies in the World War brought them into the conflict, "the results of which knocked all their ideals in the head."

The newspaper said: "It is well known what the motives for lifting the arms embargo are. They are outspokenly materialistic in character, and, for the most part, would benefit solely big capital."

While the Congressional session absorbed official interest, Goebbels nevertheless took the time to appear before foreign correspondents to deny that Germany intended to send armed forces through the Netherlands, Belgium or Luxemburg.

The Propaganda Minister indicated that Fuehrer Adolf Hitler felt reported British and French fears that Germany was preparing for such a maneuver, because of the massing of troops at Aachen (Aix-la-Chapelle), were of such a serious nature that he ought to make a denial.

"I am in a position to give a categoric, unequivocal and unconditional denial," Goebbels said. "The German government never had, does not have now, nor intends in the future to violate the neutrality either of Belgium or Holland."

Asked whether this applied also to Luxemburg, he replied: "Yes, you may also include Luxemburg."

Goebbels further denied "completely and unreservedly" all reports of uprisings in the protectorate of Bohemia-Moravia. (A British Information Ministry communique Wednesday night asserted a "serious" revolt had broken out in the two provinces of dismembered Czecho-Slovakia, which became a part of Germany.)

"The situation there is absolutely quiet and satisfactory for our purposes," Goebbels said.

Goebbels, who looked rather tired, alluded with a smile to his presence as evidence he was neither dead nor a captive, nor out of sympathy with Hitler's war aims, as some reports had alleged.

"I guess you don't need a denial about my person," said the propaganda chief. "My answer to British lying propaganda is my propaganda, of which you have seen evidence in these past weeks, I think."

Goebbels called the propaganda of the British Information Ministry "childish and laughable." He said: "It does not in the least disturb our sovereign feeling of security."

The German Army tonight changed its description yesterday of the battle in the bend of the Vistula River as "one of the greatest destructive battles of all time." Responsible officers asserted tonight it was "the greatest of all time."

This assertion was based on the rapidly rising number of captives. Officers calculated that the prisoners and the captured vehicles and material would make a line 500 miles long. They said Poland had about half of her peace-time army strength in that nine-day battle, which ended last Tuesday.

Communique Is Issued

The German supreme army command issued today the following communique:

"Results of the batlte in the Vistula (River) bend are not yet fully ascertainable. Until the afternoon of Sept. 20, the number of captives had increased to 170,000 and is still growing. One of two German armies which participated in the battle had captured 320 cannon and forty tanks.

"According to preliminary investigations, nine divisions and units of ten additional divisions and three cavalry brigades fought in the battle on the Polish line.

"After fierce fighting in the south, near Zamosc and Tomaszow, strong Polish forces surrendered, among them the supreme commander of the Polish southern army. Since September 10, 60,000 prisoners have been taken and 108 light and twenty-two heavy guns captured in this region. Booty of fights around Gdynia increased to about forty cannon, 350 officers and 12,000 soldiers taken prisoner.

"Resistance now is offered only at Warsaw and Modlin and southeastward of Warsaw at Gora Kalvarja and on the Hel Peninsula. A comprehensive report of the campaign in Poland will be issued by the supreme army command within the next few days.

"In the west, three captive balloons and eight enemy airplanes were shot down. Otherwise there was no activity."

GIVES ASSURANCE ON SHELL SUPPLY

British Minister Tells Parliament 700 Firms Are Making Ammunition

Country Is Divided Into 13 Districts To Insure Utilization To Capacity

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 21—Parliament heard Government assurances today that Britain's World War shell shortage would not be repeated, while Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax warned against losing sight of the main objective—victory.

Supply Minister Leslie Burgin said 700 firms were making shells for the British forces and that war supplies worth £70,000,000 (about $280,000,000) had been ordered since the fight with Germany started.

6,500 Contractors Working

Six thousand five hundred contractors were working for the Ministry of Supply, he added, and a number were being added each day.

Shortage of shells for Britain's army in France in the World War caused a Government shakeup.

The Supply Minister further stated that the country had been divided into thirteen districts, each under a trained engineer to "ensure that the whole capacity of the country is utilized."

Criticizes Setup

Arthur Greenwood, acting opposition leader, criticized the latter setup as bureaucratic and said "the dead hand of officialdom is going to throttle the national effort."

Lord Halifax's statement was made in the House of Lords in commenting on Poland's failure to receive effective help in time from Britain and France.

He spoke of Poland's position as "one of the major tragedies of the last few weeks." He added:

"We must not lose sight of our main objective in this war—victory—and we must not undertake anything that does not directly contribute to that victory."

Yesterday Prime Minister Chamberlain warned against undertaking military projects which did not have an excellent chance of success.

Other developments of the day included:

King George received Lord Halifax, Burgin and Defense Minister Lord Chatfield.

War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha reported British troops in France were in "fine condition and good heart."

Home Secretary Sir John Anderson warned those complaining of inconveniences of the nightly blackout that the menace of air raids was "just as threatening as ever."

'SECOND JUTLAND' MAY BE EXPLAINED

Swedish Artillery Practice Went On Yesterday.

FREDERIKSHAVEN, Denmark, Sept. 21 (A. P.).—Information that Swedish artillery units had been practicing on a low island several miles south of Saroe Church offered a possible explanation today for the sound of heavy cannonading which alarmed the fisherfolk along the east coast of Jutland yesterday.

Some of those who had heard the firing, however, insisted that the cannonading was too heavy to fit this explanation. The sounds, they said, bore a strong resemblance to the thunder of heavy naval guns audible here during the famous battle of Jutland on May 31, 1916.

Others pointed out that it is well known that acoustics play strange tricks in these waters.

There were reports among the fishermen that German naval vessels had been observed in the northern waters of Kattegatt between Denmark and Sweden, but these reports could not be confirmed.

British ships also have been reported recently in the eastern waters of Skagerrak off the northwest coast of Denmark.

Those who heard the cannonading yesterday said that more than 200 shots were fired, and that the sounds continued for many hours.

of Wilno, the ancient capital of Lithuania.

In the south, Red troops were reported in possession of Kovel, a Ukrainian village 100 miles north of Lwow, Poland's third largest city. The occupation of both Wilno and Lwow was announced in previous communiques.

[German reports said the Poles were still resisting in and around Lwow.]

The reported seizure of Grodno marks a Russian advance of about 135 miles into Poland.

The fortified areas of Baranowicze, Molodeczno and Sarny also have fallen before the Russians, the Soviet High Command said.

Advance to Within 16 Miles of German Line —Penetrate 135 Miles Into Poland.

MOSCOW, Sept. 21 (A. P.).—The Russian forces strengthened their hold on eastern Poland today as communiques reported new advances by the Red Army along a wide front. In the north, the Soviet High Command announced, Russian troops occupied Grodno, sixteen miles from the East Prussian border and ninety miles southwest Baranowicze is about thirty-five miles from the Russian frontier and 120 miles east of Bialystok, the communications center reported occupied by the German Army. Molodeczno, eighteen miles from the Russian border, is sixty-five miles west of Wilno, while Sarny is eighty-five miles east of Kovel.

280 Artillery Pieces.

The Russian communique made no mention of resistance encountered in the latest advances, but estimated that more than 60,000 Polish troops had been captured in the four days since the Soviet Army crossed the frontier.

Three Polish infantry divisions, two cavalry brigades and a number of smaller army units were disarmed in the advance, the communique said.

War materials seized by the Russians were reported to include 280 pieces of artillery and 120 airplanes.

Close to Hungarian Line.

MUNKACS, Hungary, Sept. 21 (A. P.).—Reports reaching here today indicated that rapidly advancing Russian troops were within fifteen miles of the Polish-Hungarian frontier.

'REDS' KEEP NAZIS OUT OF ROUMANIA

Diplomats in Moscow See Any Possible German March Stopped by Russians.

SOVIET DRIVE CONTINUES

Army Penetrates 135 Miles Into Poland; Peasants to Help Divide Up Estates

Moscow, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Diplomatic quarters tonight pointed out that Soviet Russia's drive into Poland apparently had intercepted any possible direct German march into Roumania from that quarter and said this fact might prove a vital factor in the European war.

The advancing Soviet forces, these reports said, had cut Germany off from access to Roumania except through Hungary. Observers said this might prove important since Germany could make good use of Roumania's oil.

(In another column of this issue of the Journal, Pertinax, famed French commentator, points out that many Roumanians have rejoiced in the thought the Red Army bars all roads leading from Southern Poland into Roumania, seeing this as a barrier to possible German absorption of their country.

(But Pertinax also points out that Soviet Russia may be tempted by the thought of Roumanian loot, and, behaving as she has with Poland, appropriate Bukovina and Bessarabia, both Roumanian provinces which are regarded in Moscow as Slavic lands.)

Interested in Finland

Diplomatic circles, speculating on whether the Baltic States or Hungary might be drawn into the European conflict were interested in a Helsinki, Finland, dispatch by Tass, official Soviet News Agency, saying movement of women and children out of the Finnish capital already had begun.

Operations of the Red Army of Occupation in Poland during the day were described as consolidation of positions already occupied. Occupation of the important town of Pinsk, some 110 miles east of Brest-Litovsk, was mentioned in a Red army communique.

The communique also told of occupation of Kobrin (Kobryn) 40 miles east of Brest-Litovsk and on the northern border of the vast Pripet marshes.

Sporadic action south of the Pripet marshes was indicated by the communique which said groups of Polish officers were being cleared out of areas around Lwow and Sarny.

Further Advances

The speed of the Red army's drive was indicated by communiques which announced advances ranging up to 135 miles into Poland. In the south the Russians were said to have occupied Lwow, 90 miles from the Polish-Roumanian border and beyond the line of the junction of the two countries with Hungary.

Russia proceeded, meanwhile, with the task of converting to Soviet ideology the 11,000,000 new citizens acquired in Poland's western Ukraine and White Russia.

Moscow newspapers said the population of the occupied territories were turning over to Soviet authorities straggling Polish troops found wandering in forests. These accounts said peasants were tying the soldiers together and taking them to the nearest Red army detachments.

Dividing Estates

Division of large estates also was said to be under way with various peasant committees or Soviets in charge.

Soviet stage artists have been sent into the occupied areas to entertain both the population and the army.

A dispatch published by Pravda, organ of the Communist party, said "toilers of Western White Russia are mercilessly uprooting the remnants of the landlords of Poland."

The staff of the Polish Embassy remained virtually in seclusion, awaiting the staffs of the Leningrad and Minsk consulates in order to leave in a body. Their departure was expected in a day or two.

Agreement Reported

Meanwhile, "complete agreement" was said to have been reached among Soviet officials and the German military mission which arrived several days ago to assist in negotiation of various problems arising from the Russian-German occupation of Poland.

It was understood the Nazi mission would leave for home tomorrow.

Soviet newspapers were filled with accounts of the "joyous reception" with which they said Polish peasants greeted the advancing Red Army.

Some accounts said numerous Polish soldiers were surrendering and asking to be allowed to join the Russian military.

Normal Life Returning

Tass, official Soviet news agency, declared life was beginning to run normally in the towns and villages of Western Ukraine and White Russia under the Red army's occupation.

The agency told of the reopening of postal, telegraph and telephone communications and the organization of provisional city administrations.

In the town of Stolbsty, Tass said, the provisional administration announced that both Polish and Soviet currencies would be accepted in payment for goods.

"Publication of newspapers in the Ukrainian and Byelo-Russian languages started in a number of towns. Everywhere cinemas have reopened and exhibit the best Soviet films," Tass continued.

IL DUCE'S PAPER ADVISES ALLIES TO GIVE UP WAR

Article Believed Written by Mussolini Himself Hints at Alternatives.

POINTS TO HAILE SELASSIE

Says Other Statesmen May Join Him and Benes, From the Seine or 'the Foggy Thames.'

ROME, Sept. 21 (A. P.).—Premier Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo d'Italia, called on Adolf Hitler's adversaries today to accept what it called his offer of a limit on Germany's expansion and end the European war. Many observers believed Il Duce himself had written the two column article giving this advice.

If the fight continued, Il Popolo said, other statesmen might find themselves refugees of war, such as the Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, Premier Eduard Benes of Czecho-Slovakia, Premier Juan Negrin of Republican Spain, Foreign Minister Joseph Beck of Poland.

Meanwhile Italy continued her military preparations. Mussolini conferred with Gen. Luigi Negri, commander of the Alpine troops, on defenses of the frontier.

'On the Foggy Thames.'

Il Popolo's editorial recalled an "imaginary dialogue on the Thames" between Haile Selassie and Dr. Benes written by Mussolini last December in which both bemoaned their failure to yield to Italy and Germany. The editorial then reviewed "The shades of the conquered" and continued:

"Last of the series is Beck, a man who found an honorable way of salvation and refused it, considering himself guaranteed, very guaranteed, absolutely armored with guaranties."

Il Popolo then referred ominously to "conversations on the Vistula, the Pruth, the Danube"—rivers through or bounding Poland, Rumania, Czecho-Slovakia—and said that conversations might come tomorrow on the Seine or, again, on the foggy Thames."

Hitler's Promise.

The editorial presented the Italian view that further war is useless now that the "Poland or Versailles" no longer exists and Hitler has "promised anew to respect the frontiers of the Rhine and the Alps."

War today seems nonsense, the editorial said. Hitler before the present war had refrained from any claims on Poznan and Silesia, it continued, but his proposal for a peaceful settlement was rejected as unreasonable and Poland as a consequence had "lost all."

"For centuries and thousands of years Germanism sought to center to the east, west and south," the article said. "Now Hitler recognizes and offers an adjustment. Why, therefore, a new fight, a new destruction?"

EXPECT HARMONY AT PANAMA TALKS

Delegates Are Assembling for Neutrality Sessions.

PANAMA, Sept. 21 (A. P.).—Delegates arriving early for the neutrality conference of American republics said today that no major disagreements would crop up at the meetings starting Saturday.

They met in informal preliminary gatherings as Sumner Welles, Under-Secretary of State and head of the United States delegation, announced that President Juan Demostenes Arosemena of Panama would welcome the delegates at the opening session.

Upon his arrival yesterday Mr. Welles conferred with the Panama Foreign Minister, Marciso Garay, who outlined plans for the meetings of envoys from American countries. The proposal is to define means of preserving the peace of the Western Hemisphere and defending the interests of each nation from the effects of the European war.

Delegations have arrived from Colombia, Haiti, Salvador, Bolivia, Paraguay, Peru, Dominican Republic and other countries.

Delegates from Mexico were expected today, as well as from Chile and Cost. Rica.

German interest in the American republics was indicated by the arrival of Otto Reinebeck, German Minister to Panama and Central America, who lives in Guatemala. He is accompanied by his legation chancellor and aids. Several German newspaper men also have come to Panama.

Delegates Seek United Front at Panama Parley

Plans Laid for Conference of American Republics Which Opens Tomorrow

PANAMA CITY, Sept. 21 (AP).—Delegates arriving for the neutrality conference of American republics, which opens Saturday, stressed today the necessity for continental solidarity and mutual aid in resisting political and economic effects of the European war, and expressed the opinion that no major disagreements would crop up at the meeting.

Today they met in informal, preliminary gatherings as Sumner Welles, Under Secretary of State and head of the United States delegation, announced that President Juan Demostenes Arosemena of Panama would welcome the delegates at the opening session. Upon his arrival yesterday, Welles conferred with Panama Foreign Minister Marciso Garay, who outlined plans for the meeting.

Foreign Minister Alberto Ostria Gutierrez of Bolivia, who conferred today with Welles, declared it was imperative to place the rights of American neutral nations above the interests of belligerents. He said Bolivia had delayed her neutrality proclamation until after the meeting here because she wanted to make her stand conform to the solidarity accords expected to be reached. He also said that already shipping was at a standstill in many Latin American ports.

Foreign Minister Carlos Salazar, of Guatemala described the Panama assembly as a "test of the solidarity declarations made at the Buenos Aires and Lima Pan-American conferences," and declared that the situation in his country had been complicated by the loss of the German market, which normally absorbed 46 per cent of Guatemala's coffee output. He added that suspension of Grace Line service had left the west coast of Central America with restricted maritime transportation to the United States and without any service to South America.

Delegations have arrived from Colombia, Haiti, Salvador, Bolivia, Paraguay, Peru, the Dominican Republic and other countries. Delegates from Mexico are expected today as well as those from Chile and Costa Rica.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Sept. 21 (AP)—The Polish submarine Orzel, which escaped from internment at Tallinn, Estonia, is roaming the Baltic with sixteen torpedoes, it was reported today by two Estonian seamen carried off by the submersible and set adrift in the open sea.

The Estonians, on board the Orzel as guards when it broke loose from its moorings and dashed out of Tallinn harbor on Monday, were rescued today by the keeper of a lighthouse on a small island off the east coast of Gotland, Swedish island in the Baltic.

For three days the sailors, a seaman and a petty officer of the Estonian Navy, reported they were kept prisoners aboard the submarine before they were set adrift in a small dinghy in sight of land. Most of the time the Orzel was said to have remained submerged.

The Russian Navy, charging Estonian "abetment" in the escape, has launched a search for the submarine.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 21 (A. P.).—Two Estonian guards carried off by the crew of the Polish submarine Orzel in an escape from Tallinn, Estonia, were rescued last night by a lighthouse keeper off the eastern coast of Gotland, a Swedish island in the Baltic sea.

The keeper put out in a small boat when he observed a dinghy in the open sea containing a petty officer and seaman of the Estonian navy. They said they had been prisoners three days, and during most of that time the submarine had remained submerged.

Swedish authorities said they would be returned to their country. It previously was reported that a third guard on the submarine escaped when the craft fled.

The Orzel was interned at Tallinn after it sought refuge there. It has been hunted by the Russian navy, which charged that the Estonians had aided in the escape.

RIGA, Latvia, Sept. 21 (A. P.).—A report from Tallinn, Estonia, said that the Estonian Government yesterday granted a Russian demand for permission for the red fleet to search within Estonian waters for an escaped Polish submarine. Estonia's own warships were reported co-operating in the search.

London Reports Rescue of Crew of Freighter by Two Flying Boats in Atlantic

SEP 22 1939

(By the Associated Press)

Sinking of the British freighter Kensington Court yesterday sent the known wartime shipping losses to 43 and gave Germany's U-boats a 3 to 1 lead in their fight against the British and French.

At least 27 English vessels have plunged to the bottom. Germany has lost nine, including three wrecked on shore, three victims of mines (possibly their own) and three destroyed by British warships.

Neutral losses stood at 6, French 1.

Report Unconfirmed

The tonnage loss, exclusive of valuable cargoes, rose to 204,475 tons Loss in lives, including the estimated 515 on the torpedoed British aircraft carrier Courageous, stood at 722.

An unconfirmed report from Malmo, Sweden, said the German auxiliary schooner Lianne had been destroyed by a mine near Falsterbo on Sept. 4. The 125-ton steel vessel was built in 1914, was 92 feet long and owned by E. Waller of Hamburg.

In announcing the destruction of the Kensington Court, a 4863-ton ship in the African-South American trade, the British Ministry of Information said it was the first case in which an entire ship's crew (34) had been rescued by flying boats. Two Royal Air Force patrol boats effected the rescue somewhere in the Atlantic.

Owned by the Court Line of London, the ship left Rosario, Argentina, Aug. 15 for Dakar, West Africa. It was believed she had been diverted from her course and ordered to England.

Called "Absurd"

Other developments:

Berlin reports (unofficial) announced for the third time in a week that the missing liner Bremen had reached Murmansk, Russian port on the Arctic ocean, and the British Admiralty called "absurd" reports in London that the $20,000,000 ship had been captured by English warships.

The roaring of guns near Jutland which led many to believe a tremendous naval battle was in progress turned out to be Swedish artillery practice.

Marseille authorities removed 53 Germans from the Italian liner Virgilio, bound for South America.

England announced she had detained approximately 200 vessels for a contraband search. Eighty were released with their entire cargoes.

The Polish port of Gdynia, one of the most modern in the world, was renamed Gotenhafen (harbor of the Goths) by the Nazis. Remnants of Poland's merchant fleet of 96 were thus made orphans of the seas.

Some Nazi subs, empty of torpedoes, continued their depredations by shelling enemy merchantmen.

Questions Figures

Washington, Sept. 21. — (AP)—Records kept by ship radio men were cited today by Representative Harold Knutson, Rep., Minn., as indicating that total tonnage of vessels sunk in the European war is about double the reported figure.

"According to information given me by the men on vessels who get the SOS calls, the amount of tonnage already sunk is about 400,000 tons instead of the 200,000 reported to the public," Knutson said.

The lost tonnage is principally British, he said.

FORD CONTINUES ENEMY OF WAR

Has No Plans for Another Peace Ship, However.

AGAINST NEUTRALITY CHANGE

Says Removal of Profits Would Make Conflicts Improbable.

SEP 22 1939

DETROIT, Sept. 21 (A. P.).—Henry Ford emphasized today that the events of the last twenty-five years have not changed his unalterable opposition to war in any form or place, nor his determination to do his utmost to prevent the coming of another world conflict.

A quarter-century ago Mr. Ford sent a peace ship to Europe in the hope that he might "get the boys out of the trenches before Christmas." He has no plans for another such expedition, he said, but he made it clear that he intended to make himself heard against any movement which he believes might threaten a spread of the present war in Europe.

Specifically, Mr. Ford expressed his opposition to any amendment to the present neutrality law.

"That law," he said, "was written to keep us out of war. Any tampering with it, any change in it whatever, will be a step toward getting us into a war that will bring untold misery to millions of persons and set us back thousands of years."

Leans to Borah View.

Mr. Ford said he wasn't so sure there was "much of a war under way at present." "I am inclined to agree with Senator Borah's view," he added. Mr. Borah, Republican, of Idaho, was quoted in dispatches Monday as expressing the belief there was "something phony" about the war in Europe.

The seventy-six-year-old automobile manufacturer, who turned to the mass production of submarine chasers after his unsuccessful effort to stop the spread of the world war, repeated his advocacy of world disarmament and reiterated his admiration for the men who fought with the American forces in the world war. He is to be a guest at the convention of the American Legion in Chicago next week.

"These men who fought in the last war don't want another," he said. "They have it in their power to stop all wars for all time. They have it within their power to disarm the world, and I would advocate that."

Asked whether he planned to make an address at the legion convention, Mr. Ford, who rarely makes public speeches, said: "Certainly if I am asked to say something along this line I won't hesitate to get up on my feet and say what I have said here."

At the convention Mr. Ford will be the guest of Stephen F. Chadwick, national commander of the legion.

Learned From Peace Ship.

Mr. Ford said the peace ship expedition in 1915 cost him "about half a million dollers," but he added quickly: "I wouldn't take a million for what I learned from that adventure."

He restated his conviction that "only those who profit financially from the sale of munitions" want war, which he described as "nothing less than murder on a mass scale."

The fallacy of war, Mr. Ford added, is "a matter of simple reasoning; if there were no profit in war and no urge for power to dictate there would be no war."

SHIPPING

SEP 22 1939

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 21—Nine vessels ships had been tied up, agreed to the plan of settlement, Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union (C. I. O.) announced.

One Leaving Tomorrow

The ships are the Washington, scheduled to leave tomorrow with 800 passengers; American Trader, American Traveler, Acadia, St. John, Iroquois, Scanstates, Excambion and

30.24 3521

Black Gull. Some had been delayed as much as six days.

Under the plan, approved by union members at a mass meeting last night, seamen on ships entering European and Mediterranean ports would receive a 25 per cent. wage increase, transportation back to the United States in case their ships were lost, wages in the event of internment in a foreign port, loss of personal effects guaranteed up to $150, and assurance that charges would be withdrawn against seamen on trial for alleged failure to obey orders to sail.

Bonus Negotiations

It also was agreed, Curran said, negotiations would continue on establishment of a bonus for sailors on vessels plying between American ports and the war zones. The negotiations, he explained, are not to consume more than ten days, and any agreement will be retroactive to include ships which have left this port in the past few days.

Originally the union had demanded $250 bonuses, $25,000 insurance, continuance of pay in case of internment and a 40 per cent. increase in the personnel of ships when sailing in war zones.

SEP 22 1939

Emergency Increased

The United States Maritime Commission announced in Washington yesterday that personnel on vessels it owns and operates through managing agents in the North Atlantic would receive an emergency increase of twenty-five per cent. in their base pay. Each man, the commission said, will be allowed $150 to cover loss of personal effects and get base pay, plus the emergency compensation, in the event of internment.

P. V. G. Mitchell, vice-president of the United States Line, said the American Trader and the American Traveler probably would sail some time today.

Defends Company

Mitchell defended his company against a charge it had brought back too many aliens while Americans were stranded abroad. He said only 204 of the 2,352 passengers brought back this week by the Washington and the President Harding were aliens.

Senator Robert Reynolds (Dem., N. C.), who returned on the liner Washington, said it was "a shame and an outrage that Americans in Europe were refused transportation on these ships whereas aliens were occupying berths and cots that should have been occupied by American citizens."

MOUJIKS' MARCH WITH RUSS ARMY REMINDER OF '19

Polish Count Recalls Peasant Burning, Looting Behind Lines

SEP 22 1939

[By The Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 21—Reports that moujiks, or peasants, of Poland are marching side by side and fraternizing with invading Russian armies recalled today that important role they played in the last Russian-Polish war.

It was a bitter recollection to Count Anthony Potocki, nephew of the late Foreign Minister Maurice Zamoyski of Poland and cousin of that country's present Ambassador to the United States, Jerzy Potocki.

Rode Last Train Out

The dapper Count "Tony," now an American citizen, escaped with his wife, the former Gloria Griffiths, of Chicago, on the last train leaving westward from Poland before the outbreak of the present war.

"During our fight with the Bolshevists from 1919 to 1921, the moujiks were burning and looting behind our lines," said the Count, a dashing officer in his teens in that conflict. Not yet 20 when discharged from service, he was shell-shocked and wounded three times fighting the Russians.

Official spokesmen of England and France, Germany and Russia, and even the defeated Poles, have expressed concern over the fate that will befall these peasant minorities—the 11,000,000 Ukrainians, White Russians and Ruthenians who comprised one-third of Poland's population. Each side in the war would save them from the domination of nations on the other side.

Motives Held Ridiculous

But Count "Tony," defending "strong arm" government which had ruled over these minorities, indicated these high-sounding motives for war were slightly on the ridiculous side.

The moujiks, he said, were taught to hate the Polish landowners because the ruling class was Roman Catholic. The peasants are of the Greek orthodox faith.

"While I was fighting at the front in the war with the Bolshevists," he said, "they burned my family's estates to the ground and wrecked the beet sugar and other factories behind the lines."

New Revolt In 1930

As late as 1930 there was a renewal of this revolt in southeast Poland, during the Ukrainian uprising. Hundreds of Polish buildings were burned, post-offices robbed and Polish officials assassinated.

The Poles were pictured by the Count as the defenders of civilization in this section of Europe. For centuries, he said, the Ukraine—partly in Russia and partly in Poland since the World War—was "a no-man's land."

"They were called 'the wild fields,' and there the Poles fought off Tartars, Turks and Russians until it was taken by the Russians in the late eighteenth century."

SEP 22 1939

"Magnates" Gone Now

None of the families of the Polish "magnates," as he called the rulers of that time, survive today, the Count said.

Three weeks ago the Count and his wife were living peacefully on the estate of another cousin, a Polish prince, along the northern Polish-Russian border. This estate, he said, was reduced by losses to Russia and Lithuania "from 600,000 acres to only 250,000."

The Count is worried over the fate of many relatives, including two brothers, Thomas and Clement, one serving in the Polish motorized cavalry and the other in the lancers, and their aunt, the 92-year-old Princess Loubormirska, mother of the first Polish Minister to America, Prince Casimir Loubormiski.

"I warned her to leave her home, the blue palace in Warsaw, which was near the War Ministry," he said, "but I have had no word from her."

LITTLE MAGINOT—Forts Girdle Liege

SEP 22 1939

[By The Associated Press]

A three-line ring of defense works whose backbone is a canal and whose key is the fortified city of Liege has been built by Belgium to prevent any German attempt to use the country as a military highway again.

In addition France has extended the Maginot Line along the Belgian frontier with a complicated trench system, just in case Germany decides to take the Belgian route and breaks through.

Reported At Border

That possibility now has become of grave concern for the French, who hear reports of German troop concentrations near Aachen (Aix-la-Chappelle), facing Belgium on the route German troops took in 1914.

But Belgians have expressed confidence that Germans would not have so easy a time against the new defense works and the standing army of some 100,000 men as they had twenty-five years ago, when Liege was taken four days after the war started.

Military men say the Albert Canal, the Liege fortification system and the defense works extending to the northeast give the country a chance of holding back invasion until help can come.

The canal runs for seventy-five miles from the Ardennes mountains to the sea, at Antwerp. It is the last rampart of the three-line deefnse system.

The first line, along the fifty-five miles of Belgium's common frontier with Germany, is based on fortresses at Eupen and Malmedy which have been linked and extended by a system of trenches, blockhouses and reinforced concreted machine-gun nests.

Copied Maginot Line

Behind this is a stronger line of fortifications about which little is known except that it was started about the same time as the French Maginot line and follows the same general principles of construction.

Then comes the canal, which runs north from Liege to the Netherlands fronatier and then bends back, paralleling the border to Antwerp.

Semi-official publications have described the canal as solving the "very delicate military problem of covering the defense of Liege and barring the march toward Antwerp."

Economic Value

Built for a dual purpose—to free Belgian shipping from dependence on Netherlands waterways on the route from Liege to Antwerp and as a military stronghold—the canal is said to meet the old infantry sergeant's rule of thumb for a perfect fight:

"Clean out a clear field of fire and then blast hell out of the enemy."

All along the east bank, from which attack would come, underbrush has been cleared away and the broad meadows stretching toward the frontier afford the least possible cover to advancing troops.

250 Feet Wide

The canal itself—250 feet wide and from fifteen to twenty feet deep—provides a formidable water hazard.

Alon gthe west side, just above the water level, bulges of concrete and steel hide machine guns and rapid-fire artillery, in place to cover the waterway and land to the east.

In the rear are permanent fortress camps. Where the canal has been cut through hills they have been fortified.

Big Guns On Heights

The Caster cut, between Vise and Canne, close to the Netherlands frontier ,covers the Maestricht bridgehead, thirty miles north of Liege. Fortifications on the heights, which tower about 300 feet above the canal level, are marked with shielded openings for heavy caliber artillery. Concrete mush rooms along the ridge of the cut cover observation and fire-control posts.

Twelve forts girdle the city of Liege, the key point in northeastern communications and defense. The forts command all roads and bridges into Liege and are garrisoned on a permanent wartime footing.

Gaps between them are studded with pillboxes.

Midway between Liege and Aachen art the Battice forts. At the extreme northern point of the Liege fortification system are the Ebben-Emael defenses, commanding the Maas river between Liege and the Netherlands frontier.

POPE LIVING AUSTERE LIFE

Suffers Self Denial as Offering for Peace

SEP 22 1939

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy, Sept. 21 (AP)—Pope Pius adopted a regimen of monastic severity and self-denial as a personal offering to God that peace be restored to Europe, persons close to the papal household said today.

While the Pontiff lives amidst artistic splendor at the summer palace here, his daily routine was described as almost as austere as that of a trappist monk.

The means he has taken to beseech God for peace is not surprising to those who know him best, since before his election to the papacy he had hoped to end his career by retirément to a monastery.

Informants said the Pope spends long hours in prayer, especially addressing supplications to the Virgin Mary. He endures long fasts and lives mainly on green vegetables. He no longer sleeps in a bed but on the floor of his little bedroom without a mattress, these persons said. He arises several times during the night from his tormented sleep and goes to an adjoining chapel for prayer.

The Pope also rises early each morning to say a mass for peace.

The war has weighed heavily on the Pontiff and these days his face is more ashen in color than ever and his expression is one of worry.

Otherwise, however, his health is unchanged, persons who see him frequently say.

UNDATED RUMANIAN

BY JOHN EVANS Sept-21 SEP 22 1939

ASSOCIATED PRESS FOREIGN NEWS EDITOR

BULLETS THAT KILLED RUMANIA'S ANTI-NAZI "STRONG MAN" PREMIER TODAY MAY BE SIGNALS FOR THE OLD BALKAN POWDER KEG TO EXPLODE AGAIN.

ARMAND CALINESCU LONG HAD TRIED TO HOLD OFF THE SPREADING THREAT OF GERMAN DOMINATION THROUGH SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE. HE WAS KING CAROL'S CHOICE TO PREVENT THE RISE OF THE "IRON GUARD" PRO-NAZI FASCISTS WHOM THE GOVERNMENT OFTEN SAID HAD GERMAN NAZI SUPPORT, WHETHER OFFICIAL OR UNOFFICIAL.

GERMANY TODAY SHOWED HER STRONG HACD WHEN RUMANIA INTERNED THE FLEEING POLISH LEADERS, WHOM FRANCE AND BRITAIN ASKED HER TO ALLOW FREE PASSAGE TO THEM. GERMANY WANTED PRESIDENT IGNACE MOSCICKI, MARSHAL EDWARD SMIGLY-RYDZ, AND FOREIGN MINISTER JOZEF BECK OUT OF THE WAR.

THE 1914 WAR STARTED IN THE BALKANS WITH THE ASSASSINATION OF THE ARCHDUKE FRANCIS FERDINAND.

THE 1939 WAR IS WELL STARTED, BUT THE BALKANS STILL ARE THE GREAT BIG UNKNOWN QUANTITY IN THE ISSUE BETWEEN HITLER AND GERMANY'S OLD ENEMIES, BRITAIN AND FRANCE.

THE KILLING OF THE Ppremier IN BROAD DAYLIGHT AS HE WAS DRIVEN ALONG A MAIN BUCHAREST STREET COMES WITH THE SUPPRESSED IRON GUARD NAZI MOVEMENT RUMBLING INSIDE THE COUNTRY AND THE MASSIVE OLD ENEMY RUSSIA AT HER BORDERS.

RUMANIA, SEETHING INSIDE, IS UNDER THE DIRECT PRESSURE OF GERMANY, RUSSIA AND HUNGARY WITH A NONE TOO FRIENDLY BULGARIA AT HER BACK.

GERMANY NATURALLY LOOKS TOWARD THE GREAT RUMANIAN OIL FIELDS AND HER RICH WHEAT HARVESTS. SEP 22 1939

RUSSIA NEVER HAS TAKEN HER EYES FROM BESSARABIA, TAKEN FROM WEAKENED RUSSIA AFTER THE LAST WAR AND GIVEN TO RUMANIA BY THE ALLIES. BESSARABIA IS ONE-SEVENTH OF THE COUNTRY.

HUNGARY LOOKS HUNGRILY AT THE TERRITORY OF TRANSYLVANIA, ONE-FIFTH OF RUMANIA, TAKEN FROM THE ONCE GREAT, RICH MAGYAR COUNTRY.

BULGARIA, SMALL AND POOR LOST 9,000 SQUARE MILES TO RUMANIA.

ALTOGETHER RUMANIA GOT TWO-FIFTHS OF HER TERRITORY FROM THE ALLIES' WAR VICTORY. SHE LONG HAS BEEN NERVOUS ABOUT A POSSIBLE DAY OF RECKONING IF HER OLD ENEMIES SHOULD RISE IN POWER. HITLER'S DYNAMIC PROGRESS TOWARD CONTROL OF EASTERN EUROPE WORRIED HER.

RUMANIA STILL MAY STEER A NEUTRAL COURSE BUT SHE IS VULNERABLE INSIDE AND OUT.

THE FOUR POWERS WHOSE FORMER LAND SHE GOT THROUGH WAR MAY SEEK TO GET IT BACK.

RUMANIA ACCEPTED A BRITISH-FRENCH GUARANTY OF PROTECTION AGAINST "AGGRESSION"--WHICH MEANT GERMANY. POLAND HAD THE SAME GUARANTY AND TODAY GERMANY AND RUSSIA OCCUPY ALL BUT FOUR POINTS

BESIEGED AND APPARENTLY DESTINED TO FALL SOON.

AGAINST THE DARKNESS OF THIS PICTURE IS KING CAROL'S HOPE AND AIM TO STAY OUT OF THE WAR. HE HAS WON THE SUPPORT OF THE ARMY AND CERTAINLY HE HAS GAINED FAVOR WITH HIS PEOPLE WHO ONCE THOUGHT HIM WEAK. THE KINGSHIP HAS STEADIED HIM AND HE EARLY SOUGHT TO STAMP OUT THE FASCIST OR NAZI MOVEMENT THAT MIGHT TRY TO STAMP OUT HIM.

CAROL HAS ABOUT A MILLION MEN UNDER ARMS.

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

Sept. 21

ALLIES AND GERMANS ARE ALL SET FOR ACTION ON THE WESTERN FRONT--SO WELL SET, IN FACT, THAT EITHER WOULD BE COURTING DISASTER BY EMPLOYING UNDUE HASTE IN INITIATING A MAJOR OFFENSIVE.

HENCE THE COMPARATIVE INACTIVITY SO FAR. SEP 22 1939

THERE'S NO CALL FOR RUSH AT THIS JUNCTURE. THE CRUSHING OF POLAND REMOVES THE NECESSITY OF AN IMMEDIATE ALLIED ATTACK TO RELIEVE PRESSURE ON THE POLES. THE NAZIS STILL HAVEN'T BROKEN AWAY FROM HITLER'S POLICY OF NOT FIGHTING THE ALLIES UNLESS FORCED, ON THE GROUNDS THAT GERMANY HAS NO QUARREL WITH FRANCE AND ENGLAND.

CURIOUSLY ENOUGH, DESPITE THE FACT THAT THE SPRIG OF PEACE-ON-MY-TERMS OLIVE WHICH HITLER HELD OUT FROM DANZIG WAS TOSSED BACK AT HIM BY THE ALLIES, BERLIN STILL PERSISTS WITH PEACE PROPAGANDA. YESTERDAY THERE WAS ANOTHER STRIKING GESTURE OF FRIENDSHIP TOWARDS FRANCE IN A MILITARY FUNERAL TO FRENCH LIEUTENANT LOUIS DESCHANEL WHO WAS KILLED IN ACTION. AND THE BERLIN ALLGEMEINE ZEITUNG SAID:

"GERMANY HAS REACHED HER WAR OBJECTIVE. THE WEST DOES NOT INTEREST US. OF COURSE, SHOULD SOMEONE ATTACK US THERE WE WOULD DEFEND OURSELVES AS EFFECTIVELY AS POSSIBLE."

"WHY MUST THIS WAR GO ON?" CRIED THE BOERSEN ZEITUNG.

EVIDENTLY GERMAN HOPE OF PEACE ON THEIR OWN TERMS ISN'T ENTIRELY DEAD. BUT THE MOMENT IT BECOMES CERTAIN THAT THE WAR MUST CONTINUE--LOOK OUT FOR FIREWORKS.

SEP 22 1939

ONCE THE GLOVES ARE OFF IT WILL BE A NASTY WAR. THE HORRORS OF MODERN AIRRAIDS--THE WORLD'S AWFUL NIGHTMARE--ARE IN THE OFFING.

BRITISH PREMIER CHAMBERLAIN NAILED THE IMPERIAL STANDARD TO THE MAST YESTERDAY WHEN HE LAID DOWN ENGLAND'S WAR AIMS BEFORE HIS HOUSE OF COMMONS. HE REITERATED THE DETERMINATION TO PAY THE ALLIED DEBT OF HONOR TO POLAND, BUT THE THING CUT A LOT DEEPER THAN THAT.

"OUR GENERAL PURPOSE IN THIS STRUGGLE IS WELL KNOWN," HE SAID. "IT IS TO REDEEM EUROPE FROM THE PERPETUAL AND RECURRING FEAR OF GERMAN AGGRESSION AND ENABLE THE PEOPLES OF EUROPE TO PRESERVE THEIR INDEPENDENCE AND THEIR LIBERTIES."

30.24 3529

THAT'S PLAIN LANGUAGE AND IT COVERS MORE GROUND THAN A MAN WOULD WANT TO PLOW IN A DAY. BUT IT IS A LONG WAY FROM TELLING THE ENTIRE STORY.

IT BECOMES INCREASINGLY CLEAR THAT THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN PUT ON THE SPOT.

SEP 22 1939

NOT ONLY IS BRITAIN HERR HITLER'S CHIEF TARGET, BUT IT IS BEING POTTED AT BY OTHER COUNTRIES AS WELL. FRANCE, OF COURSE, IS SHARING ENGLAND'S TRIALS, BUT THE PRIZE SCALP SOUGHT IS JOHN BULL'S. THE BOYS HAVE GANGED ON HIM.

EVEN BEFORE YESTERDAY'S STATEMENT MR.CHAMBERLAIN HAD BROADENED THE POLISH ISSUE BY ANNOUNCING THAT ENGLAND WAS OUT TO "DESTROY HITLERISM." THE NAZI CHIEFTAIN ACCEPTED THAT GAGE IN HIS SPEECH AT DANZIG TUESDAY. EITHER OF THESE GENTLEMEN, HOWEVER, MIGHT HAVE CLARIFIED THE POSITION GREATLY BY AMPLIFYING SOMETHING LIKE THIS:

SO FAR AS CONCERNS EUROPE, THE MAIN ENGAGEMENT IS BETWEEN GERMANY AND BRITAIN. OR, TO BE MORE ACCURATE, IT IS BETWEEN BRITAIN AND HITLER, THE INDIVIDUAL, TOGETHER WITH THE HITLERIAN DOCTRINE WHICH WE KNOW AS NAZIISM.

IT IS TO DETERMINE WHETHER HITLER SHALL CONTINUE TO EXTEND HIS INFLUENCE UNTIL NAZI GERMANY IS THE DOMINANT POWER, OR WHETHER ENGLAND SHALL RETAIN THE POLITICO-ECONOMIC SUPERIORITY WHICH HAS GIVEN THAT NATION, AMONG OTHER THINGS, THE TITLE OF "POLICEMAN OF EUROPE."

ONE NATURALLY DOESN'T MEAN TO DISSOCIATE FRANCE FROM ALL THIS. THE FRENCH EMPIRE AND EUROPEAN INFLUENCE ALSO HAS BEEN CHALLENGED, AND SHE STANDS WITH ENGLAND. BUT WE ARE TALKING ABOUT THE ONE THE GANG IS GUNNING FOR IN PARTICULAR--JOHN BULL.

ENGLAND'S TROUBLES AREN'T CONFINED TO HITLER. RUSSIA'S NEW-BORN BROTHERHOOD (OR IS IT?) WITH GERMANY, AND THE COOPERATION BETWEEN THESE TWO GREAT POWERS, HAVE IN EFFECT BEEN A HEAVY BLOW TO BRITAIN, AND TO FRANCE AS WELL. THE SUPPLIES WHICH GERMANY EXPECTS TO GET FROM RUSSIA LIKELY WOULD ALTER THE WHOLE COMPLEXION OF THE CONFLICT.

ALSO, THIS NAZI-COMMUNIST CLOUD-BURST HAS DRIVEN ALL THE SMALLER NATIONS OF EASTERN EUROPE AND THE BALKANS SCURRING TO COVER. THEY ARE AFRAID OF GERMANY, OR OF RUSSIA, OR OF BOTH. ENGLAND'S EFFORTS TO PUT HER FINGER ON HER SMALL FRIENDS IS LIKE TRYING TO CATCH A FLEA.

AGAIN--UNTIL THE POLISH CRISIS GOT HOT, MUSSOLINI WAS CHALLENGING BRITAIN'S DOMINATION OF THE MEDITERRANEAN AND THE SUEZ CANAL--LIFELINE OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE--AND HITLER HIMSELF HAS BEEN QUIETLY REACHING FOR THE MEDITERRANEAN.

THE BERLIN-ROME AXIS ALSO WAS STRIKING HEAVILY AT BRITISH INFLUENCE IN THE NEAR EAST, ESPECIALLY AMONG THE ARAB PEOPLES, AND IN AFRICA.

OUT IN THE FAR EAST, WHERE ENGLAND HAS BEEN A POWER FOR LONG GENERATIONS, JAPAN IS DRIVING HARD TO OUST THE BRITISH FROM THEIR POSITION OF VAST INFLUENCE IN CHINA. BRITAIN'S WAR COMMITMENTS IN EUROPE ARE HELPING NIPPON.

SEP 22 1939

SINCE THE RUSSO-GERMAN FRIENDSHIP THE MUSCOVITES HAVE SIGNED AN ARMISTICE WITH THE JAPANESE FOR A CESSATION OF THE FIGHTING ALONG THE MONGOL-MANCHOUKUO BORDER. THIS GIVES NIPPON STILL GREATER FREEDOM TO DEAL WITH THE BRITISH.

ANYTHING AFFECTING ENGLISH PRESTIGE IN THE FAR EAST AFFECTS INDIA AND THE OTHER BRITISH POSSESSIONS AND DOMINIONS IN THAT PART OF THE WORLD.

IN SHORT, THE WHOLE BRITISH EMPIRE IS ON THE FIRING LINE.

A SIGNIFICANT SUGGESTION OF THIS POSITION CROPPED UP THE FIRST OF THE WEEK WHEN THE GERMAN RADIO REPEATEDLY MADE THE FOLLOWING REMARKABLE ASSERTION:

"THE PEOPLES OF AFRICA AND ASIA NOW DOMINATED BY ENGLAND AWAIT THE DAY OF FINAL SETTLEMENT OF THEIR SCORE WITH THE BRITISH EMPIRE."

LONDON, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—Premier Daladier and French military leaders flew to England today for a meeting of the Allied Supreme War Council.

The Ministry of Information announced that the meeting was attended on the British side by Prime Minister Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax and Lord Chatfield, Minister for Co-ordination of Defense.

Besides M. Daladier, the French conferees were Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, Commander-in-Chief of French and British armies, and Admiral Jean Darlan, chief of the Naval General Staff.

SEP 22 1939

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 22—The Supreme War Council of Great Britain and France met in England today and announced "complete agreement" on the course to be followed in the European war.

A communique from No. 10 Downing street said:

"A meeting of the Supreme War Council took place today in England.

"It was attended by M. Daladier, M. Dautry, General Gamelin and Admiral Darlan representing France, and Mr. Chamberlain, Lord Halifax and Lord Chatfield representing Great Britain.

"Two sittings were held in the morning and the afternoon.

Cites Complete Agreement

"The developments which have taken place since the meeting on September 14 were reviewed and their effect on the future course of events estimated. There was complete agreement on the course to be followed, both to meet these developments and to give effect to the Allied plans.

"The Supreme War Council considered the question of munitions and supplies, and agreement was reached on procedure for coordinating and perfecting the arrangements to be made by the two governments."

Importance Is Stressed

Thus the communique indicated the importance of the meeting of the council, consisting of the Premiers of France and England, Daladier and Chamberlain; the commander in chief of the British and French armies, Gen. Gustave Gamelin; France's naval chief, Admiral Jean Darlan; France's Armament Minister, Raoul Dautry; Great Britain's Foreign Secretary, Lord Halifax; and Britain's Minister for the Coordination of Defense, Lord Chatfield.

Since the September 14 meeting of the War Council, Russia has invaded Poland and Rumania's Prime Minister, Armand Calinescu, has been assassinated.

Bolsters Home Front

Today's protracted meeting took place as Great Britain, reinforcing her home front to "give strength behind the thrust" of her armies, told her workers "the increasing momentum of the national effort will call upon all the resources of our man and woman power."

SEP 23 1939

Other announcements by the Ministry included:

B. W. A. Massey, British vice-consul at Poznan, Poland, is missing. All other British consular officers in Poland have left safely.

The Duke of Windsor has arrived in France, where he was scheduled to take a military post as major general. There was no indication what his assignment would be.

Canada is expanding her air-service training, her anti-submarine defenses and gearing up her heavy industry to facilitate supplies of essential materials.

Condoles With Rumania

Britain expressed "profound shock" in a condolence message to Rumania on the assassination of Premier Calinescu.

A Ministry of Labor communique, reporting 76,000 more men had found work while 175,000 women lost jobs between August 14 and September 11 because of wartime dislocations, predicted adjustments would come with development of Britain's war program.

Reinforcing this view was a broadcast by Sir Samuel Hoare, Lord Privy Seal, asserting that in Great Britain's war effort "there will be no room for idle hands" and adding "I am certain that at no distant date there is scarcely an able-bodied man or woman whose services the community will not need. Be patient, therefore, if you have sought war work and have not yet found it. The war work will soon be seeking you."

Nazi Prisoners Arrive

The Ministry of Information reported that a number of German officers, prisoners of war, had been brought to England and placed in a prison camp. Other prisoners, said the ministry's communique, were taken to another camp.

The announcement recalled that on September 15 Chamberlain told the House of Commons that prisoners had been taken in British successes against submarines.

A report from the British Press Association indicated internal local politics in Britain had been dispensed with for the duration of the war. The announcement said representatives of principal British political parties had agreed [illegible] would be no municipal or Parliamentary elections while the war contin-

Election Expected

Before the beginning of the war it had been expected a general election would be held in November.

The first victory for the Royal Air Force on the Western front during the 1939 European war was announced in a Government communique. It was also the first official indication that British planes on the Western front had been active in other than reconnaissance operations.

"During the course of air operations Wednesday, September 20, one German fighter was shot down by our aircraft in France," said a Ministry of Information communique.

Anti-Sub Steps Taken

Following the statement of the owners of the 1,567-ton British steamer Arkleside that she had been "lost at sea" and her crew brought ashore, the Ministry of Information reiterated that "energetic measures" were being taken against German submarines.

Methods developed since the end of the World War are being used in the operations against submarines, the ministry continued, but the nature of those methods was not disclosed.

The ministry noted losses at the beginning of hostilities were understandable because undersea craft had been stationed at strategic places, but added that submarines were "very vulnerable."

With banner lines, editorials and cartoons, British newspapers reflected popular belief in Britain that President Roosevelt's message to Congress eventually would result in making American planes, munitions and war supplies available to Britain and France.

The publications were careful, however, to make no definite predictions on that possibility, and there was no official reaction.

on West Front.

GERMAN CRAFT SHOT DOWN

LONDON, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—A British Government announcement today described a victory for Royal Air Force planes on the western front for the first time in the 1939 European war.

SEP 23 1939

A Ministry of Information communique said "during the course of air operations on Wednesday, September 20, one German fighter was shot down by our aircraft in France."

This was the first official intimation that British planes on the western front had taken the offensive in anything more than reconnaissance flights.

The announcement that a German plane was shot down served in some measure to allay popular impatience for news of a real British military action now that there are reports of vast German troop and plane transfers to the western front.

Navy Fighting U-boats.

The Ministry of Information announced tonight that the British Navy has been taking "energetic measures" against German submarines with methods developed since the end of the world war.

The methods were not disclosed.

British losses at the start were "understandable," the communique said, because enemy submarines "were stationed in the best strategic position for attacking trade before the outbreak of hostilities."

"We may have to endure great losses at sea before the present war is ended, but submarines alone can never maintain an adequate blockade or wholly deny the use of the sea to surface ships," the ministry stated.

The communique added, "Submarines are very vulnerable."

Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons six or seven submarines were sunk in the first two weeks of the war.

SEP 23 1939

Paris, Sept. 22.—A major offensive appeared imminent tonight on the Western Front. Men and munitions of both German and French were ready for a big push [illegible] spotlighted a new sector on the western front. Observers said there were heavy troop movements along the Rhine frontier, a front which has been fairly inactive since the French shelled it in the opening days of the war.

With the reinforcement of German air squadrons on the western front flights began over France again. An alarm was sounded to-

It apparently was a toss-up, however, whether the French or Germans would strike the first blow. Political signs pointed to the French; military advices seemed to indicate it would be the Germans who would take the initiative.

At the same time reported activity just north of Basle, Switzerland, where the borders of Germany, France and Switzerland join, night at the northern industrial city of Lille but the "all clear" signal was given a half-hour later without Nazi planes appearing.

French preliminary activity on the front left military observers in Paris with the feeling that it was more defensive than offensive.

Both French and German forces were reported to be moving up big guns south and east of Saarbruecken, key German industrial city and apparently the immediate goal of French Army penetration into the Saar.

Earlier French military advices had indicated that French pressure against the city had been renewed.

The French were heartened by reports of their aerial observers that the Germans apparently had suffered heavy losses in fighting in Poland, since German units being shifted to the western front were so reduced in effectives it was noticeable from the air.

The French indirectly disclosed an aerial defeat with the publication of news in the afternoon papers of the death of a pilot and his observer "gloriously fallen on the Saar front." The pilot was Lieut. Jean Sueur, who was related by birth and marriage to many old families of France. His observer was Capt. Rossignol.

lese troops were reported en route to the Western front. Sharpshooters mobilized from France's colonial reservoir of manpower were said to be moving up the west coast of Africa in guarded transports.

Observers saw indications in the speech which Premier Daladier broadcast to the world last night that France and Britain may wage a "defensive" war—at least on the land.

Daladier's Statement

The Premier, accepting Adolf Hitler's statements at Danzig as a challenge for a fight to the finish, pictured the Allied commanders as having profited from World War experience with mass attacks.

He said the commanders "have known how to avoid unconsidered and murderous offensives."

"Big Push" May Be Passe

This was taken by some to indicate that offensives of the World War "big push" type would not be launched and that emphasis would be laid on airplanes and a naval blockade to sap Germany's strength gradually.

Some military experts have said this

SEP 23 1939

ing planes, which were believed to have been attracted by word that the French were fortifying the area they had occupied and by heavy troop movements behind the lines.

Some observers doubted that there would be any major offensive in the west before next month. It would take that long to complete the mopping-up process in Poland, they said.

President Roosevelt's request that Congress repeal the American arms embargo was widely published, but there was little editorial comment. French hopes for war material from the United States were known long before the war began.

Daladier said "the generous efforts of the highest moral and political authorities of the United States and Europe" had failed to prevent the German invasion of Poland.

—THE WAR—

SEP 23 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, Sept. 22—A new drive against the German industrial city of Saarbrücken was reported today by the French general staff.

A military communique indicated that a recent lull had been shattered by new French maneuvers and advance-guard skirmishes.

Artillery on both sides, the communique said, was active along the entire front from the Moselle river at the Luxembourg-German frontier to the Rhine river, which becomes the French-German boundary a hundred miles to the southeast.

Heavy Gun Duel Reported In Progress

French advance patrols were said to be cautiously feeling their way deeper into German territory south of Saarbrücken. Small patrols were sent out to learn the strength and future plans of the German defense units.

A heavy gun duel was reported in progress, although firing on both sides was characterized as sporadic.

Today's Communique

The War Ministry's communique, issued at 10 A. M., said:

Activity by our advance guards in the regions south of Saarbrücken and east of the Blies river.

Artillery action of both sides along the entire front.

Colonial Troops On Way

The French empire's black Senega-form of warfare fitted modern conditions, and "steam-roller" tactics are out of date.

French dispatches said the army was digging in solidly on positions captured along the 100-mile front. Such entrenchment would be in anticipation of a major German drive, which has been expected ever since the Germans reinforced their defense line with troops shifted from Poland.

French Air Victories Claimed

The dispatches said French flyers brought down several German bomb-

Basel, Switzerland, Sept. 22—French army units—striking a wedge toward the Siegfried Line—were said today to have occppied more than eighty German towns and villages in the Sar-Moselle river triangle northeast of the French-German-Luxembourg border junction.

A German "buffer line" in front of the West Wall defense was reported to be doggedly resisting the methodical French advance into the apex of the triangle.

SEP 23 1939

Heavy Fighting Took Place

Observers said the French were increasing their pressure along the Moselle, which separates Luxembourg and Germany. The renewed activity followed a lull described as "strategic waiting," during which both sides jockeyed for positions for a possible "big push."

Word reaching Basel indicated that the German defenders had been forced back from the Key Rock—a strategic pinnacle on the western bank of the Saar river. The rock was fortified as an advance unit of the Siegfried Line—a watchdog over smaller defense works in the Saarburg Forest.

Sierck Forts Called Active

Artillery in the French forts at Sierck—ahead of the main Maginot Line near where the Moselle river flows across the border into Germany—were said to have shelled small German forts in the Moselle Valley.

There also were reports that big French guns in forest forts at Bouzonville, Boulay, Stavold and Sarreguemines—along a twenty-mile front—hammered at Germany's West Wall between Saarlautern and Saarbrücken.

Fighting along the Saar river reached a temporary standstill last week when the French moved up to positions from which they could advance little farther without a major offensive against the Siegfried Line. German counter-attacks apparently failed to budge the French from these positions.

Other Artillery Reports

East of Bitche, toward the Rhine Valley, French longlrange guns were said to have blasted pillboxes, trenches and mine fields in front of the West Wall forts between Pirmasens and Zweibrücken, and shelled railways and highways linking this section to the key town of aiserslautern, behind the forts.

Farther east, the Maginot guns were reported concentrating on large sections of the Haardt Forests where Germans were believed to have laid mine fields and stretched a tangle of barbed wire.

First Phase Has Ended.

Paris, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—The French Government told the nation tonight that "the first phase of the war was ended" with Poland subjected, but with the allies in a stronger position to battle Germany.

Jean Giraudoux, General Commissioner of Information, declared in a broadcast that Germany had lost heavily in the invasion of Poland, while the western front had been thrust into German territory.

Contrasting the conquest of Poland with Germany's bloodless seizures of Austria and Czecho-Slovakia, Giraudoux said:

"Germany no longer faces peace, but a war of which she has lost command."

Tonight the French General Staff issued the following communique on the day's activities:

"It was a calm day on the entire front.

"Our sea forces continue to assure efficiently the protection of our convoys and to pursue the enemy submarines."

French Planes Fired Upon

BERNE, Switzerland, Sept. 22 (AP).—The Swiss military command announced today that two French warplanes crossed over Swiss territory near Basel Wednesday and returned to France only after Swiss anti-aircraft guns opened fire.

The first plane, a bomber, flew over the Porrentruy region. The second, a fighter, was sighted two hours later in the same region.

WARSAW IS AWARDED TO GERMANS IN DEAL

Hitler's Troops to Yield Some Ground in Accord Reached in Moscow—Russia Gets Lwow and Wilno.

SEP 23 1939

BERLIN, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—A German-Russian agreement under which Germany is withdrawing her armies in Poland to the west of the continuous north-south line formed by the Pissa, Narew, Vistula and San rivers was announced here today.

Warsaw, on the west bank of the Vistula, will remain in German hands.

The announcement described the line of the rivers as the "demarcation line," but it was pointed out that future boundaries would not necessarily follow it.

Russian armies, however, will occupy eastern Poland up to this line, including the cities of Lublin, Luck, Lwow, Brezesc (Brest-Litovsk), Bialystok and Wilno (Vilna).

The fate of Warsaw was understood to have been one of the last points agreed upon in the Nazi-Soviet negotiations on immediate apportionment of Polish territory.

Diplomatic negotiations to settle the future of the Polish people so far as Germany and Russia are concerned and to establish future German-Russian boundaries were continuing in Moscow as staff officers fixed terms of army movements.

[Moscow dispatches told of a joint Soviet Russian-German communique issued there today confirming the Berlin account of the agreement.]

Fight Side by Side.

The "perfect unison" of German and Russian armies operating in Poland was announced today in a high command communique which told of the relief by Soviet troops of German units fighting near the southwestern Polish city of Lwow.

"Movements of the German and Russian troops toward an agreed demarcation line is proceeding on schedule and in perfect unison," the statement said.

Only isolated shock troop operations were reported on the western front where the Germans said a French pursuit plane was shot down in an air fight.

Russia received more Polish territory than she anticipated and foreign observers here expressed amazement that so many Poles had been left for Russia.

The new salient brings Russia to new frontiers along the Rumanian and Hungarian borders—points at which her troops stood tonight after swift marches across Poland.

The boundaries which Russia must defend—unless negotiations in Moscow later redraw the lines in a permanent settlement—will extend much beyond the proper White Russian and Ukrainian sections.

Some quarters expressed the view it was an extremely strategic move by the Germans to extend the Soviet border beyond what is considered her natural line. It was said also that it seemed to explode the idea which had been prevalent here that Russia and Germany planned to create a buffer "Polish state" between them.

The Red army tonight issued the following communique:

"On September 22 Red army troops acting in western Byelorussia occupied the town of Byelostok, the fortress of Brest-Litovsk, and started clearing of remnants of the Polish army in the Avgustov forests northwest of Grodnow.

"Liquidates" Poles

"In the western Ukraine Red army troops engaged in liquidation of remnants of the Polish army cleared the area of Sarny of groups of officers.

"Six Polish infantry divisions, two independent regiments headed by General Langer, surrendered themselves to Red army troops engaged in breaking the resistance of Polish army units in the area of Lwow. According to incomplete data from September 17 to September 21, 120,000 soldiers and officers of the Polish army taken prisoners, 380 guns, 1,400 machine guns captured."

Russia Draws New Boundary Line Stretching Into Warsaw's Outskirts

Takes Oil Fields, Timber, Leaving Industrial Area To Germans

Moscow, Sept. 22—A new Soviet Russian boundary stretching into the outskirts of Warsaw itself and embracing several million Poles was drawn tonight in a joint communique announced here and in Berlin.

Russia Gets 3/5 of Poland; Rest to Nazis

Berlin, Sept. 22.—A German-Russian agreement today gave Soviet Russia approximately three-fifths of Poland as the zone of occupation for her troops, leaving two-fifths for Nazi soldiers.

It was pointed out, however, that the demarcation line did not necessarily mark the future boundaries, which still are the subject of diplomatic negotiations in Moscow.

The line announced runs from the point where the Pisa River crosses the Polish-East Prussian border in the north on down along the Pisa to the Narew; along the Narew to the River Bug; along the Bug to the Vistula, northwest of Warsaw; southward along the Vistula at the eastern edge of Warsaw to the San River; and along the San to the Polish-Hungarian border somewhat east of the junction of the Slovak-Hungarian-Polish boundaries.

Moscow, Sept. 22 (AP).—Further estward strides by the Russian my toward the line of demarcation established by Germany and the U. S. S. R. were announced tonight in a Soviet communique.

The Red Army occupied Brest-Litovsk, as well as Bialystok, 75 miles to the north, the communique said. The army took prisoner 120,000 Polish army officers and men and captured 380 cannon and 1,400 machine guns.

In other occupied areas of Poland, the Russian troops are reported engaged in mopping up operations.

Diplomatic sources said tonight that it appeared Soviet Russia had received more Polish territory than she anticipated.

SOVIET BOATS IN ACTION

Moscow, Sept. 22 (AP)—Soviet Russian boats have been supporting the land forces invading western Ukraine and White Russian sections of Poland, reports from the front indicated today.

The ships, whose size was not disclosed, were said to have sailed September 18 from Dnieper, in Russia, along the Dnieper river and into tributaries in eastern Poland.

It was believed here the advance of the Red Armies into Poland was nearing an end. Newspapers carried reports of single Soviet soldiers capturing whole groups of Polish officers.

SOVIET TROOPS REACH BORDER OF HUNGARY

Arrive On Heels Of Flood Of Polish Refugees

Warsaw Still Holding Out As Third Week Of Siege Begins

By ELMER W. PETERSON
Associated Press Correspondent

Vereczke, Hungary (At the Polish Frontier), Sept. 22—Soviet-Russian troops reached the Hungarian frontier at sunset today on the heels of a vast new flood of Polish military and civilian refugees who turned border areas into a new chaos of human confusion, suffering and misery.

It was estimated that fully 80,000 Polish soldiers and civilians have now found sanctuary on Hungarian soil.

Meanwhile, the Warsaw radio station broadcast that Poland's capital still was holding out against the Germans as the third week of its siege began.

The station tonight broadcast the following communique:

"The enemy shelled the city all day today and tonight. The Praga, Zacisze and Marymunt districts were shelled. The west was quieter. All enemy attacks were repulsed.

Two Planes Shot Down

"There were two air raids today and two airplanes were shot down."

The invading Soviet troops took up positions along nearly ninety miles of the Hungarian frontier.

Developments in the refugee scenes included:

The arrival of two Polish divisions totaling 15,000 men at Korosmezo.

Reports that 120,000 Polish refugees, including many Jews, were trapped at the corner of the Rumanian-Hungarian frontier, where they were denied entrance into Rumania, with 75,000 now surging toward Hungary.

A Polish bombing plane landed near Korosmezo, with two of the crew dead from fighting off German pursuit planes.

Polish troops retreating into Hungary through this village were cheered by the news that the Warsaw radio was functioning. A shrill air-raid alarm broadcast from Warsaw sounded clear in unmistakable evidence that German warplanes once more were attacking Poland's last major stronghold.

Utterances Defiant

Defiant utterances and appeals to fight unto death followed the sounding of the alarm as a million persons, locked inside the city which has lived through two weeks of death and destruction, continued to fight.

The wet, bedraggled and weary Polish troops, pushed out of their homeland by the combined forces of German and Russian troops, found a new touch of hope and pride in the knowledge that Warsaw still holds.

The soldiers explained that they fled because they were unable as small groups to inflict any damage either physical or moral on the enemy. But Warsaw has become a symbol to the tired, dispirited soldiers, the more so since many have families, relatives or friends in the city which thus far refuses to give in.

Better To Die, He Says

"War is not settled by quick victories—death is better than the loss of liberty," the Warsaw broadcaster declared from the city where cavalry horses have become food, where the sound of bombs now is routine, where collapsing buildings and new groups of dead and wounded can only be judged routine.

Calmly, the radio broadcaster recited incidents of courage in the Polish capital, while on the outskirts of the city barricaded Polish troops fought on during one more air raid.

Personal messages gave a clue to the human tragedies within the city.

"I am wounded and in the hospital, but will soon be better," said one. "God bless you wherever you are."

Still Holding Out

Soldiers reported a broken section of the Polish army still was holding out west of Lwow, although it was being gradually cut to pieces through land and air attacks.

Officers told how this group, encircled on three sides by Germans, were unable to retreat eastward because of Soviet forces and still were clinging grimly to shallow, hastily dug defenses in hilly forest country.

Lieutenant General Sosnowski, who was second in command of the Polish forces, is in charge of this defense, according to reports reaching here. He had charge of four divisions in the Lwow area when the city was surrounded and flew to join the present group of defenders. Tremendous losses were said to have been suffered by the group.

Bridge Mines Set Off

Micislav Borecki, a Polish priest, told how Ukrainian bands touched off a mine under a bridge at Kamionka, 30 miles northwest of Lwow, as 145 refugees were crossing the span. He said only 35 survived the explosion, while 11 heavily loaded busses crashed into the wreckage and mass of twisted human bodies.

Herded together aimlessly, refugees throughout this area sought rest in barns, railway station, carts and automobiles. They talk in whispers, still under the effect of the days of fear.

Terrorists Spare No One, Says Officer

'Jews and Poles Declared Robbed And Murdered

By the Associated Press.

VERECZKE, Hungary (at the Polish Frontier, Sept. 22.—The final internment of thousands of Polish soldiers and officers, routed by the German and Soviet Russian invasions, was started here today.

Meanwhile, German units consolidated their frontier positions. As fleeing Poles moved down one side of the Carpathians the conquerors of Poland climbed the other toward the border passes.

Reports on how the Germans and Russians would divide the Polish Carpathians were still confused. Generally Hungarians believed the division would be about equal, with the Russians taking the two large passes which link northeastern Hungary to Poland.

Tales of Wild Rule.

Refugees coming through the Carpathian passes brought tales of wild rule over a small section of Poland by roving bands of Ukrainians whose signal for action apparently was the start last Sunday of the Russian occupation.

There were stories of day-long battles between Ukrainians and Polish police, of Poles and Jews alike killed in a wave of looting and destruction which completed the havoc started by German bombing planes. Entire villages were said to have been burned.

Polish officers arriving on Hungarian soil told of escaping from the German-Russian vise only to come upon small villages which "dripped with blood" from activities of the terrorist bands.

How the terrorists obtained their arms and ammunition was a mystery.

A young cavalry officer told of flight from the Lwow district only two hours before arrival of the Russians.

"His Throat Cut."

"Between Lwow and Stryj, to the south," he said, "we found the entrance to the village of Mikolajow barred by an enormous sign reading, 'Heil Hitler! Hail Ukrainian Republic!'

"In this village we found savage butchery of racial Poles and Jews—men, women and children alike.

"We found the proprietor of the hotel with his throat cut.

"We restored order as best we could, shooting all terrorists we could find before continuing on. It was a terrible scene of death and destruction.

"During that night as we rode south we passed several flaming villages, obviously fired by the terrorists."

Ukrainians were reported to have taken possession of Lwow, Stryj and Stanislawow and for a time had their own government.

There was no noticeable apprehension in Hungary's highland province of Ruthenia—despite the nearness of German and Soviet armies. Among the simple Russian-speaking peasants respect for Russia seemed to have been greatly increased by recent events.

Prefer Russians.

There was no question but that these Ruthenians—formerly citizens of Czechoslovakia—preferred Russians across the border to Germans.

There was no obvious reinforcement of the Hungarian frontier guard beyond the strength needed to control the influx of Polish soldiers, but it was taken for granted that Hungary was ready for any eventuality.

Herded together aimlessly, refugees throughout this area sought rest in barns, railway stations, carts and automobiles. They talk in whispers, still under the effects of the days of fear. Radios in the overloaded automobiles were kept tuned to the beleaguered Warsaw station.

SEP 23 1939

As the hopeless huddled around crude campfires the broadcast was drowned out suddenly at 9:20 p. m. (4:20 New York time) by songs and noises from a stronger station identified as German. The interference, which continued two hours later, started as Col. Vaclav Lipinski, staff officer of the Warsaw defense, declared "Germany cannot hold out indefinitely. The British blockade is working."

This was the signal for the interference, and fifteen minutes later songs from the stronger station gave way to a speech attacking France and Great Britain. Before the Warsaw station was drowned out refugees heard Warsaw's Mayor, Stefan Starzynski, report that German planes had "drenched" the city with pamphlets "written in bad Polish which is evidence no Pole will help the Germans write such pamphlets."

Scenes such as this were pr... along the roads: Women in ... stained cars trying to soothe a crying child; campfires with groups of children huddled about; Red Cross units in action—a Polish girl in an army nurse uniform giving aid; army physicians treating hundreds of wounded; Hungarian and Polish officers snatching a bite of food while directing relief activities.

Russians Along Hungarian Line

KOROSMEZO, Hungary, Sept 22 (AP)—Soviet Russian troops arrived at the Polish-Hungarian frontier at sunset today, having driven west from the Polish-Russian border across the southeastern end of Poland.

The soldiers took up positions along nearly ninety miles of Hungarian border from the juncture of the Polish - Hungarian - Rumanian frontiers a few miles southeast of here to Beskid, to the northwest.

Micislav Borecki, a Polish priest, told how Ukrainian bands had touched off a mine under a bridge at Kamionka, thirty miles northwest of Lwow, as 145 refugees were crossing the span. He said only thirty-five survived the explosion, while eleven heavily loaded buses crashed into the wreckage and mass of twisted human bodies.

Herded together aimlessly, refugees throughout this area sought rest in barns, railway stations, carts and automobiles. They talk in whispers, still under the effects of the days of fear.

Scenes such as this were prevalent along the roads: women in mud-stained cars trying to soothe a crying child; campfires with groups of children huddled about; Red Cross units in action—a Polish girl in an army nurse uniform giving aid; army physicians treating hundreds of wounded; Hungarian and Polish officers snatching a bite of food while directing relief activities.

Radio Rallies Warsaw to 3d Week of Siege

SEP 23 1939

'War Is Not Settled by Quick Victories,' Says Speaker, After All-Day Shelling

VERECZKE, Hungary (at the Polish frontier), Sept, 22 (AP).—The radio station of beleaguered Warsaw told the world in a dramatic broadcast today that Poland's capital still was holding out against the Germans as the third week of siege began. Speaking calmly, the broadcaster recited incidents of courage while Polish troops barricated in the outskirts of the city fought on during one more air raid.

"War is not settled by quick victories—death is better than loss of liberty," the announcer declared.

In an official broadcast tonight, the Warsaw station announced: "The enemy shelled the city all day today and tonight. The Praga, Zacisze and Marymunt districts are shelled. The west was quieter. All enemy attacks were repulsed. There were two air raids today and two airplanes were shot down."

The first broadcast was heard here at sunset, as Soviet troops reached the Hungarian frontier on the heels of a vast, new flood of Polish military and civilian refugees, who turned border areas into chaos of human confusion, suffering and misery. It was estimated that fully 80,000 Polish soldiers and civilians had now found sanctuary on Hungarian soil.

Vereczke, Hungary (at the Polish Frontier), Sept 22 (AP)—One of the last Poles to escape from Soviet-occupied eastern Poland was Prince Henry Lubomirski, son of Poland's first Ambassador to Washington.

In Krakow when the German invasion started, the Prince left for his family estate at Horodenka, then fled to the border by way of Kuty, in southeastern Poland.

Rumania Heeds Nazi Requests

BERLIN, Sept. 22 (AP)—It was disclosed tonight that the interning of Polish military officers and restrictions placed on Polish Government officials by Rumania were made at the request of Germany.

It was said Germans had desired to prevent the Poles from going to France and there operating or agitating against Germany.

Bank of Poland gold also was said to be blocked in Rumania, whose geographic position was said to have made her lean over backward to observe neutrality and to promise continued delivery of raw materials.

Hitler Climbs a Hill For a Look at Warsaw

Sees Besieged City While on North Poland Tour

SEP 23 1939

BERLIN, Sept. 22 (AP)—Fuehrer Adolf Hitler got a distant view of Warsaw today. He saw the Polish capital, surrounded by his troops, from a high point as he toured the operations zone of the Nazi North Army, which is advancing southward from East Prussia over the Bug and Narew Rivers.

The trip also enabled Hitler to see the work of the German air force in crippling rail communications leading into beleaguered Warsaw. To the eastward he was shown how German bombs wrecked a Polish armored train attempting to break through German lines.

Nazis Won't Comment On Roosevelt Message

SEP 23 1939

Fear to Alienate Members of Congress

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—President Roosevelt's request to Congress to lift the arms embargo drew no official German response today, but unofficial sources considered it good as well as bad news for Germany.

Unofficial Comment

Unofficial opinion, however, noted with satisfaction that the President had expressed determination to keep the United States out of war and had struck what they regarded as a note of independence from Great Britain.

One explanation for the reluctance of officialdom to comment was recognition here that a Presidential message does not necessarily forecast approval by Congress and that Germany, therefore, was hesitant to take a step that might alienate any views favorable to Germany among individual Congressmen.

Some Pleasure

In some informed quarters, however, pleasure was shown at a brief DNB (German official news agency) account emphasizing what it said was the President's observation that no particular group of nations can claim exclusive distinction as a "peace front."

What the President said was: "Let no man or group in any walk of life assume exclusive protectorate over the future well-being of America. . . . Let no group assume the exclusive label of the peace 'bloc.' We all belong to it."

Putting Poles To Work

The real drive of Germany's army in Poland for possession of Warsaw has not yet started, military authorities declared. So far, they said, only preparations have been made and the beginning of the action will be announced by the army high command.

Finding more than 240,000 Polish war prisoners to feed, authorities have decided to make them work in industry. Until now, Germany has used captured Poles as farm hands. An official announcement did not disclose whether the prisoners would be employed in munitions factories.

More Food Rationing

German authorities, meanwhile, were preparing further food rationing.

After Monday, it was reported, there will be no further milk for adults. This limitation, commercial circles said, might be temporary. They expressed belief a milk restriction would be the result of a diversion of milk trucks from their usual delivery routes to other purposes in the service of the nation.

New Cards

New rations cards, it also was said, will be issued for next week to limit food for those who eat in restaurants.

It was reported that food cards would be necessary in order to dine out and that waiters would clip out coupons for food consumed to prevent purchase of equal amounts of similar foods in stores. Such a regulation would be similar to one that prevailed toward the end of the World War.

Berlin Reports Roosevelt Acts 'As Expected'

SEP 23 1939

Some Officials Surprised, However, That Ban on War Loans Is Requested

BERLIN, Sept. 22 (AP).—Official quarters, after studying President Roosevelt's proposals for amending the United States neutrality act, commented today "it was about what was expected." Nazi officials expressed some surprise that a ban on war loans was asked.

"Prohibition of American ships from entering belligerent zones would be good, but these items do not do away with the fact that the cash-and-carry plan would benefit Britain exclusively," officials stated. They reminded that President Wilson spoke the same language in 1916 "but still the United States was dragged into the war."

Look to Mussolini

Nazis meanwhile said they hoped Germany would be able to profit by the efforts of Premier Benito Mussolini, Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's axis ally, to organize a neutral bloc in southeastern Europe to promote Italian trade. They said that they saw Fascist success there as keeping supplies flowing to Germany while Hitler was striving to keep the Scandinavian countries and the Netherlands and Belgium from sympathizing with Great Britain. A great effort has been exerted from the start of the war to assure trade routes with neutral states as a means of softening the British blockade.

These sources said they also hoped Turkey and Greece, both members of the British-French "peace front" forged before the war, would turn toward Germany, and intimated that Italy and Greece were expected to reach a friendship pact in the near future.

They also cast doubts on the efficacy of Turkey's mutual assistance agreements with Britain and France, pointing out that the Turkish Foreign Minister, Sukru Saracoglu, was en route to Moscow to discuss the situation created by the outbreak of war.

These sources said that if Turkey should abide by her agreements with Britain and France, as a result of the new Nazi-Communist collaboration, she might face the threat of Russian occupation of the Dardanelles.

Germany Hopes to Profit

BERLIN, Sept. 22 (AP)—Hope that Germany would be able to profit by the efforts of Premier Mussolini, Chancellor Hitler's Axis ally, to organize a neutral bloc in southeastern Europe to promote Italian trade, was exposed here today.

Observers said that they saw a Fascist success there as keeping supplies flowing to Germany while Herr Hitler was striving to keep the Scandinavian countries, the Netherlands and Belgium from sympathizing with Great Briatin.

A great effort has been exerted from the start of the war to assure trade routes with neutral States as a means of softening the British blockade.

These sources said they also hoped Turkey and Greece, both members of the British-French front forged before the war, would turn toward Germany, and intimated that Italy and Greece were expected to reach a friendship pact in the near future.

They also cast doubts on the efficacy of Turkey's mutual assistance agreements with Britain and France in pointing out that the Turkish Foreign Minister, Shukru Saracoglu, was en route to Moscow to discuss the situation created by the outbreak of war.

Nazis Hint Turks Face Red Threat

SEP 23 1939

Berlin, Sept. 22 (AP).—Nazi sources hinted today that if Turkey abides by her mutual assistance agreements with Britain and France, she may face the threat of Russian occupation of the Dardanelles as a result of the Nazi-Communist collaboration.

These sources cast doubt on the value of the British-French-Turkish agreements by pointing out that the Turkish Foreign Minister, Sukru Saracoglu, was en route to Moscow to discuss the situation created by the outbreak of war.

(An Istanbul dispatch said Saracoglu was expected to reach agreement on a mutual assistance pact in Moscow that would complement Turkey's agreements with Britain and France.)

NAZIS PLAN AIR SERVICE

SEP 23 1939

Berlin, Sept. 22 (AP)—German commercial air service, paralyzed since the outbreak of war, will be resumed shortly, said an official announcement today.

Lufthansa, the German airways corporation, said the first line reopened would be that from Berlin to Danzig and Koenigsberg, East Prussia. Other lines will be resumed soon thereafter including those to countries which can be reached from Germany unhampered.

"The German gaseline supply permits of the resumption of German passenger air traffic as far as it is possible on the basis of European war conditions," the announcement said.

Reich to Issue New Rationing Cards Monday

SEP 23 1939

Revised Food Restrictions to Place Limit on Use of Bread for the First Time

BERLIN, Sept. 22 (AP).—New food rationing cards go into use in Germany Monday, replacing general cards issued at the start of hostilities. Rationing has been tightened in some instances, while in others the amounts have been enlarged.

The cards provide specifically for rationed bread for the first time, and include meats, fats, milk, marmalade, sugar and general foods, such as barley, groats (cracked grain), rice and flour products.

The government warned that each card must be cared for as a "public document" and would be replaced only under great difficulty.

Unskimmed milk was made available only to children and nursing mothers. The government explained that butter fats must be conserved to insure a supply for soldiers and workers in heavy industries, who will be given special cards.

Rationing of bread, it was explained officially, was ordered to "maintain our great national bread and grain reserves and to guarantee us daily bread if we should happen to experience smaller harvests."

Bread rations correspond to the "peace-time average consumption," the announcement said. Potatoes, fruits, fish and fresh vegetables may be purchased without cards.

Deutsche Dienst, commentary service of the official news agency, said the rationing regulations were not to be taken as indicating "acute emergency but as a step of responsible state leadership which learned from mistakes of the World War."

The weekly rations for the average person looked something like this: 5.3 pounds of bread or 4.1 pounds of bread and 13.1 ounces of flour, 1.1 pounds of meat, 2.8 ounces of butter, 4.37 ounces of margarine, 2.27 ounces of lard, bacon or tallow; 2.18 ounces of cheese or 4.37 ounces of whey cheese, 3.5 ounces of marmalade and 8.75 ounces of sugar.

Those entitled to unskimmed milk will receive a little more than a pint daily.

Protectorates were not placed on a rationing basis, but a system was introduced today whereby the buyer must go constantly to the same store to purchase certain wares.

PRO-NAZIS ARRESTED FOR CALINESCU PLOT

SEP 23 1939

Iron Guardists, Along With Some Women, Are Snatched From Concentration Camps for Mass Execution.

BUCHAREST, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—Thousands were reported executed today in Rumania as what amounts to a military dictatorship exacted a heavy blood-price from the pro-Nazi Iron Guard for the assassination yesterday of Premier Armand Calinescu.

Reliable sources said that thousands of members of the outlawed Iron Guard had been taken from concentration camps throughout the country and shot to avenge the killing of the implacable foe of the guard. These sources also said that some women had been put to death.

It was announced officially that forty-four Iron Guardists had been executed at the Merkurea-Ciuk concentration camp, while thirty-two were shot by firing squads at Prahova.

SEP 23 1939

Mass executions were said to be continuing.

Reliable sources said a minimum of three Iron Guard members were being taken from each of Rumania's seventy-two administrative districts for the firing squads.

The whirlwind cleanup of pro-Nazi elements was pushed also with widespread arrests by the quick-acting Government.

At the head of the Government stood Gen. George Argesanu, "tough disciplinarian," of 56 years and a friend of Calinescu. Observers expected Gen. Argesanu to follow M. Calinescu's advocacy of closer Rumanian economic co-operation with Great Britain and France.

Rumanians watched the situation nervously as Germany, which wants Rumanian oil, and Russia, which sees former Russian territory a part of Rumania, drove their troops further into Poland north of Rumania.

Hundreds of Arrests Made.

Hundreds of arrests were being made throughout Rumania and one question the raiders were seeking to answer was whether it was more than a coincidence that M. Calinescu was slain while German and Russian troops were moving in the north.

Blood-spattered bodies sprawled awkwardly in one of Bucharest's main streets provided grisly evidence of the Government's vengeance for yesterday's assassination.

Around the roped-off, oblong area, under a dreary sky, hawkers were selling cakes and beer and cold drinks to a wide-eyed stream of Rumanians come to see an object lesson in swift Balkan punishment.

Dead Remain Unclaimed.

A banner near by carried the words: "Such will be the fate of all assassins and traitors of the country."

All the dead had the young faces and youthful figures of college students.

Perhaps somewhere in the crowd stood some of their parents or other relatives—but no one attempted to claim their dead.

Seven of those whose bodies were sprawled in the street were allegedly members of the Iron Guard.

The police transported them at 11 o'clock last night to the spot where they were charged with ambushing and killing Calinescu.

The bodies of two others who the police said had killed themselves when troops surrounded the house in which they had taken refuge were carted to the scene and dumped on the asphalt avenue.

The seven prisoners, terror shining from their eyes, were stood in a line near by.

A small crowd gathered on the sidewalk. Clouds obscured the moon. Only flickering street lamps lighted the strange midnight scene.

Uniformed executioners walked behind each straining figure silhouetted in the fantastic light.

Killed With Own Guns.

Then, using the alleged assassins' own revolvers, each executioner thrust his weapon behind a man's ear and pulled the trigger.

Seven muffled explosions sounded; seven bodies dropped to the asphalt.

The police quickly roped off an oblong area enclosing the nine bodies and a neatly-lettered warning to others with possible anti-Government ideas was hung near by.

An official bulletin gave the name of the dead as:

Body Lies in State.

Cæsar Popescu, law student; Ion Moldoveanu, Polytechnical Institute student; Ion Vasimiu, designer; George Parasjiescu, law student; Marin Stanciulescu, mechanic; Pragan Popescu, law student; Lazar Lurece, chauffeur; Isaia Ovidiu, photographer, and Ion Ionescu, law student.

All through the night men, women and children came to the scene and today the stream of humanity continued. The authorities announced the bodies would remain in the street until midnight.

Meanwhile, the body of the slain Premier was carried to the Atheneum, one of Bucharest's most imposing buildings, to lie in state in the great marble rotunda after a mourning procession through the city's streets.

King Carol headed the Government and military officials who accompanied Calinescu's widow and son to the Atheneum. Houses and street lamps in the crowded streets through which the procession passed were draped with black crepe.

The body, draped in a Rumanian flag, was placed on a raised dais in an open coffin. There was a single spray of red flowers.

The funeral oration will be given on Sunday morning, when the body will be taken to Arges for burial.

Mourners passed by the coffin today in a steady stream, the line extending far into the street.

Guarding the coffin was an honor guard of the King's regiment; at the foot stood a black-robed Orthodox priest.

Calinescu's Plea Read.

In a trembling voice, King Carol read to the Crown Council last night the testament in which the assassinated Premier begged his son to think of the "honorable name I inherited from my father" and asked that his body be carried "in a peasant cart drawn by six oxen" to a tomb beside his father at Arges.

King Carol named a new Government within eight hours.

Gen. Argesanu, one of Rumania's outstanding soldiers, who became the new Premier, had been War Minister in a previous Cabinet and commanded the Second Army Corps when he was called to succeed Calinescu.

The Ministry of Interior, in charge of the nation's police, was given to Gen. Ion Ilcus, a close personal friend of the King. Gen. Gabrial Marinescu, known as a bitter opponent of the Iron Guard and as a friend of France and Great Britain, took over the vital post of War Minister.

Leader of Plot Named.

All other Cabinet ministries remained as they were under Calinescu.

Officials charged that the plot was headed by Domitro Dumitrescu, a lawyer, who was said to have succeeded Corneliu Zelea Codreanu as Iron Guard leader after Codreanu was killed last December 1, in what officials said was an attempted break from Rumnik-Sarat prison.

The announcement said Dumitrescu took part in a terrorist plot last January to overthrow the Rumanian Government and kill Calinescu, then Minister of Interior, who was blamed by the Iron Guard for the death of Codreanu and thirteen of his followers.

Among twelve members of the organization who were said to have committed suicide after being arrested in the January outbreak was Dumitrescu's brother.

Dumitrescu, however, escaped and fled to Czecho-Slovakia, the announcement said, after hiding guns and ammunition in the homes of associates.

It said he returned secretly from the Ukraine six weeks ago to organize nine friends in a secret Iron Guard assassination band which reclaimed the hidden arsenal.

Dumitrescu, the announcement said, carefully planned the killing of the Premier and led the shooting himself.

Although a communique said "no foreign complications" had been found in the plot, Rumanians nervously watched the frontiers. Troops were held to barracks throughout the country and frontier guards were strengthened.

Heavily re-enforced guards were placed around all ministries, general post offices and other public buildings.

The police halted automobiles, demanding identification of passengers in their search for Iron Guard officers. Thousands of persons were searched on the streets for weapons.

new Government, losing no time, gave eloquent evidence of its faith in his political philosophy with the mass executions.

The military regime reported 44 Guardists were executed today at Terkurea-Ciuk concentration camp, 32 at Prahova and at least three in each of Rumania's 72 administrative districts.

However, the number executed at 10 other concentration camps was undisclosed, although it was known hundreds of convicted Guardists, many with suspended death sentences, had been confined there.

Body Lies In Honor.

The slain Premier's body was taken to the Atheneum, one of the City's most imposing buildings, and placed, flag-draped, in an open coffin on a dais where it will rest in state until the funeral Sunday. A guard of honor of the King's regiment stood watch.

The purge began a few hours after seven men accused of being the actual killers were executed here with their own revolvers.

"Quick justice" has been one of King Carol's unwavering policies. It was meted out dramatically Nov. 30 when Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, Iron Guard "Hitler," and 14 of his chief aids were slain by police while "attempting to escape."

In place of public panic following a blurted statement on the radio by an Iron Guardist that Calinescu had been assassinated, a last night to the spot where they were charged with ambushing and killing Calinescu.

Suicides' Bodies Put There.

The bodies of two others, who police said had killed themselves when troops surrounded the house in which they had taken refuge, were carted to the scene and dumped on the asphalt.

The seven prisoners, terror shining from their eyes, were stood in a line near by.

A small crowd gathered on the sidewalk . . . clouds obscured the moon . . . only flickering street-lamps lighted the midnight scene.

Uniformed executioners walked behind each straining figure silhouetted in the fantastic light. Then, using the assassins' own revolvers, each executioner thrust his weapon behind a man's ear and pulled the trigger.

Seven muffled explosions sounded, seven bodies dropped to the asphalt and lay in widening pools of red.

5 Were Students.

Of the nine, four were identified as law students, one as a chauffeur, one as a mechanic, one as a photographer, one as a designer and one as a polytechnical institute student.

The Government declared the crisis purely domestic. It had "no nation was declared by informed sources tonight to total nearly 2,000 executions.

It was officially announced that 292 guardists—on whose organization Calinescu had waged unceasing war—paid the supreme penalty for membership in the outlawed terrorist band.

The new Government headed by three generals made full use of King Carol's dictatorial powers to stamp out what had been feared was a widespread revolt.

Three Killed In Each District

The military regime reported forty-four guardists were executed at Merkurea-Ciuk concentration camp, thirty-two at Prahova and at least three in each of Rumania's seventy-two administrative districts.

However, the number executed at ten other concentration camps was undisclosed, although it was known hundreds of convicted guardists, many with suspended death sentences, have been confined there.

Calinescu, always friendly to Great Britain and France, was shot to death by a masked band as he rode in his automobile on a main Bucharest street yesterday. The scene was only a five-minute walk from Controceni Castle, where King Carol is living.

Funeral Tomorrow

The slain Premier's body was taken to the Atheneum, one of the city's most imposing buildings, and placed, flag draped, in an open coffin on a dais, where it will rest in state until the funeral Sunday. A guard of honor of the King's Regiment stood watch.

The purge began in all parts of the country a few hours after seven men accused of being the actual killers were executed here with their own revolvers. Women were declared to have been among those shot.

"Quick justice" has been one of King Carol's unwavering policies. It was meted out dramatically last November 30 when Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, Iron Guard "Hitler," and fourteen of his chief aides were slain by police while "attempting to escape."

All Is Quiet And Order

In place of public panic following a blurted statement on the radio by an Iron Guardist that Calinescu had been assassinated, a communique said "all is quiet and order in Rumania."

Observers expected the new Premier, Gen. George Argesanu, known as a "tough disciplinarian," to follow Calinescu's advocacy of closer economic cooperation with Britain and France.

The new Government headed by Argesanu was named by King Carol

Bucharest, Sept. 22.—The guns of firing squads echoed throughout the land today as the blood of nearly 2,000 pro-Nazi Iron Guardists was reported spilled in avenging the assassination of Premier Armand Calinescu. From concentration camps all over the country, Iron Guardists, including women, were stood before the rifles of the military.

The Government made full use of King Carol's dictatorial powers to stamp out all semblance of widespread revolt.

Official announcement put the dead at 292. But informed sources said tonight the toll was closer to 2,000 as King Carol and his new Government, headed by three generals, acted with "quick justice."

Backs Calinescu's Views.

Calinescu, shot to death yesterday by masked men as he rode in his automobile on a main street in Bucharest, was a relentless foe of the Hitlerite Iron Guards. He was friendly to Great Britain and France, and rounded up hundreds of the outlawed terrorists. The communique said, "All is quiet and order in Rumania."

There was stark contrast between the military honor paid Calinescu's body and the contempt for the assassins' bodies, which lay for more than 24 hours where they were executed—on the same spot where the Premier was slain.

Around the roped-off, oblong area, under a dreary sky, hawkers were selling cakes and beer and cold drinks to a wide-eyed stream of Rumanians come to see an object lesson in swift Balkan punishment.

A banner nearby carried the words:

"Such will be the fate of all traitors of the country."

All the dead had young faces and figures. Perhaps somewhere in the crowd stood parents or other relatives—but no one attempted to claim his dead.

Seven were allegedly Iron Guardists. Police transported them foreign complications," a communique said.

Despite this assurance, Rumanians nervously watched the frontiers. Troops and frontier guards were on the alert, heavily reinforced. Pedestrians were searched, motorists halted for identification.

In diplomatic quarters it was felt that extinction of the Iron Guard would enable Rumania to present a united front to parry Germany's economic demands and Russia's territorial ambitions as well as continue to check agitation from Bulgaria and Hungary for the return of areas they held before the World War.

Besides Germany and Russia, it was mindful of the armies of Bulgaria and Hungary massed at the Rumanian frontiers. Both countries, with Russia, turned over territory to Rumania after the World War. Return of some of it has been demanded.

1378 Escape From Warsaw

Germany Says Foreigners, Including Eight Americans, Are Safe in East Prussia.

BERLIN, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—The German Foreign Office announced today it was caring for 178 members of the foreign diplomatic corps and 1,200 other foreigners who were taken yesterday from besieged Warsaw to Koenigsberg in East Prussia. At least eight Americans were among the refugees.

The Foreign Office said it was seeing to the transportation of the foreigners to their respective home countries.

The Supreme Army Command announced in a communique that it had broadcast an appeal to the foreigners in Warsaw to dispatch a representative by September 20 to the Praga-Radzymin road to negotiate for their safe conduct. Following that they were taken to Koenigsberg.

Warsaw, still in Polish hands, is surrounded by German armies. The United States embassy left Warsaw on September 6, but the consulate general staff remained until yesterday's exodus of foreigners.

"They were received by German officers and at night were conveyed to Koenigsberg in special trains," the communique said. "All foreigners are well and uninjured."

The American embassy here received word through Douglas Jenkins Jr., vice-consul, of South Carolina, that he and seven other Americans were among those who left Warsaw.

The American foreign consular officials in Warsaw were headed by the veteran consul-general, John K. Davis, thirty years in the foreign service. Other American consular attaches who had remained in Warsaw included George J. Haering of New York, William M. Cramp of Pennsylvania, M. William Blake of Ohio and E. Tomlin Bailey of New Jersey.

The Germans renewed their broadcast appeal for a bloodless surrender of Warsaw, one of the last areas still held by the Poles.

The appeal, informed sources said, was answered only by a request that foreigners be allowed safe conduct from the city.

Two American women and three men were reported by DNB (German official news agency) as recovering in a German military hospital from exhaustion after traveling afoot for long stretches during a "terrifying" flight from Warsaw. The agency said they had been menaced several times by "irresponsible bands" when their passports were not recognized.

Photographs telegraphed here showed them with bandaged feet drinking coffee with German soldiers.

The group included Miss D. Laurel Hucheson, a New York dancer known in Germany as Delores Laurel; Joseph Panck, an interior decorator, and his wife, Sofia, of Santa Barbara, Cal.; a machinist, Waclaw Francuk of Lynn (State not given), and a laborer, Peter Lodzinski of New York city.

Fifty-five Americans found refuge here tonight after a trek from besieged Warsaw with more than 1,300 other foreigners.

They were being provided for in Königsberg by the German Foreign Office until their departure homeward or to neutral countries can be arranged.

It was impossible to establish definitely tonight the names of all the Americans who left Warsaw under an arrangement between German and Polish military authorities because they were scattered throughout Königsberg and because of confusion attendant on their arrival.

A motor caravan and three trains brought the refugees to safety through war-torn country after their safe conduct through battle lines was arranged by an exchange of radio messages.

The auto caravan was under way from 4 P. M. yesterday until noon today. The trains arrived during the forenoon.

One vice-consul, Thaddeus Chylinsky, an American of Polish descent, who has a Polish wife, stayed in Warsaw. He will keep the office open and look after Americans who elected to stay behind.

Chylinsky remained because he feared he would be unable to get his wife out of the country.

For two members of the staff, Warsaw experiences were nothing new. Vice-Consul Douglas Jenkins, Jr., of South Carolina, went through similar trials at Nanking, China, and Attache William R. Cramp, of Philadelphia, had similar experiences at Addis Ababa, in Ethiopia.

Shells Damage Consulate

Twelve teen-aged American boys and girls of Polish descent who were studying in Warsaw were included in the American group. They, with many other Americans, had been living a good deal of the time in the basement of the United States Embassy as a protection against bombs and taking it good-humoredly.

The consulate building was damaged by shell fire.

For many of the refugees it was the first contact with the outside world since September 5, when all communications failed.

The prime interest of the Americans for the moment was to "get some food and rest," as one put it.

Besides Jenkins and Cramp, the American officers who arrived here today were Consul General John K. Davis, Consul George J. Haering, Consul M. Williams Blake, Consul E. Tomlin Bailey Vice-Consul Carl Birkeland and Dr. Waldemar J. A. Wickham, of the United States Public Health Service.

55 American Refugees Safe After Flight From Warsaw

Reach Königsberg, In East Prussia, With Over 1,000 Others—Nazis To Aid Them

[By the Associated Press]

Königsberg, East Prussia, Sept. 22—

When the German army command broadcast an appeal early this week to Warsaw's defenders for a "bloodless" surrender, the only reply from within the city was a request for the safe removal of all foreigners. The German command said in a communique that the foreigners were instructed to send a representative by Wednesday to the Praga-Radzymin Road to negotiate for their safe conduct.

The Swedish Charge d'Affaires, S. Grafstroem, was chosen as the representative, inasmuch as Sweden assumed Poland's interests in Germany at the outbreak of war.

Fifty Swedes comprised the first group of refugees to go to the designated street crossing, northeast of Warsaw, Thursday, and the eight Americans were next. Others to depart include the Italian chief of mission and five military attaches, almost the entire Japanese Embassy, the Netherlands Charge d'Affaires, Swiss, Greeks, Danes and Norwegians.

The first special train, which reached Koenigsberg this morning, carried 300 persons. Two later trains brought a total of 800, and 150 diplomats came by automobile.

Warsaw, one of the last strongholds of Polish defense, is surrounded by German armies. While the United States Embassy left the city on Sept. 6, the Consulate General staff had remained until yesterday's exodus.

Two American women and three men were reported by the Deutsche Nachrichtenburo, German official news agency, as recovering in a German military hospital from exhaustion after traveling afoot for long stretches during a "terrifying" flight from Warsaw. The agency said they had been menaced several times by "irresponsible bands" when their passports were not recognized.

Photographs telegraphed here showed them drinking coffee with German soldiers. Their feet were bandaged. The group included Miss D. Laurel Hucheson, a New York dancer, known in Germany as Delores Laurel; Joseph Panck, an interior decorator, and his wife, Sofia, of Santa Barbara, Calif.; a machinist, Waclaw Francuk, of Lynn (state not given), and a laborer, Peter Lodzinski, of New York City.

Warsaw Buildings Damaged.

BUCHAREST, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—Foreigners coming out of Poland brought new stories today of destruction of Warsaw.

They said the Postal Savings Bank across the street from the United States consulate was hit by a bomb and destroyed. Members of the consulate staff, however, had moved to the embassy buildings.

The travelers said the Soviet Russian embassy was badly damaged and that the unoccupied Swiss legation near the Poniatwoski bridge was hit by a bomb.

TELLS OF PLANE RESCUE AT SEA

Captain Also Describes How Submarine Sunk Ship.

CREW CHEERED FLYING BOATS

Skipper Says Only About 1 Hour Passed Before They Were Saved.

LONDON, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—Capt. J. Schofield of the British steamer Kinsington Court described today how he and his crew of thirty-three men were rescued by Royal Air Force flying boats a half hour after a submarine sank their ship.

The brown-faced captain, who said he was a seaman during the world war but never had a ship sunk before, described the rescue as "the modern method."

Capt. Schofield said he sighted the submarine about a mile away shortly before it fired its first shot. There was no warning, he said.

"We sent out an S O S when the submarine started firing, but still steamed on," he said, describing how the first shells fell short.

"Finally one shell went across the stern and we decided to take to the boats. One shell struck so close the ship shuddered, and then we were struck on the starboard side."

The lifeboat on that side was dropped into the water, he related, whe none of the men lowering it was shocked by the explosion.

All thirty-four of the men then climbed into the remaining boat.

"Shortly afterward we sighted a plane approaching," Capt. Schofield asserted. "We stood up in the boat and started to cheer. At first we didn't think it possible to be rescued that way, but we thought the plane would get help for us. Then we saw the plane was alighting.

"An officer climbed out on the wing. He asked how many there were and said he could take only about twenty.

"About that time we saw a second plane appear. It circled overhead and then came down. The sea was choppy, but we were taken on board without difficulty."

He said that about half an hour elapsed between the time the submarine appeared and the time the crew took to the lifeboat, and another half hour before they were rescued. The submarine, he said, went away on the surface when the first plane came in sight.

Britons Must Pay Third of Income To Fight Reich Under Budget

London, Sept. 22 (AP)—The British Government sought today to pin the war guilt on Adolf Hitler and his lieutenants with a diplomatic best seller—a "Blue Book"—which was put on sale for a shilling (20 cents) at His Majesty's stationery shop.

Hard-pressed Britons, facing the prospect of turning over to the government one-third of their income to pay for the war with Germany, found some grim humor in the document.

Sir Neville Henderson, who was British Ambassador to Berlin, enlivened the collection of speeches, telegrams and letters which comment on leading Nazi actors in the diplomatic drama which preceded the war. Accounts of Sir Neville's talks with Hitler himself were included.

The envoy reported Field Marshal Hermann Goering proudly showed him drawings of tapestries depicting three "naked ladies" as Mercy, Goodness and Purity.

FAILS TO SEE PATIENCE

Sir Neville's comment: "I told him that they looked at least pacific but that I failed to see Patience among them."

The envoy also reported:

That a week before German troops invaded Poland the 50-year-old Fuehrer told Sir Neville he "preferred war now to when he would be 55 or 60."

That during an "unpleasant interview" with Joachim von Ribbentrop on Aug. 30 the German Foreign Minister "was aping Herr Hitler at his worst."

That Hitler suggested a German alliance with Britain at Poland's expense.

That Hitler remarked he wanted to finish his life "as an artist and not as a warmonger."

That the Fuehrer "did not seem enthusiastic" over the pact with Soviet Russia.

That Hitler said Japan would be the "winner" of a European war.

As the government set up a munitions supply council to speed up production of arms and supplies, Sir John Simon, chancellor of the Exchequer, prepared to increase the already steep taxes.

It was generally expected the budget to be submitted to the House of Commons next Wednesday would boost the income tax another shilling.

The British taxpayer now pays the government five shillings six pence ($1.10) out of every pound sterling ($3.96) he earns.

The government at the same time took steps to curb profiteering. The press intensified a campaign against unjustified price increases by opening departments devoted to complaints from consumers.

WATCHING CONGRESS

British Press Is Reserved on Roosevelt Plea.

LONDON, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—The British people followed with keen interest today the congressional fight in Washington over neutrality legislation.

President Roosevelt's message to Congress calling for repeal of the arms embargo was broadcast by the British Broadcasting Corporation and carried fully in the press.

The Daily Telegraph said:

"Whether it is right or expedient for the United States to supply the allies with munitions is a matter about which the Americans need no advice.

"If they resolve that they should also export to us all forms of armament it will be a momentous decision not only to us and to our allies but to the whole world."

The Manchester Guardian said editorially that the Roosevelt program "meets the case of many who have felt that total repeal (of the munitions embargo) without the limiting conditions would bring the United States back into the old controversies which eventually landed her in the last war.

"It is these limiting conditions that will make the greatest impression, for they go far to satisfy the deep-seated American desire that no American lives shall be hazarded."

Optimistic About U. S.

Meanwhile, the nation viewed with guarded optimism the prospect that the United States Congress may lift the embargo on arms at the urging of President Roosevelt.

Bannerlines, editorials and cartoons reflected Britain's popular belief that Mr. Roosevelt's message would result in access to American planes, munitions and other war stocks for Britain and France. There were, however, no forthright or sweeping predictions on this score and official reaction was completely lacking.

SEP 23 1939

Seek Firm Solution

Typical was the London Star's editorial statement that a "fair assumption is that Congress will finally work out a method of neutrality revision which will assure a steady flow of war materials to the Allies, but will at the same time provide safeguards against direct American participation in European affairs."

In other words, most commentators are telling the people that they probably will get American arms sooner or later, but that they must not really expect the United States to jump into the war.

The Daily Express commented: "Congress will determine the issue by one test alone, the peace and interests of the United States."

"Momentous Decision"

The Daily Telegraph said: "Whether it is right or expedient for the United States to supply the Allies with munitions is a matter about which the Americans need no advice.

"Under their neutrality law as it stands they may supply us with cotton, oils, fats and a host of other raw materials.

"If they resolve that they should also export to us all forms of armament it will be a momentous decision not only to us and to our allies, but to the whole word."

Sees Objections Answered

The Manchester Guardian said editorially that the Roosevelt program "meets the case of many who have felt that total repeal (of the munitions embargo) without the limiting conditions would bring the United States back into the old controversies which eventually landed her in the last war.

"It is these limiting conditions that will make the greatest impression for they go far to satisfy the deep-seated American desire that no American lives shall be hazarded.

"They rob the isolationist cause of much of its sting. Along with the reform of the Neutrality Act goes, we must never forget, the steady strengthening of the United States as a naval and military power and the strengthening of her influence for peace and in support of the same ideals as those for which we are fighting."

As the Government set up a munitions supply council to speed up production of arms and supplies, Sir John Simon, Chancellor af the Exchequer, prepared to increase the already-steep taxes.

Income Tax Raised

It was generally expected that the budget to be submitted to the House of Commons next Wednesday would raise the income tax another shilling.

The British taxpayer now pays the Government five shillings six pence $(1.10) out of every pound sterling ($3.96) he earns.

The Government at the same time took steps to curb profiteering. The press intensified a campaign against unjustified price increases by opening departments devoted to complaints from consumers.

It was recalled that Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons on Sept. 15 that some prisoners had been taken in British successes against German submarines.

Men Getting More Jobs, Women Fewer, in Britain

Heavy Industries Take On Help as Other Lines Curtail

LONDON, Sept. 22 (AP).—The Ministry of Labor and National Service announced tonight that war demands had reduced the number of unemployed men, but had increased the number of jobless women even more.

Declines in employment were principally in hotels, entertainments, sports, furniture, tailoring and fishing trades. The increases were in the heavy industries—iron, steel, coal and shipbuilding.

German U-Boat Sinks British Freighter As Norwegians Watch

SEP 23 1939

Bergen, Norway, Sept. 22 (AP)—A submarine sank the British freighter Akenside today, ten miles off the Norwegian coast in the North Sea.

Inhabitants of the Hisoi Islands watching through binoculars, witnessed the torpedoing of the 2,694-ton ship whose crew of twenty-six escaped in lifeboats and were rescued by a Norwegian warship.

The Akenside was en route from Lythe, England, to Bergen with a cargo of coal. The rescued sailors were quoted as saying the submarine crew offered them cigarettes after they took to the boats.

The owners of the 1,567-ton freighter Arkleside said in London they had been advised of her loss at sea. Lloyd's register lists the Akenside's home port as Newcastle and the Arkleside's as Sunderland.

Swiss Ponder What to Do With Foreign Deserters

Police Accuse Them of Offenses Endangering Neutrality

BERNE, Sept. 22 (AP).—The problem of what to do with an assortment of deserters, immigrants and other foreigners listed as undesirables, rounded up at Geneva, brought cantonal police officials from Geneva to Berne today.

ALL CONSIDER WAR IS USELESS

Editorial Holds That Nothing Can Be Gained by Long Conflict.

ROME, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—Germany's non-belligerent axis partner, Italy, redoubled her insistence today that "useless war" be halted before it sweeps beyond control.

Premier Mussolini's Milan newspaper, Il Popolo d'Italia, said if France and England did not make war against Soviet Russia for invading Poland, they had no right to war against Germany.

It said in an editorial that France and Britain would have to face Russia if they succeeded in breaking the Siegfried Line and advancing through Germany.

For that, the editorial added, France would need a new Napoleon, much luckier and a greater genius than the last.

Says No Gain Will Result.

Il Popolo di Roma declared the present war would only leave a new desire for vengeance by the defeated side, thus bringing still another war.

"We think it not impossible," the newspaper said, "to arrive at a humane and just pacification if firm reciprocal will to reach it is not lacking. What advantage can be hoped from prolonging the conflict?

"In ancient times the winning people could take gold and slaves from the losers. What can now be taken from peoples after years of struggle and destruction? And who can be sure of what will happen when enormous forces are unchained which may get beyond command of human will?"

War Called Unreasonable.

Il Messaggero called the conflict a "war without reason."

Yesterday Mussolini discussed Italy's frontier defenses with Gen. Luigi Negri, commander of the Alpine troops, who ordered his men: "Be on the lookout."

A new law gave the Interior Ministry, which directs Italy's secret police, 1,000,000 lire (about $400,000) for political investigations.

Istanbul Sources See Mutual Aid Treaty in the Offing as Minister Goes to Moscow

SEP 23 1939

ISTANBUL (Turkey), Sept. 22 (AP).—Authoritative sources said today that a Turkish-Soviet Russian Mutual Assistance Pact would be concluded by Foreign Minister Shukru Saracoglu, who now is en route to Moscow.

They said the projected treaty was expected to reinforce strongly Turkey's position in the Dardanelles and to assure the safeguarding of the Balkans from invasion by an "unfriendly power."

Turkish officials said the pact would complement Turkey's agreements with Great Britain and France.

Mr. Saracoglu, accompanied by a staff of aides, arrived today in Odessa en route to Moscow. He planned to stay in the Russian capital for ten days.

It was asserted that if Turkey and Russia succeeded in reaching a pact, Turkey possibly would have a good opportunity of attempting to bring Russia together with Britain and France. Some sources thought therefore that Mr. Saracoglu, while in Moscow, might attempt to effect a reconciliation between them.

Local companies declined to supply the ships with fine fuel oils such as are used by submarines. However, the Cap Norte carried about 2,500 tons of crude oil.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Sept. 22 (AP)—Maritime authorities at Valparaiso said tonight the German motorship Portland had arrived at the Chilean port of Coquimbo flying a Japanese flag.

They said the Portland might be permitted to proceed at her own risk, however, as law permits ships of belligerent nations to fly other flags as long as the ship's papers meet requirements. They said the Portland's papers are in order.

The Portland had been unreported since she left Everett, Wash., on the eve of the war, flying a German flag.

PERNAMBUCO, Brazil, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—Three German ships, including the fast Hamburg-South American liner Cap Norte, have sailed from Pernambuco, carrying large cargoes of foodstuffs and petroleum products.

Their destination were not announced, but in shipping circles it was understood that they would try to reach Vladivostok in Siberia. Such an attempt could be made either via the Panama Canal or

Roosevelt Says Submarines Have Been Seen Off U.S. Coast

Question Raised As To Whether Craft Reported Off Boston And Pacific Coast Were British

SEP 23 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 22—A flat statement by President Roosevelt that foreign submarines had been seen off Boston and off Southern Alaska presented the latest mystery today in a war marked by surprises and enigmas.

While he did not name the nationality of the submarines, the President's words immediately raised the question whether Germany had dispatched underseas craft to strike at Allied shipping close to American shores.

On the Pacific Coast the Aberdeen (Wash.) World said it had reliable information that radio calls identified as those of a German U-boat had been picked up, and that the United States Navy had been informed of this fact. The radio signals indicated, the paper added, that the craft was trying to reach the German freighter Portland, which had vanished from Puget Sound a short time before.

Refuses To Tell Nationality

Beyond saying that the submarines were sighted by ships at sea, Mr. Roosevelt did not disclose the source of his information. Asked about the nationality of the craft, he laughed and said they might be Swiss, Bolivian or Afghan.

Mr. Roosevelt said one submarine was sighted off the southern boundary of Alaska, where it joins Canadian territory, and the other fifty to seventy miles from the southern tip of Nova Scotia, half way between there and Nantucket shoals.

Germany, like other powers, has submarines capable of crossing the Atlantic. Available figures show, for example, that last year the Reich had a known total of 21 medium-sized submarines of 500 tons each. While Jane's Fighting Ships, reference book on warcraft, does not give the cruising range of these vessels, a French submarine of about the same tonnage can go 3,000 miles at 10 knots without refueling. In addition Germany has other submarines, some of which may have much longer range.

Would Need Refueling

However, even the longest range German submarine would be unable to carry out lengthy operations close to American shores without refueling. There was some speculation whether German tankers in some out of the way spot in the North Atlantic and North Pacific might be acting as refueling bases for submarines.

Whether the "neutrality patrol" of naval and Coast Guard vessels, which has been established on the Atlantic coast, spotted the submarine off Boston was not disclosed. A naval spokesman said the policy was to reveal no movements of the patrol.

Strict neutrality under international law requires that a non-belligerent shall not betray the nationality or location of any belligerent vessel to the enemy. It was noted that President Roosevelt pointedly refrained from saying whether the sighted submarines were belligerent.

Canada Has Data

Victoria, B. C., Sept. 22 (Canadian Press)—Canadian naval authorities are "cognizant of the information" disclosed by President Roosevelt that unidentified submarines have been reported along the southern Alaska coast, Esquimalt Naval Yard officers said today. They added "necessary steps" were being taken, but declined further comment.

$58,585,061 WAR PLANE ORDERS PLACED BY U. S.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22 (AP).—The Administration's program for rebuilding the national air defenses was stepped up today with the award of $58,585,061 in aircraft contracts and a decision to build a West Coast aeronautical research laboratory as quickly as possible.

The new laboratory will be constructed at Moffett Field, near Sunnyvale, Cal., and is expected to cost $10,000,000. The last session of Congress appropriated $1,900,000 to start work on the project. Officals of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics said construction would begin as quickly as possible, probably within two months.

Most of the plane orders represented in the $58,585,061 worth of contracts signed by the War Department today had been previously awarded tentatively.

Number Not Disclosed.

One new contract was a $2,843,405 order for 400 primary training planes, awarded to the Boeing Airplane Co., Stearman Division, Wichita, Kan.

Observation, pursuit, training and bombing planes were included in the other contracts, but in line with War Department policy the number was not disclosed.

The new Moffett Field laboratory will conduct experimental work on development of improved aircraft. The only present laboratory of that type in this country is that of the N.A.C.A. at Langley Field, Va.

URGES NEW U. S. FLEET

SEP 22 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 22—The European war demonstrated more clearly than ever, Representative Melvin J. Maas (Rep., Minn.) declared today, that the United States should lose no time in building a separate fleet for the Atlantic Ocean.

"Such a fleet would cost $5,000,000,000 ultimately," said Maas, senior Republican member of the House Naval Committee, "but that would be only a two per cent. insurance premium, because the last war cost us $50,000,000,000 and the depression that followed it $200,000,000,000.

"Can't Depend On Britain"

Long an advocate of a two-fleet navy, Maas said it should be "abundantly clear" that Great Britain, on whose navy the United States has depended in the Atlantic, "is in no position now to help us defend the Monroe Doctrine, under which this country is pledged to resist any foreign aggression against South and Central America."

"It is also obvious," he added in an interview, "that for some years to come, our Pacific Fleet will be occupied there and cannot be relied on entirely in event of an emergency in the Atlantic."

$58,585,061 Contracts Are Signed—Boeing To Build 400 Training Ships

$10,000,000 Research Laboratory To Be Erected At Moffett Field, Cal.

SEP 23 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 22—The Administration's program of rebuilding the national air defenses was stepped up to a faster pace today with the award of $58,585,061 in aircraft contracts and a decision to build a West Coast aeronautical research laboratory as quickly as possible.

The new laboratory will be constructed at Moffett Field, near Sunnyvale, Cal., and is expected to cost $10,000,000. The last session of Congress appropriated $1,900,000 to start work on the project.

May Start In Two Months

Announcing the selection of Moffett Field as the site, officials of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics said actual construction would begin probably within two months.

"It all depends on how fast bids can be advertised and a contract awarded," one official said.

Most of the plane orders represented in the $58,585,061 worth of contracts signed by the War Department today had been previously awarded tentatively.

One new contract was a $2,843,405 order for 400 primary training planes, awarded to the Boeing Airplane Company, Stearman Division, Wichita, Kansas.

Observation, pursuit, training and bombing planes were included in the other contracts, but, in line with War Department policy, the number was not disclosed.

The new Moffett Field laboratory will conduct experimental work on development of improved aircraft. The only present laboratory of that type in this country is that of the N. A. C. A. at Langley Field, Va.

Believe Germany Is Ahead

The purpose is to keep the United States abreast of the world in aviation advances. For many years American-made military aircraft were conceded to be the best in the world, but some aviation engineers now believe that Germany has progressed beyond this country and attribute it to greater emphasis there on research.

The Moffett Field site was selected after an N. A. C. A. committee study of data gathered by a subcommittee headed by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. Fifty-three other sites had been proposed.

SEP 23 1939

The committee said it was influenced primarily by the proximity of Moffett Field to the huge aviation industry developed in southern California.

HULL SAYS ALL AMERICAS WILL FIGHT THREATS

But Asserts Each Nation Seeks To Keep Peace And To Promote Peace

Points To Assembly Of 21 Countries Opening Tomorrow In Panama

SEP 23 1939

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 22—Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, declared today that each of the American republics was "ready to defend itself against any threat to its security that may come from any part of the world."

"At the same time," he added, "it is the unalterable desire of each and every one of our nations to remain at peace ourselves and to exercise all influence in our power toward the end that just and enduring peace may become firmly established everywhere."

As he spoke during ceremonies marking Pan-American Day at the New York World's Fair, delegates of the twenty-one American republics were gathering in Panama for the opening tomorrow of an inter-American neutrality conference.

"Played A Great Role"

Hull referred to previous inter-American conferences as having "played a great role" in the development of "faith and trust among the American nations," and continued:

"At this very moment representatives of all of the American governments are assembling in Panama for the purpose of taking the measures necessary to safeguard the peace of the Americas. Here we see the functioning of an intentional system of cooperative peace, designed to assure internal concord and external security for the nations of our hemisphere."

During the fair program, sponsored by the Pan-American nUion, of whose governing board Hull is chairman, he was awarded a gold medal by the Inter-American Commercial Arbitration Commission for his "work in fostering peace" between this country and Latin America.

Diplomats Attend

Thomas J. Watson, commission chairman, made the presentation in the presence of ranking diplomatic envoys of the Latin-American countries, the members of the union's governing board and city and fair officials.

"From the very beginning of their independent existence," Hull said, "the American republics have sought to shape their international policies in accordance with certain cardinal principles. Crucial among these are, first, recognition that each nation is a juridically equal member of the family of nations; and second, recognition that civilization and progress are possible only where there is universal acceptance of order, implemented by international law, and based upon justice, fair dealing, mutual respect, cooperation and the sanctity of agreements, freely made, faithfully observed and honorably altered by peaceful methods when need arises."

Says Two Are Indivisible

"Under modern conditions," he said at another point, "peace and stability are indivisible in the sense that a major breakdown of one or the other in any important position of the globe inevitably affects the life of the entire world. . . . The tragic hostilities in Europe—the greatest calamity of all—have been in operation but three short weeks, and already their fateful effects have laid a heavy hand upon many phases of the lives of our nations. . . .

"Now that a major war in Europe is a grim reality, there is greater necessity than ever before for all nations, still in a position to do so, to increase their exertions for the preservation of those fundamental principles of civilized international relations, through the application of which alone, we of the Americas are firmly convinced, the progress of the human race can be maintained."

Hull Sends Message On Calinescu's Death

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22 (A. P.).—Secretary Hull expressed today his deepest sympathy over the assassination of Premier Calinescu of Rumania.

SEP 23 1939

He cabled Gregorie Gafencu, Minister for Foreign Affairs:

"It is with deep regret that I have received the sad news of the untimely death of Prime Minister Calinescu at the hands of an assassin. On behalf of my fellow countrymen and in my own name I extend deepest sympathy to you and through you to the people of Rumania."

OTTAWA, Sept. 22 (CP).—Censorship regulations in effect under the war act were made public here today. These general directions have now been followed by detailed instructions which have full authority of law.

The regulations, which are voluminous, prohibit, in general, the making or publication of:

Any adverse or unfavorable statement, report or opinion likely to prejudice the defense of Canada or the efficient prosecution of the war.

Any report or statement likely to cause disaffection to His Majesty or to prejudice His Majesty's relations with foreign powers.

Any report or statement likely to prejudice the recruiting, training, discipline or administration of the forces.

Any information with respect to the movements, numbers, etc., of any of the armed forces of the allies or relating to the storage of war material, fortifications, etc.

Any leaflet or pamphlet relating to the war or to the making of peace which does not carry the name and address of author and printer.

All copies of any newspaper, tract, periodical, book, circular or other printed publication contravening the regulations may be seized and radio station licenses may be suspended or canceled.

Other penalties, by way of fine and imprisonment, are provided for infraction of the regulations, which apply not only to newspapers and radio stations but also to those who speak at public meetings.

Browder Assails Hearst, Lindbergh and Coughlin

SEP 23 1939

Says They Have Special Plan to Get America in War

CLEVELAND, Sept. 22 (AP).—Earl Browder, general secretary of the Communist party in the United States, left a warning today against "warmongers" describing Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, William Randolph Hearst and the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin as having a "special plan" for war.

Addressing 3,500 persons last night the Communist leader asserted both factions in the controversy over embargo provisions in the neutrality act have "axes to grind."

Col. Lindbergh, Mr. Hearst and Father Coughlin, Browder said, "represent monopoly and have their special plan to get America into the war through retaining the neutrality act."

He declared advocates of revision would "hitch America up with the British and get us into war to save the British empire."

Browder gave "wholehearted indorsement" to President Roosevelt's neutrality message to the special session of Congress and solemnly urged his listeners "to fight for the guaranty that the pledge to keep us out of war is not broken."

He praised as "especially important" the President's declaration against the extension of American credits to belligerent nations.

U-Boat Sinking Seen by Skipper On Way to U.S.

He Tells How British Shelled Camouflaged Raider to Bottom in Ten Minutes

SEP 23 1939

An account of the sinking of a camouflaged German submarine by a British destroyer and reports of widespread submarine activity were given yesterday by the captains and officers of ships arriving from Europe. The reports indicated that more ships are being sunk than the public realizes.

Capt. Waldo Wollaston, master of the freighter Schodack, of the America France Line, which was chartered by the United States Maritime Commission to bring home Americans, said he received S O S calls from eight or nine ships when the Schodack was two or three days out of Le Havre, but he was too far away to go to the aid of the sinking vessels.

James A. Quinlan, radio operator of the Schodack, who was listening in when many of the S O S calls were received, said it was his opinion that there were "many more British ships being sunk than are being reported by the British Admiralty."

"It was pretty tough," he said, "listening to those pathetic calls and being unable to do anything about it."

Describes U-Boats Sinking

The sinking of the camouflaged submarine was described by Capt. Frederick Pickering, master of the Steel Mariner of the Isthmian Line, also chartered by the United States Maritime Commission to bring back Americans. The ship left Avonmouth, Port of Bristol, on the morning of Sept. 11.

"On the same afternoon, between Tuscan and the Scilly Islands," Capt. Pickering said, "I saw a strange looking craft going across the bow. I turned to the mate and said, 'My God, what's that?' He said, 'It's a submarine in disguise.' I looked through the glass and sure enough it was a submarine rigged out like a fishing boat. There were rigs fore and aft but you could see the periscope. It didn't deceive any one."

The captain said it was his opinion that the submarine was disabled so that it could not submerge and had masqueraded as a fishing boat in the hopes of reaching port safely. Capt. Pickering, who was a lieutenant in the British Navy during the World War and who took many ships through the submarine zones, said he and the mate watched the disguised U-boat as it moved along slowly about five miles away. Then they caught sight of the British destroyer.

"There were flashes of gunfire," he said. "The firing lasted for ten minutes. The destroyer sank the U-boat, and that was that."

They Saw the Courageous

The next day, he said, they sighted the British aircraft carrier Courageous, later sunk by a submarine.

"We passed it about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, surrounded by a flotilla of destroyers," he said. "Several of its planes circled over us."

Chemist Devises Process To Hunt Submarines

SEP 23 1939

Method of Picking Up Trail in Water Offered to U. S.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., Sept. 22 (UP).—A chemical process by which the course and position of submarines could be checked is being considered by the War Department, Dr. Max Trumper, Philadelphia bio-chemist, said today.

Though full details of the discovery were withheld, Dr. Trumper explained the general process.

He said that certain gases discharged by a submarine when it rises to the surface to obtain fresh supplies of oxygen and recharge its batteries mingle with the water. A surface ship, by dropping certain chemicals which cause the water to change color on mixing with the gases, could check the submarine's position and the course it followed many hours after it had disappeared.

Polish Liner Boarded After Mutiny Report

SEP 23 1939

New York Police Remove 200 Of Crew After Their Purported Refusal To Sail Ship For War Service

[By the Associated Press]

Yonkers, N. Y., Sept. 22—The captain of the Polish liner Batory, a World War hero, and 200 crew members today were removed from the vessel by Yonkers police, who were told the crew had mutinied against an order to sail the ship to Canada for wartime service.

The full story of the incident and the orders which reputedly prompted it was shrouded in official secrecy. But several hours after the police intervention the Batory sailed down the Hudson river from the anchorage it had held since September 5.

Skipper Is Replaced

Police Captain Henry S. Murphy said he boarded the liner and removed part of the crew at the request of Dr. Sylvester Gruszka, Polish consul general. Murphy said that Capt. Eustazy Borkowski, who was decorated twelve times by four governments for bravery in the World War, reported the purported mutiny, saying many of the crew refused to sail. Relieved of his command, he was replaced by First Officer Francinzek Szudzinski.

Murphy added he was told the Batory, homeless since Germany seized the Polish port of Gdynia, had been "taken over" by the British Admiralty, which had ordered it to proceed to Halifax to take on supplies for transportation to England.

Reports Called Unfounded

Roman Kutylowski, American director of the Gdynia America Line, operator of the Batory, issued a statement characterizing "reports of trouble" as entirely unfounded.

The statement read:

"The Gdynia America motor ship Batory, which has been anchored off Yonkers, N. Y., for the last two weeks, departed today for a Canadian port. Local reports of trouble with the crew or of 'squelching mutiny,' ascribed to local rumors, are entirely unfounded. They can be characterized only as figments of war-heated imagination.

"The report that the Batory is carrying ammunition or any war material of whatsoever kind is a pure fabrication. The Batory carried a crew of 297 seamen and stewards, 115 of the technical staff and seamen sailed with the ship, while the rest, comprising men and women room stewards, musicians, entertainment staff and others not essential for the operation of the ship were left on shore. The ship sailed under its new master, Capt. F. Szudzinski."

Consulates Are Silent

Both the British and Polish consulates in New York refused to discuss the matter in detail.

The British consulate said the Admiralty had not informed it of any order regarding the Batory, but spokesmen in New York and Washington said it "was quite logical" for the Admiralty to take charge of the ship because of England and Poland being allies.

Jan Scaghino, Polish vice-consul, asserted there had been no disorder aboard the ship and, despite the report of police, said no police had boarded her. He termed the crew's action "a little sit-down strike."

Didn't Want To Sail

"Part of the crew didn't want to sail so they went ashore," he added. Scaghino said, also, that Captain Borkowski had "a terrific temper" but "left the ship quietly."

Borkowski, in tears when he left his vessel, was too upset to discuss the incident.

"I can't talk today," he said. "Maybe tomorrow or some other day I tell you the whole truth."

Harry M. Durning, collector of the port, said the Batory had cleared customs for a noon sailing. One hundred crew members were aboard when she pulled away late this afternoon.

U. S. Not Concerned

Durning and Byron Uhl, Immigration Commissioner, both emphasized that the United States Government had nothing to do with the case.

Uhl said the 200 crew members, many of them women and some minors, would be permitted to stay in the United States sixty days under a law governing foreign seamen.

The Batory, sister ship of the Pilsudski, was built in 1936 at Trieste in a barter deal giving the Italians $6,000,000 worth of Polish coal. The 14,287-ton vessel is known to many Americans for its West Indies cruise trade as well as transatlantic service.

Pilsudski Is Safe

The Pilsudski is safe in an English port, the Gdynia-American Line said. The two ships are the leaders of the Polish merchant fleet of ninety-six vessels.

Captain Borkowski, 55, a 6-foot-2-inch veteran of thirty-eight years at sea, speaks sixteen languages and holds the Polish Cross of Honor. He sailed Russian ships for many years and is noted for rescue work.

He was presented a silver loving cup for his heroism in rescuing the crew of the German fishing steamer Horst Wessel in the North Sea in 1933.

His Government presented him with the Order of the Swords of General Haller.

British And French Sail On Vessel Going To Bring Back Americans

Washington Was One Of Eight Delayed For Week

By Seamen's Strike

SEP 23 1939

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 22—Hundreds of British and French subjects rushed to war today aboard the United States liner Washington, one of a fleet bound for Europe to bring back Americans clamoring for passage to peace.

One of eight vessels locked in the harbor for a week by a strike of seamen demanding bonuses and other considerations for sailing in war zones, the Washington carried 850 passengers, mostly British.

Among the passengers was the Duke of Sutherland, who hoped to rejoin the naval service of his nation.

Commanded Own Yacht

The Duke, who was accompanied by his wife, during the last war commanded his own yacht in the British naval auxiliary service. He said he hoped to repeat his service. He was returning from a voyage in his yacht, the Sans Peur, which went aground on the California coast, but which has since been reconditioned and left in Vancouver, B. C., awaiting orders from the British Admiralty.

Eleven Americans, mostly Government employes returning to foreign ports, were aboard the Washington.

Polo Captain Aboard

Gerald M. Balding, captain of the British international polo team, also was aboard, heading home to "join up," probably in the cavalry. His wife, the former Eleanor Hoagland, of Rumson, N. J., remained here.

To "make another contribution to the men in the field," Gen. George Linden Carpenter, new head of the Salvation Army, also sailed for England, with his daughter, Stella, and Capt. Jean Cox, a staff officer.

"Some of our people are already in the field in France," said General Carpenter.

Earlier, six other American ships had sailed for European ports—the Excambion, Scanstates, American Trader, American Traveler, Iroquois and St. John. The Acadia was ready to leave today, awaiting only completion of a crew. The President Harding was scheduled to sail tomorrow and the American Merchant and American Shipper on Sunday.

Shortage Of Cooks

A shortage of cooks delayed the Washington sailing for five hours. Because they were German, cooks who had previously served had been released.

The seamen's strike ended in a compromise Thursday by which the men were assured of a twenty-five per cent. increase in wages. Bonus negotiations continued.

Troubles of one titled German woman, the Baroness Ruth von Oppenheim, were solved today. Balked in her attempt to reach her homeland via the Italian liner Rex, by an order banning German nationals from travel on the line's vessels, the baroness sailed on the Holland-America liner Volendam. The ship is bound for Rotterdam and Antwerp.

Husband To Remain

She left behind her husband, who, to avoid possible capture and internment, planned to remain with his brother, in the United States indefinitely.

Sixteen British sailors stranded in this country when they refused to sail two oil tankers of Panama registry to London, tried to get their clothing and papers back today. An attorney for the National Maritime Union (C. I. O.) said the effects were aboard the two tankers. The sixteen were among sixty British officers and seamen who were brought here to sail the vessels. They had demanded wages equivalent to those of American seamen.

Forty-four Americans returned today from Europe aboard the freighter Steel Mariner.

Carrying 1,260 passengers, mostly Americans, the Holland - America steamer, Nieuw Amsterdam, sailed from Amsterdam for New York today, after settlement of a war-risk dispute with sailors' unions.

Swedish Liner Brings 879 by Way of Arctic

SEP 23 1939

Drottningholm Swings Far Out of Course to Avoid Mines and Submarines

The Swedish American liner Drottningholm arrived safely last night with 543 American refugees among her 879 passengers, after steaming 400 miles to the northward to avoid mines and submarines. She even sighted Iceland and Greenland on her Arctic Circle precautionary "cruise," but she saw no submarines. Steaming within one mile of the Norwegian coast for thirty-six hours with two special pilots, she saw no floating mines, although she had been warned of one.

The ship brought an authentic copy of the leaflets which British flyers have been dumping by the millions in Germany. But this particular leaflet was dropped in a fog by a British bomber over Jutland, Denmark, much to the annoyance of Danish citizens. A Danish journalist gave it to David Fitzgibbon, New York dancer, who arrived with his sister and dancing partner, Dorothy Fitzgibbon.

The leaflet's heading read: "Warning, England to the German People." It then informed the German people, although it was dropped in error over Denmark, that England would fight to the finish, that her nerves "are tough," her resources inexhaustible, that the English "do not give in," and that England "always keeps her pledges." It also told the "German" people how badly they had been misled by the Nazi government.

Capt. Sigfrid Ericsson, commander of the Drottningholm, declined to divulge the precise course he followed. But he admitted that the reports of passengers were correct that the ship had "taken a cruise way up" along the Norwegian coast, before dropping her Norwegian and Swedish pilots. She went some 400 miles north of her regular route, skirted the southern coast of both Iceland and Greenland, and was so far north on her track that the first and only vessel she sighted after leaving the coast of Norway was a small freighter on Thursday morning. She covered more than 800 extra miles by leaving and then returning to her regular course.

LATVIA CENSORS CABLES

Bars Code or Cipher Messages Swiss Relax Strictures

Censorship was established yesterday by Latvia and cablegrams destined for that country can no longer be accepted in code and cipher, it was announced by the Western Union Telegraph Company.

Switzerland has relaxed its original censorship, which prohibited the use of code or cipher in communications addressed to that country, and has restored the use of code and cipher in communications to and from the United States and other countries not engaged in the war. Canada imposes the British censorship regulations on international traffic, but these restrictions are not applied to communications

It has already been announced that the period of summertime in Great Britain and France, which corresponds to daylight-saving time in the United States, will be extended from Oct. 8 to Nov. 19. This will put the time in those countries six hours ahead of that in the United States after daylight-saving time ends in this country.

EX-NAZI HELD IN ALBANY

Gets Year in Jail After Plea to Be Sent to British Army

ALBANY, Sept. 22 (AP)—Frederick Wilhelm Arnold Eickhoff, 25 years old, who said that he was a former Nazi storm trooper implored a Federal District Judge today to permit him to join the Canadian or British Army rather than deport him to Germany where he said death for desertion faces him.

Eickhoff told Judge Frank Cooper that he fled Germany to escape service in the Spanish war, going to the Netherlands and from there in August, 1936, to Montreal. Last month, Eickhoff related, he fled to the United States because he feared that he would be mistaken for a spy.

Judge Cooper sentenced the man to a year in Albany County jail on a charge of illegal entry to the United States pending a check of his story.

Hanfstaengl's Son Joins Harvard Freshman Class

University Rejected Father's Offer of $10,000 Fund

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 22 (AP)—Harvard University, which three years ago rejected a $10,000 scholarship fund offered by Ernst F. S (Putzy) Hanfstaenagl, an alumnus then Adolf Hitler's foreign press chief, accepted Hanfstaengl's son Egon, as a member of the freshman class today.

Egon just arrived from England where he had been attending St. Paul's School and where his father is engaged in literary work at the British Museum. The youth said he proposed to study history.

Hanfstaengl was born in New York City eighteen years ago, went to Germany with his parents when he was six months old and lived there until 1937, when his father, for reasons never fully explained, withdrew from Hitler's inner circle and became an ex-patriate.

NIGHT LEAD WESTERN FRONT

BY CHARLES S.FOLTZ, JR.

SEP 23 1939

BASEL, SWITZERLAND, SEPT. 22-(AP)-GERMAN ATTACKS ON LAND AND IN THE AIR WERE REPORTED IN ADVICES REACHING HERE TONIGHT TO HAVE HALTED THE FRENCH PENETRATION OF AN AREA SOUTH OF PIRMASENS JUST SHORT OF LARGE GERMAN SIEGFRIED LINE FORTS IN THE LAUTER FOREST.

GERMAN OBSERVATION PLANES AND THEIR ESCORTS WERE SAID TO HAVE ENGAGED IN FREQUENT DOGFIGHTS OVER THE BLIES RIVER, EAST OF THE SAAR RIVER, AND IN THE NIED RIVER AREA WEST OF THE SAAR.

THE ACTION AROUND PIRMASENS, ABOUT 15 MILES SOUTH OF SAARBRUECKEN, INDUSTRIAL CITY OF THE SAAR BASIN, CONSTITUTED ONE OF THE LAST POINTS OF CONTACT LEFT OPEN FOR FRENCH PATROL WORK BUT IT WOULD BE SEVERAL DAYS BEFORE THE FRENCH COULD CONSOLIDATE THE NEW POSITIONS AND BRING THEIR MOBILE ARTILLERY INTO POSITION, ACCORDING TO THE REPORTS RECEIVED IN BASEL.

SWISS OBSERVERS SAID IT WAS ILLUSTRATIVE OF GERMAN TACTICS IN FOREST WARFARE THAT FEW TROOPS ENGAGED IN ACTION.

THE REPORTS RECEIVED HERE SAID WHEN THE FRENCH ADVANCE BEGAN, SIEGFRIED LINE FORTS OPENED HEAVY FIRE.

THESE REPORTS ADDED THE FORTS SHORTENED THEIR RANGE AND TWO GROUPS OF NAZI TROOPS ATTACKED IN A LEFT AND RIGHT WING, LEAVING AN AREA SOWN WITH LAND MINES THE ONLY MEANS FOR A FRENCH RETREAT.

DESPITE THE ATTACKS, HOWEVER, IT WAS SAID THE FRENCH HELD THEIR NEWLY WON POSITIONS AND THAT FRESH TROOPS, SENT THROUGH AN ARTILLERY BARRAGE, REINFORCED THEM.

SKIES CLEARED OVER A PART OF THE WESTERN FRONT LATE TODAY, BRINGING A REPORT OF INCREASED ACTION IN THE AIR.

WHILE AERIAL TACTICS HAVE BEEN CONFINED THUS FAR CHIEFLY TO OBSERVATION PURPOSES, A REPORTED CONCENTRATION OF BOMBERS INDICATED THAT BOTH SIDES INTENDED TO BACK UP THEIR FRONT LINE BASES WITH AIR RAIDS SHOULD A MASS ATTACK BEGIN.

SWISS MILITARY OBSERVERS SAID THE GERMANS APPARENTLY WERE RELYING ON WHAT THEY CONSIDERED THE NAZIS' PRESENT NUMERICAL SUPERIORITY AND LONGER WAR TRAINING OF THEIR AIRMEN TO KEEP THE BRITISH AND FRENCH FROM INFLICTING HEAVY DAMAGE FROM THE SKY.

SWISS OBSERVERS SAID THE AERIAL WARFARE APPEARED TO ~~HOME~~

THE ACTION, BEHIND THE HILLS ON THE EASTERN BANK

WAS DESCRIBED AS

by the French

THE MAIN SIEGFRIED FORTS IN THIS AREA FOLLOW THE EAST BANK OF THE SAAR, LEAVING A TRIANGLE WHOSE APEX ~~LIES~~ AT THE JUNCTION OF THE SAAR AND MOSELLE RIVERS IS PROTECTED ONLY BY SMALL FORTS.

SEP 23 1939

THE FRENCH WERE REPORTED TO HAVE CAPTURED THE VILLAGE

BORG AND IMPORTANT HEIGHTS NORTH OF THIS VILLAGE, COMMANDING THE JUNCTION OF THE MAIN SIERCK-SAARBURG HIGHWAY WITH ~~THE~~

THE LUXEMBOURG-SAARBRUECKEN ROAD.

THE FRENCH FIELD GUNS WERE SAID ~~NOW~~ TO BE HAMMERING AT NAZI FORTIFICATIONS ATOP A HIGH ROCK FORMATION KNOWN AS "THE KEY" ~~AND~~ WHICH HAS BEEN INCORPORATED INTO THE SIEFRIED LINE, ALTHOUGH IT STANDS ON THE WESTERN BANK OF THE SAAR IN THE FOREST OF SAARBURG.

CONQUEST OF THIS STRATEGIC SAAR-MOSELLE TRIANGLE WOULD GIVE THE FRENCH AN AREA OF ABOUT 300 SQUARE MILES.

GERMAN SOURCES REPORTED the FOUR FRENCH PLANES WERE SHOT DOWN IN AIR BATTLES TODAY. AN OFFICIAL BERLIN COMMUNIQUE PREVIOUSLY SAID EIGHT ~~OTHER~~ FRENCH FIGHTING PLANES HAD BEEN SHOT DOWN WITHIN TWO DAYS ALONG WITH THREE FRENCH OBSERVATION BALLOONS.

NEUTRAL OBSERVERS CONSIDERED THIS EVIDENCE OF THE GERMAN ADVANTAGE IN THE AIR.

ALTHOUGH THERE ARE SOME FRENCH AND BRITISH TYPES FASTER AND MORE POWERFUL THAN THE GERMAN PLANES, ONLY A FEW OF THESE WERE SAID TO BE AVAILABLE.

FURTHERMORE, GERMAN FLIERS ON THE WESTERN FRONT INCLUDE MANY OF THE CONDOR LEGION WHO GAINED VALUABLE [redacted] FIGHTING EXPERIENCE IN THE SPANISH CIVIL WAR.

A GREAT PART OF THE GERMAN AIR FORCE IS CONCENTRATED UNDERGROUND IN PROTECTED HANGARS BEHIND THE SIEGFRIED LINE.

THE TENSION OF WHAT SWISS MILITARY OBSERVERS CALLED "STRATEGIC WAITING" FOR THE MAIN FRENCH-BRITISH DRIVE AGAINST THE SIEGFRIED FORTIFICATIONS WAS HEIGHTENED BY THE SWISS ARMY'S REACTIO

THE SWISS HIGH COMMAND KEPT ALL TROOPS IN THEIR POSITIONS IN BASEL AND OTHER FRONTIER POINTS. AT THE GREATEST DEPTH, THE RUSSIAN ZONE OF OCCUPATION STRETCHED WEST INTO POLAND FROM THE SOVIET RUSSIAN BORDER FOR A DISTANCE OF MORE THAN 250 MILES.

GERMAN TROOPS IN SOME PLACES ALREADY HAVE PENETRATED INTO POLISH TERRITORY NOW MARKED OUT FOR RUSSIAN OCCUPATION AND WILL BE WITH-DRAWN.

SEP 23 1939

WARSAW, STILL HOLDING OUT AGAINST NAZI FORCES, WAS PLACED IN THE GERMAN ZONE; THE CITIES OF LUBLIN, LUCK, LWOW, BREZESC (BREST-LITOVSK), BIALYSTOK AND WILNO (VILNA), ANCIENT LITHUANIAN CAPITAL) WERE ASSIGNED TO RUSSIAN OCCUPATION.

A COMMUNIQUE OF THE GERMAN SUPREME ARMY COMMAND DECLARED MOVEMENTS OF NAZI AND SOVIET TROOPS WERE "PROCEEDING ON SCHEDULE AND IN PER-FECT UNISON. GERMAN TROOPS FIGHTING NEAR LWOW WERE RELIEVED THERE BY RUSSIAN UNITS.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID THE GERMANS HAD REPULSED SEVERAL ATTEMPTS BY POLES TO BREAK OUT OF PRAGA, A PART OF WARSAW ON THE EAST BANK OF THE VISTULA.

SEP 23 1939

THEY SAID THAT THEY SAW FASCIST SUCCESS THERE AS KEEPING SUPPLIES FLOWING TO GERMANY WHILE HITLER WAS STRIVING TO KEEP THE SCANDINAVIAN COUNTRIES AND THE NETHERLANDS AND BELGIUM FROM SYMPATHIZING WITH GREAT BRITAIN.

A GREAT EFFORT HAS BEEN EXERTED FROM THE START OF THE WAR TO ASSURE TRADE ROUTES WITH NEUTRAL STATES AS A MEANS OF SOFTENING THE BRITISH BLOCKADE.

THESE SOURCES SAID THEY ALSO HOPED TURKEY AND GREECE, BOTH MEMBERS OF THE BRITISH-FRENCH FRONT FORGED BEFORE THE WAR, WOULD TURN TOWARD GERMANY AND INTIMATED THAT ITALY AND GREECE WERE EXPECTED TO REACH A FRIENDSHIP PACT IN THE NEAR FUTURE.

THEY ALSO CAST DOUBTS ON THE EFFICACY OF TURKEY'S MUTUAL ASSISTANCE AGREEMENTS WITH BRITAIN AND FRANCE IN POINTING OUT THAT THE TURKISH FOREIGN MINISTER, SUKRU SARACOGLU, WAS EN ROUTE TO MOSCOW TO DISCUSS THE SITUATION CREATED BY THE OUTBREAK OF WAR.

(AN ISTANBUL DISPATCH SAID SARACOGLU WAS EXPECTED TO REACH AGREEMENT ON A MUTUAL ASSISTANCE PACT IN MOSCOW WHICH WOULD COMPLEMENT TURKEY'S AGREEMENTS WITH BRITAIN AND FRANCE.)

THESE SOURCES SAID THAT IF TURKEY SHOULD ABIDE BY HER AGREEMENTS WITH BRITAIN AND FRANCE, AS A RESULT OF THE NEW NAZI-COMMUNIST COLLABORATION, SHE MIGHT FACE THE THREAT OF RUSSIAN OCCUPATION OF THE DARDANELLES.

IT WAS DISCLOSED TONIGHT THAT THE INTERNING OF POLISH MILITARY OFFICERS AND RESTRICTIONS PLACED ON POLISH GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS BY RUMANIA WERE MADE AT THE REQUEST OF GERMANY.

IT WAS STATED GERMANS HAD ACTED BECAUSE THEY DESIRED TO PREVENT THE POLES FROM GOING TO FRANCE AND THERE OPERATING OR AGITATING AGAINST GERMANY.

BANK OF POLAND GOLD ALSO WAS SAID TO BE BLOCKED IN RUMANIA WHOSE GEOGRAPHIC POSITION WAS SAID TO HAVE MADE HER LEAN OVER BACKWARD TO OBSERVE NEUTRALITY AND TO PROMISE CONTINUED DELIVERY OF RAW MATERIALS.

SEP 23 1939

"PROHIBITION OF AMERICAN SHIPS FROM ENTERING BELLIGERENT ZONES WOULD BE GOOD BUT THESE ITEMS DO NOT DO AWAY WITH THE FACT THAT THE CASH AND CARRY PLAN WOULD BENEFIT BRITAIN EXCLUSIVELY," OFFICIALS STATED. THEY REMINDED THAT PRESIDENT WILSON SPOKE THE SAME LANGUAGE IN 1916 "BUT STILL THE UNITED STATES WAS DRAGGED INTO THE WAR."

INFORMED SOURCES SAID THE BASIC OCCUPATION LINE IN POLAND WAS FIXED BEFORE GERMANY MARCHED IN SEPT. 1. IT WAS EXPLAINED THE LINE CHOSEN WAS THE EASIEST FOR ARMIES TO FOLLOW WITHOUT HAVING A DISPUTE OVER THE OCCUPATION OF VILLAGES.

ETHNOLOGICAL, GEOGRAPHICAL AND ECONOMIC FACTORS WERE CONSIDERED, THE SOURCE SAID. SEP 23 1939

SPLITTING THE COUNTRY ALONG THE SAN RIVER THROUGH THE CITY OF WARSAW GIVES RUSSIA TWO RAILWAY STATIONS, ZOO LUNA PARK AND THE PEOPLE'S THEATER. THE MAJOR PART OF THE CITY, HOWEVER, IS UNDER GERMAN CONTROL.

ANNOUNCEMENT THAT THE LINE WAS SETTLED IN PRINCIPLE BEFORE THE INVASION STARTED WAS MADE "TO SHOW THAT GERMANY FROM THE BEGINNING HAD NO INTENTIONS TO OCCUPY ALL POLAND," OFFICIALS SAID.

DIPLOMATIC NEGOTIATIONS ARE NOW UNDER WAY TO DETERMINE WHETHER THE MILITARY DEMARCATION LINE WILL BE A DEFINITE GERMAN-SOVIET BORDER OR WHETHER THE POLES WILL BE GIVEN A "BUFFER STATE" WITH SOME MEASURE OF SELF-GOVERNMENT, THE OFFICIAL STATED.

MOSCOW, SEPT. 22-(AP)-A NEW SOVIET RUSSIAN BOUNDARY STRETCHING INTO THE OUTSKIRTS OF WARSAW ITSELF AND EMBRACING SEVERAL MILLION POLES WAS DRAWN TONIGHT IN A JOINT COMMUNIQUE ANNOUNCED HERE AND IN BERLIN.

SEP 23 1939

DIPLOMATIC SOURCES SAID IT APPEARED RUSSIA RECEIVED MORE POLISH TERRITORY THAN SHE ANTICIPATED AND FOREIGN OBSERVERS HERE EXPRESSED AMAZEMENT THAT SO MANY POLES HAD BEEN LEFT FOR RUSSIA.

THE NEW SALIENT BRINGS RUSSIA TO NEW FRONTIERS ALONG THE RUMANIAN AND HUNGARIAN BORDERS--POINTS AT WHICH HER TROOPS STOOD TONIGHT AFTER SWIFT MARCHES ACROSS POLAND.

THE BOUNDARIES WHICH RUSSIA MUST DEFEND--UNLESS NEGOTIATIONS IN MOSCOW LATER RE-DRAW THE LINES IN A PERMANENT SETTLEMENT--WILL EXTEND MUCH BEYOND THE PROPER WHITE RUSSIAN AND UKRAINIAN SECTIONS.

SOME QUARTERS EXPRESSED THE VIEW IT WAS AN EXTREMELY STRATEGIC MOVE BY THE GERMANS TO EXTEND THE SOVIET BORDER BEYOND WHAT IS CONSIDERED HER NATURAL LINE. IT WAS SAID, ALSO, THAT IT SEEMED TO EXPLODE THE IDEA WHICH HAD BEEN PREVALENT HERE THAT RUSSIA AND GERMANY PLANNED TO CREATE A BUFFER "POLISH STATE" BETWEEN THEM.

(THE AGREEMENT ALSO WAS ANNOUNCED IN BERLIN, GIVING RUSSIA APPROXIMATELY THREE-FIFTHS OF POLAND AS THE ZONE OF OCCUPATION FOR HER TROOPS, LEAVING TWO-FIFTHS FOR THE NAZIS.)

THE DEMARCATION LINE AGREED ON PASSES ALONG THE RIVER PISSA TO ITS CONFLUENCE WITH THE RIVER NAREW, THEN ALONG THE NAREW TO ITS CONFLUENCE WITH THE RIVER BUG, THENCE ALONG THE BUG TO ITS CONFLUENCE WITH THE RIVER VISTULA, THEN ALONG THE VISTULA UP TO THE MOUTH OF THE SAN, FROM THERE ALONG THE SAN TO ITS SOURCE.

2ND NIGHT LEAD NEUTRALITY

WASHINGTON,SEPT. 22-(AP)-ADMINISTRATION FORCES IN THE SENATE DECIDED TODAY TO WRITE INTO THE NEW NEUTRALITY BILL A STRICT PROVISION PREVENTING AMERICAN SHIPS FROM CARRYING GOODS OF ANY KIND TO BELLIGERENTS.

THIS DECISION, REGARDED BY SOME SENATORS AS LIKELY TO WIN SUPPORT FOR THE MEASURE FROM LEGISLATORS WHO HAVE INDICATED UNWILLINGNESS TO GRANT DISCRETIONARY POWER TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, WAS DISCLOSED BY SENATOR PITTMAN (D-NEV), CHAIRMAN OF THE FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE.

SEP 23 1939

HE MADE THIS ANNOUNCEMENT AS HE, SENATOR CONNALLY (D-TEX) AND SENATOR THOMAS (D-UTAH) SET ABOUT CONVERTING THE ADMINISTRATION PROGRAM, WITH ITS REPEAL OF THE ARMS EMBARGO, INTO BILL FORM FOR PRESENTATION TO THE COMMITTEE ON MONDAY.

MEANWHILE, OPPONENTS OF REPEAL HELD A STRATEGY MEETING, ATTENDED BY FORMER GOVERNOR PHILIP LAFOLLETTE OF WISCONSIN. THE OPPOSITION GROUP WAS DISCUSSING A PROJECT FOR ESTABLISHING A NATIONAL COMMITTEE TO SUPPORT THEIR STAND AMONG THE PEOPLE. NAMES MENTIONED IN THAT CONNECTION INCLUDED LAFOLLETTE, HENRY FORD, HERBERT HOOVER, COL.CHARLES A.LINDBERGH AND EDDIE RICKENBACKER, WORLD WAR ACE.

PITTMAN SAID HIS RESTRICTION ON AMERICAN SHIPPING HAD ADDED A SEVENTH POINT TO THE SIX-POINT PROGRAM ENUNCIATED YESTERDAY BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT. ONE OF THE PRESIDENT'S POINTS WAS A PROPOSED

30.24 3551

RESTRICTION FORBIDDING AMERICAN VESSELS TO ENTER COMBAT AREAS, TO BE DELINEATED BY THE STATE DEPARTMENT AND THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE.

HOWEVER, PUT IN THE FORM WHICH PITTMAN HAS IN MIND, THE PROVISION HEL POSSIBILITIES OF LESSENING THE SENATE OPPOSITION TO THE ADMINISTRATION BILL. A NUMBER OF SENATORS ARE KNOWN TO BE DEEPLY OPPOSED TO GIVING THE PRESIDENT THE DISCRETIONARY POWER TO DECIDE WHAT THE DANGER ZONES ARE.

KEEPING AMERICAN VESSELS OUT OF BELLIGERENT PORTS AND ZONES OF WAR IS ONE OBJECTIVE UPON WHICH NEARLY ALL IN THE SENATE ARE AGREED. IT IS AN ESSENTIAL PART OF THE "CASH AND CARRY PLAN" UNDER WHICH THE NATIONS AT WAR WOULD BE REQUIRED TO PAY CASH FOR SUPPLIES BOUGHT HERE AND FURNISH SHIPS FOR THEIR TRANSPORTATION. PITTMAN HAS LONG BEEN A FIRM BELIEVER IN "CASH AND CARRY."

IN HIS ADDRESS OF YESTERDAY, PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ALSO EXPRESSED HIS APPROVAL, BUT ASKED THAT HE AND THE STATE DEPARTMENT BE GIVEN BROAD DISCRETION IN DECIDING WHAT AREAS ARE TO BE REGARDED AS ZONES OF WAR.

SEP 23 1939

"I BELIEVE," HE SAID, "THAT AMERICAN MERCHANT VESSELS SHOULD, SO FAR AS POSSIBLE, BE RESTRICTED FROM ENTERING DANGER ZONES. WAR ZONES MAY CHANGE SO SWIFTLY AND SO FREQUENTLY IN THE DAYS TO COME, THAT IT IS IMPOSSIBLE TO FIX THEM PERMANENTLY BY ACT OF CONGRESS; SPECIFIC LEGISLATION MAY PREVENT ADJUSTMENT TO CONSTANT AND QUICK CHANGE.

"IT SEEMS, THEREFORE, MORE PRACTICAL TO DELIMIT THEM THROUGH ACTION OF THE STATE DEPARTMENT AND ADMINISTRATIVE AGENCIES. THE OBJECTIVE OF RESTRICTING AMERICAN SHIPS FROM ENTERING SUCH ZONES MAY BE ATTAINED BY PROHIBITING SUCH ENTRY BY THE CONGRESS; OR THE RESULT

CAN BE SUBSTANTIALLY ACHIEVED BY EXECUTIVE PROCLAMATION THAT ALL SUCH VOYAGES ARE SOLELY AT THE RISK OF THE AMERICAN OWNERS THEMSELVES."

PITTMAN DECLARED THAT BESIDES CONTAINING THE FLAT PROHIBITION AGAINST AMERICAN SHIPS CARRYING GOODS TO BELLIGERENTS, THE NEW BILL WOULD ALSO INCLUDE A PROVISION PERMITTING THE PRESIDENT TO SET UP OTHER DANGER ZONES INTO WHICH THE SHIPS COULD NOT VENTURE.

HE SAID THAT THIS WOULD PREVENT SHIPMENTS TO "DANGEROUS NEUTRALS." IF ONE SIDE IN THE EUROPEAN WAR WERE TO COMPLAIN THAT AMERICAN SHIPMENTS TO A NEUTRAL COUNTRY WERE BEING TRANSHIPPED TO A BELLIGERENT AND ANNOUNCE THAT IT WOULD SINK AMERICAN SHIPS CARRYING SUCH CARGOES, THE PRESIDENT THEN COULD ESTABLISH A COMBAT ZONE AROUND THE NEUTRAL COUNTRY.

SEP 23 1939

IT WAS SENATOR BORAH (R-IDA) WHO DISCLOSED THAT OPPONENTS OF REPEALING THE ARMS EMBARGO WERE CONSIDERING THE IDEA OF SETTING UP A NATIONAL COMMITTEE TO TAKE THE FIGHT TO THE COUNTRY.

WASHINGTON,SEPT. 22-(AP)-CAPTAIN FRANCIS COGSWELL, 52, COMMANDER OF THE CRUISER HOUSTON AND FORMER NAVAL ATTACHE AT PARIS AND MADRID, DIED OF CORONARY THROMBOSIS TODAY AT THE PUGET SOUND NAVY YARD, WASH., THE NAVY DEPARTMENT WAS INFORMED.

HIS SUPPLICATIONS HAVE BEEN ADDRESSED ESPECIALLY TO THE VIRGIN MARY, INFORMANTS SAID, AND HE HAS ADOPTED A ROUTINE ALMOST AS SEVERE AS THAT OF A TRAPPIST MONK.

THEY SAID HE NO LONGER SLEEPS IN A BED BUT ON THE FLOOR OF HIS LITTLE BEDROOM WITHOUT A MATTRESS AND ENDURES LONG FASTS, LIVING MAINLY ON GREEN VEGETABLES.

THEY ASSERTED THE POPE GOES SEVERAL TIMES DURING THE NIGHT TO PRAY IN A CHAPEL ADJOINING HIS CHAMBER AND THAT HE RISES EARLY EACH MORNING TO SAY A MASS FOR PEACE.

VATICAN CITY, SEPT. 22-(AP)-VATICAN CITY PRELATES EXPRESSED GRAVE CONCERN TONIGHT OVER THE FUTURE OF THE POLISH CATHOLIC CHURCH, ESPECIALLY IN THAT PART OF POLAND OCCUPIED BY SOVIET RUSSIA.

POPE PIUS, WHO HAS RECEIVED A COMPREHENSIVE REPORT ON THE SITUATION FROM AUGUST CARDINAL HLOND, PRIMATE OF POLAND, WHO IS NOW IN ROME, WAS SAID TO BE GIVING THE SITUATION HIS CLOSEST PERSONAL ATTENTION.

REPORTS REACHING THE VATICAN INDICATE THAT WHILE CHURCHES AND OTHER RELIGIOUS BUILDINGS HAVE SUFFERED CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE, ALL POLISH BISHOPS WITH THE EXCEPTION OF THE PRIMATE HAVE REMAINED IN THEIR SEES.

NO WORD OF RELIGIOUS MOLESTATIONS HAVE BEEN RECEIVED, BUT "VEXATIONS OF RELIGIOUS CHARACTER" ARE FEARED FROM THE RUSSIANS, ONE PRELATE SAID.

ONE REASON WHY CHURCHMEN BELIEVE CATHOLICISM MAY SUFFER BOTH AT THE HANDS OF THE SOVIETS AND THE NAZIS IS THAT POLISH CATHOLICISM ALWAYS HAS BEEN CLOSELY UNITED WITH POLISH PATRIOTISM.

AFTER PREVIOUS PARTITIONS OF POLAND, BOTH RUSSIANS AND PRUSSIANS HAVE ATTACKED THE POLISH CHURCH IN AN ATTEMPT TO CRUSH POLISH NATIONALISM. CHURCHMEN SAID THE RUSSIANS ATTEMPTED TO EXTERMINATE ROMAN CATHOLICISM IN POLAND BY SUPPRESSING MONASTERIES AND CLOSING CHURCHES FROM 1773 TO 1905 WHEN A POLICY OF TOLERANCE FINALLY WAS INAUGURATED.

THE CHURCH IN THAT PART OF POLAND ANNEXED BY PRUSSIA SUFFERED CONSIDERABLY IN VARIOUS "KULTURKAMPFS" WITH THE CONFISCATION OF MUCH PROPERTY AND THE SUBORDINATION OF THE CLERGY TO PRUSSIAN TEMPORAL POWER, SOME PRELATES SAID.

POLAND IS REGARDED HERE AS A STRONGHOLD OF CATHOLICISM.

OF THE COUNTRY'S APPROXIMATELY 35,000,000 PEOPLE, ABOUT 65 PERCENT ARE ROMAN CATHOLICS AND 10 PERCENT GREEK UNIAT CATHOLICS, WHO USE THE GREEK RITE, BUT RECOGNIZE THE POPE.

ELEVEN PERCENT ARE ORTHODOX CATHOLICS, NOT RECOGNIZING THE POPE AND 10 PERCENT ARE JEWS. UNIATS AND ORTHODOXITES ARE MAINLY IN THE EASTERN REGION OCCUPIED BY THE RUSSIANS.

CHURCHMEN SAY CZARIST RUSSIA PERSECUTION WAS DIRECTED AT THE UNIATS AS WELL AS ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCHES.

ARCHBISHOP FILIPPO CORTESI, PAPAL NUNCIO TO WARSAW, IS NOW IN BUCHAREST, "ORGANIZING RELIGIOUS, MORAL, SPIRITUAL AND AS FAR AS POSSIBLE MATERIAL ASSISTANCE FOR POLISH REFUGEES," VATICAN QUARTERS SAID.

EVENTS ARE MOVING SO SWIFTLY, PRELATES SAID, THAT IT WAS IMPOSSIBLE TO SAY WHAT STEPS THE VATICAN MAY TAKE AS A RESULT OF DEVELOPMENTS IN POLAND.

SEP 23 1939

L'OSSERVATORE ROMANO HAS ATTACKED THE SOVIET RUSSIAN INVASION OF POLAND AS AN "UNCOURAGEOUS GESTURE," AND EXPRESSED A FEAR THAT THE WEDGE MAY BE USED TO SPREAD COMMUNISM FURTHER INTO EUROPE.

THE ORGAN HAS BEENSLIGHTLY MORE CIRCUMSPECT IN ITS COMMENT ON GERMANY'S INVASION, BUT HAS ASSERTED ITS CONFIDENCE THAT THE POLISH PEOPLE WILL LIVE AGAIN.

THE CHURCH UNDER THE PRESENT POPE HAS NO FIGHT AGAINST TOTALITARIANISM AS SUCH AND ITS RELATIONS WITH TOTALITARIAN ITALY ARE CURRENTLY GOOD.

THE VATICAN HAS AFFIRMED THAT THE CHURCH IS OUT OF POLITICS AND CONCERNED ONLY WITH THE SPIRITUAL WELFARE OF THE PEOPLE. IT REGARDS THE SOVIETS, HOWEVER, AS ENEMIES OF RELIGION AND HAS FREQUENTLY ATTACKED NAZIS AS HOSTILE TO THE CHURCH.

ONE SUCH ATTACK RECENTLY APPEARED IN L'OSSERVATORE ROMANO WHICH SAID NEW MEASURES AGAINST THE CHURCH IN GERMANY WERE BEING TAKEN UNDER THE GUISE OF WARTIME PROVISIONS.

THE FACT THAT A COMMUNIQUE, ISSUED AT DALADIER'S OFFICE AFTER HE RETURNED FROM THE MEETING, CONCERNED COORDINATED FRENCH AND BRITISH ARMS PRODUCTION LED TO THE BELIF THE ALLIES WERE GETTING READY FOR AN OFFENSIVE IN WHICH LARGE AMOUNTS OF ARMS AND AMMUNITION WOULD BE NEEDED.

DURING THE EVENING THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT TOLD THE NATION OFFICIALLY IN A BROADCAST BY COMMISSIONER OF INFORMATION JEAN GIRAUDOUX THAT "THE FIRST PHASE OF THE WAR IS ENDED" AND GERMANY FACES "A WAR OF WHICH IT HAS LOST COMMAND."

SEP 23 1939

THE BROADCAST STRENGTHENED THE BELIEF THE FRENCH WERE READY TO PRESS THEIR INITIAL ADVANTAGE WHICH HE SAID CARRIED THE WAR TO GERMAN SOIL "FOR THE FIRST TIME SINCE NAPOLEON THE FIRST."

INFORMATION FROM THE WAR FRONT GAVE THE IMPRESSION THAT IT MIGHT WELL BE THE GERMANS WHO WOULD LAUNCH AN OFFENSIVE.

FOR DAYS THE NAZIS HAVE BEEN SCOUTING FRENCH ADVANCE LINES WITH PATROL PARTIES AND PLANES IN THE USUAL PRELIMINARY TO A BIG PUSH.

THE GERMANS WERE REPORTED MOVING MASSIVE REINFORCEMENTS FROM THE EASTERN FRONT TO THE WESTERN FRONT. THE FACT THAT TODAY THE GERMANS HALTED THEIR SCOUTING ACTIVITY AND APPARENTLY WERE CONTENT TO REST ON INFORMATION ALREADY GATHERED GAVE THE IMPRESSION HERE THAT THEY WERE ALL SET.

FRENCH PRELIMINARY ACTIVITY ON THE FRONT ITSELF LEFT MILITARY OBSERVERS IN PARIS WITH THE FEELING THAT IT WAS MORE DEFENSIVE THAN OFFENSIVE.

A HIGH COMMAND COMMUNIQUE TONIGHT SAID IT WAS A CALM DAY "ON THE ENTIRE FRONT."

"OUR SEA FORCES CONTINUE TO ASSURE EFFICIENTLY THE PROTECTION OF OUR CONVOYS AND TO PURSUE THE ENEMY SUBMARINES," IT ADDED.

DALADIER AND HIS MAIN AIDES TOOK OFF FROM PARIS AT DAWN ABOARD A MILITARY PLANE FOR THE LONDON CONFERENCE WITH PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN, BRITISH FOREIGN SECRETARY LORD HALIFAX AND LORD CHATFIELD, BRITAIN'S MINISTER FOR COORDINATION OF DEFENSE.

DUSK WAS FALLING WHEN DALADIER RETURNED TO THE WAR MINISTRY FROM THE AIRPORT WHERE HE LANDED ON HIS RETURN.

IT WAS THE FIRST MEETING BETWEEN THE BRITISH AND FRENCH HIGH COUNCILS SINCE PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN FLEW TO FRANCE FOR A SESSION SEPT. 14. THAT MEETING LASTED ONLY A FEW HOURS.

MEANWHILE, HE SAID, FRENCH MOBILIZATION HAD BEEN COMPLETED AND THE WAR CARRIED TO GERMANY ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

SEP 23 1939

PARIS, SEPT. 22-(AP)-BOTH FRENCH AND GERMAN FORCES WERE REPORTED TONIGHT TO BE MOVING UP BIG GUNS SOUTH AND EAST OF SAARBRUECKEN, KEY GERMAN INDUSTRIAL CITY AND APPARENTLY THE IMMEDIATE GOAL OF FRENCH ARMY PENETRATION INTO THE GERMAN SAARLAND.

EARLIER FRENCH MILITARY ADVICES HAD INDICATED THAT FRENCH PRESSURE AGAINST THE CITY HAD BEEN RENEWED; A NONCOMMITTAL COMMUNIQUE HINTED THAT FRENCH MANEUVERS AND ADVANCE GUARD SKIRMISHES HAD BROKEN A RECENT

30.24 3555

LULL.

HOWEVER, THERE WAS AN OMINOUS QUIET REPORTED TONIGHT ALONG THE WESTERN FRONT AND EVEN THE SKIRMISHES IN THE NO-MAN'S-LAND BETWEEN FORTIFICATIONS HAD SLACKENED.

THE RECENTLY DEVELOPING BATTLE OF THE SAAR, BY WHICH THE FRENCH WERE SEEKING TO PENETRATE GERMAN ADVANCE POSITIONS ALONG THE LINE OF THAT RIVER IN GERMANY AND MAKE CONTACT WITH THE SIEGFRIED LINE, WAS SUDDENLY HALTED SEVERAL DAYS AGO BY SOVIET RUSSIA'S INVASION OF POLAND.

SEP 23 1939

IT WAS UNDERSTOOD THE RUSSIAN ACTION HAD UPSET PLANS OF THE FRENCH GENERAL STAFF. THE FRENCH STRATEGY HAD BEEN TO PLACE SUCH PRESSURE ON THE GERMAN LINES THAT THE NAZI COMMAND WOULD BE FORCED TO PULL TROOPS FROM POLAND, BUT THE MASSIVE REINFORCEMENTS WHICH THE RUSSIAN INTERVENTION MADE AVAILABLE ON THE WEST, CHANGED THE PICTURE OF WESTERN OPERATIONS IMMEDIATELY.

THE FRENCH WERE HEARTENED, HOWEVER, BY REPORTS OF THEIR AERIAL OBSERVERS THAT THE GERMANS APPARENTLY HAD SUFFERED HEAVY LOSSES IN FIGHTING IN POLAND, SINCE GERMAN UNITS BEING SHIFTED TO THE WESTERN FRONT WERE SO REDUCED IN EFFECTIVES IT WAS NOTICEABLE FROM THE AIR.

THE FRENCH INDIRECTLY DISCLOSED AN AERIAL DEFEAT WITH THE PUBLICATION OF NEWS IN THE AFTERNOON PAPERS OF THE DEATH OF A PILOT AND HIS OBSERVER "GLORIOUSLY FALLEN ON THE SAAR FRONT." THE PILOT WAS LIEUT. JEAN SUEUR, WHO WAS RELATED BY BIRTH AND MARRIAGE TO MANY OLD FAMILIES OF FRANCE. HIS OBSERVER WAS CAPT. ROSSIGNOL.

SKELETON RECONNAISSANCE SQUADRONS OF PLANES FROM BOTH ARMIES SCOUTED ENEMY POSITIONS DURING THE DAY. THERE WERE NO REPORTS IN DISPATCHES FROM THE FRONT, HOWEVER, OF AERIAL BATTLES.

BOTH SIDES SEEMED CONTENT TO GATHER INFORMATION FOR THE BIG PUSH WHICH SOME MILITARY EXPERTS BELIEVE IS COMING. SINCE THE SAAR BATTLE WAS HALTED THE FRENCH HAVE BEEN IMPROVING THEIR POSITIONS TO OFFSET THE POSSIBILITY OF A GERMAN ATTACK WITH REINFORCEMENTS FROM THE EASTERN FRONT.

SEP 23 1939

THE GERMANS HAVE BEEN EQUALLY CONTENT TO BIDE THEIR TIME, AWAITING THE ARRIVAL OF THESE REINFORCEMENTS AND MEANWHILE FEELING OUT THE FRENCH POSITIONS.

FRENCH INFANTRY PATROLS FELT THEIR WAY CAUTIOUSLY THROUGH THE HILLS SOUTH AND EAST OF SAARBRUECKEN TODAY AND REPORTED THEY ENCOUNTERED NO ENEMY RESISTANCE.

DURING THE LAST FEW DAYS IT WAS GERMAN PATROLS WHICH RAIDED THIS AREA IN SEARCH OF INFORMATION. APPARENTLY THE GERMAN RAIDS HAVE SLACKENED AND THE FRENCH ARE TAKING A TURN.

QUICK SALLIES AGAINST GERMAN BLOCKHOUSES IN THE SUBURBS OF SAARBRUECKEN FROM A BRIDGEHEAD ACROSS THE SAAR RIVER WERE REPORTED TO HAVE PROVOKED NO GERMAN REACTION.

ADVICES FROM THE FRONT INDICATED THE GERMANS WERE SITTING TIGHT BEHIND STRONG ADVANCE FORTIFICATIONS AND WAITING FOR THE FRENCH TO ACT.

THE BRITISH WERE REPORTED TO HAVE TAKEN ADVANTAGE OF THE COMPARATIVE LULL IN OPERATIONS TO STRENGTHEN THEIR ORGANIZATION ON FRENCH TERRITORY.

THE DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, YOUNGER BROTHER OF KING GEORGE, TOOK UP DUTIES AT THE BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE AS CHIEF LIAISON OFFICER BETWEEN THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCES AND THE FRENCH COMMAND.

DB/ED301PED

LONDON, SEPT. 22-(AP)-THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT, BY MEANS OF A 195-PAGE BLUE BOOK, HAS TOLD ITS "INSIDE STORY" OF THE STEPS THAT LED TO WAR.

IT TOLD HOW ADOLF HITLER INVITED AN ANGLO-GERMAN ALLIANCE; HOW HE DECLARED HE PREFERRED WAR NOW WHILE HE WAS 50 INSTEAD OF LATER WHEN HE WOULD BE 55 OR 60; AND HOW, IN THE WORDS OF BRITISH AMBASSADOR SIR NEVILE HENDERSON, HITLER DID NOT SEEM "OVER ENTHUSIASTIC" ABOUT GERMANY'S PACT WITH SOVIET RUSSIA.

THE BLUE BOOK DOCUMENTED THE EXCHANGES BETWEEN BRITAIN AND GERMANY IN THE FINAL DAYS OF PEACE.

IT SAID SIR NEVILE ON HIS OWN RESPONSIBILITY SUGGESTED TOHITLER THAT POLAND'S FOREIGN MINISTER, JOZEF BECK, MEET GERMANY'S FOREIGN MINISTER, JOACHIM VON RIBBENTROP, AND DISCUSS A "WAY OUT" IN PEACE.

"HERR HITLER'S REPLY WAS THAT HE HAD INVITED M.BECK TO COME AND TALK THE MATTER OVER LAST MARCH ONLY TO HAVE HIS INVITATION FLATLY REFUSED," THE BOOK SAID.

ON AUGUST 25, HENDERSON SAID, "HITLER WAS EXCITABLE AND UNCOMPROMISING" WHEN HE FIRST SAW HIM. "HIS LANGUAGE WAS VIOLENT AND EXAGGERATED BOTH AS REGARDS ENGLAND AND POLAND." LATER IN THE DAY, HOWEVER, HE SAW HITLER WHEN HE "WAS QUITE CALM X X X AND NEVER RAISED HIS VOICE ONCE."

SEP 23 1939

ON THE OCCASION OF HIS FIRST VISIT THAT DAY, HENDERSON GAVE HITLER PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN'S LETTER SUGGESTING A TRUCE TO PERMIT DIRECT DISCUSSIONS BETWEEN POLAND AND GERMANY IN REGARD TO MINORITY POPULATIONS.

HITLER'S REPLY, THE BLUE BOOK SAID, WAS THAT "GERMANY HAD NOTHING TO LOSE, AND GREAT BRITAIN MUCH; THAT HE DID NOT DESIRE WAR BUT WOULD NOT SHRINK FROM IT IF IT WAS NECESSARY, AND THAT HIS PEOPLE WERE MUCH

30.24 3557

MORE BEHIND HIM THAN LAST SEPTEMBER," THE TIME OF THE CZECHO-SLOVAK CRISIS.

SEP 23 1939

AT THE SECOND HENDERSON-HITLER MEETING THAT DAY THE FUEHRER PLACED THE BLAME FOR WAR ON BRITAIN, DECLARING SHE WAS "DETERMINED LO DESTROY AND EXTERMINATE GERMANY." IT WAS THEN THAT HE REFERRED TO WA IN RELATION TO HIS AGE.

ON AUGUST 24, THE BLUE BOOK CONTINUED, THE POLISH AMBASSADOR IN BERLIN, UNABLE TO SEE THE GERMAN STATE SECRETARY, BARON VON WEIZSACKER, HAD AN INTERVIEW WITH FIELD MARSHAL GOERING WHO TOLD THE AMBASSADOR HE REGRETTED THAT HIS (GOERING'S) "POLICY OF MAINTAINING FRIENDLY RELATIONS WITH POLAND SHOULD HAVE COME TO NOUGHT, AND ADMITTED THAT HE NO LONGER HAD INFLUENCE TO DO MUCH IN THE MATTER."

"THE FIELD MARSHAL HINTED THAT POLAND SHOULD ABANDON HER ALLIANCE WITH GREAT BRITAIN AND LEFT THE POLISH GOVERNMENT WITH THE IMPRESSION THAT GERMANY WAS AIMING AT A FREE HAND IN EASTERN EUROPE," THE BOOK DECLARED.

"ON THE 25TH OF AUGUST HERR HITLER SENT FOR SIR NEVILE HENDERSON AND ASKED HIM TO FLY TO LONDON TO 'PUT THE CASE' TO HIS MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT. THE 'CASE', WHICH INCLUDED AN OFFER OF FRIENDSHIP WITH GREAT BRITAIN, ONCE THE POLISH QUESTION HAD BEEN SOLVED, WAS CONTAINED IN A VERBAL COMMUNICATION MADE TO HIS MAJESTY'S AMBASSADOR.

"DURING THE DISCUSSION WITH HERR HITLER, SIR NEVILE STATED ONCE MORE THAT GREAT BRITAIN 'COULD NOT GO BACK ON HER WORD TO POLAND,' AND WOULD INSIST UPON A SETTLEMENT BY NEGOTIATION. HITLER REFUSED TO GUARANTEE A NEGOTIATED SETTLEMENT ON THE GROUND THAT 'POLISH PROVOCATION MIGHT AT ANY MOMENT RENDER GERMAN INTERVENTION TO PROTECT GERMAN NATIONALS INEVITABLE.'"

EDA/GSAED

BRITAIN'S REPLY TO HITLER'S MESSAGE WAS MADE ON AUGUST 28. IT SAID POLAND WAS WILLING TO NEGOTIATE AND THAT IF AN AGREEMENT RESULTED THE "WAY WOULD BE OPEN TO THE NEGOTIATION OF THAT WIDER AND MORE COMPLETE UNDERSTANDING BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND GERMANY WHICH BOTH COUNTRIES DESIRE."

HITLER, WHO SAID HIS ARMY WAS "READY AND EAGER FOR BATTLE," DELAYED HIS ANSWER UNTIL THE EVENING OF AUGUST 29. HENDERSON'S INTERVIEW WITH DER FUEHRER WAS DESCRIBED AS "OF A STORMY CHARACTER."

HITLER SAID THAT HE WAS PREPARED TO ACCEPT THE BRITISH PROPOSALS FOR DIRECT GERMAN-POLISH NEGOTIATIONS BUT THAT A POLISH PLENIPOTENTIARY MUST BE IN BERLIN BY AUGUST 30.

"THE BRITISH AMBASSADOR," THE BLUE BOOK SAID, "REMARKED THAT THE LATTER DEMAND 'SOUNDED LIKE AN ULTIMATUM,' BUT AFTER SOME HEATED REMARKS, BOTH HERR HITLER AND HERR VON RIBBENTROP ASSURED THE AMBASSADOR 'THAT IT WAS ONLY INTENDED TO STRESS THE URGENCY OF THE MOMENT.'"

SEP 23 1939

POLAND BRITAIN FELT, HOWEVER, THAT IT WAS "WHOLLY UNREASONABLE" TO EXPECT COMPLIANCE AND AT MIDNIGHT ON THE 30TH-31ST HENDERSON AGAIN CALLED ON HITLER AND VON RIBBENTROP. THE LATTER PRODUCED "A LENGTHY DOCUMENT WHICH HE HAD READ OUT IN GERMAN ALOUD AT TOP SPEED."

WHEN HENDERSON ASKED FOR THE TEXT OF THE PROPOSALS IN THE DOCUMENT, THE BLUE BOOK SAID, HE WAS TOLD THAT IT WAS "NOW TOO LATE," AS A POLISH REPRESENTATIVE HAD NOT ARRIVED BY THE DEADLINE.

"IT WAS NOT UNTIL 9:45 P.M. ON THE 31ST OF AUGUST," THE BLUE BOOK CONTINUED, "THAT THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT GAVE SIR N.HENDERSON A COPY OF THEIR PROPOSALS, WHICH HAD BEEN READ TO HIM SO RAPIDLY.

X X X THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT STATED THAT THE NOTE CONTAINED THE 16 POINTS OF THEIR PROPOSED SETTLEMENT, BUT THAT, AS THE POLISH PLENIPOTENTIARY, WITH POWERS 'NOT ONLY TO DISCUSS BUT TO CONDUCT AND CONCLUDE NEGOTIATIONS,' HAD NOT ARRIVED IN BERLIN, THEY REGARDED THEIR PROPOSALS AS 'TO ALL INTENTS AND PURPOSES REJECTED.'

"X X X THEY HAD, HOWEVER, NEVER BEEN COMMUNICATED TO THE POLISH GOVERNMENT AND ALL MEANS OF COMMUNICATION BETWEEN THE POLISH AMBASSADOR IN BERLIN AND THE POLISH GOVERNMENT HAD BEEN CUT OFF."

GERMAN TROOPS ENTERED POLAND SEVERAL HOURS LATER.

BRITONS BESIEGED HIS MAJESTY'S STATIONERY OFFICE TO BUY THE BLUE BOOK AT A RATE OF 2,000 COPIES EVERY HOUR.

THOROUGH READING OF THIS TREMENDOUS DOCUMENTATION LED MANY NEUTRAL OBSERVERS TO FOCUS ATTENTION ON COMMUNICATIONS BETWEEN BRITAIN AND POLAND ON THE NIGHT OF AUG. 31 AND EARLY SEPT. 1, JUST A FEW HOURS BEFORE HITLER INVADED POLAND. THESE OBVIOUSLY WERE THE LAST DESPERATE EFFORTS AT PEACE.

SEP 23 1939

IN A TELEGRAM TO FOREIGN MINISTER VISCOUNT HALIFAX RECEIVED IN LONDON AT 7:15 P.M. ON AUG. 31 SIR HOWARD KENNARD, BRITISH AMBASSADOR TO POLAND, REPORTED THAT BECK HAD AGREED TO TELL JOZEF LIPSKI, POLAND'S AMBASSADOR TO GERMANY, TO VISIT RIBBENTROP AND INFORM HIM POLAND HAD ACCEPTED THE BRITISH PROPOSALS FOR DIRECT NEGOTIATIONS WITH GERMANY DURING A "MILITARY STANDSTILL."

AT THE SAME TIME, HOWEVER, KENNARD REPORTED BECK HAD SAID LIPSKI "WOULD NOT BE AUTHORIZED" TO ACCEPT GERMANY'S 16-POINT PROPOSALS FOR PEACE SHOULD THEY BE HANDED TO HIM "AS, IN VIEW OF PAST EXPERIENCE, IT MIGHT BE ACCOMPANIED BY SOME SORT OF ULTIMATUM."

KENNARD WENT ON: "HE (BECK) ADDED THAT IF INVITED TO GO TO BERLIN HE WOULD OF COURSE NOT GO, AS HE HAD NO INTENTION OF BEING TREATED LIKE PRESIDENT HACHA" OF CZECHOSLOVAKIA.

HALIFAX REPLIED AT 12:30 A.M. ON SEPT. 1 THAT HE WAS GLAD LIPSKI WAS GOING TO SEE RIBBENTROP BUT "I DO NOT SEE WHY THE POLISH GOVERNMENT SHOULD FEEL ANY DIFFICULTY ABOUT AUTHORIZING THE POLISH AMBASSADOR TO ACCEPT THE DOCUMENT FROM THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT AND I EARNESTLY HOPE THAT THEY MAY BE ABLE TO MODIFY THEIR INSTRUCTION TO HIM IN THIS RESPECT.

"THERE WAS NO MENTION OF ANY ULTIMATUM IN THE REPORT ON THE GERMAN PROPOSALS WHICH HAS BEEN FURNISHED TO US, AND THE SUGGESTION THAT THE DEMAND FOR THE PRESENCE OF A POLISH PLENIPOTENTIARY AT BERLIN ON AUG. 30 AMOUNTED TO AN ULTIMATUM WAS VIGOROUSLY REPUDIATED BY HERR VON RIBBENTROP IN CONVERSATION WITH HIS MAJESTY'S AMBASSADOR.

SEP 23 1939

"IF THE DOCUMENT DID CONTAIN AN ULTIMATUN, THE POLISH GOVERNMENT WOULD NATURALLY REFUSE TO DISCUSS IT UNTIL THE ULTIMATUM WAS WITH" DRAWN. ON THE OTHER HAND, A REFUSAL BY THEM TO RECEIVE PROPOSALS WOULD BE GRAVELY MISUNDERSTOOD BY OUTSIDE OPINION X X X."

AT THE SAME TIME HALIFAX "FULLY AGREED" WITH "THE UNDESIRABILITY OF A VISIT BY M.BECK TO BERLIN."

THE IMMEDIATE BACKGROUND OF THIS EXCHANGE WAS A REPORT BY HENDERSON TO HALIFAX RECEIVED IN LONDON AT 9:30 A.M. AUG. 31 IN WHICH HENDERSON DESCRIBED THE INTERVIEW WITH RIBBENTROP WHEN GERMANY'S 16-POINT PROPOSALS WERE READ "AT TOP SPEED."

WITH THE EXPLANATION HE COULD NOT GUARANTEE ITS ACCURACY, HENDERSON GAVE HALIFAX A BRIEF SKETCH OF THESE PROPOSALS, EXPLAINING RIBBENTROP REFUSED TO GIVE HIM A COPY.

ACCORDING TO THE BLUE BOOK THIS WAS THE FIRST INTIMATION OF THE NATURE OF GERMAN PROPOSALS TO BE RECEIVED BY EITHER BRITAIN OR POLAND ALTHOUGH THE FACT THEY WERE BEING FORMULATED WAS CONVEYED TO BRITAIN IN THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT DECLARATION OF AUG. 29 WHICH "SKEPTICALLY" ACCEPTED THE PRINCIPLE OF DIRECT DISCUSSIONS AND SAID GERMANY WOULD "COUNT ON" A POLISH PLENIPOTENTIARY ARRIVING IN BERLIN TO RECEIVE THEM ON AUG. 30.

SEP 23 1939

THE BLUE BOOK REVEALED HALIFAX'S LAST URGINGS TO BECK, AS COMMUNICATED TO KENNARD, NEVER WERE DELIVERED BECAUSE EARLY ON SEPT. 1 GERMANY INVADED POLAND. THIS REVEALING TELEGRAM FROM KENNARD TO HALIFAX, DATED AT WARSAW AT 7:43 P.M. SEPT. 1 SAYS:

"YOUR TELEGRAM OF SEPT. 1 WAS DECIPHERED AT 4 A.M. TODAY. M.LIPSKI HAD ALREADY CALLED ON THE GERMAN FOREIGN MINISTER AT 6:30 P.M. YESTERDAY. IN VIEW OF THIS FACT, WHICH WAS FOLLOWED BY GERMAN INVASION OF POLAND AT DAWN TODAY, IT WAS CLEARLY USELESS FOR ME TO TAKE THE ACTION SUGGESTED."

A SUBSEQUENT REPORT FROM HENDERSON TO HALIFAX QUOTED LIPSKI'S COMMUNICATION TO RIBBENTROP DURING THE NIGHT OF AUG. 31 AS SAYING THAT POLAND WAS "WEIGHING FAVORABLY THE BRITISH SUGGESTION" FOR DIRECT NEGOTIATIONS WITH GERMANY.

HENDERSON ADDED THIS COMMENT ON LIPSKI'S HOPELESS MEETING WITH RIBBENTROP: "I UNDERSTAND THAT NO DISCUSSION TOOK PLACE."

IN AN EXPLANATORY NOTE THE BLUE BOOK SAYS IN PART:

"THE POLISH GOVERNMENT X X X INFORMED ITS MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT DURING THE AFTERNOON OF AUG. 31 THAT THEY WOULD AUTHORIZE THEIR AMBASSADOR TO INFORM THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT THAT POLAND HAD ACCEPTED BRITISH PROPOSALS FOR NEGOTIATIONS. THE POLISH AMBASSADOR IN BERLIN (M.LIPSKI) WAS NOT RECEIVED BY HERR VON RIBBENTROP UNTIL THE EVENING OF AUG. 31. AFTER THIS INTERVIEW THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT BROADCAST THEIR PROPOSALS FORTHWITH. M.LIPSKI AT ONCE TRIED TO ESTABLISH CONTACT WITH WARSAW BUT WAS UNABLE TO DO SO BECAUSE ALL MEANS OF COMMUNICATION BETWEEN POLAND AND GERMANY HAD BEEN CLOSED BY THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT."

REPORTS FROM ISTANBUL THAT TURKEY MAY CONCLUDE A MUTUAL ASSISTANCE AGREEMENT WITH SOVIET RUSSIA SUGGEST ANOTHER DEFEAT FOR THE BRITISH-FRENCH ALLIES ON WHAT JUST NOW IS THE WAR'S MOST IMPORTANT SECTOR ---THE DIPLOMATIC FRONT.

FOREIGN MINISTER SARACOGLU'S TRIP TO MOSCOW CAN HARDLY MEAN ANYTHING ELSE THAN A FURTHER CRUMBLING OF THE FRONT THE ALLIES UNDERTOOK TO SET UP IN THE BALKANS AND THE NEAR EAST. UNLESS THE WAR

TAKES ANOTHER TURN, TURKEY MUST BE COUNTED OUT OF ANY "STOP HITLER" ALLIANCE.

MORE MENACINGLY, THE PROSPECTIVE COMPACT MAY WELL MEAN A DEFINITE ADVANCE FOR GERMANY IN THE RESUMPTION OF THE HISTORIC DRIVE TO THE EAST TOWARD THE SUEZ CANAL.

SEP 23 1939

THE NEXT MOVE TO LOOK FOR IS AN ANNOUNCEMENT THAT THE DARDANELLES WILL BE CLOSED IN THE INTEREST OF PEACE AND NEUTRALITY, KEEPING BRITISH AND FRENCH WARSHIPS OUT OF THE BLACK SEA AND AWAY FROM RUSSIA AND THE BALKANS' EASTERN SHORE.

LIKE THE DESPERATE PLIGHT OF UNHAPPY RUMANIA, THE DEVELOPMENT CASTS LIGHT ON THE WAY THE BALKANS AND TURKEY ARE BEING SQUEEZED BETWEEN AGGRESSIVE GERMANY AND PASSIVELY THREATENING RUSSIA.

ALMOST UNTIL THE ACTUAL START OF THE WAR, TURKEY WAS CONSIDERED AN ALLY OF THE BRITISH AND FRENCH AND A FOE OF GERMANY, REVERSING 1914-18. THE TURKS ALREADY HAVE A MUTUAL ASSISTANCE COMPACT WITH BRITAIN AND FRANCE, AND A FORMER CHIEF OF THE FRENCH GENERAL STAFF, VETERAN GENERAL WEYGAND, HAS BEEN TRYING AT ANKARA TO TRANSLATE DIPLOMATIC UNDERSTANDINGS INTO MILITARY TERMS.

TURKEY WAS TO BE THE MAIN BULWARK OF A BALKAN-NEAR EAST FRONT, OR AT LEAST A BENEVOLENT NEUTRAL, KEEPING THE DARDANELLES OPEN TO SEA TRAFFIC. SOONER OR LATER, HER MODERN ARMY OF SOME 22 FIRST LINE DIVISIONS WAS COUNTED ON FOR ACTIVE ASSISTANCE TO THE ALLIES.

RUSSIA'S BOMBSHELL PACT OF AUGUST 24 WITH GERMANY AND THE SUBSEQUENT MARCH OF SOVIET TROOPS INTO PROSTRATE POLAND ALTERED THAT PICTURE. ANKARA AND MOSCOW HAVE BEEN CLOSE FRIENDS, ESPECIALLY SINCE THE RISE OF THE LATE MUSTAFA KEMAL PASHA AS TURKEY'S DICTATOR. MORE POINTED THAN PAST FRIENDSHIP, HOWEVER, IS THE FACT THAT RUSSIAN TROOPS NOW ARE MASSED ON TURKEY'S BORDER, AS THEY ARE ON RUMANIA'S AND HUNGARY'S.

THE NAZIS, IN WOOING TURKEY'S FAVOR FOR A LONG WAR, CAN ARGUE CONVINCINGLY THAT FOR THE TIME BEING THE SAFEST COURSE FOR ANKARA IS NEUTRALITY AND THE CLOSING OF THE DARDANELLES. THEY HAVE THE VETERAN FRANZ VON PAPEN ON THE SCENE PRESSING THE POINT.

PERHAPS VON PAPEN HAS SAID THAT IF THE FUTURE PROGRESS OF THE WAR SEEMS LIKELY TO SHATTER THE BRITISH EMPIRE, TURKEY MAY SAFEGUARD HER INTERESTS AND EXPAND HER TERRITORY BY JOINING IN A SEIZURE OF THE SUEZ CANAL AND OCCUPATION OF FRENCH SYRIA. IT IS ONLY THROUGH TURKEY THAT THE CANAL, MOST VULNERABLE POINT IN THE BRITISH LIFELINE THROUGH THE MEDITERRANEAN, CAN BE REACHED FROM THE NORTH WITHOUT A NAVY TO CHALLENGE BRITISH AND FRENCH SEA POWER.

INDICATIONS ARE THAT TURKEY, LIKE THE BALKAN NATIONS, IS STRIVING TO KEEP ON THE SIDE LINES. SHE HAS TO WATCH ITALY, BECAUSE OF THE ITALIAN-DOMINATED DODECANESE ISLANDS OFF HER COAST, AND ITALY'S COURSE MAY WELL DECIDE TURKEY'S.

EVEN WITH TURKEY AS A MILITARY ALLY OF GERMANY, THE LAND ROUTE TO THE CANAL WOULD NOT BE ENTIRELY CLEAR. IRAQ STANDS IN THE WAY AND THE ARAB GOVERNMENT HAS BROKEN DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH BERLIN. THERE ALSO IS EGYPT TO BE RECKONED WITH.

Announcement by President Roosevelt yesterday that two foreign submarines had been sighted off Alaska and Nova Scotia recalls daring visits in

30.24-3561

3024 3561

American waters by German submarines in 1916, xf before the United States entered the World War.

The German merchant submarine, Deutschland, made two commercial trips, eluding the British blockade, and the war submarine, U-53 terrorized shipping off the New England coast.

SEP 23 1939

On Oct. 7 of that year, the war craft, U-53, suddenly appeared in the harbor at Newport, R. I. from Wilhelmshaven and remained for three hours. The next day, six foreign merchantmen were sent to the bottom off the island of Nantucket by the submarine. The attacks occurred outside territorial waters. The war had been brought close to home in startling fashion.

The Deutschland, arriving first at Baltimore and later at New London, Conn. brought millions of dollars worth of medicines, dye-stuffs and other commodities, as well as mail for the German ambassador. On her return trips she carried valuable cargoes of gold, nickel and crude rubber, sorely needed in Germany.

The exploits of the Deutschland and her commander, Capt. Paul Koenig, aroused admiration in this country.

It was on July 10, 1916, that the U-boat bobbed up at Baltimore after an uneventful twenty-day trip from its home port, Bremerhaven. Nobody had thought such a feat possible. Capt. Koenig received a warm welcome and he was feted at several cities.

The Deutschland expected to make a quick return trip, but it took some time to load the cargo and it was not until August 1 that he got away, accompanied by tug boats that swept the channel ahead of him with nets. All the time the U-boat was at rest at Locust Point, near Baltimore, she had been under surveillance by British agents. Capt Koenig, at the time, expressed fear that some secret attempt might be made to lay a mine in his pathway in Chesapeake Bay.

Eight British destroyers and cruisers, in fanshape formation, lay outside the territorial limits, but the Deutschland submerged and avoided them. On aug. 23, the U-boat showed up at the mouth of the Weser and Koenig was hailed as a hero in Germany.

SEP 23 1939

Meanwhile, a sister submarine, the Bremen, was reported to have sailed to the United States with a cargo of dyestuffs, but she was never heard from again.

On Nov. 1, the Deutschland made her return trip, entering the harbor at

New London near the site of the Yale-Harvard regatta course in the early hours of morning. She had sailed from Bremerhaven, Oct. 10 with a $10,000,000 cargo on board. As in Baltimore, Koenig received a warm welcome and was presented with a gold watch.

SEP 23 1939

The writer of this dispatch saw Captain Koenig as he emerged from the conning tower, clad in hip boots and an oil-skin coat, his face wreathed in smiles. He shouted a greeting in English. He had been a commander of North German Lloyd liners before the war and spoke English fluently. But, before he could be interviewed in detail, guards closed the gates to the dock and chased away all civilians.

Later in the day, Koenig received the press at a hotel and modestly gave a matter-of-fact account of his trip. A small, wiry, brown-eyed man, he smiled occasionally when he recounted the large number of British men-of-war he had seen in the North Sea. At one time, he said, the submarine submerged to the bottom of the sea, while the crew slept before resuming the voyage to America.

The Deutschland started for home on Nov. 17, but while sailing down the south of the Thames River, rammed a convoy tug, which sank with her captain and crew of five. The U-boat put back to port for examination and four days later headed for Germany. She arrived without incident in nineteen days.

That was her last trip. Relations between the two countries were becoming strained and the next spring the United States entered the war.

Koenig died at Gnadau, Germany, Sept. 9, 1933, at the age of 66.

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

SEP 23 1939

SQUARE-JAWED KING CAROL STEERED RUMANIA THROUGH A NIGHT OF DESPERATE CRISIS, AFTER THE ASSASSINATION OF PREMIER CALINESCU AND AN ATTEMPTED COUP AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT BY ELEMENTS OFFICIALLY DESCRIBED AS BELONGING TO THE PRO-NAZI IRON GUARD OF TURBULENT HISTORY.

THE POSITION, HOWEVER, REMAINED RAZOR-EDGED AND DANGEROUS IN THE EXTREME NOT ONLY FOR RUMANIA BUT FOR EUROPE AS A WHOLE.

EVER SINCE THE POLISH CRIUIS BOILED OVER, THIS GREATEST OF THE BALKAN NATIONS HAS BEEN TRYING TO HIDE FROM COVETOUS EYES. RUMANIA'S SIDES BULGE WITH LANDS TAKEN FROM OTHER COUNTRIES--BULGARIA, HUNGARY AND RUSSIA--ALL ON ITS BORDERS.

AND HITLER BADLY NEEDS RUMANIA'S RICH OIL FIELD FOR PROSECUTION OF THE WAR. BERLIN ALREADY HAS A STRONG HOLD ON THE COUNTRY, BUT REPORTEDLY HAS FOUND RECENT EFFORTS TO GAIN COMPLETE CONTROL OF THE OIL BLOCKED BY CALINESCU.

SEP 23 1939

RUMANIA HAS BEEN TRYING HER UTMOST TO STEER A NEUTRAL COURSE, THOUGH HER HEART IS WITH THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES. BUT SHE IS UNDER THE BIG GUNS OF NAZIDOM AND DARE NOT CHALLENGE BERLIN TOO FAR.

RUMANIA'S BIG FEAR OF THE MOMENT IS THAT YESTERDAY'S TROUBLE MAY BE USED AS AN EXCUSE BY AN OUTSIDE POWER TO OCCUPY THE COUNTRY ON THE GROUNDS THAT THE GOVERNMENT NO LONGER IS CAPABLE OF MAINTAINING ORDER.

THE DETERMINATION WITH WHICH CAROL HAS FACED HIS ENEMIES IS SHOWN IN THE PRIMITIVE, CHILLING PUNISHMENT METED OUT TO EIGHT OF THOSE ACCUSED OF PARTICIPATION IN THE PLOT. THEY WERE PUBLICLY EXECUTED

AT THE SPOT WHERE CALIN[illegible] HIS DEATH IN THE HEART OF THE CAPITAL. ALL NIGHT THE BODIES LAY THERE AS A TERRIBLE WARNING TO OTHERS--AND AS NOTIFICATION TO THE OUTSIDE WORLD THAT RUMANIA INTENDS TO DEFEND HER SOVEREIGNTY.

THIS RUMANIAN ERUPTION, WHICH HAS BROUGHT THE ENTIRE BALKAN PENINSULA AND HUNGARY TO THEIR TOES, MAY HAVE A VERY CONSIDERABLE EFFECT ON THE GENERAL WAR AT THIS JUNCTURE.

WITH POLAND VIRTUALLY CRUSHED, GERMANY HAS BEEN MOVING LARGE NUMBERS OF TROOPS, WARPLANES AND HEAVY ARMS FROM THE EAST TO THE WESTERN FRONT FOR OPERATIONS AGAINST THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES. NOW, ONE WOULD EXPECT THAT THIS OVEMENT MIGHT STOP, OR EVEN BE REVERSED IN PART, FOR THE GERMANS SURELY DARE NOT LEAVE EASTERN EUROPE UNGUARDED AT SUCH A TIME.

SEP 23 1939

THE FIERY BALKAN STATES HAVE BEEN TREADING NARROW PATHS SINCE THE STORM BROKE, AND PERFORCE THEY OFTEN HAVE TO BEND WITH THE WIND, WHICH NOW IS HOWLING DOWN THEIR SLOPES FROM BOTH GERMANY AND RUSSIA. IT WOULD BE THE HEIGHT OF FOLLY, HOWEVER, FOR NAZIDOM TO LEAVE THE COCK PIT OF EASTERN EUROPE UNGUARDED.

THE ANGLO-FRENCH BROTHERHOOD HAS BEEN QUIETLY WORKING TO TRY TO BREAK MUSSOLINI AWAY FROM THE BERLIN-ROME AXIS AND BRING HIM ONTO THE ALLIED SIDE. WITH HIM THEY HOPE TO SWING MOST OF THE BALKANS.

THE ALLIED SUCCESS OR FAILURE IN THIS VENTURE MAY DEPEND A GREAT DEAL ON WHAT RUSSIA'S FUTURE ATTITUDE IS.

THE DEVELOPMENT ON THE WESTERN FRONT WHICH IS EXCITING MOST COMMENT, PERHAPS BECAUSE IT IS A MYSTERY, IS A REPORTED HEAVY CONCENTRATION OF GERMAN TROOPS AND LARGE NUMBERS OF WARPLANES AT AIX-LA-CHAPELLE (AACHEN), AN IMPORTANT JUNCTION NEAR THE BELGIAN AND NETHERLANDS BORDERS.

QUITE NATURALLY BOTH THESE LITTLE COUNTRIES HAVE BEEN ANXIOUS, REMEMBERING THE LIGHTNING INVASION OF BELGIUM BY GERMANY AT THE OUTBREAK OF THE WORLD WAR. RUMORS OF AN IMPENDING INVASION GOT SO STRONG THAT YESTERDAY GERMAN PROPAGANDA MINISTER GOEBBELS VIGOROUSLY DENIED GERMANY INTENDED TO VIOLATE THE NEUTRALITY EITHER OF THESE COUNTRIES OR OF LUXENBOURG.

THAT PERHAPS WILL NOT QUIET THE ANXIETY OF NAZIDOM'S LITTLE NEIGHBORS, OR OF THE ALLIES. BUT QUITE APART FROM ANY MORAL ASPECT OF THE CASE, THE PROPAGANDA MINISTER'S ASSERTION SOUNDS LIKE SENSE.

THERE COULD BE NO POINT IN GERMANY TRYING TO BREAK THROUGH THAT WAY, EXCEPTING AS A MEASURE OF DESPERATION WHEN EVERYTHING ELSE HAD FAILED.

THIS ISN'T 1914. THE ELEMENT OF SURPRISE WHICH GERMANY INVOKED THEN IS LACKING NOW. THE ROAD TO THE COAST NO LONGER IS AS OPEN AS TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO.

SEP 23 1939

BOTH BELGIUM AND HOLLAND ARE PREPARED TO DEFEND THEIR NEUTRALITY. IN THE CASE OF BELGIUM, NOT ONLY HAVE THE BELGIANS BUILT A VAST LINE OF DEFENSES ON THEIR BORDER, BUT THE FRENCH HAVE EXTENDED THEIR GREAT MAGINOT ALONG THE ENTIRE FRANCO-BELGIAN FRONTIER.

THE GERMANS WOULD HAVE TO HEW A BLOODY PATH THROUGH THESE TWO LINES TO REACH THE CHANNEL PORTS. THEY WOULD ENCOUNTER THE FLOODS FROM BROKEN DYKES IF THEY TRIED TO CROSS HOLLAND.

SO HERR GOEBBELS' ANNOUNCEMENT SEEMS LIKE THE REAL THING.

WHAT IS POSSIBLE IS THAT THE GERMANS ARE MAKING AIX A PROTECTIVE AND SUPPLY BASE, COUPLED WITH AN AIR BASE WHICH MAY BE HEARD FROM BEFORE

30.24-3565 30.24 3565

LONG. THIS WOULD SEEM TO BE A LOGICAL LOCATION FOR A BIG AIR FORCE WHICH COULD HARRY CHANNEL AND NORTH SEA SHIPPING, INCLUDING ALL IMPORTANT MOVEMENT OF TROOPS AND SUPPLIES FROM ENGLAND TO THE BATTLE FIELD IN FRANCE.

THE REVENGE EXECUTION OF "NEARLY 2,000" PRO-NAZI IRON GUARDISTS IN RUMANIA WAS REPORTED LAST (FRIDAY) NIGHT WHILE THE ALLIED SUPREME WAR COUNCIL REACHED "COMPLETE AGREEMENT" ON FUTURE OPERATIONS ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

THE IRON GUARDS WERE KILLED IN RETALIATION FOR THE ASSASSINATION THURSDAY OF RUMANIA'S PREMIER, ARMAND CALINESCU, WHO HAD FOUGHT CONTINUALLY AGAINST THEIR ORGANIZATION.

CONFRONTED WITH THE STARTLING DEVELOPMENTS IN NEUTRAL RUMANIA AND THE GERMAN-RUSSIAN ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE TEMPORARY PARTITION OF POLAND, PREMIER DALADIER OF FRANCE FLEW TO LONDON FOR TWO HURRIED MEETINGS WITH PREMIER CHAMBERLAIN OF THE ALLIED COUNCIL.

ACROSS THE SEAS, IN WASHINGTON, PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT SAID UNIDENTIFIED SUBMARINES WERE SIGHTED OFF SOUTHERN ALASKA AND OFF BOSTON.

THE SUPREME COUNCIL MEETING IN LONDON, THE FIRST TIME THAT BODY HAD MET SINCE SEPT. 14, WEIGHED THE RUSSIAN INVASION OF POLAND, THE RUMANIAN SITUATION AND THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT'S OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT THAT THE "FIRST PHASE OF THE WAR WAS ENDED" WITH THE SUBJECTION OF POLAND.

THE FRENCH GENERAL STAFF, IN A COMMUNIQUE, DESCRIBED THE WESTERN FRONT AS "CALM" THROUGHOUT THE DAY. BOTH SIDES WERE SAID TO BE MOVING HEAVY GUNS UP TO THE FRONT.

BUT IT WAS FAR FROM CALM ON POLAND'S SOUTHERN BORDERS AS THOUSANDS OF FLEEING SOLDIERS, REFUGEES AND GROUPS OF FOREIGNERS SOUGHT REFUGE FROM THE ADVANCING GERMAN AND RUSSIAN ARMIES.

SOVIET RUSSIAN TROOPS ARRIVED AT KOROSMEZO, HUNGARY, AT SUNDOWN YESTERDAY (FRIDAY) AND TOOK UP POSITIONS ALONG NEARLY 90 MILES OF THE HUNGARIAN-POLISH-RUMANIAN BORDERS.

THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND REPORTED GERMAN TROOPS FIGHTING NEAR LWOW, IN SOUTHEASTERN POLAND, WERE RELIEVED BY RUSSIAN UNITS.

THE BATTLE FOR WARSAW CONTINUED.

THE WARSAW RADIO, BACK ON THE AIR AFTER GOING SILENT THURSDAY, BROADCAST AN AIR RAID ALARM IN EVIDENCE THAT THE GERMANS STILL

Mussolini Tells Italy Next Word Will Be Vital Announcement

Rome, Sept. 23 (AP)—Premier Mussolini broke his self-imposed silence today to reaffirm Italy's war policy—avoidance of hostilities, but military preparations for any eventuality, and support of every peace effort.

In a forceful speech at the Palazzo Venezia to Fascist leaders from Bologna, Il Duce declared:

"In a situation like the present, full of many unknowns, the watchword has sprung spontaneously among the masses of authentic Italian people—prepare in a military way to meet any eventuality, support every possible peace effort and work vigilantly in silence.

"That is the style of Fascism; that must be and is the style of the Italian people."

ATTITUDE UNCHANGED

In underlining the present as "a stormy moment which again brings into play not only the map of Europe, but perhaps that of continents," Mussolini said the Italian decision to refrain from any military initiative stood without change nevertheless, even after the liquidation of Poland.

He said this stand conformed to Italy's treaty of military alliance with Germany.

Il Duce advised Great Britain and France it was "a vain illusion" to try to reconstruct Poland. Realization of this, he said, could avert a clash between the armies of Germany, Britain and France.

Italy's policy, he declared, "is at least to localize the conflict" which has broken out in Europe.

ARMY AT FULL STRENGTH

Il Duce earlier had conferred with Gen. Ettore Bastico, commander of the new mechanized army of the Po, who told him his army was at the full strength of its efficiency in men and arms.

Creation of a new air squadron with headquarters in Rome also was announced.

Foreign circles said they interpreted his reference to the possible involvement of continents in the war as an obvious reference to the United States.

He said that while the British and French had avoided spreading the conflict by not declaring war on Soviet Russia, by the same token they "have compromised their moral justification for continuing to attempt to revoke the German 'accomplished fact'" in Poland.

The Premier also called for a new clean-up of anti-Fascists whom he blamed with circulating "certain rumors of which many were most ridiculous about me personally."

DRIVE ON 'MASONIC JEWS'

"The only conclusion to be drawn from them, he said, was: 'Clean out the little corners where the remnants of Masonic Jews still exist." Speaking of these and anti-Fascist lovers of foreigners," Il Duce declared:

"Never will we permit them or others to corrupt the physical or moral health of the Italian people who know that one must not bother the pilot, especially when he is engaged in stormy navigation or ask him at every instant news of the journey.

"If and when I should appear on the balcony (of his palace) and convoke the entire Italian people, it will be, not to outline the situation, but to announce to it—as I did Oct. 2, 1935 (Italy's entrance into Ethiopia), or May 9, 1936 (Incorporation of Ethiopia into the new Italian Empire)—decisions, I say decisions, of historic importance."

"Now it is not such a case," he added.

the remnants of masonic Jews still exist.

Anti-Fascist lovers of foreigners seek refuge by sometimes resorting to each mimetism (chameleon-like mimicry). Never will we permit them or others to corrupt the physical or moral health of the Italian people who know that one must not bother the pilot especially when he is engaged in stormy navigation or ask him at every instant news of the journey.

If and when I should appear on the balcony (of his Palazzo Vanezia) and convoke the entire Italian people, it will be, not to outline the situation, but to announce to it—as I did Oct. 2, 1935 (Italy's entrance into Ethiopia) or May 9, 1936 (incorporation of Ethiopia into the new Italian empire)—decisions, I say decisions, of historic importance.

POLICY OF NEUTRALITY

Now it is not such a case. Our policy was fixed in the declaration of Sept. 1 (neutrality) and there is no reason to modify it. It corresponds to our national interests, to our political treaties and pacts and to the desires of all peoples including the German people.

That policy is at least to localize the conflict. Besides, Poland having been liquidated, Europe is not really

ADDRESSES THRONG IN ROME

Tells Hearers That 'Europe Is Not Yet Really at War'—To Back Peace Efforts.

ROME, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—Premier Mussolini declared today that Italy, desiring to localize the European war, was maintaining her policy outside the European conflict and there is no reason to modify it. It corresponds to our national interests, to our political treaties and pacts and to the desire of all peoples, including the German people.

"That policy is at least to localize the conflict.

"Besides, Poland having been liquidated, Europe is not really at war. The masses of armies have not yet met.

"One can avoid that shock by realizing that to wish to maintain, or worse yet, to wish to restore, positions that history and the natural dynamism of peoples condemn, is a vain illusion."

Telling his hearers that "Europe is not yet really at war," Premier Mussolini said that "the shock can be averted by realizing it is a vain illusion to keep standing or still worse to reconstruct positions which history and natural dynamism of peoples have condemned."

But since the situation is "full of many unknowns" Il Duce said Italy's duty was to "prepare itself in a military way to meet any eventuality" while "supporting every possible effort for peace."

"It is certain," Premier Mussolini continued, "that the governments of London and Paris, with the wise purpose of not enlarging the conflict, have not reacted up to the present in the face of the Russian 'accomplished fact' (the Red Army's occupation of eastern Poland).

"But from that it follows that they have compromised their moral justification for continuing to attempt to revoke the German 'accomplished fact' (conquest of Poland).

Attacks 'Masonic Jews.'

"We meet here in a stormy moment which again brings into play not only the map of Europe but perhaps that of continents. It is only natural that these grandiose events and their repercussions in Italy should have caused emotion among us also.

"There are certain human dregs, very small but extremely miserable, that lived only in the darkest corners and profited by a special and understandable atmosphere.

"These dregs circulated certain rumors, of which many were most ridiculous about me personally. This phenomenon was destined to exhaust itself. Otherwise I would have doubted with great mortification a thing in which I always believed firmly—that the Italian people is one of the most intelligent on earth. Without dramatizing things, for that certainly is not worth while, the conclusion that one ought to draw from all of this may be summed up thus:

"Clean out the little corners where the remnants of Masonic Jews still exist."

Gen. Ettore Bastico, commander of Italy's new speedy army of the Po, reported today to Premier Mussolini on its efficiency. The army, created particularly for the defense of Italy's northern frontiers, was tested during maneuvers near the French frontier in August.

French Answer Mussolini

PARIS, Sept. 23 (AP).—In answer to Premier Mussolini's speech today, an authorized spokesman defined tonight France's diplomatic position as one of determination to fight to the finish against Nazism. The Italian Premier's speech was not delivered immediately to the French press, but reports were received from Rome by official quarters here.

The French spokesman said France's reply was an emphatic "No."

The French stand was summarized in three points:

France appreciates Italy's efforts for peace, as demonstrated by France's acceptance in principle of Italy's note of Sept. 1 proposing negotiations to avert war, and "pays homage" to Mussolini;

The situation, however, has been "profoundly changed" by the German conquest of Poland;

Since then the attitude of the French and British governments has been made clear in statements of their leaders and by their accords with Poland.

Premier Edouard Daladier, in his latest speech, last Thursday, declared: "We want only one thing—complete victory."

French loyalty to the mutual assistance pact with Poland meanwhile was emphasized anew by an official reception tendered to Count Szembleck, Polish Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, who arrived in Paris today. Welcomed at the station by a delegation from the French foreign and national defense ministries, he was the first member of the Polish government to reach France since the German invasion of his country.

Rome Gives Its Official Summary Of Duce's Declaration of Policy

Rome, Sept. 23 (AP)—The following is the official Italian summary of Premier Mussolini's declaration today on Italian policy toward the European war:

We meet here in a stormy moment which again brings into play not only the map of Europe but perhaps that of continents. It is only natural that these grandiose events and their repercussions in Italy should have caused emotion among us also. There are certain human dregs, very small but extremely miserable, that lived in the darkest corners and profited by a special and understandable atmosphere.

THREE NAZI DRIVES FAIL; GENERAL SLAIN IN WARSAW

Allies Hold German Ground Despite Heaviest Artillery Pounding of the War So Far.

PARIS, Sept. 23 (A. P.)—French infantry forces strongly installed on German soil near Saarbruecken were reported today to have repulsed three separate German attacks aimed at regaining French-held territory.

Military dispatches reported that the attacks "coincided with the presence on the western front of Adolf Hitler and Col.-Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch."

De Fuehrer's intention to visit the west wall fortifications had been reported for several days.

Tonight the French General Staff communique, issued by the War Ministry, said simply: "Local activity of artillery and various elements in contact."

Military information from the front said the Germans had rushed troops from Poland—released by Russia's invasion—and sent them into almost immediate action in the west against the French.

Although Nazi Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels declared two days ago that Germany had no intention of violating the neutrality of Belgium, the Netherlands or Luxemburg, the French General Staff has not accepted his statement at face value. France was reported speeding production of mechanized military units, for fear the Nazis might strike through neutral nations in an effort to turn the flanks of the Marginot line.

The dispatches also reported concentrations of German warplanes along the east bank of the Rhine River, opposite the main ramparts of the Maginot line. The planes, these reports said, were in addition to previously reported aviation concentrations near Aachen.

The morning communique said there was great activity during the night on the western front, particularly between the Saar River and the region southeast of Zweibruecken (Deux Ponts) and on the Lauter River.

Preliminary information from the front failed to make clear whether the German attacks were isolated actions or might be considered the large-scale drive the French have been expecting.

French authorities reported the Government is speeding production of mechanized military units for fear Germany may strike through neutral countries in an effort to turn the flanks of the Maginot Line.

(German propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels declared just two days ago that Germany had no intention of violating the neutrality of Belgium, Holland or Luxemburg, "either now or in the future.")

Fear Flank Attack.

Observers believed the speed-up measures were decided upon at a meeting of the French-British War Council in England yesterday.

They said the lessons learned from the swift advance of mechanized German and Russian units through Poland had emphasized the need for adequate anti-tank and anti-aircraft defenses at the extreme ends of the Maginot fortifications.

German assurances that the frontiers of neighboring neutrals would not be violated were tossed aside lightly by French commentators.

The French declared Germany has two choices—a dash through neutral States, or a frontal assault against advance French positions between the Moselle and Rhine Rivers in an attempt to remove the present menace to the Saar mining regions.

A French War Ministry communique, issued at 5:32 A. M. (Eastern daylight time) today, said:

"Toward the end of yesterday afternoon several attempts by the enemy on positions which we have conquered east of the Saar River were repulsed.

"During the night there was great activity on the front, particularly between the Saar River and the region southeast of the city of Deux Ponts (Zweibruecken) and on the Lauter River."

There was increasing evidence a major engagement might develop with extreme suddenness. The question of which side would take the initiative remained a matter of conjecture.

Observers pointed out the ever present possibility that the French may elect to launch an offensive with the hope of making fresh gains before Hitler can move up re-enforcements released from the Polish campaign.

More British Troops Arrive.

Trains continued to discharge fresh French and British troops, as well as munitions, at strategic points. Behind the lines French hospitals advertised for blood donors to stock up on transfusion supplies.

The Pasteur Institute said it was ready to provide 50,000 doses of anti-tetanus serum daily, compared with 20,000 during the world war.

The Germans were reported hauling up heavy guns near the Swiss border, where the two armies face each other across the Rhine River.

Activity along the front was limited largely to clashes between French and German patrols near Saarbruecken and Zweibruecken. Opposing artillery crashed occasional shells into enemy hill positions.

The opposing air forces confined themselves to observation of troop movements.

Possible extent of the Soviet Russian understanding with Germany apparently was causing the French some concern, particularly with reference to the military and economic aid Russia could give the Reich through her back door.

More Russ Surprises Seen

The possible extent of the Russian understanding with Germany apparently was causing the French some concern; there was particular worry over the military and economic aid Russia could give the Reich. Some French sources suggested, however, that Russia, as a neighbor of Germany and with a border meeting Rumania and Hungary, could prove a boomerang to the Nazis as well as an aid.

These sources said even more Russian "surprises" are expected here.

National Defense Gifts

National defense subscriptions continued to pour in. One foreign sympathizer was said to have given a million francs (about $22,000) as "a first donation" with the stipulation that his identity be kept secret.

The Sultan of Morocco was reported to have given 50,000 francs (about $1,100). Many ex-service men were said to have contributed their pensions.

Put Casualties at 150,000.

Reports from Poland that Warsaw still was holding out were hailed in Paris. The French asserted the Polish campaign already had cost the Germans 150,000 casualties.

The estimate of the German losses was made last night in a broadcast speech by Jean Giraudoux, French General Commissioner of Information. Giraudoux also said the Germans had lost 400 to 600 planes and 600 to 700 first line pilots, who are harder to replace than planes.

(Germany has not reported completely on her casualties in Poland. How the French obtained the casualty data was not made known).

During his broadcast, Giraudoux told the nation the "first phase of the war is ended," and that Germany faces a war of which it has let command.

In these attacks the Germans were reported to have used full battle formation, sending wave after wave of assault troops against the French positions as contrasted with previous raiding party operations.

The brunt of the German attack was borne by three companies of assault guards whose total strength was reported to be just under 500. The French described the German battalion's attacks as "particularly tenacious."

Nazis Driven Back

Advices from the front said that as fast as the Germans were driven back by field guns firing pointblank, machine guns and automatic rifles, they reformed their lines and surged out to renew their assault.

Former Chief of Nazi Army Was Fighting in Minor Post in Poland.

RESIGNED HIGH COMMAND

He Had Quarreled With Hitler but Later He Received One of Nation's Highest Honors.

BERLIN, Sept. 23 (A. P.)—Col.-Gen. Baron Werner von Fritsch, former commander-in-chief of the German Army, has been killed in action in front of Warsaw while fighting in a comparatively minor post.

Col.-Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, the present commander-in-chief, announced that yesterday "there fell in Poland, before Warsaw in the foremost line while carrying out a violent reconnoitering operation, Col.-Gen. Baron von Fritsch, chief of the Twelfth Artillery Regiment.

"Having taken to the field on the side of his artillery regiment on the first day, he who truly lived an exemplary life for his army now also died an exemplary death and gave his all unconditionally.

"Deeply moved and in deep mourning, yet filled with a great pride, the army stands at the bier of this great soldier."

Hitler Announced Death.

First word of the death came from Hitler's headquarters.

It was made clear he held no army command nor any other post corresponding to his rank of Colonel-General, just below that of Field Marshal.

Von Fritsch, who resigned as Commander-in-Chief after the Fuehrer shook up the army leadership in February, 1938, had been made honorary commander of the Twelfth Artillery Regiment.

This post was bestowed by Hitler "in recognition of great service in rebuilding of the Third Reich"—considered a move to reinstate him in a position of honor.

Announcement of his death was the first official intimation Von Fritsch was at the front. Only yesterday it was reported in Berlin he was not in Poland.

State Funeral Ordered.

Hitler ordered a state funeral for the fifty-nine-year-old energetic, old-school officer and issued an order of the day honoring his memory.

(Paris dispatches reported both Hitler and Von Fritsch's successor as Commander-in-Chief, Col.-Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, had arrived on the western front.)

Prior to his fall from power last year Von Fritsch had played an outstanding role in the re-creation of the German Army, in whose invasion of Poland he had only a minor part.

Berlin sources yesterday said that he had volunteered for active service although his failure to keep in step with the Fuehrer last year was believed to have relegated him to the sidelines. It was understood he disagreed with the Nazi leadership's plans for the absorption of Austria, which came the month following his resignation.

The Fuehrer's headquarters gave no further details of Von Fritsch's death. It was not mentioned in the regular morning communique of the Supreme High Command, and the early afternoon Berlin newspapers carried only notices on inside pages.

Nachtausgabe said that he "fell while with the troops in the foremost front." Other newspapers merely printed short obituaries and the official news agency communique.

Was Idol of Army.

Idol of the German Army, Col.-Gen. Werner von Fritsch, who was killed in action near Warsaw, was sent to the eastern front in a comparatively minor role after reputedly falling out with Hitler over the annexation of Austria in 1938.

Small, saber-backed, be-monocled, with a chestful of gleaming medals and an ice-cold eye, Gen. Von Fritsch appeared a Hollywood director's ideal of the Prussian officer type.

As such, he scoffed at Hitler's brown-shirted amateurs—sometimes too openly for his own good—and the story goes that when Hitler announced his intention of seizing Austria Von Fritsch told him frigidly:

"If you do, Britain and France will march, and you'll get a terrible licking."

Germany's armed forces, he said, were not then ready to face the consequences of risking war; but Hitler dismissed him and carried through the bluff which brought only diplomatic protests from Britain and France.

He Had Served 41 Years.

A professional fighter with forty-one-years of service in the German Army, Von Fritsch detested politics.

His blunt, contemptuous attitude toward Hitler's beloved Brown Shirts was anathema to the Fuehrer, but he was powerful enough, nevertheless, to force the showdown which resulted in the execution of Capt. Ernst von Roehm, Hitler's bosom friend, and the exclusion of Brown Shirts from the officers corps.

Roehm had insisted his untrained amateurs should be incorporated wholesale into the proud old officers' corps.

"Why don't you want me as an officer?" he reportedly demanded of Von Fritsch at a reception.

The little general fixed him with a chill eye. "Because," he said, "you are not a soldier"—and turned on his heel.

Despite his iron severity, the rank and file worshipped him. In barracks, countless German soldiers had a photo of Von Fritsch over their beds as their "beau ideal" of what a good Prussian soldier should be.

Resigned His Command.

Gen. Von Fritsch resigned in February, 1938, in a shake-up which followed the dismissal of Field Marshal Werner von Blomberg.

Von Blomberg had married the daughter of a carpenter and Von Fritsch, without hesitation, told Hitler the union was a social reflection on the Prussian office caste.

The Fuehrer accepted the resignations of both, along with those of thirteen other high officers and assumed personal command of all Germany's armed forces. Shortly thereafter, accusations of an undivulged nature were filed against Von Fritsch.

The fiery General demanded a military trial to clear his name. The charges were not substantiated at the trial and it reputedly fell to Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering to inform the Fuehrer that Von Fritsch had been unjustly accused.

In any event, on April 2, 1938, Hitler publicly congratulated Von Fritsch on the "restoration of his health" and on August 11 named him honorary chief of the Twelfth Artillery Regiment — a rare honor accorded only to men of special distinction.

Restored German Army.

The fifty-nine-year-old former Commander-in-Chief of the German Army was generally credited with having restored Hitler's German Reich to the military prowess it held in the days of the Kaiser and Ludendorff.

Just a year ago, following his reenstatement, Hitler wrote him to give "my honest thanks for the work you did in connection with the reconstruction of our defense force."

But when the current war broke out, it was Von Fritsch's one-time subaltern, Col.-Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, now Commander-in-Chief of the German Army, who conducted the Fuehrer's "blitzkrieg" or "lightning war" on Poland, while Von Fritsch commanded a lone regiment and lost his life in action.

NAZIS DECLARE WAR IN POLAND IS NOW ENDED

Say Lwow Has Surrendered and Warsaw Is Cut Off From Modlin.

POLISH COMMANDER CAPTURED

Heavy German Broadcast Drowns Out Warsaw's Radio Still Telling City Stands.

BERLIN, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—The German Army High Command declared in a communique tonight that "the campaign in Poland is ended" and that "the Polish Army of millions of men has been defeated, captured or routed."

An earlier communique announced today the surrender of Lwow, the principal city of Polish Galicia; the capture of the commander of the Polish Army of the corridor, and the cutting off of Warsaw from Modlin, apparently bringing the fall of both Polish strongholds one step nearer.

Referring to the defeat of the Polish forces, tonight's communique declared: "No single Polish active or reserve division, none of their independent brigades, &c., escaped this fate."

The High Command admitted that Warsaw still held out against the German siege, but described the Polish capital as one of three "hopeless positions," the others being Modlin and the Hela Peninsula.

Modlin is a fortress ten miles northwest of the beleaguered Polish capital.

In accepting the surrender of Lwow, the German troops in turn yielded the city to the advancing Russians, asserting that there, as elsewhere, the German-Soviet cooperation seemed perfect.

Several thousand Poles were captured in the Warsaw-Modlin sector.

The only developments reported on the western front were minor artillery activity, the capture of a French plane which had made a forced landing, and the loss of one German plane.

"In combing operations in the forests along the Bzura river on September 21, the Supreme Commander of the Polish Corridor army, Gen. Bortnowski, and his entire staff fell into German hands, the communique also stated.

Praises Anti-Aircraft Unit.

A few hours earlier another communique of the Supreme Army Command said:

"Since September 1, 103,000 prisoners have been taken in this section. War material has been captured, including 252 light and twenty-three heavy cannon, thirty-seven armored cars and unmeasurable quantities of other arms and war material.

Meanwhile today Field Marshall Hermann Wilhelm Goering praised the heroism and bravery of the First Detachment of Anti-Aircraft Regiment 22 against "enemy forces many times superior" in fights near Ilza, Poland, September 18-19.

"Numerous officers, non-commissioned officers and soldiers headed by the commander met heroes' deaths," said an order issued by Goering as Supreme Commander of the Air Force. "Thanks to riskin their all, the battle was ended victoriously."

For Pigs Instead.

"You may rest assured," he asserted, "that we will withhold some of the hundreds of thousands of tons of barley from brewers and use the grain for a far better purpose—feeding pigs."

He said that imported coffee was reserved for the army and hospitals.

Others must drink "German coffee," a brew made of barley or malt or a combination.

Restaurants will be allowed only one more week to serve food menus without calling for ration cards. Thereafter their customers must bring their coupons along.

But Food Is Rationed.

Nevertheless, orders for more rigid food rationing have just been issued.

The new decrees caused widespread disappointment among those who had hoped for a quick end to the war, and set up new food problems for hausfraus. The nation heard assurances, however, that foreign sources of food and other materials remained open.

The new food rationing, similar to that of world war days, will become effective next Monday. Bread cards will make their appearance then, and only children, pregnant and nursing mothers, and the sick will be allowed to drink unskimmed milk.

The decrees came as Adolf Hitler stood at the gates of Warsaw and as an army high command communique announced the surrender of Lwow, which, it said, signalled the end of fighting in Galicia.

With Germany and Soviet Russia in agreement on a line of demarcation between their forces in Poland rumors spread that the close co-operation might lead to a German-Russian military alliance.

No one in a responsible position, however, ventured a comment on such a possibility.

The agreement orders for more rigid food rationing at a moment of triumph in Poland were regarded by many Germans today as a sign of preparation for a long war.

The new decrees caused widespread disappointment among those who had hoped for a quick end to the war, and gave housewives new food problems. The nation heard assurances, however, that foreign sources of food and other materials remained open.

Back To World War Basis

The new food rationing, similar to that of World War days, will become effective next Monday. Bread cards will make their appearance then, and only children, pregnant and nursing mothers and the sick will be allowed to drink unskimmed milk.

The decrees came as Adolf Hitler stood at the gates of Warsaw and as an army high command communique announced the surrender of Lwow, which, it said, signalled the end of fighting in Galicia.

Rumor of Russian Army Pact.

With Germany and Soviet Russia in agreement on a line of demarcation between their forces in Poland rumors spread that the close co-operation might lead to a German-Russian military alliance.

No one in a responsible position, however, ventured a comment on such a possibility.

The agreement, announced yesterday, gave Russia approximately three-fifths of Poland as her zone of occupation and left two-fifths, including Warsaw, for Nazi soldiers. It was pointed out, however, that the line was not necessarily permanent, and that future boundaries still were the subject of diplomatic negotiations in Moscow.

(Some quarters in Moscow said the line of demarcation seemed to dispose of the idea that Germany and Russia might set up a buffer State between them.)

Herr Hitler, who has been in the field with the army since the outbreak of hostilities, stood yesterday on heights within sight of Poland's still resisting capital, and was shown German preparations for its capture.

103,000 Prisoners Reported.

A communique today announced the surrender of Lwow to German mountaineers, just as they were being relieved there by Russian troops. It also told of the capture Thursday of the commander of the Polish Army in Pomorze, his entire staff, and of 103,000 prisoners and "unmeasurable" arms in the Galicia campaign.

Until now there was no restriction on bread consumption. There still is none on potatoes, fruits, fish and fresh vegetables, which may be purchased without cards.

The bread rations, an announcement said, correspond to peace time average consuption, and will be imposed to "maintain our great national bread and grain reserves and to guarantee us daily bread, if we should happen to experience smaller harvests."

The Government explained the milk restriction as an effort to conserve butter fats to insure a supply for soldiers and workers in heavy industries. They will receive special cards allowing them larger rations.

Pound of Meat a Week.

Meat rations of approximately 1.1 pounds a person each week—the weight of one good-sized steak—have become a cause of special anxiety among many German housewives.

Even with the introduction of two meatless days—Monday and Friday—they have been compelled to do a lot of figuring on how to divide the meat allotment evenly over the remaining five days.

Seafood is almost impossible to get because of Great Britain's domination of the North Sea.

Coal, on the other hand, has been eliminated from the rationing system. It was said Germany possesses sufficient coal, now that Polish coal mines have come within the German economic system.

That Germany can count on Rumania for supplies and much-needed raw materials was emphasized by Jon Gigurtu, Rumanian industrialist and former Minister of Economics, who now is in Germany.

In a statement to the German press, Gigurtu expressed confidence that German-Rumanian trade relations would not be disturbed by the war and were bound to increase.

Rumania, he said, was in a position and willing to deliver as much as possible to Germany as long as the Reich could compensate through delivery of finished goods to Rumania.

Nazi circles said Premier Mussolini was working on behalf of his axis partner by attempting to organize neutral southeastern Europe as a source of supply for Germany.

The Nazis themselves, realizing the vital importance of foreign sources of supply, have endeavored to maintain trade routes with neutrals, especially the Scandinavian countries, Belgium and the Netherlands.

LWOW IS TAKEN AS SOVIET ARMY RELIEVES NAZIS

German High Command Says Fighting in Galicia Is Virtually Ended.

BERLIN, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—The German Army High Command issued today the following communique (8:55 A. M., 11:55 P. M., Eastern daylight time):

"Lwow surrendered to a division of German mountaineers operating west of the city at the moment they were being relieved by Russian troops.

"Through this, fighting in Galicia virtually was ended.

"Since September 1, 103,000 prisoners have been taken in this section. War material has been captured, including 252 light and twenty-three heavy cannon, thirty-seven armored cars and unmeasurable quantities of other arms and war material.

"On September 21, the supreme commander of the Polish Corridor Army, Gen. Bortnowski, with his entire staff, fell into our hands near the River Bzura."

GERMAN ARMY MOURNS DEATH OF VON FRITSCH

Hitler Orders State Funeral For General Killed Before Warsaw

Nazis Report Fall Of Lwow—Polish Capital Still Holds Out

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Sept. 23—The German army mourned tonight for its former commander in chief, Col. Gen. Baron Werner von Fritsch, killed in action before Warsaw in a role far below his former eminence.

He became the first German general to die in this war when he was struck down yesterday "while carrying out a dangerous reconnoitering operation."

On Adolf Hitler's orders a state funeral will be given the 59-year-old general who played an outstanding role in the revival of the German land forces before his failure to keep in step with the Führer led to his resignation in February, 1938.

Volunteered To Serve

Before the death announcement most Germans believed von Fritsch was still in retirement. It was known, however, that he had volunteered to serve at the front and von Brauchitsch announced he had joined his regiment "on the first day" of the war.

Von Fritsch relinquished the army command at the time of the army shakeup following the resignation of Field Marshal Werner von Blomberg as Minister of War.

Von Fritsch held the rank of colonel general—one step below field marshal—but he was not in active service in that rank. He was honorary commander of the Twelfth Artillery Regiment, but it was not revealed what his duties as honorary commander consisted of.

Noted As Strategist

He often was spoken of as one of Germany's best World War military strategists whose shrewdness was being held in reserve in case activities on the Western front became livelier.

News of his death was printed on inside pages of all newspapers, but the present Nazi commander in chief, Col. Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, caused to be published a large death notice heavily bordered in black, in the name of the entire army.

"There fell in Poland, before Warsaw, in the foremost line while carrying out a dangerous reconnoitering operation, Colonel General Baron von Fritsch, chief of Artillery Regiment Number 12," the notice said.

Died Exemplary Death

"Having taken to the field on the side of his artillery regiment on the first day, he who truly lived an exemplary life for his army now also died an exemplary death and gave his all unconditionally.

"Deeply moved and in deep mourning, yet filled with a great pride, the army stands at the bier of this great soldier."

The notice was 10 inches wide, 6½ high and had an Iron Cross in the center at the top.

The army meanwhile declared in a communique that the war in Poland was over, despite the continued resistance of Warsaw, where von Fritsch fell.

Cooperation Hailed

The communique recited at length the stages of the German campaign in Poland, said its success was due to the cooperation of all branches of the army and navy and declared the army had taken more than 450,000 captives, 1,200 guns and war materials that could not yet be calculated.

It said 800 Polish planes had been destroyed or captured and the rest interned after fleeing abroad.

The Polish soldier, it added, fought bravely but "broke on the inadequacy of his leadership and organization."

Exact figures on German losses will be given in a few days, the communique stated, declaring that they "must be described as unusually small in comparison to the enormous losses of the enemy."

Lwow Surrenders

Today's first communique, covering the situation through yesterday, said Lwow had surrendered to the German army as Russians approached the city. Lwow falls within the territory agreed upon as the Russian occupation zone.

30.24- 3571

The night communique said "the campaign in Poland is ended" and that the entire Polish army of millions "has been defeated, captured or routed."

But Warsaw still held out aganist the invaders, the communique admitted. It declared the Polish capital was one of three "hopeles situations," the others being Modlin and the Hela peninsula.

Warsaw was said by the supreme command to have been cut off from Modlin, a fortress about ten miles northwest of the capital.

Among the Poles captured, the army said, was General Bortnowski, described as supreme commander of the Polish Corridor army, along with his staff.

"The war's third week," said the Hamburger Fremdenblatt, "was one of disappointment and broken hopes for England. Poland's resistance, which authoritative quarters in London calculated would last three months, lasted little more than two weeks."

Russia's invasion of Poland, the paper said, was another "point lost" by Britain. "Now that Poland's destiny has been settled," it said, the true meaning of the European conflict was becoming clear and this clarity "underscores the senselessness of the struggle."

The Nazis ended the third week of war feeling everything was going their way. Their optimism was based on three things: a bumper, although not a record, grain crop was sighted; neutral countries, they believe, are lining up behind them to deliver foods and raw materials to supplement what was expected from Russia; and the belief the war has demonstrated to Britain and France that the Reich is impregnable.

They feel that militarily the western fortifications make an attack from the west almost an insoluble problem. In the air, Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering's airmen reported they gave the British, on their first bombing attempt, a bitter taste of what it means to attack Germany.

Air Strength Bolstered

Effectiveness of German planes in the Polish campaign has bolstered the already strong German belief that in the air force the Reich has a weapon stronger than anything Britain and France possess. The Germans count on bombers and scouters to give their submarines great assistance in breaking the British blockade.

The Nazis have hoped that Britain and France would "throw in the sponge" after Poland was destroyed, and "England saw the neutrals were prepared to resist the British blockade which troubled their foreign trade."

As part of Germany's diplomatic maneuvering toward this end there has been an admitted effort to win France away from Britain by reassuring the French that Germany has no territorial claims on them and by propagandizing them with the notion they were being used by Britain to preserve the British Empire.

Fraternization Cited

Frequent stories of German and French troops fraternizing along the Rhine are told in Berlin. One related how a high Nazi official, whose jurisdiction lies in the Saar, sent a keg of beer through the lines to French soldiers.

Satisfaction over the grain crop was caused by an estimated 27,400,000-ton production, 500,000 tons more than the previous year. This was exclusive of the protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia.

Several million tons held in reserve will not be touched this year, it was predicted, hence the Nazis felt assured of a bread supply for a war lasting several years.

Potato and beet crops likewise were described as excellent. But beer is to be thinner, and bread, beginning Monday, will be rationed. Less barley is to go into the beer.

Russian troops.

Of the entire Polish Army only an insignificant remainder still is fighting at hopeless positions in Warsaw, in Modlin and on the Peninsula of Hela.

That this still is possible is due exclusively to the willing forbearance of our troops and our consideration for the Polish civil population.

As signs increased after the Spring of 1939 that Poland, relying on the foreign aid guaranteed it, would not avoid assault at arms with the German Reich in pursuit of its wide-stretched national interests, an attempt was made through careful examinations to clarify the probable operations and intentions of Poland.

Literature and Press Scanned

Impressions obtained from Polish literature and the daily press in connection with military measures of the Polish Army leadership, which meantime became known, gave an approximate picture of the intentions of the Polish leadership.

In a series of conferences between the Fuehrer and the Commanders-in-Chief of the army, navy and air force, their General Staff chiefs and the Chief of the High Command of the Army, operative suppositions following therefrom for the German Army were discussed and clarified.

First: Perusal of general and very scientific literature of Poland already imparted the picture of conceptions that the Polish political State chauvinism had made regarding the future development of the Polish State. The publicized demands of the daily press as well as oratorical outpourings of the Polish military strengthened these impressions.

The marching up of Polish fighting forces, which appeared saw, as it was strong enough to carry out its own attack.

This Polish group was supposed to be flanked on the right by considerable gathering forces that could threaten East Prussia from an eastern direction and on the left wing through a very strong army in the Corridor. The assignment of the Corridor Army was to occupy the Free State of Danzig and then also be able to launch an offensive against East Prussia from this side.

The order was given for rear coverage to this operation by the far strongest Polish army, which was placed in the region of Posen [Poznan]. In case of a German attack on the Corridor this army, with its superior strength, was to threaten the flank of this attack. It also could be used at any time to help the weaker Polish army marching to the southward. Through its strength and central position in the vicinity of Posen this army threatened the far flanks of any German attack from Central Upper Silesia or from Pomerania.

Poland's southern army in the region of Krakau [Cracow] and Lemberg [Lwow] was, in the opinion of Polish Army leaders, strong enough to protect that important industrial area. It could be used for the further purpose, according to development of the war, either as aid to other Polish armies or to attack the important Upper Silesia industrial area.

Secondly: The object of the German operations was to encircle, attack and destroy the large, strong Polish army concentrated in the bend of the Vistula River. For this purpose the army Commander in Chief, General von Brauchitsch, created two army groups: A Southern Army Group direction. Its task was to hold the Polish forces there and with units advancing from Slovakia northward encircle the Poles and, if possible, prevent their retreat eastward.

As a protection for the left wing of General von Reichenau, the army of General Blaskowitz coming from east of Breslau should advance in the general direction of Warsaw by stages in order to trap and fight off expected flank manoeuvres of the Polish Army Group in the vicinity of Posen.

The task of the Northern Army Group was, with the army of General von Kluge, to establish a connection with East Prussia as swiftly as possible, cross the Vistula between Bromberg [Bydgoszsz] and Graudenz [Grudziadz] and with the group advancing toward Graudenz from East Prussia, attempt to join in a general easterly direction with the north wing of the Southern Army Group.

The Second Army of General von Bock, under the command of General von Keuchler, had the assignment to come from East Prussia over the Narew River and the Bug east of the Vistula and establish connection with the Army of General von Reichenau or cut Warsaw off from the east. In the course of further operations an effort was to be made to capture, in a further extensive encircling movement behind the San and the Bug, those Polish forces that might succeed in crossing the Vistula.

All the assignments in this plan of operation were mustered in an outstanding manner by the army command and carried out brilliantly by the troops. The first operations, to engage in battle and destroy as strong an enemy

More and more pressed together, the Polish divisions in continued attacks attempted in various places to break the ring that held them. Just as the German divisions earlier had shown themselves of the highest value in offensive power, so now they demonstrated a not less value in their ability to stand firm.

450,000 Prisoners in All

The result of this series of battles was the almost total destruction of the Polish armies west of the Vistula. Prisoners in the total of three surrenders connected with this big operation were more than 300,000. The grand total of captives is now up to more than 450,000. The total guns seized already is about 1,200. Other war materials seized are not yet possible even approximately to calculate.

Troops of all German extractions, young actives and older classes, participated equally in this enormous success. German infantry renewed its undying fame. Its ability in marching and in bearing up under hardship was of less than its ability in fighting. To its courage in attack was added an unshakably strong ability to stand firm that conquered every imaginable crisis.

Light and heavy artillery assisted in making possible the biggest successes. Thanks to their efforts and those of the engineers it was possible in the shortest possible time to conquer Polish border fortifications either by storming or going around them in order to destroy the enemy without let-up.

Armored and motorized units, cavalry, anti-tank and reconnoisance units in extraordinary collaboration fulfilled the hopes placed in them. Shoulder to shoulder with them fought S. S. [Elite Guard] formations placed under the army's command.

Upon the command of Field Marshal General Goering two strong air fleets were formed under Generals Kesselring and Loehr and sent to conduct an air war against Poland. These two air fleets completely smashed the Polish Air Force and controlled the air in a short time. In closest cooperation with army destroyer planes, bombers continually attacked bunkers, batteries, troop concentrations, marching columns, unloadings of supplies, etc.

Through the fliers' disdain for death they saved the army an endless amount of blood and contributed in greatest measure to the total result. Anti-aircraft artillery took the German air under its protection and especially in the beginning of the campaign, cooperated in the destruction of the Polish Air Force. In all, approximately 800 either were destroyed or fell to the army as booty. The rest were interned after fleeing abroad.

On sea, units of the German battle fleet under command of Admiral Gen. Albrecht blocked the Danzig inlet from the beginning of hostilities and thereby crippled all traffic to and from Polish seaports. With the exception of a submarine, all the Polish fleet still in the North Sea Sept. 1 was destroyed or interned in neutral harbors.

Here, also, the air force played a glorious role. Outstanding accomplishments in the field of communications, especially in the re-establishment of streets, bridges and railways, in which the Labor Service particularly proved its worth, made the task of leadership much easier.

Border guards who quietly have been fulfilling their duty for years occupied territory behind the army, making it possible for the command to put troops on all fronts. Thus, in exemplary cooperation all forces contributed to the final achievement.

It was possible only because the West Army and strong units of the air forces confidently and determinedly stood ready to brave every enemy superiority, however great, and because the navy guaranteed the security of the German North Sea and the German coasts.

The Polish soldier repeatedly fought bravely. He broke on the inadequacy of his leadership and his organization. Thanks to superior leadership, high degree of training and the modern armaments of the German Army its achievements were accompanied by losses that must be described as unusually small in comparison to the enormous losses of the enemy. Exact figures will be given in a few days.

The materials and weapons of the new army have come up to the highest demands. Munitions and fuel consumption of this campaign amounted to only a fraction of the monthly production.

The German people can again look with pride on its army.

The army, however, looks forward to its further tasks with triumphant confidence.

Text of Germany's Review of the War in Poland

By The [illegible] Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 23—The German Army High Command issued the following communique tonight reviewing the campaign in Poland:

The campaign in Poland is ended.

In a connected series of destructive battles, of which the greatest and most decisive was in the bend of the Vistula, the Polish Army of a million men has been defeated, captured or routed.

No single Polish active or reserve division, none of their independent brigades, etc., escaped this fate.

Only fractions of individual groups were able to avoid immediate destruction by fleeing into the swamps of Eastern Poland. They succumbed there to Soviet in the train of Polish mobilization, passed as final confirmation of these intentions. The Polish Army leadership underrated the German Army in the belief that it could successfully conduct an offensive war in the east, at least to a certain degree, in consideration of strong German strength bound in the Western front of the Reich.

The dominating thought was immediately to occupy the Free State of Danzig, to attack East Prussia from three sides and to conquer it as an island cut off from the rest of the Reich. For this purpose the following concentration of strength took place:

One Polish army was stationed in the area north of Warsaw as capable of checking and perhaps threatening a German advance from East Prussia against War-under the command of Gen. von Runstedt, a Northern Army Group under command of Col. Gen. von Bock.

Three Armies in South

The southern group consisted of three armies: The army of General List, the army of General von Reichenau and the army of General Blaskowitz.

The Northern Army Group consisted of the army of General von Kluge and the army of General von Keuchler.

The orders of the southern group were to push in a northeasterly direction toward the Vistula from near Kreuzberg with the center army of General von Reichenau. The army of Col. Gen. List from Upper Silesia was to protect the right flank of this army and from the north side of the West Beskidy Mountains to advance in an easterly force as possible, succeeded to a degree that will go down in history.

In a connected series of battles it was possible to decide the destiny of the Polish Army and with it the entire campaign practically within eight days. Destruction of the Polish Corridor Army was followed a few days later by encirclement and weakening of Polish troops retreating before the army of General von Reichenau in the vicinity of Radom.

The forces of General von Reichenau's army thrown forward to the doors of Warsaw then prevented a retreat across the Vistula of the Polish armies of Posen and the Corridor. Thereafter the army of General Blaskowitz and the greater part of the army of General von Reichenau hemmed in this strong enemy force.

BERLIN ANNOUNCES BIG CROP OF GRAIN BUT CUTS RATIONS

Says Harvest Provides for Long War—Restrictions Called Precautionary.

BERLIN, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—The Ministry of Agriculture announced today a bumper grain harvest and expressed confidence that Germany could stand a long war. The 1939 harvest for greater Germany, exclusive of the Bohemia-Moravia protectorate, was 27,400,000 tons, one of the highest in years and exceeding that of 1938 by 500,000 tons, the ministry announced.

Officials said that when the final yield became known the total probably would be even higher.

It comprised grain for bread and feeding purposes, but not maize (corn).

As Germany's annual consumption runs between 25,000,000 and 26,000,000 tons, the Agriculture Ministry said that it was confident that at least 1,000,000 tons of the 1939 harvest could be stored for a prolonged war.

Officials said that never before had Germany accumulated such reserves of grain as now were available.

The Government, they said, was searching constantly for additional dance halls and athletic halls to commandeer for grain storage.

The Food Ministry at the same time said that the rationing card system effective Monday was intended merely to insure equitable distribution of foodstuffs and to prevent hoarding.

Officials pointed out that flour, for instance, easily could become bitter if hoarded unscientifically. This, they said, a nation at war must prevent and prohibit. They insisted that there was plenty of food for every one and would be for years to come.

They acknowledged that the situation regarding meat, eggs and fats was not as favorable as that with grain, but said that the rations beginning Monday would be sufficient.

Potatoes are plentiful and therefore will not be rationed.

Beer will become thinner, containing less barley, one official said.

For Pigs Instead.

"You may rest assured," he asserted, "that we will withhold some of the hundreds of thousands of tons of barley from brewers and use the grain for a far better purpose—feeding pigs."

He said that imported coffee was reserved for the army and hospitals.

Others must drink "German coffee," a brew made of barley or malt or a combination.

Restaurants will be allowed only one more week to serve food menus without calling for ration cards. Thereafter their customers must bring their coupons along.

RED ARMY REACHES HUNGARY BORDER

Troops Plant Russian Flag All Along Polish Frontier

Massacre Of 40 Catholic Seminarians Charged To Ukrainians

By ELMER W. PETERSON
Associated Press Correspondent

Munkacs, Hungary (near the Polish frontier), Sept. 23—Soviet Russian and Hungarian troops established formal contact today in this district high in the Carpathian Mountains, ending another phase of the Red army's occupation of a part of Poland.

The Soviet's red flag with its hammer and sickle waved in the breeze beside the red, white and green banners of Hungary in dramatic scenes that a month ago would have been impossible.

Meantime, it was reported that Germans abandoned Beskid and Uzsok passes in the Polish-Hungarian Carpathians in preparation for the establishment of a new division line which will give the Soviet authority over the entire frontier.

8,000 Cross Frontier

A final group of 8,000 Polish soldiers crossed the frontier shortly before the Soviet army officers appeared. Bearded and hungry, the retreating troops brought stories of rearguard action in their flight to the border. Climbing the Polish Carpathians, they said they were forced time and again to fight off roving bands of Ukrainians. Many of the wounded died because of lack of medical care, they said.

Fourteen officers who killed themselves in despair, the soldiers reported, were buried in shallow graves with hasty military honors. Like the refugees who preceded them, the troops first sought news of besieged Warsaw.

Cheered By News

They were cheered by the news the capital still was holding out against the Germans.

Marking the end of a tragic refugee flight, the last of tens of thousands of Polish soldiers and civilians, who a few weeks ago talked of victory, moved across the border in muddy automobiles, camouflaged military trucks and creaking peasant carts.

Hope still was high among some that Poland again would be restored her independence. Many Polish officers sought a way to join the French forces.

Horror Tales Heard

New tales of horrors from the Polish interior left the refugees grim-faced. Ignace Albert Horecki, Polish priest, said forty Roman Catholic theological students at Lwow were executed September 17 by the Ukrainians.

"They were simply lined up and shot down in what seemed mad lust to strike at anything godly," the priest said. "I reached the front myself on a bicycle."

It was estimated unofficially that two per cent of the civilian refugees who came here in the last twenty-four hours were Jews, although they said the greater part of Poland's 3,000,000 Jews had decided to remain through the Soviet occupation hopeful of being absorbed peacefully.

Trains Packed

The removal of both military and civilian refugees to lower Hungary began on a large scale today. Trains were loaded with khaki-clad soldiers who crowded into third-class cars and freights. Caravans of busses were being organized for civilians, many of whom were experiencing increased financial difficulties due to the drop in the valuation of Polish currency. The zloty, which formerly was worth 20 cents, now is worth only a cent.

Planting of the Red flag along the entire frontier coincided with a renewal of normal diplomatic relations between Russia and Hungary.

Russ Paper Published

The first Russian newspaper printed in Ruthenian, the Russkaya Pravda (Russian Truth) appeared in Ungvar, on the northeastern Hungarian-Slovak border.

Developments in Warsaw were obscured by the "duel of the air waves," which blocked out broadcasts from the Polish capital station. Attempts to send out news of the defense of the city, which had been the only means of communication with the outside world, were lost in the jam of words from a station identified as German.

Early tonight an occasional sound identified as Polish gave a meager clue that the city still was unconquered. A station operating on the same wave length continued to warn Polish leaders that "the British and French have failed in their promises."

Moscow Talks Stir Speculation On Baltic Move

Diplomats Feel Estonian's Visit May Hint Change in Borders of Small States

MOSCOW, Sept. 23 (AP).—Moscow's attention centered tonight on the Soviet Union's future relations with small Baltic states and on economic reorganization of the three-fifths of Poland designated the Russian zone of occupation.

On the diplomatic front, speculation was stirred by the impending arrival of Karl Selter, Estonian Foreign Minister, for conversations with Russian officials and by the possible effect of these talks on the future of the small Baltic states.

On the Polish front, huge Polish estates were being divided among former tenants and servants even as troops to the west still were consolidating their occupation. In the occupied zone, which has been widened steadily since Russian troops entered Poland a week ago tomorrow, the new life was being inaugurated in numerous ways.

Tonight's general staff communique said that during the day Russian troops continued their advance through Poland toward the demarcation line established by Germany and the U. S. S. R., occupying the towns of Gorodok in the North and Stryyj in the South.

The Russian troops took over a number of towns west of Brest-Litovsk and continued operations to clear out small groups of Polish troops, the communique reported, adding that southeast of Kovel 8,000 Polish officers and men had been captured, 2,000 horses, several railway trains and sundry military equipment.

Selter's trip to Moscow was said to be ostensibly for completion of negotiations for a commercial treaty with Russia. Foreign circles, however, said they attached more significance to the visit because of the uncertain position of the Baltic states in the light of the German-Russian invasion and partition of Poland. Speculation has centered especially on possible border revisions of some Baltic states. Before the World War Estonia was part of Russia.

Russia was angered when a Polish submarine, which had been interned in the Estonian port of Talinn, escaped. The Soviet press hinted the escape had been made with the connivance of Estonian officials. The Russian Baltic fleet was ordered to "take measures" and put to sea. Estonian circles in Moscow insisted their guards had attempted to prevent the submarine's escape and said there was no friction with Russia.

(Russia is known to want a Baltic seaport, and Estonia is strategically on the Gulf of Finland, from which Soviet ships enter the Baltic.)

The Soviet Union continued its organization work in White Russia and the Polish Ukraine, the eastern sections of Poland. Dispatches said peasants were aiding the Red Army in rounding up Polish officers. One report said a group of peasants had brought in 117 Polish officers and landlords and surrendered them to the municipality of Novogrudok.

A report from the same city said a group of women had called up the provisional administration department to inquire about rumors of the closing of churches and synagogues in the city, but were told this was "merely gossip."

Train service was resumed at Wilno (Vilna) in northeast Poland, and theaters there will be opened tomorrow. At the same time, the first copies of the newspapers "Vilna Pravda," in the White Russian language, and the "Vilna Izvestia," in Polish will appear. The names were copied from those of leading Moscow papers.

Russian money was said to be in circulation in some sections of the invaded area.

The estates of Count Radziwill, head of a leading Polish family who is under detention, already are being divided among his former servants and tenants. A dispatch said Radziwill had twelve estates in the Novogrudok district totaling 225,000 acres.

Moscow papers announcing the capture of the Polish fortress of Brest-Litovsk (Brescz Nad Bugiem) said 120,000 Polish prisoners were taken in four days.

ESTONIAN MINISTER ON WAY TO MOSCOW

Foreign Circles There Say Visit Is Significant.

MOSCOW, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—The Estonian Foreign Minister, Karl Selter, is due to arrive in Leningrad tomorrow en route to Moscow for conferences with Russian officials, it was announced today.

Foreign circles attached significance to his coming since the position of the Baltic States in light of the Russian and German invasion of Poland has been the subject of much speculation.

This speculation has dwelt especially on the question of possible border revisions.

Estonia was a part of Russia before the world war.

Mr. Selter's reported trip was said to be ostensibly for completion of negotiations for a commercial treaty with Russia.

The little nation is strategically situated on the Gulf of Finland, from which Soviet ships go out into the Baltic.

Turkish Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu also is en route to Moscow for talks with Government officials.

Tass (official Russian news agency), in accounts of an interview with Minister Saracoglu before he left Istanbul, quoted him as saying the trip would result in strengthening the friendship of the two countries.

(Saracoglu reached Odessa yesterday en route to Moscow, where he was expected to spend about ten days.)

Moscow newspapers, announcing the capture of the Polish fortress of Brest-Litovsk (Brescz nad Bugiem), said the Red army took 120,000 prisoners in four days.

Warsaw Radio Drowned Out.

VERECZKE, Hungary (at the Polish Frontier), Sept. 22 (Delayed), (A. P.).—The Warsaw radio, broadcasting defiance of German troops, which for two weeks have been battering at the Polish capital, was drowned out suddenly tonight by interference from a stronger Nazi station.

For fifteen minutes, German music silenced the voice of a Polish staff officer, who had been telling of Warsaw's determination to hold out.

Then the interfering station broadcast a speech denouncing France and Britain. It was delivered first in Polish and repeated in German.

Before the Warsaw radio was jammed from the air a broadcast by Mayor Stefan Starzinski reported that German warplanes had "drenched" the capital with propaganda pamphlets.

Criticize Statement.

The Mayor said the pamphlets were "written in bad Polish, which is evidence no Pole will help the Germans write such pamphlets."

The interference started as Col. Vaclav Lipinski, staff officer of the Warsaw defense, declared "Germany cannot hold out indefinitely. The British blockade is working——"

Before his voice was blotted out Col. Lipinski declared Warsaw and Modlin were being supported by strong Polish troops which had fought their way through encircling armies.

"I tell you for certain," Col. Lipinski added, "our troops still are fighting at Zamosc, Rawa-Ruska and Lwow. The Germans to survive must execute a lightning war. For this reason Warsaw must hold out."

(Rawa-Ruska is approximately forty miles northwest of Lwow, capital of the Polish Ukraine, which Soviet Russian troops said they had occupied several days ago and which a Berlin communique claimed for German mountain troops today. Zamosc is about the same distance northwest of Rawa-Ruska.)

Report to Government.

For the first time the Warsaw radio acknowledged the Polish Government and the army and general staff had left the country.

"This is true, but necessary," Mayor Starzinski declared, "but they are in constant touch with us, and we are reporting to them."

The capital's radio speakers defiantly challenged Germany's war planes, which they said had again dumped high explosives on the city during the day.

"Poland still exists, Poland still fights," the announcer said. "We fight on in the firm belief that the invaders must and will be punished for his crimes."

They described with pride the work of "volunteer corps" now fighting side by side with the regular troops.

Each day, the broadcast declared, sees Warsaw's population contributing to an organized method of handling food supplies and transportation. Private homes as well as public buildings have become hospitals, it was said, and pharmacies have been stripped of medical supplies.

Battle for Air Waves Rages.

The unequal battle for the air waves was continued each time the Warsaw radio began broadcasting news. There was no interference from the German station when the Warsaw broadcast was confined to musical programs.

At one time, over the stronger station, alleged Polish prisoners could be heard, being questioned by German officers. The officers asked how long each had been on the front, how they reacted to war's frightfulness and they they felt it was impossible for Poland to hold out against the Germans.

Despite interference with the Warsaw station, the assurance that the capital still was holding out cheered thousands of Polish refugees flocking over the Hungarian border in search of safety.

Authorities here estimated that 7,000 Polish motor vehicles have crossed the border. Most of these were heavily laden, with passengers—many of them children—clinging to the running boards.

Some of the cars carried radios tuned to the Warsaw wave length. The first eleven notes of Chopin's "Polonaise," the capital's "all well" signal, could be heard at intervals by the occupants of the cars.

Hungarian officials struggled to cope with the seemingly endless flow of homeless and hungry refugees. Some of those who crossed the border several days ago have gone as far south as Budapest.

Typhoid And Food Shortage Plague Warsaw, Refugees Say

Parks And Public Squares Become Graveyards—55 Americans In Group Safe At Königsberg

[By the Associated Press]

Königsberg, East Prussia, Sept. 23—Foreign refugees from besieged Warsaw asserted today that the people of the Polish capital, suffering from typhoid and a food shortage, were burying their dead in parks and public squares.

Americans said most of the sixty to seventy persons who had taken refuge in the United States Embassy saw a bomb demolish a building on Napoleon Square nearby, killing fifty persons. The dead were buried in the few remaining green spots of the square.

Fifty-five Americans, including seven consular officials, were among the company of almost 1,400 foreigners brought here yesterday from Warsaw with Polish and German help. There were many women and children in the group.

Some Cars Bullet-Scarred

While most of the refugees came in trains and automobiles provided by the Germans, diplomatic officials who had their own cars, drove them through the night over 180 miles of war-torn countryside. Roads with gaping shell holes caused many detours.

Some cars were dotted with bullet holes; but their owners declined to reveal how they got there. One Argentine diplomat's machine had three holes in front and two in the rear. It was indicated that most of the bullets struck while the cars were in Warsaw.

The refugees revealed they had less than two hours to prepare for their exit from the city. Hence most of them brought but one suitcase; many women and children had insufficient clothing, but the German Red Cross furnished warm garments.

Refugees said Warsaw was filled with anti-aircraft guns and artillery. Hence replies from German guns necessarily fell in the heart of the city.

U. S. Embassy Cellar As Refuge

The bombing of the building near the American Embassy was one of the "last straws" for the taut nerves of the Americans. When Ambassador Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., and his staff left Warsaw on September 5, the consular staff moved in because the Embassy's cellar was considered comparatively safe from bombs.

This proved a wise move, for the consulate building later was destroyed, refugees said.

Consular officers took turns on watch. When a shell exploded four blocks away, then another three blocks from them, they knew the next one would be closer, so the alarm was given and occupants of the building were herded into the basement.

Hurled 3 Feet By Bomb

A Swiss—one of the 178 foreign diplomats who came here—said he was talking on the telephone when a bomb dropped on the building next door. H was blown three feet, he said.

Food supplies were steadily being diminished, the refugees said, and contaminated water caused many cases of typhoid fever, which, however, had not reached the epidemic stage by the time they left.

American consular officials said they did not know the whereabouts of the Americans who stayed in Warsaw—there were about 200 before the exodus. Many were Polish-born naturalized Americans.

Diplomats who came here were expected to begin leaving tomorrow for Berlin and civilians for Stettin. Berlin embassies of the various nationalities were to arrange for sending them home.

The refugees gave this picture of what happened in Warsaw after the German army dropped leaflets demanding the city's surrender:

A committee of three consular officials representing Norway, Holland and Belgium asked the Polish military commander to surrender the city, but he replied he was unable to do so, as he had orders to defend it. He said he could not take the responsibility of organizing an exodus of foreigners, but would not prevent them from leaving.

Negotiations With Germans

A message then was sent on September 17 over a portable radio to German authorities stating that a foreign representative wanted to negotiate with the Germans.

The Germans at that time thought the message meant the Polish military wanted to surrender.

The German high command replied from Berlin that one Polish soldier with a white flag and one representative of the diplomatic corps in another car with a white flag should appear at the German lines at 10 P. M. September 17.

The Germans waited but nobody appeared from the city. The refugees said a diplomat had been chosen and was ready to start but the firing did not cease along the stipulated route. Hence, the Warsaw military commander refused to let the diplomat risk his life.

Back To Their Cellar Life

Disappointed over the failure, the foreigners returned to their cellar life, but tried again September 20. This time they were successful and the diplomats who first called on the Warsaw commander met the Germans and completed arrangements for the neutrals to leave.

They returned to Warsaw shortly after noon. Evacuation was to start at 2 P. M. and end at 5, allowing less than two hours to notify more than a thousand persons and arrange transportation. Many had no telephones, so the radio was the chief means of communication.

Notice was broadcast in a half dozen languages that foreigners wishing to leave should meet at the Hotel Bristol in the center of the city at 2 P. M. The Polish army supplied forty trucks and all diplomats having cars used them.

American consular officials made several trips to the German lines with women and children. The Germans had arranged for a train leaving a small town beyond Praga.

U. S. REFUGEES QUIT WARSAW

55 Arrive Safely at City of Koenigsberg.

SOME REMAIN AT CAPITAL

Twelve American Boys and Girls Are Among Those in Germany.

KOENIGSBERG, Germany, Sept. 23 (AP)—Approximately fifty-five American refugees from Warsaw found temporary haven here today, but others, fearful of dangers of flight or separation from their families, remained in the besieged Polish capital.

The Americans were among more than 1,300 foreigners being provided for by the German Foreign Office until they could arrange to return to their homes, or go to neutral countries.

It was not possible immediately to establish names or precise numbers of the Americans. They were scattered throughout the city. They arrived in groups, some by train and others by automobile after twenty hours of travel through war-torn country.

Keeps Consulate Open.

At least seven members of the staff of the United States Consulate General in Warsaw were among those here. Thaddeus Chylinski, Vice-Consul of Polish descent who has a Polish wife, stayed to keep the office open and look after those Americans who decided to remain.

(The State Department in Washington announced yesterday that Vice-Consul Douglas Jenkins, first official to arrive, had listed the others en route to Koenigsberg as Consul-General John K. Davis, Consul George J. Haering, Consul William Cramp, Consul M. Williams Blake, Consul E. Tomlin Bailey, Vice-Consul Carl Birkeland and Dr. Waldemar J. A. Wickham of the United States Public Health Service.)

For two of them the Warsaw experience was nothing new: Jenkins experienced similar trials at Nanking, China, and Cramp at Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

Those Americans who remained did so chiefly because of Polish relatives or other interests in Warsaw, it was said, or because they feared dangers involved in the trip to Koenigsberg.

Woman and Child Turn Back.

Efforts of other Americans to persuade them to leave were in vain. At least one woman with a child turned back at the last moment.

Twelve 'teen-age American boys and girls of Polish descent who had been studying in Warsaw came here with the refugees. They had been living much of the time with other Americans in the basement of the United States embassy as a protection against bombs.

The United States Consulate Building, it was said, was damaged by shellfire.

Arrival here was the first contact with the outside world for the refugees since September 5, when all Warsaw communications failed. Many of the American men, including those of the consulate staff, had sent their families out previously and been out of touch with them since.

One of their chief concerns was where their families had scattered and how to locate them.

Another, as one put it, was "some food and rest."

Food Situation Bad.

The food situation in Warsaw was described as "very bad." With cooperation of the Polish Civil Committee, the Americans said, they were able periodically to get rice, noodles, meat or other food.

They said one of their handicaps was the great danger in going outdoors—to bring in food, for example—because they never knew where a bomb might land. Some were said to have had close escapes from death or injury.

Street fighting was said to be going on in outskirts of Warsaw. The center of the city was described as considerably damaged by air attack and artillery fire.

The refugees expressed praise for the manner in which Germans and Poles handled their removal. Both sides were said to have been very considerate.

First Effort Failed.

A first effort to negotiate their departure failed after radio contact was made last Sunday, they said, because of fighting on the road designated for their exit from Warsaw.

The Polish commander was quoted as saying he could not guarantee safe conduct under such circumstances.

The German commander established contact a second time with an appeal that a representative be sent to a rendezvous on the Praga-Radzymin Road.

As a result of subsequent negotiations, more than 1,300 foreigners were transferred at a highway crossing eighteen miles northeast of Warsaw Thursday. German Army officers and Foreign Office authorities met them there. That night special trains—which the German had had waiting for days—left for Koenigsberg.

The Princess Sapieha planned to leave tomorrow for New York.

Poland's Proud Aristocracy Scattered By Dual Invasion

Some Killed, Some Prisoners, Others Escape—Princes Radziwill And De Bourbon Reported Captives

By LLOYD LEHRBAS
Associated Press Correspondent

Bucharest, Sept. 23 — Among the thousands of refugees in Rumania are many members of Poland's ancient, princely and wealthy families who were forced to flee before the whirlwind German-Soviet Russian invasion and partition of the country.

Many bearers of Poland's most famous names are reported to have been killed in the fighting and bombing sweeping their homeland. Some, too, have been reported captured as the invaders advanced from the west and the east, wiping the 20-year-old Polish republic off the map.

Some refugees who reached Rumania have funds and property in neutral countries. Others managed to escape with only the clothes on their backs and a few personal belongings.

Nearly all still are searching for some word of other members of their families scattered by the Nazi and Soviet invaders.

Prince Andrew Lubomirski, son of a former Polish Minister to the United States and one-time student at the Friends School in Washington, rode out of his estate near Horodenka on horseback as Russian troops came in the rear gate. After seven hours of hard riding, he waded a river to the Rumanian side of the frontier near Vastarnia.

The Prince said tonight his brother, Prince Henry Lubomirski, who was educated at Central High School in Washington, D. C., and became a Jesuit priest, was still "somewhere in Poland."

Prince Paul Sapieha, with his American wife, the former Virginia Peterson, of New York, daughter of Dr. Dniestr river from Zalescyki under enemy warplane bombing.

have been captured by German troops near Przemysl.

Prince Janus Radziwill, the head of one of Poland's four most famous families, was reported seized by Soviet troops near Krzmienc. Prince Radziwill, head of the Polish Red Cross, was reported captured shortly after he conferred with United States Ambassador Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., concerning the disposition of relief funds sent by the American Red Cross.

[Associated Press Editor's Note: Advices reaching Moscow today said the Radziwill family estates, totaling some 225,000 acres, were being divided among the family's former servants and tenants.]

Prince De Bourbon Captured

Prince de Bourbon, a cousin of the exiled King of Spain, who married Princess Cecilia Lubomirski, was reported among the princely refugees to have been captured by the Russians near Lublin.

Count Andre Tornowski left Warsaw on foot and hiked with other refugees to Tarnopol, a town named after his family, before he crossed the Rumanian frontier.

Stanislaus Patek, former Polish Ambassador to Washington, refused to leave Warsaw and friends here said tonight he was still in the battered capital.

One Jump Ahead Of Russ Tanks

Former Ambassador Filipowicz escaped across the Dniester river into Rumania just before Russian tanks rolled into Zalescyki.

Victor Podoski, chief of the American division of the Polish Foreign Office and former secretary of the Polish Embassy in Washington, also crossed the border one jump ahead of Soviet tanks. He is going to Otawa, Canada, where he has been assigned as Consul General.

Albert Dzieduzyski, nephew of a former Minister to Washington, who was educated at Princeton and now is attached to the American Embassy at Warsaw, was still in Zalescyki with William Morton, of the Embassy staff, who was held there by Russian closure of the Rumanian border.

RUMANIANS MOURN MURDERED PREMIER

Calinescu's Last Rites To Be First Under His Own New Funeral Decree

[By the Associated Press]

Bucharest, Sept. 23—Rumanians today eulogizen Premier Armand Calinescu as a martyr to patriotism as the nation went into mourning on the eve of an elaborate funeral for the assassinated statesman.

Newspapers published the last decree signed by the Premier a few hours before he was slain by his pro-Nazi Iron Guard foes. The decree provided, ironically, for additional ceremonies at Government funerals. Calinescu's own last rites will be the first under the decree.

Gang Wiped Out

While King and peasant paid tribute to Calinescu, the Cabinet apparently had wiped out the ring charged with the Premier's death.

The number of Iron Guardists executed is now placed officially at 320, although usually well-informed circles said there were indications the toll was several times greater.

The Government said that Iron Guardists in concentration camps were shot "while attempting to revolt."

The bodies of seven men, said to be the Premier's assassins as well as two others who committed suicide when they were surrounded, were cremated after their bodies had lain for forty-eight hours in the same spot where Calinescu was assassinated—one of Bucharest's main streets.

Army units on the Polish frontier maintained full strength, despite relaxation of tension following Russian occupation of the area across the border.

Rites for policeman Adronic, Calinescu's body guard who was the Guardist's second victim, were attended by Calinescu's 17-year-old son, Barbu, today. He wept throughout the eulogy by interior minister general Marinescu

A royal order was laid on Adronic's breast by King Carol's aviation adjutant.

The government insisted the iron guard outbreak had no repercussions in the provinces aside from disorders in concentration camps.

Rumania Reverts to Calm

Military Leaders Guard Against Riots as Nation Prepares for Premier's Funeral.

BUCHAREST, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—Rumania's virtual military dictatorship worked today to check any possible disorders in the country as plans for the slain Premier Armand Calinescu's funeral were completed.

Slight disturbances were rumored in the provinces, but they could not be confirmed.

The nation as a whole appeared to foreign observers to be reverting to calm, with Rumanian authorities asserting confidence that retaliatory measures—in the form of a purge of Iron Guardists—have provided an effective object lesson for any dissident elements.

The entire nation will be in a state of mourning tomorrow during the Calinescu funeral services at the Atheneum in the presence of high officials and members of Calinescu's family. The body then will be taken in a procession to the railway station for the journey to Calinescu's family home at Curte de Arges, ninety miles northwest of Bucharest.

There, in accordance with Calinescu's wishes, the body will be taken in a peasant cart and drawn by six oxen to the grave.

While the Government said 292 members of the pro-Nazi Iron Guard have been executed in punishment for the assassination Thursday of Calinescu, informed sources said the executions totaled "nearly 2,000," including some women.

The Iron Guard, an object of Calinescu's hatred, is an outlawed, pro-Nazi organization which was accused of plotting an uprising after the Premier's assassination Thursday on a Bucharest street.

Thousands of Rumanians continued to file past his glass covered coffin, moving in a double line extending for blocks.

The bodies of the nine assassins—seven of whom were executed and two of whom committed suicide—were removed and cremated after lying more than twenty-four hours in the street where they died—and where Calinescu was slain. They were taken away in a procession of infantry and cavalry passing through huge crowds lining the streets.

Thousands viewed the bodies, sprawled awkwardly where they fell when shot in the head with their own weapons. Finely dressed women and shabby working women approached and peered at them. Some of the women stepped out of limousines driven by liveried chauffeurs.

Just before the bodies were removed, an officer turned a flashlight on their faces. A Rumanian officer exclaimed, "That's the leader of the gang," and then, "that's the one who spoke over the radio," referring to a broadcast that interrupted the regular program to announce M. Calinescu's assassination and the start of what officials said was a planned uprising.

Calinescu Not Wealthy

Details of Premier Calinescu's will showed he was far from wealthy. He owned two landed estates inherited from his father, both heavily mortgaged, and a house in Bucharest.

Among the messages of condolence received was one from Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State.

Foreign observers expected that the "strong men" now in the Cabinet, hastily formed after the assassination, would endeavor to follow M. Calinescu's policies as far as possible.

General Gabriel Marinescu, the new War Minister, for example, has been a relentless foe of reactionary elements. One of his recent acts was a campaign against German Bund elements around Cernauti, where it was asserted the Bund was openly preparing to greet German troops in Rumania after they crossed the Polish frontier.

There was widespread opinion that Rumania still could avoid being embroiled in the war by steering a carefully charted course. Foreign Minister Grigore Gafencu was described as making strenuous efforts to maintain a tactful neutrality.

Some observers believe the presence of Soviet troops on the Polish-Rumanian frontier might bring about a swing of Rumanian policy toward closer relations with the Soviet.

The question of German interest in Rumanian oil brought increasing speculation. Officials expressed belief that Rumania already was providing Germany with all the oil she could transport at present. A German economic mission still was here winding up negotiations.

[A dispatch from Berlin told of a statement to the press there by Jon Gigurtu, Rumanian industrialist and former Minister of Economics, who expressed confidence German-Rumanian trade relations would not suffer from the war but were bound to increase.]

REVOLT OF CZECHS IS DENIED BY HACHA

President Says Nazi Protectorate Is Behaving In "Orderly Manner"

Arranges Tour To Convince World Press Everything Is Peaceful

By ALVIN J. STEINKOPF
Associated Press Correspondent

Prague, Sept. 23—President Emil Hacha of the Nazi protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia said tonight its government and industry were progressing in "an orderly manner" and insisted there had been no revolt.

[Editors note—The British Ministry of Information said Wednesday it had received reports of a revolutionary movement in the protectorate which Germany carved out of Czecho-Slovakia when the little republic broke up last March.]

Doctor Hacha, who was head of Czecho-Slovakia at the time of its dissolution, received thirty-five newspaper correspondents at his summer home, 25 miles from Prague. He told them that Bohemia and Moravia were not participating in the European war.

No Czechs Enlisted

Not a single Czech soldier is engaged directly for Germany anywhere, he said.

But the protectorate could not escape being affected in some respects by the war, he continued.

Food rationing is to start next week, and today in many cities of the protectorate the correspondents saw long lines of women with shopping bags in front of stores.

The tour was arranged by German authorities to convince the representatives of the world press there were no uprisings as had been reported abroad.

No Disorders Noted

Citizens who were casually approached and local officials agreed there had been no disorder or street battles in Prague, Pilsen, Brünn and other cities.

The correspondents found the protectorate cities quiet, very busy and apparently adjusting themselves as best as they could to German domination, which obviously is irksome to many Czechs.

"We are doing our duty as before and working quietly," Dr. Hacha said in an informal address at a tea shop.

"Administrative machinery is operating efficiently. The protectorate is trying to work within the framework of the centuries-old close association of the German and Czech people."

Visit Skoda Works

At Pilsen our party was conducted through the vast Skoda works where great machines were casting and tooling the barrels of cannon.

Numerous Czechs there stated openly they were not reconciled to German control, but said there hadn't been any rebellion. Many Czech leaders who conceivably might try to foster unrest have been arrested—the number still being held was placed at several hundred."

Some Czechs told of friends and relatives who had slipped away to Poland or France to join armies opposing Germany, but aside from occasional grumbling there was no apparent opposition.

German officials expressed the conviction that Czech dissatisfaction would disappear as the causes of friction are adjusted in the development of the protectorate government.

BELGIUM DENIES OPENING ITS DIKES TO BAR GERMANS

Defense Officials Declare Flooding Now Would Be Unjustified

BRUSSELS, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—Belgian defense officials said today that opening of the Albert Canal dikes to flood an area of Belgium as a protection to Antwerp would be unjustified under the present circumstances.

Through an error in cable transmission, the Associated Press had said Defense Minister Lieut.-Col. Henri Denis announced the opening of the Albert Canal dikes.

The Albert Canal is the backbone of Belgium's three-line ring of defense works, pivoted on Liege, the sector of German encroachment in the world war.

SEA BEING HELD IN RESERVE IF INVASION COMES

Inundation To Be Carried Out Only In Case Of Extreme Danger

Opening Of Dikes As Protection Called Not Justified Now

[By the Associated Press]

Amsterdam, Sept. 23—The sea, Public Enemy No. 1 to The Netherlands for centuries, was being held in reserve tonight as one of the first-line defenses of this neutral nation and to a lesser extent of her mobilized neighbor, Belgium.

The Netherlands and Belguim, while voicing the utmost hope of keeping out of the war and warily pursuing a course of strict neutrality, nevertheless have mobilized all their resources against any possible attempt by the beligerent poyers to turn these small nations into a battleground.

Armies Mobilized

Armies have been mobilized to back up the self-defense policies of both countries and a highly-essential part of the plans is the possible flooding of large areas lying below the sea level in case of invasion from any direction.

However, it was stressed officially that no opening of dikes has taken place and the inundation would be carried out only in case of extreme danger.

Held Not Justified

In Brussels, Belgian defense officials said opening of the Albert Canal dikes to flood an area of Belgium as a protection for Antwerp would not be justified at present.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—The Associated Press, through an error in cable transmission, had said Lieut. Col. Henri Denis, Defense Minister, had announced the opening of the Albert Canal dikes. This was due to the word "denies" being received as "Denis."]

In the Netherlands, with one-fourth of its area under sea level and protected by 1,500 miles of dikes, there has been one test of inundation possibilities.

Flooded In Experiment

A small area of reclaimed land in Utrecht province, thirty-five miles southeast of Amsterdam, was flooded as engineers considered the water level favorable for the experiment.

While the possibility of being involved in the war is not overlooked, informed sources said that despite several incidents of neutrality violation by the belligerents, the Netherlands and Belgium expected their frontiers to be respected and were not alarmed by troop concentrations along their borders.

If invasion came from either side, however, both the Netherlands and Belgium have dikes which could be opened to halt the invaders' advance.

Called Powerful Weapon

The Netherlands, which has fought back the sea for centuries and which continues to reclaim land by draining the northeastern part of the Zuyder Zee, could turn water into a powerful defense weapon.

A dike between the Zuyder Zee and the North Sea heavily is guarded by troops and the waters of the Zuyder Zee would be used in executing a defense inundation.

T major inundation in the case of invasion would flood a strip two or three miles wide from the north to the south through the center of the Netherlands, roughly on a line from the Zuyder Zee through Amersfoort, Wagingen, Hertogensbosch and thence south to the Belgian border.

Could Blow Up Bridges

Also, bridges across wide tital rivers and arms of the sea could be blown up to stem the enemy advance. The policy, as described in informed sources, would be to establish a flood belt around the rich population and industrial centers of western Netherlands, including Amsterdam, Utrecht, The Hague and Rotterdam.

Likewise, if an invasion is attempted from the west, the flooded strip through the center of the country would form a barrier behind which The Netherlands' forces could retreat.

Regarding reported German troop concentrations along their borders, one source close to The Netherlands' Government said his country and Belgium had no fear of attack and that observation had shown the German forces merely were taking up defense positions.

SWISS SEE HINTS OF NAZI OFFENSIVE

Will Outnumber Allies in West, Say Observers.

[By the Associated Press]

Basel, Switzerland, Sept. 23—Swiss observers, expecting a big push momentarily to break the Western front lull, saw indications today that the heavily-reinforced German line would take the offensive from the French.

So far, they said, French and British divisions thrusting across the frontier toward the Siegfried line were numerically stronger than the Germans.

Guns Active In Saar

That was reported changing rapidly, however, as seasoned troops and vast amounts of fighting equipment were rushed from Poland.

There were increasing indications that when the drive comes it may be in the Northern sector, where French have penetrated the rich Saar Valley. Big guns continued to thunder there.

Troops In Baden Area

A movement of German troops into the Baden section, north of Basel, had been observed earlier, but this was said to have developed only into a transit movement—not a concentration.

A dozen railway lines from Poland pass through the Baden section to the Western front.

Swiss sources said the veterans from Poland were replacing the lower Rhine fort troops which, in turn, were moved north where most of the fighting has taken place.

Bolstering Second Line

Hundreds of German warplanes have been reported flying from Poland to underground bases behind the Siegfried line the last four days.

There was talk Polish prisoners of war might be put to work for Germany.

Several labor battalions were said to have been put to work behind the Siegfried forts, strengthening second line defenses.

French Advance

The French and British high command is reported still firm in its belief the Allies can last longer than Germany. This has led to reports they might shift to the defensive, hoping even if driven from advance positions to let German troops weaken themselves pounding at the Maginot line.

French were said to be continuing local advances in the Saar-Moselle triangle, near the Luxembourg frontier.

TRAVEL CUT BY NEW PLAN OF GAS RATIONING

Nightly Blackouts Reduce Number Of Places To Go In London

By J. C. STARK
Associated Press Correspondent

London, Sept. 23—The war reduced Great Britain tonight to a nation of "stay at homes."

Travel was greatly restricted by a new wartime scheme of gasoline rationing; nightly blackouts already had reduced the number of places to go.

The first of the Government's rationing plans put into effect took thousands of automobiles off the highways.

Food rationing will follow after a national registration next Friday.

Housewives Complain

Housewives already were complaining at their inability to purchase some food commodities.

The Food Ministry said this was due mainly to transport problems, and to remedy them and to prevent excessive price increases the Government planned to put food rationing into effect as soon as possible after completion of the national register—a sort of wartime census.

The gasoline rationing, limiting the supply for a private automobile to that sufficient for an average of less than seven miles a day, had an immediate effect in both city and countryside.

London More Deserted

London, never a busy place on Saturday, was even more deserted, with some of the normally busiest streets almost without traffic.

Taxicabs already were scarce and the Journal of Taximen said many old drivers were headed for the workhouse.

The war, three weeks old tomorrow, continued to be fought mainly on the home front.

The damaging of the British patrol boat Kittiwake, by striking a mine in the English Channel, and the loss of five of her crew and injury of two men, was announced officially.

The first "eyewitness" accounts of what British forces in France were doing were received. But they told only of their trips across the channel, their billeting in France, their high spirits and their comraderie with the French poilus. There was nothing in them about military action.

M. P.'s Inquisitive

Many questions from members of Commons about the war faced Ministers during the week.

They ranged from one addressed to Prime Minister Chamberlain on whether a proposal for a "United States of Europe" might be embodied in any British peace terms, to another about windows of the War Office itself showing too much light in the blackout darkness.

The blackouts virtually have paralyzed night life and brought a great transformation in the ways of the British people. For example, few evening clothes are seen in London—a city where before the war many higher-class restaurants and night clubs required full evening dress for dining.

"War Dance" Held

The first "war dance" at Ramsgate, a seacoast resort, was announced for next week, but a condition was that "ladies not wear long dance dresses" because they might impede movement in event of an air-raid alarm.

A slight relaxation in the lighting of London busses was announced because so many mistakes were being made in changing money.

ENGLISH GASOLINE RATION THREATENS TAXICAB SHORTAGE

Food Restriction Forms to Be Distributed on Monday.

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 23—Rigid rationing of gasoline swept motor traffic from the streets of London and other British cities today and threatened an acute shortage of taxicabs.

At the same time the Government prepared for general distribution Monday national registration forms on which food rationing will be based. Registration day for everyone in the United Kingdom is next Friday.

Two Gallons Per Taxi

For the ordinary motorist the new regulations meant a driving range of from 100 to 200 miles a month. For instance, the owner of a small, popular American car of sixty horsepower is allowed ten gallons a month.

The drivers of London's high, antique-looking taxis, allowed ten gallons daily, said the probable result would be no taxis on the streets after noon.

Before the war there were 8,000 London cabs and 12,200 drivers, most of them elderly.

7,500 Idle

War services have taken more than 3,000 cabs and 2,000 drivers. The 10,000 remaining drivers have been splitting shifts, but now, it is estimated, 7,500 will have nothing to do at all.

Commercial operators faced similar, although not as serious, problems. The Government promised that no essential service would be handicapped, and extra supplies were provided for public utilities, doctors and others.

May Drive On Gas

Newspapers displayed pictures of billowing gas bags which were fitted atop cars in the World War and said domestic gas companies were considering a scheme to supply something similar, perhaps compressed gas cylinders. The cost of converting carburetors to use of gas was reported to be small, and the price of gas would compare favorably with the price of gasoline, now one shilling eightpence (about 33 cents) a gallon in Britain.

Until midnight in London's inky blackout, long lines of cars waited at service stations last night. Drivers who brought five-gallon drums and barrels were turned away. The Government has forbidden motorists to keep more than two-gallon cans.

In the general gloom which afflicted motorists, the London Times said rationing "is likely to alter the look of London and getting about will be easier and pleasanter. More horses are likely to be seen and private carriages will be about again."

Britain Transports Army to France Without Casualty

Troops in High Spirits Cheer as Lifebelt Falls Into Sea and Sinks

LONDON, Sept. 23 (AP).—All British troops have landed safely in France after uneventful voyages across the Channel unmolested by submarines, said an eye-witness account issued today by the Ministry of Information.

The authorized reporter, aboard one of four transports which carried 1,500 men across to France, said the spirit of the troops was high. They laughed heartily at news that one of the life belts had fallen into the water and promptly sunk.

Destroyers darted around the transports and at one stage of the voyage two of the transports steamed bow and bow, with the troops on each yelling insults and threats at each other.

The officers who had gathered in the smoking room to receive orders were jarred when the loudspeakers suddenly blared out music. The eyewitness reported that "it was some time before anyone could contrive to put it out of action."

In the British camps in France a homelike atmosphere prevails, the reporter said. Socks and underwear newly and inexpertly washed hung on every bush and men off duty spent their time picking blackberries.

WHERE IS NAZI THRUST COMING?

British Think It May Be Through Neutral Area.

SOME SUGGEST NETHERLANDS

Military Men in London Believe Big Push Is Due Soon.

LONDON, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—The path of the first major German thrust on the western front occupied the minds of British military men today. Some said that despite German denials they believed a German sweep through the Netherlands and Belgium toward the ancient Teutonic objective—Paris—was still under consideration. A few thought the German general staff might choose a direct frontal assault on the Maginot Line. A few offered the possibility of an attack through Switzerland.

To re-enforce the idea of a sweep through the low countries were reports of intensive German digging along the Netherlands frontier and troop concentrations in the same sector.

Big Push to Start Soon.

The feeling that the war—as far as France and Britain were concerned—would start in earnest in a few days on the western front was evident on all sides. The most likely opening move in the opinion of many military men is a major German offensive.

"Two months ago I do not think the Germans would have even considered a sweep through Holland and Belgium," said one officer.

"Today they are flushed with victory, they have the lessons of their first campaign in their minds and they are fairly sure they cannot break the Maginot Line without tremendous sacrifice.

"One of the lessons learned was the great speed at which a mechanized column can move and the terrific effect it has after sufficient preparation by aerial bombardment. The only report we have of Polish success against German tanks and armored cars occurred when the German air force had not prepared the way with medium bombs and machine-gun strafing."

Military men agreed, however, that the mechanized columns which speed over the flat plains of Poland as the vanguard of the German divisions would be hampered by the rugged terrain of the western front.

"But there are no hills along the seacoast in Holland and Belgium," said one. The Germans would be able to use the same tactics that were so successful in Poland."

Every one here appeared agreed the scene of the war has shifted from Poland to the west as far as large scale operations were concerned.

Poland Is Not Conquered.

"Poland is not conquered," said one officer. "She is merely overrun. But resistance by a major force has disappeared.

"Certain garrisons such as that in Warsaw will continue to hold out against the Germans. Their endurance depends on their supplies of munitions and food and the amount of troops the Germans wish to send against them. There is no question about the bravery of the Poles."

The Germans in 1914 followed the plan laid down by Gen. von Scheiffen fifteen years before and swept through Belgium.

Military men said they believed they would extend the plan if they should drive through again, moving further west into the Netherlands to take advantage of the coastal plain and flanking the Belgian forts which held von Kluck just long enough in 1914 for Marshal Joffre to prepare the French armies for a counter-attack and the British to get their "contemptible little army" on the firing line.

German military strategy has always followed the line of swift, bold attacks and London analysts said there seemed no reason to doubt it would follow this plan again. Belgian and Holland resistance, although determined, seems hardly likely to hold the crack German armies, military men said.

The last barrier to such an advance is the line of fortifications built by the French along the Belgian frontier. French officers say this extension is not as strong as the Maginot line itself.

Beyond that line lie the flat plains of northeastern France and the road to Paris.

Whether or not Germany would defy neutral opinion and strike toward Paris from the north appeared the military question of the hour.

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Sept. 23 (AP)—The Finnish Government tonight instructed its Minister in Berlin to protest to the German Government against the sinking of the Finnish steamer Martti-Ragnar by what the crew members said was a German submarine.

Britain Vows to Respect Neutrality of Norway

Pledge Follows Criticism Over Lack of Such Assurance

OSLO, Sept. 23 (AP).—The British Minister to Norway delivered a note to the Foreign Office today which promised Great Britain would respect Norway's neutrality if other belligerents did likewise.

Norwegian newspapers recently have been emphasizing the fact that Britain had not given a pledge to respect Norwegian neutrality, although she had given such declarations to Sweden and Denmark.

SWISS BACK LAWS CURBING LIBERTIES

Agree to Army Powers to Safeguard Neutrality

[By the Associated Press]

Berne, Switzerland, Sept. 23—With war across their northern frontier, Swiss citizens gave support today to emergency Government decrees giving the army powers that curtail cherished liberties.

Unprecedented authority for the army includes the right to search properties, open telegrams, seize documents, or ban meetings in an effort to stamp out espionage.

The Swiss press, which has not been restricted by the decrees, indicated that the people were willing to give up some of their liberties temporarily to protect their neutrality.

Control Plan Praised

The press highly praised the new autonomous import and export control plan. It was hailed as a guarantee of economic independence which Switzerland lost in part during the World War.

Creation of the control board was seen as highly important, for this country depends considerably on France for food and Germany for fuel, and fears that either might accuse Switzerland of reselling the supplies to the other.

Soviet Hungarian Relations.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—Diplomatic relations between Hungary and Soviet Russia, discontinued early this year, have been re-established, it became known today.

With Soviet troops now on Hungary's Ruthenian frontier, the two governments agreed to resume active diplomatic relations which were discontinued by Russia after Hungary had announced last January that she had agreed to sign the anti-comintern pact of which Germany, Italy and Japan were the principal signators.

Hungary's new Minister to Moscow will be Dr. G. Cristoffy, who still holds the post of Counselor of the Hungarian legation at Warsaw. The name of the new Russian envoy to Budapest was expected to be announced tomorrow.

Today Hungary, known as one of the most anti-communist nations of Europe, has 700 miles of frontier with the Soviet, under the Russo-German plan for partitioning Poland. The decision to resume active diplomatic relations was taken, it was understood, after it became known that Germany and Russia had agreed that the Soviets should have such a frontier with this country.

Bulgaria And Russia To Sign Trade Treaty

Sofia, Bulgaria, Sept. 23 (AP)—Bulgaria and Russia soon will conclude a trade treaty, it was announced tonight.

Nikola Vassileff, deputy in Parliament and president of the Bulgarian-Soviet Chamber, released an official report on successful progress of trade negotiations.

He said Russia could consume practically all Bulgaria's exports—two-thirds of which have been going to Germany.

Vassileff disclosed he had reviewed all the possibilities of trade developments when he visited Moscow with 21 other deputies recently.

In polical circles it was believed Prime Minister George Kiosseivanoff (all one word) or some cabinet minister would go to Moscow in the near future to sign the pact, which would be a sharp setback for gxxxx german economic penetration.

War Flight From Oslo Planned For 150,000

Norwegian Government Makes Preparation For Eventuality

Oslo, Norway, Sept. 23 (AP)—The newspaper Arbeiderbladet, official organ of the Social Democratic party now in control of the Government, tonight said the Government had prepared a plan to move 150,000 of Oslo's 253,000 inhabitants from the city in the event of war.

Passports will be issued, the paper said, designating the place the holder will go if ordered from the city.

It was estimated 4,000 persons would be trained to carry out the flight from the city.

POLAND'S PRIMATE REPORTS TO POPE

Pius Studies Effect of Conquest on the Church

VATICAN CITY, Sept. 23 (AP).—High Catholic leaders studied with concern today the effects of the conquest of Poland on the church.

Pope Pius was giving close attention to a report on the situation from August Cardinal Hlond, Primate of Poland, who is now in Rome.

Reports reaching here indicate Polish church buildings have been damaged considerably, but there has been no word of religious molestations. All Bishops except the Primate have remained in their sees.

Poland long has been considered here a stronghold of catholism. Sixty-five per cent of its people are Roman Catholics; ten per cent, Greek Uniat Catholics who recognize the pope, Eleven per cent, Orthodox Catholics, not recognizing the pope, and most of the others Jews.

May Suspend Nobel Prizes

By the Associated Press.

It was pointed out that none was awarded during the World War. The awards committee usually meets each October.

BISHOP, FAMED ACE, CALLED BY CANADA

His Official Record in World War Was 72 Enemy Planes Downed in Action

PUT ON FULL TIME DUTY

Holder of Victoria Cross and Many Other Awards Will Serve as Air Commodore

By the Candian Press

OTTAWA, Sept. 23—W. A. Bishop, honorary air marshal, was appointed to full-time duty in the Royal Canadian Air Force today as temporary air commodore.

A major in the Royal Flying Corps at 23, Colonel Bishop won lasting fame in the World War. He was credited with bringing down seventy-two enemy planes and his exploits brought him all the decorations that England could bestow on a soldier for valor, including the coveted Victoria Cross. In addition, he received medals from France, Belgium and the United States.

Perhaps Colonel Bishop's most intrepid feat, and the one for which he received the Victoria award, was an attack he made single-handed on a German airdrome, during which he brought down three planes in a few minutes. He made many thrilling escapes, including one fall of 4,000 feet with his plane in flames.

Born at Owen Sound on Feb. 8, 1894, Colonel Bishop attended the Royal Military College at Kingston. He went overseas with the Seventh Canadian Mounted Rifles as a lieutenant, but joined the Royal Flying Corps in August, 1915. After a short period of training he was sent to do night flying over London looking for Zeppelins.

Transferred to the front, his record in a few months was such that he was made flight commander and captain. In five months of actual flying he is said to have had 110 single combats with enemy flyers, sending forty-seven of them to earth. Although seventy-two planes downed is his official record, Colonel Bishop's unofficial record includes many more.

After the war he lectured in the principal cities of the United States from 1919 to 1920 and made frequent visits at American air races. Last March he was a luncheon guest of President Roosevelt at the White House. In May he was at Montreal with four other wearers of the Victoria Cross at a reception in honor of the visiting King George of England.

CHARLES BOYER IN WAR

French Motion-Picture Actor Was Called In Mobilization

Cannes, France, Sept. 23 (AP)—Friends of Charles Boyer, French motion-picture actor, said today he was declared mobilized when France declared war on Germany.

Boyer, vacationing on the Riviera when the hostilities broke out, already had reported for duty. His whereabouts, like those of all other French troops, is a military secret.

British Defy Nazi U-boat War

Declare German Submarines Are Vulnerable, but May Yet Inflict Great Losses.

LONDON, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—The British Government assured the home front today in a communique that "enemy submarines alone can never maintain an adequate blockade," but warned that "we may have to endure great losses at sea before the present war is ended."

Despite reports of fresh losses inflicted by German undersea raiders, the Ministry of Information declared "energetic measures" taken by the Royal Navy and air force had proved the submarine to be "very vulnerable."

Inhabitants of the Hisoi Islands off the Norwegian coast yesterday reported the torpedoing of the British freighter Akenside, 2,694 tons, bound from Lythe, England, to Bergen with a cargo of coal. The crew of twenty-six escaped in lifeboats and was picked up by a Norwegian warship.

Britain Has Lost 35 Ships.

With the sinking of the Akenside Britain had lost about thirty-five merchantmen.

(The Finnish steamer Martti-Ragnar, loaded with woodpulp for England, was sunk today off the southern coast of Norway. Members of the crew, all safe, said a party from a German submarine boarded the freighter and destroyed it with explosives planted in the hold.)

Another communique, issued last night from No. 10 Downing Street following a meeting of the Supreme War Council of Great Britain and France, announced "complete agreement" on the course to be followed in the European war.

The communique, which failed to specify where in England the meeting was held, said the council had "considered the question of munitions and supplies, and that agreement was reached on procedure for co-ordinating and perfecting the arrangements to be made by the two governments."

Naval Blockade Tightened.

Representing France at the meeting were Premier Daladier, Generalissimo Maurice Gustave Gamelin, Minister of Munitions Raoul Dautry and Admiral Jean Darlan.

Britain was represented by Prime Minister Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax, Lord Chatfield, Minister for Co-ordination of Defense, and Major-Gen. Hastings L. Ismay, secretary of the Imperial Defense Committee.

Meanwhile the Admiralty sought to tighten the naval blockade to keep vital supplies from reaching Germany and issued new detailed instructions to British ships passing through the Dover Straits. Shipping previously had been warned of mines being laid on the northeast coast of Ireland.

British sources expected that, once the Royal Navy had mastered the submarine peril, Germany might resort to other weapons to harass enemy shipping.

Germans May Raid Shipping.

It was pointed out that Germany has pocket battleships especially designed to raid merchant shipping. The British indicated the belief that their battle cruisers would be able to run down these raiders.

There was some criticism in the English press of Government measures to meet the war supplies and munitions problem. The Manchester Guardian said editorially, "A very strong tide of criticism of the Government is setting in."

"Whatever we may or may not be doing in the prosecution of the war on land, on the sea and in the air," the Guardian said, "we certainly are not doing a good job of it on the home front.

30.24-3577

"For all the warning we had, for all the time Hitler gave us to prepare ourselves, it may be doubted whether at the present rate of progress we shall organize 'the whole manhood and womanhood of the country' for many months."

5 DIE AS BRITISH BOAT HITS MINE

U-Boat Sinks a Finnish Freighter Off Norway.

LONDON, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—The British patrol boat Kittiwake struck a mine in the English Channel and was damaged, an official announcement disclosed today. Five of the crew were believed dead and two injured.

The Admiralty said the Kittiwake struck a mine on September 20. The two injured men were taken to a hospital when the patrol boat returned to its base for repairs.

The Information Ministry said today it feared that hope must be abandoned for the crew of the British steamship Royal Scepter, which was reported lost on September 7.

An S O S from the vessel said that she was being shelled by a submarine and the crew had been ordered to abandon the ship, which was sinking.

Danish and Norwegian ships which searched the locality reported that they were unable to find survivors. British naval ships also found no trace of the crew and there have been no reports of their being picked up by other vessels.

Finnish Freighter Sunk.

OSLO, Norway, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—The Finnish steamer Martti-Ragnar, loaded with woodpulp for England, was reported sunk today by a submarine off the southern coast of Norway.

Members of the crew, all safe and unhurt, said the submarine was German.

It was said to have stopped the 2,262-ton steamship of the coast town of Arendal, ordered it to approach territorial waters so the crew could reach shore easily, then set fire to the ship by placing explosives in the hold.

SUBMARINE IS SEEN IN GULF OF MEXICO

German Ship With Japanese Flag in Chilean Port.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—A ship's crew reported today it had sighted a submarine in the Gulf of Mexico about five miles off Punta Delgada, on the Vera Cruz coast.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—Maritime authorities at Valparaiso said last night the German motorship Portland had arrived at the Chilean port of Coquimbo flying a Japanese flag.

They said the Portland would be permitted to proceed at her own risk, however, as law permits ships of belligerent nations to fly other flags as long as their papers meet requirements. They said the Portland's papers are in order.

The Portland had been unreported since she left Everett, Wash., on the even of the war, flying a German flag.

Americans Leave Denmark

1500 Stranded There by War Being Evacuated

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 23 (AP).—Lucien Memminger, American Consul General, and his staff today completed arrangements for the return home of the last of about 1,500 American citizens stranded in Denmark by European hostilities.

Most were tourists who held tickets for German ships and who came here after the outbreak of the war.

More than 1,000 got away aboard Scantic Line ships, the Mormachhawk, Scanyork, Mormacwren, Donald McKay and Scanpenn. The Scanpenn sailed yesterday with 265.

The last large group of 150 is being taken aboard the Scanmail, which will sail on Sept. 28 for New York. This will leave only a few cases with which to deal.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 (AP).—The United States strengthened its neutrality patrol off New England today and there were increased demands among Pan-American nations for strong measures to safeguard shipping in the Western Hemisphere.

These developments followed President Roosevelt's disclosure that two foreign submarines had been sighted off Boston and off Alaska and earlier reports of submarine activity in the South Atlantic.

[A United Press dispatch from Mexico City said newspapers reported that several submarines of unknown nationality had been sighted off the Vera Cruz Coast in the Gulf of Mexico.]

Six Coast Guard cutters were placed under the navy's supervision and assigned to patrol the coast from Maine to Connecticut. The cutters, including three now en route from the West Coast, are of destroyer size and carry flying boats. The neutrality patrol is operating from Eastport, Me., to and including the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean Sea.

Sentiment for adoption of firm measures to protect shipping between North and South Atlantic countries crystalized in conversations among delegates to the neutrality conference of American republics at Panama today.

Alaska Fisherman Discovered Submarine

KETCHIKAN, Alaska, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—Everett Hudson, Metlakatla Indian fisherman, may have provided the information for President Roosevelt's announcement that a foreign submarine was sighted off the Alaskan coast. The Ketchikan Chronicle says Hudson did, indirectly.

Hudson and his son-in-law saw the submarine on Tuesday, only three-quarters of a mile away from their fishing boat and about fifteen miles south of here. The submarine was on the opposite side of Gravina Island from the usual shipping channel. It submerged slowly.

Coast Guard division headquarters at Seattle acknowledged without comment that it had investigated the submarine report.

Americans Continue To Pour Into Port—Emergency Ship Sails

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 23—Hoping again to outwit lurking submarines, the armed Cunard White Star liner Aquitania, coated in gray paint, sailed today, presumably for England, as increasing numbers of Americans arrived from the war zones of Europe.

As before, when she eluded submarines on her trip to this country a week ago, the afterdeck of the British ship, second largest of the line, was cleared for action, and two twelve-pounders were mounted on either side as defensive pieces.

Official sources refused to divulge her destination. Whether she carried passengers also was undisclosed.

Italian Liner Arrives

Earlier, the Italian liner Conte di Savoia arrived from Genoa, carrying over 2,000 passengers, including 1,357 Americans.

Her arrival with many non-Americans evoked a protest from Senator Rufus C. Holman (Rep., Ore.), who contended it was an "outrage when ships are allowed to bring so many foreigners here when thousands of Americans are stranded in Europe."

He said he would demand a halt in issuance of visas to foreigners until "every American has returned from war-torn Europe." He is a member of the Senate Immigration Committee and sponsor of a bill to halt all immigration for five years.

Emergency Ship Leaves

Meanwhile, an American emergency ship, the Acadia, started for Europe to bring back 672 Americans. Two other vessels, the American Merchant and American Shipper, were to depart tomorrow, bent on the same mission. Each expected to bring back 135 passengers.

The President Harding, of the United States Lines, sailed late tonight after a shortage of cooks and stewards had delayed her several hours. She has 295 passengers, Europe-bound, and expects to bring back about 600.

Bearing 29 survivors of the torpedoed British freighter Kafiristan, in addition to 133 other passengers, the American Farmer was expected tomorrow, along with a Greek ship, the Nea Hellas, with 897 passengers from Piræus, Greece, and Lisbon, Portugal.

Italian Liner Omits Calling At Gibraltar

[Special from the New York Times]

New York, Sept. 23—Passengers on the Conte di Savoia, the second Italian liner to reach New York since the outbreak of war, said today that, although the rates were high, the voyage had been pleasant and uneventful.

The omission of the usual call at Gibraltar was the only departure from the routine of a regular trip. No blackouts were ordered as on the British ships and no extra cots were placed as on the American ones.

The passenger list included Lieut. Comdr. Lincoln Ellsworth, the explorer; Samuel H. Kress, head of a store chain, who recently presented a collection of Italian art valued at $25,000,000 to the National Gallery in Washington; Ezio Pinza, Metropolitan Opera basso; Prince Francis Joseph and his wife, the Princess Marta; Pietro Yon, organist of St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York; Toshio Shiratori, retiring Japanese Ambassador to Italy, and Mrs. James Donahue, aunt of Barbara Hutton Hauglitz-Reventlow, who was accompanied by her two sons, Woolworth and Jimmy Donahue.

Ellsworth, who was accompanied by his wife, said his proposed 1940-41 expedition to the South Pole probably would be canceled. "Nobody is going off exploring while thousands of men are getting killed in war," he said.

Tells Of Mobilization

Ellsworth left here on August 5, expecting to spend three months at his forty-room house on a mountain top at Schloss, near Lensburg, in Switzerland. The war, however, forced him to change his plans and he left after a five-week stay. He rented an automobile at Zurich and drove the 370 miles to Genoa to board the ship. The trains were too crowded by Swiss troops, he explained.

"The entire Swiss army of 350,000 men between the ages of 20 and 40 is mobilized," he said. "All mountain passes leading to Germany are set with dynamite and all the bridges on the highways have been prepared for demolition in case of attack. Seven Swiss soldiers have been stationed on our grounds to look for airplanes. The Swiss Government informed us that they would take over our house as a prison camp in case of war."

Kress spent most of his visit in Europe at Badgasten, a German watering resort. He left on August 27. As he crossed into Switzerland, he said, the Germans examined his luggage but gave him no trouble. Once in Zurich he tried unsuccessfully to get to France, then decided to go to Italy. He went to Florence and waited until a sailing was available.

He would not say anything of Germany other than that he had been there in the summer of 1914 also. Of Italy he said, "Ninety-five per cent. of the Italians do not want war. They are dead against taking any part if their neighbors will let them alone."

BATORY MYSTERY

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 23—The 16,000-ton Polish liner Batory was bound for a Canadian port today, leaving behind 200 crew members who said they had refused to sail the ship to Canada for service as a munitions carrier. A skeleton crew of 100 remained aboard the vessel, reported to be headed for Halifax.

The crew members left behind, including fifteen stewardesses, had delayed the sailing by going on a sit-down strike (there had been reports of a "mutiny") in the engine room. They left the vessel quietly at the order of Police Capt. Henry S. Murphy of Yonkers, who said he had been summoned by Polish Consul General Sylvester Gruszka.

Skipper's Ousting Called Cause

Captain Murphy said the sailors were incensed over the unexplained removal of Capt. Eustazy Borkowski, World War hero, as master of the Batory. Borkowski, replaced by First Officer Franciszek Szudzinski, wept openly as he reached shore and was surrounded by a knot of sympathetic seamen.

Captain Murphy said the rebellious crew members told him the Batory was being taken to Canada to carry munitions to England, and that they had no wish to risk being torpedoed. "Let the British use their own ships to carry munitions," he quoted them.

Under American laws, the seamen can remain in this country sixty days.

Shortage of Sailors

Meanwhile, a shortage of American sailors threatened to slow the task of bringing home this country's citizens stranded in Europe. The United States liner Washington was delayed several hours yesterday by inability to obtain a full crew for its eastward voyage.

Other vessels also were affected. Crews of American tankers passing through war zones, the Herald-Tribune said, have been granted fifty per cent. pay raises and war-risk insurance equivalent to a year's salary as special inducements to sign up.

Crash Damages Pacific Liners

VICTORIA, B. C., Sept. 23 (Canadian Press)—The British motor ship Pacific Grove of the Furness Line suffered $50,000 damage in yesterday's collision in a fog with another British freighter, the Lochmonar, it was learned here today. The Lochmonar, a Royal Mail steamship, had seven feet of her bow pushed back. Fog alarms on both ships had been silenced because of reports a submarine had been sighted along the Pacific Coast.

The Lancastria Reported Hugging Coast to Canada

Liner Sighted Off Maine Speeding Eastward

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 23 (AP).—Waterfront sources speculated today on the destination of an ocean liner believed to have been the British ship Lancastria, which hastened eastward up the Maine coast yesterday. Newsmen who flew over the vessel identified her as the Lancastria, a 552-foot ship of 16,243 tons.

Some observers believed the big, gray ship, which carried no marks of identification, was speeding to Canada, there to be turned into a troop transport. Others suggested she might attempt a secret, unconvoyed ocean crossing.

The liner, proceeding at full speed, passed a mile inside Portland lightship on her eastward voyage and kept close to shore.

The Lancastria, owned by the Cunard White Star Line, which also owns the Queen Mary and Mauretania, had, until the war, plied between New York and Nassau, Bahamas.

21 REPUBLICS OPEN DISCUSSION ON WAR

Nations of the Americas Plan Neutrality.

PANAMA, Panama, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—Representatives of American republics here for the opening today of the Panama conference to study effects of the European war said the discussions might lead to a permanent neutrality committee for the Americas.

Such a committee, it was pointed out, might be composed of members of the governing board of the Pan-American Union.

Delegates from all twenty-one countries represented at the opening of the conference seemed of the opinion definite steps should be taken.

Informed sources indicated these steps might include:

1. Policing the American coast lines with navies of larger countries.

2. A closely knit system of economic exchange and monetary measures.

3. Limitation of privileges extended to ships of belligerent nations in neutral American waters.

Foreign Minister Zuniga Montufar of Costa Rica said that the principles outlined at the Pan American conference in Buenos Aires would prove applicable to the joint neutrality program.

The delegates commented on the importance of safeguarding the Panama Canal.

Leopoldo Arosemena, Panama's Secretary of the Interior, said that the Panama police would co-operate closely with any canal defense plans.

Gen. David Stone, commanding officer of the Canal Zone, said that enemy air bases within close striking distance of the canal would constitute a grave menace.

He also said that the canal defense would require as many good, new planes as possible and added that additional cavalry troops would be of defense value because of their mobility over such terrain as the Canal Zone.

"A Peaceful Highway"

"The canal was constructed as a peaceful highway for world commerce," he declared, "and we intend to make it strong enough to continue to serve that peaceful purpose."

The main plan of defense, he said, was to defeat attacking planes before they could reach the canal.

Americas Meet To Map Course For Neutrality

21 Nations Represented at Session; Coastline Patrol by Navies Is Considered

By The Associated Press

PANAMA CITY, Sept. 23.—President Juan D. Arosemena of Panama, opening a special Pan-American conference here to discuss neutrality and commercial problems growing out of the war in Europe, urged the twenty-one American republics today to safeguard their neutrality to provide "a reserve for the future of humanity." He warned the delegates that any American country which departed from neutrality "will face the most tremendous of responsibilities."

The conference, meeting at the National University, was called by agreement of several American countries, including the United States, under an inter-American agreement reached at Buenos Aires in 1936 providing for consultation in case the peace of the continent is threatened by war within or outside the Western Hemisphere.

The chief task of the New World, Arosemena said, "is to maintain our household in condition that we may live in it as reasonable and free human beings." War-torn Europe eventually must look to America, he said, adding that the drain of "tremendous and successive great wars not only is consuming Europe's wealth and exhausting her natural resources but weakening her moral sense" and threatening "the decadence of Western culture." He declared that the American nation not only must preserve their neutrality, "but make it respected" in Europe and Asia.

All twenty-one American republics were represented at today's opening session. Informal talks will be held tomorrow and Monday and formal meetings will begin Tuesday. Some of the delegates were of the opinion the conference might result in a permanent neutrality committee for the Americas. Others thought definite steps should be taken to preserve the neutrality of the Western Hemisphere.

These steps, informed sources said, might include patroling of American coastlines by the navies of the larger nations, a system of monetary measures and economic exchange and limitations of privilges of ships of belligerent nations in neutral American waters.

In an interview, Enrique Goytisolo, Foreign Minister of Peru, said the war in Europe already had affected gravely the commerce of his country. He expressed the opinion that shipping problems would receive much attention at the conference because of the serious consequences of crippled trans-Atlantic services which affected Latin-American imports, exports and exchange facilities.

He declared that more than 70 per cent of Peru's shipping already had been cut off by the war.

"We need to facilitate exchange to buy from the United States, where we already have an unfavorable trade balance," he said.

He added difficulties had been increased through drastic reduction of cotton, sugar and other exports.

Like other South American countries, He asserted, Peru "has markets for her products but can't ger her produces to the markets ed 618ped....

Text of the Address by Arosemena

By The Associated Press.

PANAMA, Sept. 23—The text of President Arosemena's speech opening the Pan-American Conference on Neutrality today follows:

Gentlemen:

The Republic of Panama extends you a most cordial welcome and offers you a hospitality the modest material form of which you can well overlook if you take into account the sincere goodwill which nurtures it and the predestined place in history that this isthmus was given when the living genius of Bolivar selected it as the seat of the first Congress of Nations of this continent.

It was in the Inter-American Peace Conference, which met at Buenos Aires in 1936 under the inspiration of the noble phrases of President Roosevelt in his invitation to the Presidents of the American nations, that it was agreed that consultations should take place in cases in which there arose outside of America any warlike conflict capable of affecting the peace and stability of this part of the world.

Two years later, in Lima, the Eighth American International conference decided on the method for such consultations, deciding on personal contact between the Ministers of Foreign Relations or their representatives.

Not even a year has passed since the Lima conference, and already painful realty has shown the importance and practicability of this foresight.

Spiritual Entity Sought

Panama has had the honor to invite you to this meeting, which begins today before the expectancy of the world, and the decisions of which will express the international attitude of the free peoples of America in the face of the present emergency.

Gentlemen, I believe sincerely that the moment is approaching in which the American States may organize themselves in a great continental collectivity, conscious of their high destiny. America should signify more than a mere geographical unit—a spiritual entity, based on the common denominator of its authentic democratic convictions.

That would constitute our most generous tribute to humanity and the most noble contribution that we could offer to the peoples who, with their heroic feats of colonization, brought the beginnings of our culture from the other side of the world.

It is not that I concur in the ingenuousness of considering the possibility of the political union of the nations of the American Continent, not even theoretically. This great and Utopian conception enthuses me because I see no inconvenience whatsover in that each one of the free nations of America affirm its own personality, respecting it and respecting honorably and sincerely the personality of its neighbor nation.

This individual personality is a living organism and, as in the case of persons, is subject to the unavoidable and inexorable biological law of individuality, which cannot be destroyed by theories, which is above speculative lyricisms, which escapes artful intrigues and which escapes even the most impetuous attacks of violence and force.

Conflict From Misunderstanding

Failure to understand this great truth has caused most grave repercussions, has been responsible for the most deep-seated historical commotions and, in the last instance, is the cause of the tremendous conflict which at this time threatens to destroy the peace and equilibrium of the world.

The continental feeling of America should be inspired, then, and today more than ever, in mutual respect between the States that make it up. But this in no way is opposed to the affirmation of a spiritual collectivity which, as I have said, above all has to be founded on the deeply democratic conviction of our peoples.

I also said that it is the best tribute and the most noble contribution that we can offer to humanity in general and especially to the culture of Europe, the forefather of our culture, and it is worth while explaining that no people, no matter how strong and vigorous it may be, no matter how seemingly advanced and complete a culture it may appear to have, can resist successive great wars without suffering from demoralization and exhaustion of its material and spiritual values.

War not only consumes wealth and exhausts natural resources, it also weakens the moral senses. Naturally the institutions that sustain nations cannot resist the systematic onslaught against those very institutions.

To America is left the trascendental destiny of saving for humanity the moral values whose ruin would mark the beginning of the process of decadence of Western culture.

Uniform Conscience Needed

To fulfill such an elevated mission, it is necessary to create from one end of the continent to the other a uniform conscience which can operate harmoniously and which can respond at a given moment with rapidity and efficiency. Such an attitude would be impossible if we did not have in our favor the democratic temperament of the American peoples, a temperament which has shown its caliber more and more throughout our history.

I know that my affirmation will appear somewhat strange to the superficial student of history who takes into account the dictatorial governments that many American countries have had at various times. But any one who searches deeply into the question must see in this very fact the proof of my assertion.

The American dictatorships have never been imperialist or totalitarian. They have been the expression of an incipient patriarchal state or the logical product of the incapacity of the governing classes to handle the machinery of democracy. In not a few cases they have been founded on the desire to accelerate artificially the slow process of the education of the people for the same democracy that they in reality have harmed.

Thus it is that the American dictatorships always have been a local phenomenon, without international ramifications. They have followed no special ideology, and have attempted to spread none. Thus the peoples who have supported dictatorships have been able to emerge from them untainted spiritually. And thus it is that no American people has ever had to attempt to follow any caudillo in the adventures of expansion and conquest.

The very little that our countries have done or have tried to do, in this sense not only has met with disapproval from outside, but has not merited so much as the historical approval of those within their country.

Inspired by Civic Spirit

It is for all these reasons that the world can contemplate, without fears or reserves, this greet meeting which is inspired by the highest civic spirit and fed by the sentiment of an America free of hate, free of bastard ambitions.

Gentlemen, Humanity knows that you come here neither to destroy nor to enslave nor to dismember nations, nor to prepare the predominion of one people upon the tragic ruins of a neighbor, nor to subscribe to public pacts to cover the maliciousness of secret treaties, nor to proscribe races, nor to persecute religions.

The American republics are reunited here precisely to confront all these things that result incompatibly with the liberal feeling of their peoples, and to reaffirm the democratic spirit of their institutions.

If unfortunately we cannot put out the flame which rages elsewhere in the world, we at least aspire to isolate ourselves from it, not from a selfish aspiration but because proceeding in this manner we may succeed in saving a reserve for the future of humanity.

It is thus that we interpret our American neutrality, the maintenance of which is one of the chief ends of this meeting, and it is thus that the world should interpret it.

Would Safeguard Neutrality

It is our duty to adopt all manner of precautions to assure this neutrality and to make it respected by others. It is necessary to make widely known the deep human significance of our attitude and we should therefore be disposed to cooperate sincerely that we may reach the utmost with the objectives before us.

Whoever departs from this line of conduct will throw upon himself the most tremendous of responsibilities.

America, conscious of its historic mission, aspires only to fulfill it satisfactorily. It does not seek new conquests, nor does it seek to wrest anything from any one, nor does it feel inclined to deny any worthy right.

Such is our desire: to conserve America's own culture, to maintain its own institutions uncontaminated, to develop its commerce freely and to enjoy its own resources.

We have a happy household, and we have never objected that others come to us to share it with us; we are capable of assimilating those who wish to share our institutions and follow our ideals of peace and concord.

For this same reason, we desire to conserve our household in such condition that we ourselves and our guests can live in it as reasonable and free human beings should live.

Joint Action Against War

Joint action of the American democracies in this sense signalizes already what is without doubt one of the great events of human history. Immunized against war, we shall work in a more effective manner for the salvation of those other persons who believe in war or who have not acquired full conscience of their ability to avoid it.

Those peoples cannot resign themselves to look toward desolation and ruin. Our own greatness and our instinct for conservation will awaken them in the end to the reality of their frightful march toward suicide.

In this way this meeting of Panama constitutes an unprecedented step toward affirmation of the democratic thesis which in the internal regimen of the States has no substitute because it guarantees equality of opportunity and personal and spiritual liberty and respect for law, and which in international affairs signifies the most secure guarantee of peace and equilibrium.

The peoples who are accustomed to claim for themselves such privileges of democracy and are capable of feeling such convictions sincerely, constitute the human element least of all marked to be led into dangerous adventures of violence, aggression and conquest.

The reunion of Panama, far from signifying a selfish isolation or expressing a gesture of indifference to the grave tragedy that darkens the sky of the Old World, constitutes a magnificent labor of moral hygiene, the healthy effects of which will pass beyond our continental limits for the benefit of the world.

Gentlemen, with all my soul, I pray that the God of Nations inspire your debates to the end that the decisions you adopt will maintain in all its greatness the motto, "America for Humanity."

I declare installed the Consultative Reunion of the Ministers of Foreign Relations of the American Republics.

ARGENTINA'S ROLE AS BARGAINER HIT

Blockade Seen Giving U. S. Room For Stand Against Trade Restrictions

Britain Insists On Price Reduction Before Buying 175,000 Tons Of Beef

By HAROLD K. MILKS
[By the Associated Press]

Buenos Aires, Sept. 23—The wartime blockade by European belligerents has changed the role of the Argentine in negotiations for a new trade agreement with the United States.

Preliminary sessions of the trade conference have been carried on behind closed doors, but informed circles said today that Argentina finds her position changed from that of a negotiator able to name her own terms. The United States is taking a firmer stand against her export-import restrictions of the past, these sources declared.

Trade Drops Sharply

Trade with Britain and Germany has dropped sharply since the outbreak of hostilities, causing the Government to take steps to wood American markets. Heretofore Britain was number one trader, the United States second and Germany third.

The Argentine sold $35,000,000 worth of produce, chiefly meat and wheat, to Germany in the first eight months of 1939. During the last week no German ship has entered an Argentine port.

An announcement by the British Board of Trade that Britain would not buy 175,000 tons of Argentine beef unless the price was reduced was said by observers to be a severe blow to the hopes of Argentine leaders that heavy sales of meat and wheat to the warring nations would help the nation's financial and commercial situation.

Exchange Rate Altered

Informed persons said they believed the United States would be in a position to insist upon a long-term pact.

One American authority commented:

"Why should we, after a year of suffering through the Argentine's cutting of our imports in half with restrictions, make an agreement to supply them with imports during the war period, when they are most needed?"

Finance Minister Pedro M. Groppo announced a special rate of exchange of 15 pesos to the pound sterling (3.73 pesos to the United States dollar) compared with the regular rate of 17 pesos to the pound (4.22 to the United States dollar). Groppo said the change would tend to relieve the threat of rising prices due to the depreciation of the pound.

ARGENTINE PRICE ANNOYS ALLIES

Loading of Beef Stopped by Britain in Long Row

Buenos Aires, Sept. 23 (AP)—Month-long negotiations for one of the largest meat purchases in history of Argentina's packing industry—200,000 tons of chilled beef for Great Britain and France—apparently were stalemated today over a price disagreement.

Authoritative sources said a telegram had been received announcing that no more British ships would be sent here to load beef. In some quarters, however, the message was interpreted as a gesture in the price issue.

The Standard, an English-language newspaper, said the British Government considered shippers' price demands unjustified. It said the price of Argentine meat had increased about fifty per cent. over pre-war levels.

Organize to Defend Embargo

Opponents of Roosevelt Program Ready to Start Drive Against Repeal.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—Opponents of President Roosevelt's neutrality program arranged today to open a national campaign against repeal of the arms embargo next week.

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, American war ace, will start the drive, it was disclosed, in a radio address Tuesday night over a NBC hookup at 7:45 o'clock.

Meeting in the office of Senator Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, Senators Nye, Vandenberg, Republican, of Michigan, and Shipstead, Farmer-Laborite, of Minnesota, conferred with Capt. Rickenbacker and Jay C. Hormel of Austin, Minn., a meat packer, on plans for a national anti-repeal committee, to function independently of Congress.

Both Capt. Rickenbacker and Mr. Hormel were reported to have expressed the view in the conference that repeal of the embargo would bring a step up in American production that might end in bankruptcy when resources of the belligerent purchasers became exhausted.

Senator Nye said it was made plain in the meeting that any national committee formed would have to be organized on a voluntary basis without active participation of members of the anti-repeal bloc in the Senate.

Mr. Hormel, he said, appeared anxious to proceed with such an organization.

Limits Use of U. S. Ships.

A strict prohibition against American vessels carrying any articles, materials or passengers to any belligerents was incorporated today in the administration's bill to repeal the embargo against arms shipments to warring nations.

Some senators thought the new provision was designed to win the support of legislators who, like Alfred M. Landon, report strong sentiment in the country for a general cash-and-carry system of sales to belligerents.

It was said reliably that the bill would also tighten up on presidential discretion, using the word "shall" instead of "may" frequently in outlining the Chief Executive's duties under the legislation.

Adds Another Point.

Senator Pittman, Democrat, of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, added the ban against American ships carrying anything to warring nations as a seventh point to his bill translating the administration's six-point neutrality revision into legislative terms. He called all Democratic members of the committee, except Senator Clark of Missouri, an anti-repeal leader, to a meeting today to explain it.

This conference evoked critical comment from members of the anti-repeal bloc. Senator Clark, who said he had been invited by mistake but did not attend after he learned from Senator Pittman that he was not expected, remarked:

"I understood this was a meeting to put into effect the President's 'adjournment of politics' by having a party caucus the first thing."

Senator Nye declared that "you have to be a Democrat, and the right kind of a Democrat at that, to get into these nonpartisan meetings."

"I thought politics was adjourned," said Senator LaFollette, Progressive, of Wisconsin.

The full committee will not meet until Monday. Senator Pittman expressed belief the group would send the measure to the Senate floor, with a favorable report, in three or four days. Some opponents of repeal have said they would vote to place a bill before the Senate, but with reservations to oppose it on the floor.

Senator Pittman described his revised measure, about which he talked with the President and eight or ten Democrats on his committee yesterday, as more of a "come-and-take-it-away-in-your-own-ships" proposal than a cash-and-carry bill.

This, he said, was because the bill made no mention of "cash" but provided foreign purchasers of arms and other goods must show title transferred to them before departure. He intimated title could be transferred on short-term credits.

No Filibuster Expected.

"Nobody wants any hearings and I don't believe there is going to be any filibuster in the Senate," Senator Pittman told reporters.

"I think the opponents want to talk to a finish. Most of them are sincere and they think they may get the country behind them.

"If on the other hand they talk two or three weeks and see they have gained no votes they might be willing to give up further debate."

Senate leaders agreed upon trying to limit the special session agenda to revision of the neutrality law, said longer-than-usual sessions probably would be conducted in an effort to hasten the final decision. It was said authoritatively that the Senate might meet from 11 A. M. until 6 or 7 P. M. Usually the sessions run from noon until 5 P. M.

Opponents of repeal proposed today to confine their debate on the neutrality program to "reasonable" lengths provided Administration forces would agree not to adopt "pressure" tactics. Under these conditions a final vote could be obtained within a month, some opponents of repeal asserted.

Among members of the Foreign Relations Committee who said they would vote with reservations to report out a bill were Senators Vandenberg, Republican, of Michigan, and Gillette, Democrat, of Iowa. Both voted last session to postpone consideration of neutrality revision.

Senator Gillette, who talked with the President yesterday, said he was opposed to the principle of "cash and carry."

One obstacle to the administration's efforts to confine the special session to revision of the neutrality act was removed by an announcement from Senator Lee, Democrat of Oklahoma, that he would have his bill for a war-time compulsory draft of capital returned to the Military Committee from the Senate calendar.

Senator Lee agreed to do this at yesterday's meeting of the Senate Democratic steering and policy committees, which supported Mr. Roosevelt's appeal to limit the session.

Hoover to Stay Independent.

Through his secretary, Lawrence Richey, former President Hoover today denied that he would join a committee being formed by the isolationist bloc in Congress to make a nationwide speaking campaign against President Roosevelt's proposal to repeal the neutrality act.

"Mr. Hoover is not joining any committee upon the neutrality question," Mr. Richey said at the Waldorf-Astoria, where he and the former President are stopping. "He prefers to maintain his entire independence."

Urges Repeal of Embargo.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—Roland S. Morris, professor of international law at the Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania, and a former Ambassador to Japan, today urged repeal of the arms embargo in the United States neutrality law.

"In the present state of affairs it is almost impossible for the United States to be impartial, so closely does modern commerce tie us to the life of the world," he said.

"If we keep our present embargo we help Germany. If we repeal the embargo we help Britain and France."

44 Senators Now for Embargo End, With 20 Against It, 32 Unclassed

Poll Shows Administration Forces Are Only 5 Short of Majority, but Some Supporters Demand Rigid Cash-Carry Plan

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 (AP)—Forty-four Senators, or only five less than a majority, have announced that they favored repeal of the embargo on exports of arms to Europe's warring nations.

Twenty members have expressed themselves as opposed to repeal of the embargo, while thirty-two, holding the balance of power, have declined to commit themselves at this time or have not been reached for comment.

Many Senators on both sides of the issue said that repeal would benefit France and England, because their seapower would prevent Germany from obtaining arms shipments.

Although, on its face, the division gave the administration a big headstart in the race for votes at the session of Congress just started, analysis of members' statements showed some factors likely to provide obstacles for the President's supporters.

For one thing, several of those who said that they would vote for repeal of the embargo added they would do so only on condition that a strict "cash and carry" statute were enacted in its place. This would require shipments to be paid for in cash and transported in non-American ships. A prohibition against American ships carrying goods of any kind to the belligerents, now being written into the Administration's repeal bill, may satisfy some of these.

Some Oppose 'Cash-Carry' Plan

Others of the repeal group, however, said that they would oppose a "cash and carry" plan and would insist on a return to international law. Under the 1909 Treaty of London, which is still considered a fundamental thesis of international law, neutrals have the right to ship war materials to any belligerent, but any belligerent has the right to seize such materials en route to his enemy.

Unless the Administration is able to compromise the differences among foes of the arms embargo, it may not be able to muster its apparent strength on any specific proposal before the Senate.

Also, many of those on both sides emphasized that their present beliefs might be changed by later developments in the European situation.

The division bore no close relation to the lines which have been formed in the Senate over past issues. Republicans joined hands with Democrats on both sides of the question. Foes of Administration policies teamed with New Deal supporters. Administration stalwarts took their place beside the President's foes.

Among the forty-four favoring repeal of the embargo were thirty-eight Democrats, five Republicans and one independent. Included in the nineteen opposed to such a course were eight Republicans, eight Democrats, one Progressive and two Farmer-Labor members.

The poll gave the following results:

WHAT THE SENATORS SAY

Adams—Repeal of the arms embargo need not endanger the neutrality of the United States. I favor the cash and carry plan.

Andrews—The neutrality legislation now on the statute books is in reality a big help to Hitler, for it prevents this nation from helping its real friends.

Austin—I prefer complete repeal of the present Neutrality Act and a return to international law.

Barkley—I expect that Senate debate will clear away the confusion in some minds regarding the cash-and-carry proposals and will greatly increase support for it.

Borah—The people oppose repeal of the arms embargo as the first step toward war.

Bridges—I am opposed to changing the rules after the game has started.

Brown—The fact that we cannot ship products manufactured by American industry to warring countries in ships other than our own has lent much encouragement to the débâcle which occurred in Europe. The President's arguments are unanswerable.

Bulow Fears "Entering Wedge"

Bulow—Repeal of the arms embargo act will be the entering wedge to get us into the European scrap.

Burke—I will support President Roosevelt's proposals for amending the Neutrality Act as the best method of keeping this country out of war.

Byrd—In the present circumstances the strictest sort of cash-and-carry policy, vigorously enforced, is, I think, our best safeguard.

Byrnes—I'm with the President on this thing and I'm enthusiastic about it. The President knows what he is talking about when he says that to repeal the embargo is the best way to keep us out of war.

Capper—I shall oppose repeal of the embargo provision and every amendment that would weaken the Neutrality Act.

Caraway—It is silly to say that lifting the embargo would be an unneutral act. On the contrary, existence of the embargo is a direct aid to Germany.

Clark of Missouri—Those who favor keeping out of the war should vote for the retention of our present safeguards and the addition of any others that may be necessary.

Clark of Idaho Gives View

Clark of Idaho—I have no intention of changing my stand against repeal of the embargo.

Connally—I favor repeal of the embargo.

Downey—I am against repeal of the embargo.

Ellender—I am for repealing the embargo and making it so any nation can purchase any goods or munitions, provided title passes before it leaves an American port.

Frazier—Repeal of the embargo would be a step right into the war.

Gibson—I'm going to support repeal of the arms embargo in favor of cash and carry on all products.

Glass—I would vote either for the repeal of the munitions embargo or for Secretary Hull's proposition known as "cash and carry."

Green—I favored a change in the act last session. I still favor a change. The act now is very unsatisfactory and unneutral.

Guffey—I'm for it (the President's program).

Hale—I am in favor of repealing the embargo and putting on "cash and carry."

Harrison—I am with the President 100 per cent in his foreign policy dealing with neutrality.

Hatch—I am for a cash and carry provision, but I will oppose any outright repeal of the arms embargo that looks to going back to international law.

Herring—I favor repeal of the Neutrality Act and a return to international law.

Hill—I'm for the Roosevelt-Hull plan.

Holt—A vote for revision is a vote for war.

Hughes—If the nations of Europe want to come here and buy arms and ammunition, pay for it and take it away in their own boats they should be allowed to do so.

Johnson of California—It is but a step from economic favoritism to enlistment of our manpower.

King—I support the President's policy to repeal the embargo act.

La Follette—I am unalterably opposed to repeal of the arms embargo because its repeal would be a step in the direction of involving the United States in a European war.

Lee—Last session I supported a policy which would permit the President to levy an embargo at his discretion. I haven't changed my mind.

Logan—I favor repealing the Neutrality Act and having nothing on the statute books. If we can't do that, I favor Mr. Hull's program.

Lucas—I am convinced that the best means of staying out of war would be to have a mandatory cash and carry provision.

Lundeen—Repeal of the embargo is the road to war.

McCarran—I am opposed to changing the embargo provisions now because we enacted them for purposes of neutrality and should try them out.

McKellar—I am unequivocally, flat-footedly and whole-heartedly in favor of the cash-and-carry system for selling war supplies.

McNary—My sole concern is keeping the country out of war, and I think this can best be accomplished by maintaining the present Neutrality Act.

Says Embargo Hits Peace Group

Miller—To fail to repeal the arms embargo would be a direct contribution to war-loving nations and a direct slap at peace-loving nations.

Minton—Public sentiment in Indiana is strongly for repeal of the arms embargo.

Neely—I am going to vote to wipe out the embargo on sale of munitions.

Norris—I favor repeal of the arms embargo and enactment of a cash-and-carry plan.

Nye—The repeal of the arms embargo is the straightest path to the Western Front.

Overton—I am opposed to lifting the embargo on arms, but I would be willing to revive the cash and carry on all other commodities.

Pittman—To be logical and consistent, Congress must either add to the embargo list all such instruments of war such as metals, oils, gasoline and cotton, or must place everything on the cash-and-carry basis. I favor repeal of the arms embargo and adoption of the latter policy.

Radcliffe—It is my opinion that some sort of cash-and-carry requirement will be the proper step.

Reed for Cash-on-Carry Plan

Reed—I am for a straightforward, consistent, legitimate cash-and-carry program, but I am not for unlimited Presidential discretion.

Schwartz—I will support the President's position on neutrality.

Schwellenbach—I intend to support the Administration proposals.

Sheppard—I am for the cash-and-carry neutrality proposal. I am for repeal of the arms embargo.

Shipstead—I am in favor of the present neutrality law because it was written in the light of the experience we had in last war.

Smathers—The best insurance for American neutrality would be the immediate repeal of the embargo on arms.

Taft—I believe that the embargo on the shipment of arms, ammunition and implements of war should be repealed on condition that export be permitted only on a cash-and-carry basis.

Thomas of Oklahoma—If any one wants any of our goods we should sell to them.

Thomas of Utah—I should like to see the arms embargo provision in the present Neutrality Act repealed.

Truman—I intend to vote to lift the arms embargo.

Vandenberg—I am opposed to repeal of the embargo, because I believe the only way to have a neutral attitude is to define it in advance of its application.

Van Nuys—I will support the cash-and-carry plan properly safeguarded.

Walsh—It is real intervention to threaten [illegible] or during a war to sell [illegible] ling instruments to one of [illegible] ferents.

THIRD TERM

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 23—The New York World-Telegram in a copyright interview today quoted Alfred M. Landon as saying the greatest single contribution President Roosevelt could make in the present emergency would be to tell the country he did not want and would not accept a third term.

The newspaper said Landon, Republican Presidential nominee in 1936, was in favor of adjourning all politics in view of the problems created by the European war, but believed this would prove impossible until the third-term issue had been settled.

The former Kansas Governor added that it was too much to ask of either the Democratic or Republican party that it forget politics as long as the third-term issue remained in the foreground with the national party conventions only a few months away.

Landon, who accepted the President's invitation to attend the Washington neutrality conference this week, was represented as not averse to removal of the arms embargo, as recommended by President Roosevelt's special message to Congress, if it were the best way to keep the United States out of war.

PRESIDENT DODGES CHALLENGE ON '40

Refuses Landon Plea He Unite U. S. By Renouncing Politics Himself

Executive Worries Left Behind As He Rests On Hyde Park Estate

By Douglas Cornell

[By the Associated Press]

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 23—President Roosevelt today declined an opportunity to answer a proposal from the man whom he defeated for the Presidency in 1936, that he tell the nation he does not want another four years in the White House.

A person close to the President asserted Mr. Roosevelt had been urging the country since September 3 to lay aside politics during this critical period in the world's history.

That statement apparently was to be the only official recognition taken of a declaration by former Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas that the greatest single contribution the President could make in the present troubled situation would be to tell the country categorically he did not want a third term and would decline the nomination if it were offered him.

Challenge By Landon

Landon, too, advocated adjournment of partisan politics, adding, however, that it was up to Mr. Roosevelt to clinch the matter by removing himself from the 1940 political scene.

The Chief Executive had no comment. Reporters gathered around him as he sat behind the wheel of his specially equipped blue touring car in a hay field on the Roosevelt family estate.

With his 85-year-old mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, at his side, and his granddaughters, Sara and Kate, in the rear seat, the President was inspecting the site for a library to house his personal and public papers.

When shown the gist of Landon's statement, Mr. Roosevelt said he could not comment since he had not seen the text.

Has To Protect Himself

He was sorry, he said, but he had to protect himself.

Almost inaudibly his mother remarked: "I wish you would, son."

Apparently she referred to the President's words about protecting himself, although she had asserted last Thursday—her birthday—that she believed her son had no desire for a third term. His whole attention, she said then, was focused on world affairs and problems that have grown out of the war abroad.

These problems were shunted into the background for the week end, however. The President arrived by special train from Washington this morning and not until afternoon did he talk by telephone with officials in the Capitol. But he was available for almost instant consultation over a private wire in the event of major developments.

May Return Tomorrow

The tenor of news from Washington, the Chief Executive said, will determine when he returns. He had indicated in Washington yesterday that he would be back Monday.

White House officials said no official engagements had been made for Mr. Roosevelt during his Hyde Park stay.

Two days late, a birthday dinner for his mother was arranged for tonight, with members of the family and neighbors attending.

U. S. AGAIN SHIPS COAL

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 23 — American cargo coal was on the high seas today en route to the Scandinavian countries for the first time in twelve years, and more of it was en route or under order to Latin-American countries which have depended chiefly for the fuel on nations now at war.

Arthur Hale, of the Coal Export Association, confirming the increased shipments, said he would not predict any rosy export future for the domestic mining industry, however. Continued shipments to Scandinavia, he said, "will depend on whether Germans retain control of the Baltic; the Latin-American trade will depend in part on what England is able to do."

One May Sail From Baltimore

Two transatlantic ships left Hampton Roads a few days ago, one with 9,000 tons bound for Gothenburg, Sweden, another with 8,000 tons consigned to Oslo, Norway. Hale said two more ships with total coal cargoes of 10,800 tons for Norway had been chartered for October loading, either at Hampton Roads or Baltimore.

Hale said a shipload of coal left an American port Thursday for Buenos Aires and two left on Wednesday for Rio de Janeiro and Rosario, Argentina.

Nazis May Lose Brazil Sales

The United States probably would take over most of the Brazilian coal markets for the duration of the war, Hale said. Germany sold $5,000,000 worth of coal there last year. Argentina, however, is principally a British market. In 1937 it imported nearly $11,000,000 worth of British coal.

Scandinavian countries had not imported United States coal since the British coal strike in 1926, Hale said. He added that if Germany were able to operate the mines it took over in Poland, and kept control of the Baltic, it could supply all the Scandinavian coal needs except perhaps those of Norway. He said Poland had been exporting 10,000,000 tons of coal annually.

"Contrary to what many people thought," said Hale, "our coal exports during the World War were not enormous. They increased, but not as much as some thought. We did, however, have huge increases in 1920, during the rehabilitation period.

5,000 NEW JOBS

[By the Associated Press]

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 23—Heavy industry, the "sick man" of the depression years and little better than a convalescent during the 1934-38 period, has returned to robust health in Alabama on the impetus of war-inspired buying, which has fired every blast furnace in this region.

Iron and steel mills are providing jobs for approximately 40,000 persons, close to the "boom" peak of 1928. Iron output is at one hundred per cent.

Steel production will hit eighty-six per cent. of capacity next week, highest in two years. Output was at seventy per cent. of capacity before the "war-scare" orders began.

Layoffs Over For 5,000

One well-informed source estimated 5,000 men had been called back to their jobs in heavy industries since September 1. Thousands more who were working part time have been restored to full-time duty.

Steel men here emphatically assert that little of the present business is designed for possible war use.

Elimination of the price differential against Southern steel and return of the shipbuilding industry to the Gulf Coast were cited as two factors in the stepped-up Southern steel business.

Chamber Of Commerce Organizes Body To Aid In Meeting War Tasks

Washington, Sept. 23 (AP)—The United States Chamber of Commerce today announced the virtual completion of an organization of about 300 business leaders to help prepare for war emergency problems. It will be divided into about twenty committees.

Members of the emergency council, the chamber said, are leaders in their particular fields and represent all parts of the country.

"First consideration will be the maintenance of peace and the preservation of representative government," an announcement stated. "This may be the foundation upon which a new order will be built in the wake of war.

"The most effective assurance that can be given to this end is that the American business system will be enabled to meet adequately national requirements in time of peace as well as in time of war.

"War or no war, business must go on. Productive enterprise must continue."

Asks Czecho-Slovakian Shoemakers Be Barred

Massachusetts Representative Urges Immigration Order Be Rescinded

Washington, Sept. 23 (AP)—Representative Rogers (Rep., Mass.), in a letter today urged James L. Houghteling, Immigration Commissioner, to rescind an order admitting one hundred Czecho-Slovakians to the United States temporarily to teach shoemaking at a new factory near Baltimore.

Seventy-one already have arrived. The manufacturer originally requested 150.

"I feel most strongly that none should have been allowed to enter in the first place," Mrs. Rogers said. "Our American shoe workers do not need instruction in shoemaking. They are recognized as the finest in the world."

To Study Obligation And Right Of Neutrals

American Bar Association Announces Creation Of Committee

Washington, Sept. 23 (AP)—The American Bar Association announced today the creation of a committee to study the rights and obligations of neutral countries under international law.

Precedents established by this and other governments will be collected and classified, said an announcement by William R. Vallence, chairman of the section on international and comparative law.

The committee will be headed by William S. Culbertson, former Minister to Rumania and Ambassador to Chile, Vallance said.

AIR CORPS TO GET NEW PLANES EARLY

Plants Moving So Fast That Completion of 3,000 Craft by 1940 Is Indicated

DOUBLE SHIFTS ARE PUT ON

No Extra Cost to Army or the Manufacturers—Recruiting of Mechanics Pushed

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 (AP)—Aircraft manufacture in the United States has been speeded so much, especially since the start of the European war, that the $300,000,000 expansion of the Army Air Corps may be attained six months or more ahead of schedule.

The estimate of the time saving came today from authoritative sources after an unofficial survey disclosed that about half the factories engaged in turning out more than 3,000 war planes had recently put on double shifts of workers.

Other manufacturers have indicated an intention to follow suit, with the result that virtually all plants working on military plane contracts are expected to be operating at twice normal speed by the end of the year. The faster production pace was set voluntarily by some of the larger manufacturers, with at least passive encouragement from the War Department.

The army has accelerated the recruiting of 25,139 additional mechanics and other specialists sought by next June 30. Besides, the training of pilots has kept pace with schedule, so that no delay has been indicated in providing the men for the force of at least 5,500 planes which Congress authorized.

The original goal for completing the more than 3,000 new planes was June 30, 1941, but fast-moving production lines promise to advance this to late next year, it was said.

Completing deliveries ahead of schedules involves no extra expense to the War Department, which is limited by appropriations. Manufacturers have reported that their unit production costs would not be increased, as they figure that double shifts mean double output.

Another result of speeding production has been to keep skilled workers who otherwise might be attracted by offers from Canadian factories, which are working under war-time pressure. Despite the increased demand for skilled workers, no acute shortage has been reported to officials, here.

Authorities said that one plant handling a large army order was slightly more than five months ahead of schedule, and several others were nearly as far in advance.

Traces Biblical Phrase In Roosevelt's Address

By The Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 23—The mystery of the origin of the closing phrase in President Roosevelt's neutrality address to Congress Thursday was cleared up by Rabbi Julius Gordon in a remark at Yom Kippur services last night.

The President pleaded with Congress to show the world that Americans were "of one mind, one spirit, one clear resolution, walking before God in the light of the living."

Rabbi Gordon called attention to the phrase, "to walk before God in the light of the living," in the Book of Psalms, Chapter 56, Verse 14.

He suggested that the President changed "to walk" to "walking."

Washington newspaper men searched biblical and classical reference books for the source, without success. Rabbi Gordon quoted from the Hebrew version of the Old Testament, which differs from the Christian version.

A Prince Of Denmark Bids Farewell To Youth

19-Year-Old Nephew Of Danish King Has "Final Fling" On Visit To America

Aberdeen, Wash., Sept. 23 (AP)—George, Prince of Denmark, said his farewell to youth in a recent tour of the United States.

The 19-year-old nephew of Denmark's King broke away from tradition during his stay on the Olympic peninsula. He confided regarding his future; he went on fishing trips and joked with Indian guides; he even took an American girl to a show.

"This is what you may call my final fling," he told fishing companions. "Soon I join the army."

During discussion concerning Hitler, he said:

"He thinks he will conquer. He just thinks so! We of Denmark and many other nations will have something to say about that! But this is no day to talk of war or Hitler. Let's enjoy your America—this stream, these woods this sunshine. War is very far away today."

Army Forming 5 Divisions as Mobile Defense

Corps of 40,000 Men To Be Ready to Go Immediately to Any Threatened Point

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 (AP).—The War Department is pushing organization of five active divisions into a mobile, hard-hitting corps which would be ready for instant dispatch to defend any threatened mainland point, or such outposts as Panama and Hawaii. Not since the World War has the Army had an organized corps.

President Roosevelt's national emergency order adding 17,000 men to the regular army provided means to carry out a general staff plan for a combat corps of about 40,000. Its organization from five "small, seasoned" divisions was recommended by Gen. Malin Craig in retiring recently as Chief of Staff.

With Mr. Roosevelt's sanction, first moves to create the new force were taken by Gen. George C. Marshall, present Chief of Staff, along with other defense measures after the European war started.

Under Army plans, three partially organized divisions will be "streamlined" in a few weeks and made a part of the corps. They are the 1st, with headquarters at Fort Hamilton, N. Y.; the 2d, at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., and the 3d, at Fort Lewis, Wash.

Two new divisions will be created—the 5th, with headquarters at Fort Sheridan, Ill., and the 6th, at Fort Lewis.

Under plans already approved by the general staff, divisions are to be reduced in size to 368 officers, 2 warrant officers and 7,600 men for peace time. In war they would be quickly expanded to 546 officers, 3 warrant officers and 10,837 men.

World War infantry divisions numbered 27,000. Tests for the smaller "streamlined" unit already have been completed at Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

Thus the new corps will have about 40,000 officers and men at peace strength and about 56,000 in war time. The figures now used are somewhat elastic, subject to change as the organization proceeds. The World War corps was composed of six divisions with a personnel of 187,000.

Aside from the approximate 23,000 troops in Hawaii, and nearly 19,000 in Panama, the Army has few large units organized for quick action.

Gen. Craig reported that there was not a single fully organized division. There are four partial divisions and five brigades in various stages of completion. He recommended that the four partial divisions be expanded, estimating about 25,000 officers and men would be needed. Reducing the size of the divisions made 17,000 adequate for the purpose.

The new streamlined division is to be made up of three infantry regiments, two field artillery regiments, one armed with 75-millimeter guns and the other with 155s and 105s, an engineer battalion, a medical battalion and a quartermaster battalion.

DEPLORES LACK OF DEFENSES HERE

Haskell Says New York Has Only 11 Modern Guns.

ALBANY, Sept. 23 (A. P.).—After hearing militarists denounce the "defenselessness" of New York city, the New York National Guard Association resolved today to ask the Federal Government to provide "at least 200" anti-aircraft guns to guard the metropolis from possible surprise attacks.

The resolution, one of four dealing with home defense adopted at the closing session of a two-day convention, urged "immediate remedial measures."

Rear-Admiral Frank R. Lackey, commanding officer of the New York Naval Militia, and Major-Gen. William H. Haskell, commander of the State's National Guard, both pointed to the "virtual defenselessness" of New York city in speeches before the association yesterday.

Gen. Haskell said there are eleven modern guns in the entire city, and added:

"I don't want to get political, but it's time to stop fooling around."

Other resolutions called for resumption of an armory construction program, criticized New York city for "inadequate armory facilities" and provided for naval militia participation in a small arms contest at Perry.

Col. Edward E. Gauche of New York city, commander of the 212th Field Artillery (anti-aircraft), was named president of the association.

Other officers included Brig.-Gen. Bernard W. Kearney, Gloversville, fifty-third brigade, first vice-president; Col. Foster G. Hetzel, 102d Quartermaster Regiment, Brooklyn, second vice-president; Lieut.-Col. William J. Morgine, Albany, secretary; Major Patrick T. McMenimman, 165th Infantry, New York, treasurer.

Task of Aiding Reich Refugees Altered by War

U.S. Can Count on Little Help Now From Allies; Fate of Polish Jews a Problem

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 (AP).—War has wrought a fundamental change in the vast work initiated by President Roosevelt and Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, for assistance to German political refugees.

Britain and France, up to now among the most helpful in furthering the Roosevelt-Hull program, can be counted upon to give very little additional aid. Their energies are devoted to the war.

Their principal efforts will be directed to moving out of their countries the tens of thousands of German Jews who have settled there temporarily while awaiting permanent placing. These Jews are in guarded camps and may not mingle with the general population. For many, their situation is an improvement on what it was in Germany, but it is none of the best. At this time of national emergency they are not wanted. They are a burden.

War has brought a change in Germany's attitude toward the refugees, too. Hitherto, she was content to let the young people emigrate, try to find jobs abroad and then send for their older relatives. Now she wants the young people, both men and women, for war work, but wishes to send out the old people and children.

Moreover, even the very small amount of foreign currency she was willing to let the Jews take with them in their exodus will now be cut off, since Germany needs all her foreign credits for the purchase of raw materials. Besides, German steamship lines are no longer [illegible]

[illegible]g, and tickets which were bought [illegible] marks will now have to be purchased in other currency.

Some officials believe that the persecution of the Jews in Germany may, however, be somewhat alleviated by the war. The Nazis may relax their restrictions against a portion of their population on whom they will depend for help in pursuing the conflict. There are 400,000 Jews left in Germany.

But another refugee problem, perhaps greater than that in Germany is looming. Germany will absorb a portion of Poland containing a large percentage of the 2,500,000 Polish Jews. What will be their fate? Will they, too, be thrown upon the world? The organization set up through the Roosevelt-Hull initiative shudders to think of the task that may still confront it.

Reports are now in from all the investigations of possible places for mass Jewish emigration — British Guiana, Philippine Islands, Dominican Republic and Rhodesia—and there is very small comfort in them. A good many thousands can be sent to these places, particularly to the Philippines, but the cost of establishing colonies would be enormous. It may be four to five times the cost of placing Jews in countries already settled. And there is no guaranty that the colonies will be successful, even that the Jewish settlers will not sicken and die in unaccustomed climates.

Some officials believe that the conclusion is inevitable that the only real solution for the Jews is infiltration into countries where the means of life and livelihood exist and function. But the countries willing to take them are now diminishing in number. The British dominions, chiefly Australia, which were taking thousands of refugees, may be forced to close their doors for the time being. Even the United States, principal haven of the German Jews, has had to interrupt the work of receiving them in order to evacuate Americans from Europe and get them safely back home.

Next month President Roosevelt will preside over a meeting of the executive officers of the inter-government committee on refugees.

Capitol Recalls War, Steps Up Safeguards

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 (AP).—Precautions were taken today to safeguard the Capitol and to prevent a recurrence of the bombing which damaged part of the structure prior to United States entry into the first World War. Orders were issued closing the Capitol to the public on Sundays and forbidding all but members of Congress from entering either the House or Senate Office Buildings after midnight. A small bomb, placed in the Senate reception room in July, 1915, exploded late at night with considerable damage to the room. Kenneth Romney, House sergeant-at-arms, said creation of a special squad of trained detectives to augment the regular Capitol police force was under consideration.

U. S. Invokes Espionage Act

Tightens Federal Check on Status Of Foreign Agents

Washington, Sept. 23 (AP)—The State Department invoked the 1917 wartime Espionage Act today to tighten the Federal watch over activity in this country in behalf of other nations.

Stringent new regulations were published which officials expect will close loopholes in recent legislation requiring "agents of foreign principals" to register.

One effect is to require listing by employes of foreign embassy, legation or consulate who engaged in political activity, though they were not required to register by the 1938 law.

The revised regulations were issued wit han official indication that they would be enforced "up to the hilt" by the Justice Department.

The Espionage Act provision requires "notification" to the State Department by any "agent of a foreign government." It carries a maximum penalty of $5,000 fine and five years in prison, compared w $1,000 fine and two years in registration legislation.

Thus far, 363 persons have registered with the State Department as agents of foreign principals. Officials declined to estimate how many persons would have to give it "notification" of their activities under the newly invoked provision.

One effect of the Espionage Act, it was noted, would be to require a purchasing agent or attorney for a foreign government to "notify" the State Department of the service he was performing though he would not be required to register under the 1938 act.

Y. M. C. A. Asked To Aid In War Relief Work

National Council Withholds Decision, However, Pending Outcome Of Neutrality Legislation

New York, Sept. 23 (AP)—The National Council of the Young Men's Christian Association said today it had been asked to render assistance in war-relief work in Europe but that it was withholding a decision pending the outcome of neutrality legislation.

The requests came from the World Alliance of Y. M. C. A.'s in Geneva and from the French Foyer Des Soldats.

Meanwhile, the American organization mapped plans for an educational program designed, it said, to help young people face issues raised by the war.

Legion Moves Against War on Convention Eve

Many Resolutions Deal With Neutrality and Defense for Session in Chicago

CHICAGO, Sept. 23 (AP).—The American Legion moved into position today for what may be its greatest offensive against war.

Graver of cast in its preliminaries than the preludes to previous national conventions, the twenty-first gathering of the veterans started dealing immediately with the crucial questions of neutrality and strengthening the nation's sinews of defense.

Many of the hundreds of departmental resolutions were concerned with those issues. Building upon the resolutions, the national organization was expected to shape a vigorous and unified expression, which probably will reach the convention floor Wednesday or Thursday.

The tense atmosphere of the world, in which the Legion meets this year, evoking a conspicuous sober-mindedness among the veterans, has by no means destroyed the traditional play spirit, however. Visiting Chicago for the first time since 1933, the Legion has brought an officially estimated 250,000 to the city.

Play Spirit Maintained

Demonstrating that a critical moment is no time to lose one's sense of humor, legionnaires have infused a gusty fraternalism into the manifold affairs of downtown Chicago. All the wonted panoply is there—national colors flying, the regulation blue uniforms blending with mufti, rolling of the drums, riotously bedecked automobiles of antiquated manufacture, the clang of 40 and 8 engine bells.

Certain observers discerned in the hum and hurly of the day something analogous to the taut and serious state of mind in 1917 and 1918. The difference, they accentuated, was in a more realistic public opinion today and a lessened susceptibility to war psychoses.

Questions other than neutrality and national defense likewise engaged the attention of the Legion.

Judge Richard Hartshorne, of Newark, N. J., chairman of the National Law and Order Committee, said the Legion had made important contributions to the fight against crime. He asked, in his annual accounting, that all citizens join the Legion in a drive next year for the prevention of juvenile delinquency, which he termed the root of all crime.

Glen R. Hillis, of Kokomo, Ind., national child welfare chairman, reported the Legion spent $3,641,731 in direct emergency relief for 442,489 in 1939. Most of the money, he said, was used for food, clothing and medical aid. His committee helped form 134 co-ordinated community councils in thirty states to curb juvenile delinquency.

Compensation Data Reported

A total of $3,338,857.50 in government benefits was recovered for veterans in 1939 through services of the Legion, the national rehabilitation director, Watson B. Miller, announced.

John Thomas Taylor, national legislative director, said only two of every twenty-one, or less than 10 per cent of all World War veterans now living, were receiving compensation of any kind from the Federal government. He reported governmental officials estimated that as of June 30, 1938, surviving World War veterans numbered 4,026,480, and of these, 385,656, or 9.58 per cent, were getting disability compensation, pensions or retirement pay. Since then, he said, veterans have been dying at an estimated rate of 100 a day. Approximately 700,000 of the 4,697,994 men mustered by the nation in all its armed forces have died.

Opening with an executive committee meeting and an open air religious service tomorrow, the convention proper will get under way Monday morning. The annual parade will be on Tuesday.

Gannett Bids Republicans to Bar War Entry

Urges Indiana Meeting to Back Roosevelt Policies Aimed at Attaining Goal

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 23 (AP).—Frank Gannett, publisher, of Rochester, said today the Republican party has three "great duties" to the nation:

"To keep out of war, to preserve our constitutional government and to restore prosperity."

On these three issues, he said in an address at a Republican barbecue at the Indiana state fairgrounds, "the Republican party must take a position that will command complete public confidence."

Mr. Gannett urged support of President Roosevelt "in any policy that will keep us out of war," but added:

"Yet this war in Europe must not blind us to the great failure of the Roosevelt administration. We must realize that, war or no war, this country cannot continue New Deal policies that have brought us great distress."

The nation, he said, must avoid war, because "in war times a nation must give its government great powers. Then personal liberties and rights disappear. If we should surrender our precious rights, it might be impossible, in a world of dictators, to recover them."

"Unfortunately," he continued, "Mr. Roosevelt's record troubles us about his atitude on international affairs. The widespread opposition to any change in our neutrality act springs, to a considerable extent, from distrust of the President's impulsive temperament."

Homer E. Capehart, forty-five-year-old Buffalo manufacturer, who maintains his legal residence in Indiana, declined today an invitation of the Indiana Republican Editorial Association that he become the Hoosier State's "favorite son" for the 1940 Republican Presidential nomination.

"I have said repeatedly, in private and in public, that I am not a candidate for any office," he said in a formal statement.

The association sent a committee to Mr. Capehart after he arrived last night to ask that he allow his name to be placed before next year's national convention. He said he would reply today.

He made his entry into party work on a grand scale when he financed a $37,000 "cornfield conference" on his Daviess County farm a year ago last month to open the Congressional campaign.

Last spring the state Republican organization chose Mr. Capehart to make a speech at Kokomo attacking the candidacy of Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, former Governor and Hoosier Democratic "favorite son," seeking nomination for the Presidency.

BALKANS

BY ROBERT B.PARKER, JR.

BUDAPEST, SEPT. 23-(AP)-THE TEAMING UP OF NAZI GERMANY AND COMMUNIST RUSSIA ON THE DIVISION OF POLAND HAS CAST A NEW SHADOW OVER THE ENTIRE SOUTHEASTERN POLITICAL PICTURE.

THEIR AGREEMENT ON POLAND, ANNOUNCED IN THE WAKE OF THEIR NON-AGGRESSION PACT, HAS EXTENDED THE SOVIET BRODER WITH RUMANIA AND BROUGHT RED TROOPS TO THE UNGARIAN FRONTIER.

ONE BALKAN SCHOOL OF THOUGHT CONTENDED TONIGHT THAT GERMANY'S INFLUENCE IN SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE AND HER VIGOROUS EFFORTS TO MAKE THIS PART OF THE WORLD A NAZI "LEBENSRAUM"--LIVING SPACE--HAD BEEN COMPROMISED.

THEIR OPINION WAS THAT RUSSIA COULD NOW BECOME AN OVERWHELMING POWER IN THE BALKANS.

THEY FELT HER LONGER RUMANIAN FRONTIER WOULD ENABLE HER TO DOMINATE KING CAROL'S NATION BOTH POLITICALLY AND ECONOMICALLY.

HUNGARY, WITH RED TROOPS JUST ACROSS HER BORDER, IS A CO-MEMBER WITH GERMANY, ITALY, JAPAN, MANCHOUKUO AND SPAIN OF THE ANTI-COMINTERN FAMILY. BUDAPEST AND MOSCOW TODAY RESUMED DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS SUSPENDED WHEN HUNGARY BECAME A PARTY TO THE ANTI-COMINTERN PACT.

RUSSIA HAS RECOGNIZED SLOVAKIA AS AN INDEPENDENT NATION WHICH LIKE YUGOSLAVIA IS PEOPLED BY SLAVS LIKE THE RUSSIANS. BULGARIA, ANOTHER SLAV NATION AND PERHAPS THE CLOSEST BALKAN FRIEND OF RUSSIA, HAS CONCLUDED A NEW CLOSED TRADE PACT WITH THE SOVIETS.

THE OPINION WAS EXPRESSED THAT HITLER'S DREAM OF A NAZI-LED UKRAINE STATE-- THEME NOTE OF HIS "MIEN KAMPF" PLAN FOR GERMANY'S FUTURE-- MIGHT BE GONE FOREVER.

NO LONGER ARE HUNGARY, RUMANIA, YUGOSLAVIA, GREECE, TURKEY, AND BULGARIA DEPENDENT ONLY ON NAZI GERMANY FOR THEIR TRADE. THEY HAVE ITALY BIDDING EAGERLY TO RECOVER COMMERCE WHICH SHE LOST TO GERMANY THROUGH ECONOMIC SANCTIONS DURING THE ETHIOPIAN WAR.

AND THEY HAVE POWERFUL RUSSIA RE-ENTERING THE BALKANS AFTER A 25-YEAR ABSENCE, READY TO CONCLUDE TRADE PACTS AND EAGER TO SPREAD HER INFLUENCE.

DIPLOMATIC OBSERVERS SPECULATED FURTHER ON THE POSSIBILITY THAT RUMANIA, WHOSE OIL AND WHEAT THE NAZIS COULD USE TO GOOD ADVANTAGE MAY BE BEYOND GERMANY'S REACH. FOR RUSSIA WAS UNDERSTOOD BY THEM TO BE PROPOSING AGAIN A PACT FOR BLACK SEA POWERS TO KEEP OUT THE INFLUENCE OF OTHER NATIONS.

ONCE AGAIN, THEY SAID, PAN-SLAVISM MAY GET UNDERWAY, WITH "FATHER RUSSIA" WIELDING HIS OLD INFLUENCE IN YUGOSLAVIA, BULGARIA, SLOVAKIA--NOT TO MENTION BOHEMIA, NOW INSIDE THE REICH.

IN ANY CASE, THIS TROUBLED AREA OF EUROPE--THOUGH ACCUSTOMED THROUGH GENERATIONS TO ASSASSINATIONS, WARS, REVOLUTIONS, CHANGING BOUNDARY LINES AND EVENTS WHICH CHANGE THE FATE OF LITTLE NATIONS OVERNIGHT -- APPEARS HEADY FROM THE SPEED OF SEPTEMBER'S EVENTS.

JAPAN AND RUSSIA HAVE A NUMBER OF PROBLEMS TO SETTLE FOLLOWING THEIR RECENT ARMISTICE ON THE OUTER MONGOLIAN-MANCHOU-KUOAN FRONTIER. BY CHARLES S.FOLTZ, JR.

BASEL, SWITZERLAND, SEPT. 23-(AP)-A SERIES OF FRENCH ATTACKS ON KEY POSITIONS OF THE WESTERN FRONT WAS REPORTED IN ADVICES REACHING HERE TONIGHT TO HAVE SIMMERED DOWN TO LOCAL ACTIONS IN THE FACE OF STUBBORN GERMAN RESISTANCE.

ATTACKS WHICH SWISS OBSERVERS SAID THIS MORNING THEY BELIEVED MIGHT BE THE BEGINNING OF AN OFFENSIVE APPARENTLY WERE INSPIRED ONLY BY A HEAVY GERMAN STAB AT THE FRENCH DEFENSES IN THE SAAR BASIN DURING THE NIGHT.

THUS FAR THE FRENCH HAVE BEEN REPORTED FAIRLY SUCCESSFUL IN THEIR TACTICS OF MEETING HEAVY GERMAN COUNTER ATTACKS NOT ONLY WITH AN ACTIVE DEFENSE BUT WITH THRUSTS ELSEWHERE ALONG THE LINES, LEADING THE DEFENDERS TO SLOW UP THE ORIGINAL ATTACK IN ORDER TO DEFEND THEIR FLANKS.

THE FACT THAT THE FRENCH AND BRITISH WAR MACHINE APPARENTLY STANDS IN A POSITION FOR AN OFFENSIVE MADE THE GERMANS ADOPT A CAREFUL DEFENSE POLICY, SWISS OBSERVERS SAID.

IT WAS APPARENT, HOWEVER, THAT THERE WOULD BE NO LESSENING IN THE INTENSITY OF THE BATTLE, EVEN IF THERE SHOULD BE SOME REDUCTION IN ITS PROSPECTIVE LENGTH.

BOTH FRIENDS AND FOES OF THE ADMINISTRATION'S BILL HELD A SERIES OF STRATEGY CONFERENCES TODAY TO DRAFT PLANS FOR THE FIGHT.

WHILE AN OPPOSITION GROUP ARRANGED FOR CAPTAIN EDDIE RICKENBACKER TO MAKE A RADIO ADDRESS TUESDAY NIGHT AGAINST REPEAL OF THE ARMS EMBARGO, A GROUP OF DEMOCRATS ON THE FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE WHIPPED INTO TENTATIVE FORM A MEASURE TO DO AWAY WITH THE EMBARGO AND CARRY OUT OTHER POINTS IN THE ADMINISTRATION PROGRAM.

RICKENBACKER, A WORLD WAR ACE, WILL OPEN THE OPPOSITION'S SO-CALLED "EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN" AGAINST THE ADMINISTRATION PROGRAM. HE AND JAY C.HORMEL, MINNESOTA PACKER, CONFERRED TODAY WITH SENATORS NYE (R-ND), VANDENBERG (R-MICH) AND SHIPSTEAD (FL-MINN) ON PLANS FOR A INDEPENDENT, NATIONAL COMMITTEE TO OPPOSE REPEAL OF THE BAN ON SHIPMENT OF ARMS AND AMMUNITION TO BELLIGERENTS.

SEP 23 1939

THE FULL FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE WILL CONSIDER THE NEW NEUTRALITY LEGISLATION MONDAY, AND PITTMAN SAID HE WAS HOPEFUL THE BILL WOULD BE SENT TO THE SENATE FLOOR BY MID-WEEK. SENATOR SCHWELLENBACH (D-WASH) TOLD REPORTERS THAT AT LEAST 16 OF THE 23 COMMITTEEMEN

WOULD VOTE TO RELEASE THE BILL FOR SENATE CONSIDERATION, ALTHOUGH SOME OF THESE MIGHT RESERVE THE RIGHT TO OPPOSE IT ON THE FLOOR.

AIDWA

BESIDES REPEALING THE EMBARGO, THE TENTATIVELY-DRAFTED LEGISLATION WOULD FORBID AMERICAN SHIPS TO TRANSPORT ANY GOODS TO BELLIGERENTS. IT ALSO WOULD FORBID AMERICAN VESSELS TO CARRY PASSENGERS TO BELLIGERENT COUNTRIES.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT DID NOT SPECIFICALLY RECOMMEND THE STRICT PROHIBITION AGAINST THE USE OF AMERICAN VESSELS IN DEALINGS WITH BELLIGERENTS, BUT HE HAS ADVISED CONGRESSIONAL LEADERS HE WILL ACCEPT IT.

PITTMAN SAID HE HAD GIVEN CONSIDERATION TO THE EFFECT OF THE PROVISION ON THE AMERICAN MERCHANT MARINE, BUT DECLINED TO ELABORATE.

SOME AUTHORITIES HAVE ARGUED THAT AMERICAN VESSELS FORBIDDEN FROM TRAVELING TO BELLIGERENT ZONES COULD PROFITABLY BE OCCUPIED IN TRADE WITH SOUTH AMERICA AND OTHER NEUTRAL COUNTRIES.

UNDER THE NEW PROVISION, SHIP OWNERS, INCLUDING ALL OFFICERS OF SHIPPING LINES, COULD BE FINED $50,000 AND IMPRISONED FOR FIVE YEARS IF A VIOLATION WERE PROVED.

THE NEW LEGISLATION IS BEING DRAFTED BY PITTMAN AND SENATORS CONNALLY (D-TEX) AND THOMAS (D-UTAH). THE TRIO, SEEKING TO GAIN SUPPORT FROM SOME MIDDLE-OF-THE-ROAD SENATORS, IS UNDERSTOOD TO HAVE ELIMINATED SOME OF THE DISCRETION ALLOWED THE PRESIDENT UNDER PREVIOUSLY-PROPOSED LEGISLATION. DETAILS HAVE NOT BEEN DISCLOSED, BUT IT WAS SAID THE CHANGES WERE MADE CHIEFLY BY SUBSTITUTING "SHALL" FOR "MAY" IN SOME CASES.

SOME OPPONENTS OF THE PROGRAM SAID THE BILL, AS TENTATIVELY DRAFTED, WAS AN IMPROVEMENT OVER MR.ROOSEVELT'S SUGGESTIONS FOR LEGISLATION. THEY SAID THEY WOULD CONTINUE, HOWEVER, TO FIGHT THE BASIC PRINCIPLE OF EMBARGO REPEAL.

FOURTEEN DEMOCRATS ON THE SENATE FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE ATTENDED A MEETING TODAY TO STUDY THE TENTATIVE DRAFT AND MAKE SUGGESTIONS. THE ON ESTIONS. THE ONLY PARTY MEMBERS ABSENT WERE SENATORS HARRISON (D-MISS), WHO IS IN MISSISSIPPI, AND CLARK (D-MO), AN OUTSPOKEN OPPONENT OF THE ADMINISTRATION PROGRAM.

TOLD THAT SOME OPPOSITIONISTS HAD TERMED THE GATHERING A "RUMP SESSION" OF THE COMMITTEE, PITTMAN RESPONDED. "THEY ARE TOO SENSITIVE.8 THIS WAS A VERY INFORMAL MEETING."

PITTMAN, CONNALLY AND THOMAS WORKED THROUGH THE AFTERNOON ON THE LEGISLATION, AND IT WILL BE RE-STUDIED BY THE COMMITTEE DEMOCRATS IN AN UNUSUAL SUNDAY MEETING.

CONNALLY TOLD REPORTERS THAT "THE ONLY DISCRETION THAT HAS BEEN GIVEN THE PRESIDENT IS THAT WHICH WILL OPERATE TO KEEP US OUT OF WAR INSTEAD OF PUTTING US INTO WAR."

THE DRAFTING COMMITTEE OF THREE WAS ASSISTED BY GREEN H.HACKWORTH, STATE DEPARTMENT LEGAL ADVISOR. IT DECIDED TENTATIVELY TO LIMIT CREDITS TO BELLIGERENTS PURCHASING SUPPLIES IN THIS COUNTRY TO 90 DAYS.

30.24 3593

ONE OF THE COMMITTEEMEN SAID THE LEGISLATION WOULD MAKE CLEAR THAT THERE WOULD BE NO INTERFERENCE WITH OPERATION OF THE JOHNSON ACT, WHICH PROHIBITS LOANS TO WAR DEBT DEFAULTERS.

THOSE WHO ATTENDED REPORTED THAT THERE WAS CONSIDERABLE DISCUSSION AT TODAY'S SESSION REGARDING PROVISIONS DESIGNED TO RESTRICT CREDITS TO BELLIGERENTS. SOME COMMITTEEMEN ARGUED THAT BELLIGERENTS SHOULD BE REQUIRED TO PAY FOR ARMS, AMMUNITION AND IMPLEMENTS OF WAR WITHIN 90 DAYS AFTER PURCHASE AND SHOULD RECEIVE LONG-TERM CREDITS ON PURCHASES OF OTHER MATERIALS. NO DECISION WAS REACHED.

AS TO THE PRESENT SITUATION, AN ASSOCIATION PRESS COMPILATION SHOWED THAT 44 SENATORS---ONLY FIVE SHORT OF A MAJORITY--- WERE COMMITTED FOR REPEAL OF THE ARMS EMBARGO WHILE ONLY 20 WERE COMMITTED AGAINST REPEAL.

THE OPPOSITION LEADERS, POINTING TO BIG STACKS OF MAIL SUPPORTING THEIR POSITION, WERE COUNTING ON SENATE DEBATE TO BRING A SWING IN SENTIMENT.

NEUTRALITY EXPLANATORY

WASHINGTON,SEPT.23-(AP)-THE CRUX OF THE CONGRESSIONAL CONTROVERSY OVER THE NEUTRALITY LAW IS WHETHER AMERICAN MANUFACTURERS SHOULD BE PERMITTED TO SELL ARMS AND AMMUNITION TO WARRING NATIONS.

THE PRESENT LAW CONTAINS A PROVISION FOR AN EMBARGO ON ARMS SALES. PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT DESIRES ITS REPEAL.

HOWEVER, THE ARMS EMBARGO NOW APPLIES ONLY WHEN THE PRESIDENT--HE HAS SOLE DISCRETIONARY POWER IN THIS MATTER--DETERMINES THAT A STATE OF WAR EXISTS. THE PRESIDENT INVOKED THE EMBARGO IN ITALY'S WAR WITH ETHIOPIA, IN THE SPANISH CIVIL WAR AND IN THE PRESENT CONFLICT BETWEEN THE FRANCO-BRITISH ALLIES AND GERMANY. HE HAS NOT INVOKED IT IN THE UNDECLARED SINO-JAPANESE WAR.

WHEN THE EMBARGO IS PLACED IN OPERATION, IT BECOMES UNLAWFUL FOR ANYONE TO EXPORT FROM THE UNITED STATES ARMS, AMMUNITION AND IMPLEMENTS OF WAR TO ANY NATION ENGAGED IN THE CONFLICT. AMERICAN VESSELS ARE PROHIBITED FROM CARRYING ARMS TO BELLIGERENTS.

LIKEWISE, ARMS MAY NOT BE EXPORTED TO ANY NEUTRAL NATION FOR TRANSSHIPMENT TO A BELLIGERENT. ARMS SHIPMENTS TO ANY OTHER NATION, HOWEVER, ARE PERMITTED UNDER REGULATIONS LAID DOWN BY THE MUNITIONS CONTROL BOARD, SET UP IN THE ACT TO LICENSE MANUFACTURERS AND EXPORTERS OF ARMS.

INCLUDED AMONG ARMS AFFECTED BY THE EMBARGO ARE A LONG LIST OF GUNS, AMMUNITION, POISON GASES, AIRPLANES AND OTHER IMPLEMENTS SET OUT IN A PROCLAMATION ISSUED BY THE PRESIDENT APRIL 10, 1936. THE PRESIDENT MAY ADD TO THIS LIST AT ANY TIME, BUT HE MAY NOT SUBTRACT FROM IT.

THE LAW EXEMPTS FROM THE EMBARGO, HOWEVER, RAW MATERIALS OR ARTICLES NOT OF THE SAME GENERAL CHARACTER AS THOSE ON THE ARMS LIST. THUS THERE IS NO RESTRICTION ON THE SHIPMENT OF COTTON, COPPER, OIL, NON-MILITARY TRUCKS AND SUPPLIES OF THAT NATURE

AS THE LAW NOW STANDS, THESE EXEMPTED MATERIALS CAN BE TR[illegible] PORTED TO BELLIGERENTS IN AMERICAN SHIPS. SINCE THE "CASH AND CARRY" SECTION OF THE ACT EXPIRED LA[illegible] MAY [illegible] THERE HAS BEEN NO REQUIREMENT THAT THE BELLIGERENTS [illegible] ASH FOR THESE SUPPLIES.

THE ADMINISTRATION PROPOSES TO PERMIT ARMS SALES--UNDER THE REGULATIONS OF THE MUNITIONS BOARD--ALONG WITH SALES OF THE NOW EXEMPTED COMMODITIES, BUT TO PROHIBIT AMERICAN SHIPS FROM ENTERING COMBAT AREAS.

SENATORS BACKING THE ADMINISTRATION-SPONSORED CHANGES ALSO HAVE PROPOSED THAT AMERICAN SHIPS BE FORBIDDEN TO CARRY ANY COMMODITIES TO BELLIGERENTS.

IN ADDITION, THE ADMINISTRATION DESIRES A REQUIREMENT THAT A WARRING NATION TAKE TITLE TO ANY GOODS PURCHASED HERE BEFORE THE GOODS ARE SHIPPED, SO THAT IF THEY ARE LOST AT SEA IT WILL BE THE FOREIGN NATION'S LOSS, NOT THE AMERICAN EXPORTER'S.

OTHER PROVISIONS OF THE PRESENT LAW, WHICH HAVE NOT CAUSED ANY MAJOR CONTROVERSY ARE:

WHEN THE NEUTRALITY LAW IS INVOKED, AMERICANS MAY NOT BUY, SELL, OR EXCHANGE SECURITIES OR BONDS ISSUED BY ANY OF THE BELLIGERENT STATES.

THE PRESIDENT HAS DISCRETIONARY POWER TO EXEMPT ORDINARY COMMERCIAL CREDITS AND SHORT TIME OBLIGATIONS IF HE FINDS IT IS NECESSARY TO PROTECT THE COMMERCIAL INTERESTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

THE PRESIDENT HAS THE POWER TO FORBID THE DEPARTURE FROM ANY AMERICAN PORT OF ANY SHIP WHICH HE BELIEVES INTENDS TO CARRY MEN, FUEL, SUPPLIES OR ARMS TO ANY WARSHIP, TENDER OR SUPPLY SHIP OF A BELLIGERENT POWER. HE ALSO MAY BAR ANY BELLIGERENT SUBMARINE OR OTHER WARSHIP FROM THE PORTS AND TERRITORIAL WATERS OF THE UNITED STATES.

AMERICANS MAY NOT TRAVEL ON BELLIGERENT MERCHANT SHIPS, EXCEPT UNDER RULES LAID DOWN BY THE PRESIDENT. (THEY ARE GIVEN 90 DAYS TO GET BACK TO THIS COUNTRY FROM ABROAD BEFORE THESE RULES APPLY.)

THE PRESIDENT MAY PROHIBIT THE ARMING OF ANY AMERICAN MERCHANT SHIP.

UNDATED SEA WARFARE (PMS BUDGET)

SEP 23

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

(NY)...THE UNITED STATES STRENGTHENED ITS "NEUTRALITY PATROL" OFF NEW ENGLAND TODAY AND DEMANDS INCREASED AMONG PAN-AMERICAN NATIONS FOR STRONG MEASURES TO SAFEGUARD SHIPPING IN THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE FROM INTERRUPTION BY EUROPEAN BELLIGERENTS.

THESE DEVELOPMENTS FOLLOWED PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S DISCLOSURE THAT FOREIGN SUBMARINES HAD BEEN SIGHTED OFF BOSTON AND OFF ALASKA AND EARLIER REPORTS OF SUBMARINE ACTIVITY IN THE SOUTH ATLANTIC.

SIX COAST GUARD CUTTERS WERE PLACED UNDER THE U.S. NAVY'S SUPERVISION AND ASSIGNED TO PATROL THE COAST FROM MAINE TO CONNECTICUT. THE CUTTERS, INCLUDING THREE NOW EN ROUTE FROM THE WEST COAST, WERE OF DESTROYER SIZE AND CARRIED FLYING BOATS. (THE "NEUTRALITY PATROL," IS OPERATING FROM EASTPORT, ME., TO AND INCLUDING THE GULF OF MEXICO AND THE CARIBBEAN SEA.)

THE PARAGUAYAN DELEGATION URGED AMERICAN NATIONS TO "UNITE IN CLAIMING THE GREATEST RESPECT FROM BELLIGERENTS FOR LEGAL COMMERCE," AND RECOMMENDED THAT "ALL MEANS WITHIN REACH" BE TAKEN TO PREVENT THE OPERATION OF BELLIGERENTS IN THIS HEMISPHERE.

"THE AMERICAN NATIONS SHOULD UNITE IN DETERMINATION OF A LINE OF ACTION TO MAKE THEIR CLAIMS EFFECTIVE," THE DELEGATION SAID. SOME DELEGATES SUGGESTED COOPERATION IN A CONTINENTAL COASTAL PATROL.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S STATEMENT THAT FOREIGN SUBMARINES WERE FLYING OFF THE AMERICAN COAST CONFIRMED REPORTS OF NEW ENGLAND FISHERMEN, WHO SEVERAL TIMES HAVE REPORTED SEEING UNIDENTIFIED SUBMERSIBLES NEAR THE FISHING GROUNDS SINCE THE OUTBREAK OF WAR.

THE PRESIDENT POINTEDLY REFRAINED FROM STATING WHETHER THE SUBMARINES WERE BELLIGERENT. UNDER INTERNATIONAL LAW, HOWEVER, A NON-BELLIGERENT PRESERVING STRICT NEUTRALITY IS BOUND NOT TO BETRAY THE NATIONALITY OR LOCATION OF BELLIGERENT VESSELS TO THE ENEMY.

GERMANY, AS WELL AS FRANCE AND GREAT BRITAIN, HAS 500-TON SUBMARINES ABLE TO CRUISE 3,000 MILES, BUT WOULD HAVE TO STATION SUPPLY OIL TANKERS IN OUT OF THE WAY SPOTS IN THE NORTH ATLANTIC FOR REFUELLING, OBSERVERS SAID, IN ORDER TO CARRY OUT ANY EXTENSIVE OPERATIONS NEAR AMERICAN SHORES.

SINKING YESTERDAY OF TWO MORE BRITISH STEAMERS, THE 1,567-TON ARKELSIDE AND THE 2,694-TON AKENSIDE, LED THE BRITISH MINISTRY OF INFORMATION TO REITERATE THAT "ENERGETIC MEASURES" DEVELOPED SINCE WORLD WAR DAYS WERE BEING PRESSED TO END THE GERMAN SUBMARINE MENACE.

THE MINISTRY DID NOT DISCLOSE THE NATURE OF ITS OPERATIONS, BUT SAID SUBMARINES WERE "VERY VULNERABLE." EARLY LOSSES WERE BLAMED ON THE FACT ENEMY UNDERSEA CRAFT HAD BEEN STATIONED AT STRATEGIC PLACES IN ADVANCE OF WAR.

BRITAIN HAS LOST 29 SHIPS WITH A TONNAGE OF 208,736 IN SEA COMBAT THAT SO FAR HAS SENT A TOTAL OF 45 BELLIGERENT AND NEUTRAL VESSELS TO THE BOTTOM.

A FIRST-HAND ACCOUNT OF THE SINKING OF A DISGUISED GERMAN SUBMARINE BY A BRITISH DESTROYER WAS RELATED BY CAPT. FREDERICK PICKERING OF THE AMERICAN CARGO LINER STEEL MARINER, WHICH DOCKED IN HOBOKEN, N.J., YESTERDAY.

CAPT. PICKERING SAID THE SUBMARINE, FOR SOME REASON APPARENTLY UNABLE TO SUBMERGE, WAS SIGHTED SEPT. 11 SHORTLY AFTER THE STEEL MARINER LEFT AVONMOUTH, ENGLAND.

THE CREW OF THE UNDERSEA RAIDER HAD TRIED TO MAKE THE CRAFT LOOK LIKE A FISHING VESSEL, CAPT. PICKERING SAID, BUT A NEARBY BRITISH DESTROYER QUICKLY PIERCED THE DISGUISE AND SHELLED AND SANK THE SUBMARINE IN A TEN-MINUTE BATTLE. ALL HANDS WERE LOST.

Soil-Less Crops May Play Vital War-Time Role

Buffalo Chemists Declare Farming by Chemicals Is Feasible on Big Scale

BUFFALO, Sept. 23 (AP).—Hydroponics—the science of growing crops in liquids—may play a vital role in the current European war, two research experts predicted today.

Andrew Chalmers and Raymond L. Moore, chief research chemists for the Moore Research Laboratory, who have been experimenting extensively on soil-less agriculture for two years, said that it is possible to use this method to establish community gardens for the people behind the lines of combat and keep them adequately supplied with fresh garden crops."

The theory of chemmical gardening gained impetus during the latter part of the World War, when the government asked research men to test its feasibility. It has been developed into a practical and inexpensive process, Mr. Chalmers and Mr. Moore asserted.

The advantages, they explained, are two-fold:

1. These gardens would allow farmers to produce the greater part of their staple crops for the armed forces.

2. Equally important are the stomachs of the people at home, who are working at top emergency speed. Keeping these men and women supplied with fresh foods would tend to strengthen their morale.

SEP 24 1939

Installation Major Expense

Mr. Chalmers pointed out that the expensive phase of chemical gardening was the initial outlay of installing waterproof beds, but once established, the beds can be used indefinitely.

He said experiments have proved that:

1. This method of agriculture gives an average yield ranging from 100 to 300 per cent increase over a crop planted in soil.

2. The yearly cost is approximately two cents a square foot of bed.

3. There is no soil preparation and, theoretically, no soil-bred disease to ruin a crop.

4. It requires little labor.

As war puts a heavy strain on all types of production, this form of agriculture is in a position to be of invaluable aid, Mr. Chalmers said.

Moreover, chemicals necessary for plant growth would be easily available during war time. These include potassium nitrate, ammonium sulphate, Epsom salts, mono calcium phosphate, plus minute traces of metals and boron salts.

Feasible for Large-Scale Use

Chemical gardening is "no test-tube proposition," Mr. Chalmers observed. "Mid-Western agriculturists, who first put it into commercial use five years ago, have acres planted under this process and report it a paying venture."

Mtehods of soil-less crop raising are relatively simple enough to be economically feasible for community gardens, he said. Seeds and roots are permanently submerged in chemical liquids or may be planted on a gravel base through which the solution is pumped.

The saving of labor would allow warring nations to put men normally employed on farms into other services, at the same time keeping the stay-at-homes from suffering from a shortage of fresh crops, he said.

To illustrate the result of soil-less agriculture Mr. Chalmers told of tomato seed planted in a tank in November.

"We picked the first fruit the next month and continued reaping from the same vine until the following July. With proper pruning and feeding the plant could be kept producing continuously. The process works equally as well for any type of plant or tree," he asserted.

Hydroponics, he concluded, may be Europe's ace in the hole.

Horse and Mule Buying for War Is Begun in U.S.

Supply Is Only Half That of 1915 and Humane Society Seeks to Shut That Off

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 (AP).—If Europe's war becomes a war of movement, America's farms and ranches may be scoured again for war horses and pack mules. But army buyers from abroad will find only half as many horses to choose from as they found in 1915-1916. And most of these are peace-time work animals.

The American Humane Society hopes to shut off even that supply. It has asked President Roosevelt "in the name of humanity . . . to include animals in the list of supplies that may not be supplied to belligerents."

Buyers for European armies swarmed into American horse and mule markets and into our farming and ranching districts during the World War. They paid high prices for horses and mules to replace those which had been shot, gassed or worn out on the battlefield and on shell-torn roads.

Export Demand Quickens

Already there are signs of a quickening export demand. A shipment of 1,000 mules, destined for service in Turkey's expanding army, recently left New Orleans. Another shipment for Turkey is scheduled for next month from a Texas point and there are reports of still more buying in the Southwest. Buyers for nearly all European powers have been drawing heavily on Ireland's horse supply, and soon may turn to American sources.

If the Europeans should dig in for stabilized fighting, as they did in trenches on the western front after the early phases of the World War, animal casualties would be comparatively light. But if the conflict developed into a war of movement, American cavalrymen believe the mounted arm would play an important, perhaps decisive role, and eventually would need heavy replecements.

European horse buyers coming to the United States today would find only 10,800,000 horses and 4,382,000 mules on farms and ranches, as against 21,431,00 horses in 1915 and 4,239,000 mules in 1910. Mechanization on the farm is largely responsible for this 50 per cent decline; the tractor and the truck are plowing, cultivating and hauling on farms and ranches where horses and mules formerly furnished motive power.

The European buyers would find a good many heavy draft horses on American farms, but heavy draft horses are poor war horses. They eat too much and they are poor keepers. There would be a fair supply of medium-sized draft animals suitable for pulling guns and wagons, but experts say there are only about 4,500,000 riding animals in this country, and many of these are too old, too young, too light or two unsound to carry a fully equipped cavalryman on long daily marches.

Exports Leaped in War

During the World War, American exports of horses leaped from 22,776—a fairly typical pre-war figure—in the year ended June 30, 1914, to 189,340 in the following year. France was the airgest buyer that year, taking 130,296 head. England bought 83,829; Canada, 52,036; Italy, 27,636; Scotland, 6,908.

Ranchers rounded up their wild range stock. Even private riding horses went under the hammer as artillery fire and gas took their increasing toll. In the year ended June 30, 1916, horse exports reached their peak, 357,553 head. The following year mule exports, which had been only 3,333 in the year ended June 30, 1914, boomed to 136,698. The armistice put this trade on the toboggan. In 1919 only 19,691 horses and 7,122 mules were shipped. The figure has remained low since then.

There's still plenty of fighting and work for horses and mules in the world's armies. France, for example, maintains forty-two regiments of horse cavalry and only five regiments of mechanized cavalry. Her field and combat trains are only partly motorized.

Germany has seventeen horse cavalry regiments.

England still has five horse cavalry regiments, although her other seventeen cavalry regiments are made up of either armored cars or light tanks. She would like to have more horse cavalry regiments, American experts say, but is afraid she would be unable to obtain a continuous supply of animals necessary to maintain efficient strength.

In India the British Empire maintains twenty-one horse cavalry regiments. Canada has two horse cavalry regiments and Australia has twenty. New Zealand has nine horse cavalry regiments. South Africa has six.

Italy maintains twelve horse cavalry regiments and some horse artillery, the Japanese army includes twenty-five horse cavalry regiments and some horse artillery. Japan has no mechanized cavalry.

Topping all other foreign powers in the numbers of her cavalry is Russia. She maintains ninety horse cavalry regiments, more than 140,000 animals and 140,000 men. Her twenty-two mechanized regiments are attached to horse cavalry divisions.

Air Waves Shut To Alien Spies By 'Radio Bugs'

50,000 Amateurs Provide Guard Against Informers and Their Coded Secrets

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 (AP).—Fifty thousand spare-time detectives guard the neutral air of America against the coded secrets of spies and informers for warring Europe.

These "radiod bogs"—operators of amateur stations throughout the nation—are the spearhead of a defense which officials believe will make impractical the use of America as a base for wartime tipsters.

Behind them are corps of trained radio observers—experts of the great experimental stations of army and navy, engineers at the seven minitor stations which police the air for the Federal Communications Commission.

At sea and along the coasts, the cutters and shore stations of the Coast Guard add a final check against messages of unauthorized foreign agents.

Chances for Spies Slight

The chances of a spy radio operating long from a hideout in an abandoned shack or aboard an interned ship are slight, officials believe.

The only safe channel by which a foreign agent might get confidential information to his principals abroad, they declare, is the coded communique of diplomats. And there the enemy nations may be trusted to check each other—as they did in the World War.

At that time, wireless was an imperfect, little-known art. Few householders tinkered with the intricate designs; the experimenters in their laboratories were still struggling with fundamental problems of power, interference and "fading." The United States Navy had just made a beginning with two experimental stations. But radio became a major weapon in the code-war behind the battlefront, and neutral America had its share of trouble.

Two months after war broke out in Europe, naval officials closed up a powerful wireless station at Sayville, N. J., which was sending information to one belligerent.

Radio's rapid growth since 1914 has changed the picture. In the code rooms of fighting nations, the hundresd of new inventions may make more difficult the task of breaking down garbled messages into words-with-meaning that will give clews to enemy moves.

But for neutral America, the task of policing the air-lanes is primarily one of halting any suspicious broadcast from unauthorized sources. Breaking the code is not paramount.

And here the profusion of radio sets blankets the nation against air abuses of its neutrality.

Each of the 50,000 sending-and-receiving sets of the amateurs is a threat to the foreign spy. The short wave connections of radios built for parlor use make other thousands of average citizens an added check on improper broadcasts.

America's radio amateurs, fiddling around with home-made sets, "fishing" for new ether friends, operate in the short wage frequencies most likely to be used by foreign agents attempting to send directly to European principals. Police radios, and ship-signal systems, are attuned to these frequencies, too.

Many of the amateurs are reserve officers of the Army and the Navy, and F. C. C. officials are convinced the group as a whole is "thoroughly loyal." Should one of these after-hours radiomen catch strange signals in his receiver, and run into a station whose call letters were not listed, he would report immediately to the American Radio Relay League at Hartford, Conn.

In the ultra-short-wave field, fewer experimenters work, but there the spy's activities would be limited by the pace of scientific knowledge. Generally, experts say, such broadcasts are good only for shorter distances. While they might be used in Europe to communicate between armies working together, their only use in America would be to slip messages across the borders into Canada or Mexico.

Use of Rays Unlikely

Science has given the secret agent other new weapons in the infra-red and ultra-violet rays. These rays, invisible to the human eye, inaudible to the human ear, travel on a wave-length too short to be captured by an ordinary radio set.

Like their second-cousins in the ultra-high-wave radio bands, however, they will not bend with the earth's surface and would be lost in space a few hundred miles from their sender. Conceivably, they might be used for communication between confederates who did not wish to be seen together. A simple machine could send the dot-and-dash rays, and they would be visible only to a man equipped with special goggles which catch that light.

In the more powerful long-wave area, where the Navy's big stations operate, the very size of the station needed for sending is a limiting factor. It would be difficult to conceal such a station long from American officials.

Once a stranger station is heard, the task is to run it down. The rum-runners of prohibition trained many an American officer in that duty. The screeching dot-and-dash of radio from moving vessels at sea led the Coast Guard then to many an illicit liquor-peddler's lair.

To prevent foreign ships in American ports from becoming informers for confederates at sea, the Coast Guard has authority to seal the transmitting sets of any belligerent ship—whether naval or commercial—which stops in an American port.

Mobile radio compass sets are ready, too, to trace down any violator of American neutrality sending messages from a land hideout. During the World War, such an apparatus led officials to the startling discovery that unsigned messages for one belligerent were coming from one of Mexico's largest stations.

PROPAGANDA AND POLITICS WON WORLD WAR, EXPERT SAYS,
AND WILL BE DETERMINING FACTOR IN PRESENT CONFLICT

AUTHOR OF WIDELY READ BOOK, "PROPAGANDA FOR WAR," PREDICTS ALLIES WILL PULL AMERICA INTO HOSTILITIES BY SPRING OF 1941 (80(

BY BEN FUNK

(ADVANCE) NORMAN,OKLA.,SEPT.23-(AP)-DR.H.C.PETERSON, AUTHOR OF THE WIDELY CIRCULATED NEW BOOK, "PROPAGANDA FOR WAR," ASSERTED TODAY PROPAGANDA AND POLITICS WON THE WORLD WAR AND WOULD BE THE DETERMINING FACTOR IN THE PRESENT EUROPEAN CONFLICT.

HE PREDICTED THAT BY THE SPRING OF 1941 THE ALLIES, WHOM HE DESCRIBED AS "MASTER PROPAGANDISTS", WOULD HAVE SUCCEEDED IN DRAWING AMERICA INTO THE WAR "BY CONVINCING US THAT OUR ECONOMIC INTERESTS ARE AT STAKE AND THAT THIS FIGHT IS OUR FIGHT".

DR.PETERSON, 37-YEAR-OLD UNIVERSITY OF OKLAHOMA HISTORY PROFESSOR, HAS BEEN A STUDENT OF PROPAGANDA SINCE THE WORLD WAR. IN RECENT YEARS, HE HAS TRAVELED EXTENSIVELY IN EUROPE AND DELVED INTO THE POLITICAL RECORDS OF MANY NATIONS.

HIS BOOK, PUBLISHED LAST APRIL BY THE UNIVERSITY OF OKLAHOMA PRESS, WAS PRAISED BY SOME CRITICS AS THE MOST COMPLETE RECORD OF FOREIGN PROPAGANDA IN THE UNITED STATES. IT HAS HEADED THE NON-FICTION "BEST SELLER" LIST IN A NUMBER OF LARGE CITIES.

GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE ARE LOOKING TO AMERICA FOR ASSISTANCE JUST AS THEY DID IN 1914, DR.PETERSON SAID IN AN INTERVIEW, AND BY BRILLIANT USE OF PROPAGANDA THEY ALREADY HAVE PAVED THE WAY TO OUR ENTRANCE IN THE WAR.

"THE FIRST RESULT OF THE CURRENT PROPAGANDA CAMPAIGN," HE EXPLAINED, "HAS BEEN THE CREATION OF A DESIRE AMONG AMERICANS TO GIVE OUR ECONOMIC AND FINANCIAL AID TO THE DEMOCRACIES.

"THIS DESIRE PROBABLY WILL LEAD TO REPEAL OF THE NEUTRALITY ACT AND THE BUILDING OF A TREMENDOUS TRADE WITH THE ALLIES.

"IMMEDIATELY, THIS WILL RESULT IN DAMAGE TO OUR PRESTIGE AND EVENTUALLY IT WILL INFLUENCE US TO DECLARE WAR ON GERMANY."

DR.PETERSON PREDICTED THE WAR WOULD BE FOUGHT ON ITS PRESENT LINES FOR ABOUT A YEAR. THEN, HE SAID, OTHER NATIONS WILL TAKE SIDES AND THE ECONOMIC PROPAGANDA OF THE ALLIES WILL BECOME INCREASINGLY EFFECTIVE.

"BY THE SPRING OF 1941," HE RELATED, "WE WILL HAVE BEEN CONVINCED THAT OUR ECONOMIC INTERESTS ARE IN DANGER AND WILL BE READY TO ENTER THE WAR."

NAZI PROPAGANDA, HE SAID, WILL BE VERY EFFECTIVE IN GERMANY BUT WILL HAVE PRACTICALLY NO EFFECT IN THE UNITED STATES.

"ON BOTH SIDES THE ATTEMPT WILL BE MADE TO INTERPRET THIS WAR AS ONE BETWEEN THE FORCES OF GOOD AND EVIL. IN THE UNITED STATES, THE ALLIES WILL HAVE A CLEAR FIELD.

"THE GERMANS HAVE NO FRIENDS AND THEIR BAD MANNERS AND POLITICALLY STUPID ACTS WILL PROVIDE SPLENDID MATERIAL FOR THE BRITISH AND FRENCH."

1939

PROPAGANDA OF THE ALLIES, HE FORECAST, WILL BE SPREAD PRINCIPALLY BY SYMPATHETIC AND EMOTIONAL AMERICANS---NAMELY, POLITICIANS, PROFESSORS AND MINISTERS.

"THE PRIMARY OBJECTIVE OF A PROPAGANDA CAMPAIGN," HE SAID, "IS TO ESTABLISH AN ATTITUDE OF MIND. WHEN SUCH A CAMPAIGN IS SUCCESSFUL, THE POINT OF VIEW IT HAS CREATED ACTS AS A CENSOR OR INTERPRETER OF NEWS AND TURNS THOSE PROPAGANDIZED INTO PROPAGANDISTS.

"THIS OBJECTIVE ALREADY HAS BEEN REACHED BY THE ALLIES. A TREMENDOUS MAJORITY OF AMERICANS IS CONVINCED THAT THE SCALES OF JUSTICE ARE WEIGHTED IN THE ALLIES' FAVOR."

DR.PETERSON SAID HE BELIEVED THE PROPAGANDA OF DEMOCRACY, FEATURED IN 1914-18 BY SUCH SLOGANS AS "SAVE THE WORLD FOR DEMOCRACY," AGAIN WOULD BE VERY SUCCESSFUL.

"THE ALLIES," HE ASSERTED, "WILL ATTEMPT TO INSTILL IN THE MINDS OF AMERICANS A BELIEF THAT IT IS NECESSARY TO MAKE WAR AGAINST HERR HITLER FOR THE PRESERVATION OF DEMOCRACY. THIS IS AN UTTERLY FALSE IDEA.

"I AM DEFINITELY OF THE OPINION THAT THE STABILITY AND FUTURE OF THE AMERICAN NATION DO NOT DEPEND UPON THE VICTORY OR DEFEAT OF ANY OTHER NATION ANYWHERE IN THE WORLD.

"WHAT COULD VERY WELL HAPPED AS A RESULT OF AMERICAN PARTICIPATION IN ANOTHER WAR WOULD BE THE DESTRUCTION OF DEMOCRACY WITHIN OUR OWN COUNTRY."

ANOTHER EFFECTIVE TYPE OF WORLD WAR PROPAGANDA, THE PROFESSOR SAID, WAS THE "PROPAGANDA OF HATE."

"THIS," HE RELATED, "MUST CULMINATE IN THE CREATION OF ONE OR MORE VILLAINS. HERE THE ADVANTAGE AGAIN RESTS WITH THE ALLIES. THE GERMAN FUEHRER ALREADY IS THE MOST FASHIONABLE VILLAIN OF OUR DAY."

THE YOUNG HISTORIAN EXPRESSED DOUBT THAT THE "PROPAGANDA OF PITY," WHICH IS BASED ON ATROCITY STORIES, WOULD WORK IN THIS WAR, ALTHOUGH AMERICANS "WERE VERY RECEPTIVE TO THEM IN THE LAST WAR."

EFFECTIVE PROPAGANDA, HE SAID, IS SELDOM BASED ON FALSEHOOD.

"INSTEAD," HE EXPLAINED, "IT IS A PARTISAN INTERPRETATION OF THE TRUTH---A HALF TRUTH. THE ELEMENT IN IT WHICH IS CORRECT APPEALS TO THE PERSON BEING PROPAGANDIZED AND MAKES HIM ACCEPT THE WHOLE INTERPRETATION AS THE TRUTH.

"THE GREATEST OF THE PROPAGANDA TECHNIQUE IS THAT OF OMISSION. WHEREVER THERE IS A CENSOR, THERE IS A PROPAGANDIST. EVERY BULLETIN, REPORT OR INTERVIEW WHICH HAS COME THROUGH THE HANDS OF A CENSOR IS PROPAGANDA.

"THE ONLY DEFENSE AGAINST IT IS TO OBTAIN THE COMPLETE PROPAGANDA VERSION OF BOTH SIDES."

REGARDLESS OF WHO WINS THE WAR, DR.PETERSON IS CONVINCED THAT "NATIONAL SOCIALISM IS DOOMED."

"IT IS NOT A STABLE FORM OF GOVERNMENT," HE DECLARED. "NAZIISM AND FASCISM WILL FALL IN THE NEXT TEN YEARS. THEN RUSSIA WILL COME FORWARD AND BY 1950 STALIN WILL HOLD THE BALANCE OF POWER IN EUROPE.

"THEN THINGS WILL BE JUST AS NASTY AS THEY ARE NOW."

THE PROFESSOR SAID AMERICA COULD HOPE TO GAIN NOTHING BY ENTERING THE WAR.

30.24-3601

30.24-3601

"PEACE WILL NEVER EXIST IN EUROPE," HE ASSERTED. "THERE ARE GOING TO BE MANY MORE WARS IN THE FUTURE AND IF AMERICA IS SMART HE'LL SIT THIS ONE OUT."

GERMANS BELIEVE SIEGFRIED LINE INVINCIBLE. (400)

BY EDWIN ~~SHAUTTE~~ SHANKE

(ADVANCE) BERLIN--(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)--GERMANY BELIEVES THAT THE SIEGFRIED LINE, WHICH THE FRENCH ARE NOW ATTACKING ON THE WESTERN FRONT, CANNOT BE PIERCED SUCCESSFULLY.

ONE HIGH GOVERNMENT SPOKESMAN SUMS IT UP IN THESE WORDS:

"THE FRENCH COULD SACRIFICE TWO MILLION LIVES IN ATTACKING OUR WEST WALL AND STILL NOT BREAK THROUGH."

THE NAZIS PROVED THE INVULNERABILITY OF THE INTRICATE UNDERGROUND FORTIFICATIONS TO THEIR OWN SATISFACTION BY SENDING TROOPS INTO THE LINE FOR TEST MANEUVERS ALMOST AS SOON AS THE CEMENT IN THE FORTS WAS DRY.

THIS MOCK DEFENSE WAS MADE AS REAL AS POSSIBLE, AND AS A RESULT, WEAKNESSES WERE EXPOSED AND CORRECTED.

SEVENTEEN THOUSAND PILLBOXES WERE SCATTERED OVER THE TERRAIN BEFORE THE MANEUVERS.

AFTERWARDS 5,000 MORE WERE BUILT.

MACHINE GUN NESTS ALSO WERE CAMOUFLAGED, APPARENTLY BECAUSE THEY MADE TOO EASY TARGETS IN A PLACE DESIGNED TO TRICK THE ENEMY INTO TRAPS.

WHAT THE SIEGFRIED LINE IS LIKE WAS TOLD IN A RECENT ISSUE OF THE ARMY WEEKLY, "MILITAER WOCHENBLATT."

THE 22,000 STEEL AND CEMENT PILLBOXES ALREADY REFERRED TO ARE LOCATED AT STRAGEGIC SPOTS IN AN IRREGULAR LINE FROM THE LOWER RHINE SOUTH TO THE SWISS BORDER.

EACH OF THESE IS FILLED WITH WEAPONS, AMMUNITION AND OTHER WAR STORES.

THIS BELT OF FORTIFICATIONS--PLUS ITS ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUN EMPLACEMENTS--EXTENDS TO A DEPTH OF THIRTY MILES INSIDE THE GERMAN FRONTIER.

TO STOP TANKS AND MOTORIZED EQUIPMENT OF ATTACKING FORCES, MILES OF TRAPS DUG INTO THE EARTH ALTERNATE ITH MILES OF STEEL AND CEMENT OBSTRUCTIONS.

TO STEM THE TIDE OF INPOURING INFANTRY, THREE MILLION ROLLS OF BARBED WIRE STRETCH THROUGH THE AREA.

THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE LINE, BEGUN A YEAR AGO LAST MAY, IS VIRTUALLY COMPLETED. A PERMANENT FORCE OF FORTIFICATION ENGINEERS REMAINS ON DUTY, HOWEVER, TO CARRY OUT IMPROVEMENTS AND KEEP THE ELABORATE SYSTEM IN CONSTANT READINESS.

AT PEAK CONSTRUCTION LAST OCTOBER, 342,000 MEN, DRAFTED FROM THE ENTIRE COUNTRY, WERE AT WORK, PLUS AN ENGINEERING STAFF OF 90,000 MEN AND 100,000 LABOR SERVICE WORKERS.

THEY USED 8,000 CARLOADS OF MATERIAL DAILY.

ONE THIRD OF GERMANY'S ANNUAL CEMENT PRODUCTION --- SIX MILLION TONS OF IT --- WENT INTO THE DEADLY BARRIER.

U-BOAT MOSQUITO FLEET (150)

(ADVANCE) BERLIN-(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)-THE GERMAN SUBMARINES WHICH ARE SINKING SO MANY FRENCH AND ENGLISH BOATS MAKE UP THE WORLD'S "MOSQUITO FLEET."

MOST OF THEM ARE ONLY A FOURTH AS BIG AS THE ENGLISH U-BOATS.

THEY WEIGH AN AVERAGE OF 250 TONS, COMPARED TO THE BRITISH AVERAGE OF 1,000 TONS.

EVEN THE LARGEST OF THE NAZI SUBS ARE ONLY A LITTLE LARGER THAN THE SMALLEST OF BRITAIN'S CRAFT.

THUS, GERMANY GETS MORE ATTACKING POWER FOR HER MONEY, EXPERTS BELIEVE. FROM THE SAME AMOUNT OF MATERIALS ENGLAND USES FOR ONE SUBMARINE, THE GERMANS CAN BUILD FOUR.

WHEN A COUNT WAS MADE EARLY THIS YEAR GERMANY HAD 71.

SINCE THE CORE OF ADOLF HITLER'S NAVY IS A STRONG UNDERWATER FLEET, GERMAN SUB PRODUCTION IS CONTINUING AT ALL POSSIBLE SPEED.

FINNS, ANGERED, CHARGE VIOLATION OF NEUTRALITY; SEND PROTEST TO REICH

All Three Vessels Torpedoed, Crews Saved—Berlin Backs U-Boats, Claims Trio Carried Contraband Wood Pulp

[By the Associated Press]

Helsinki, Finland, Sept. 24 — Indignation swept Finland today in the wake of the sinking of two Finnish freighters.

The newspaper Hufvudstadsbladet said the Finnish Government had protested in Berlin against both attacks, which were termed here violations of Finland's neutrality.

The 1,360-ton freighter Walma was reported sunk yesterday afternoon by two German submarines. The crew of eighteen, including three women, was saved. The vessel was bound for England with a cargo of wood pulp, which Finns said they believed was not contraband.

Ship Dynamited, Sunk

One report said the crew members were ordered into their boats, after which the freighter was dynamited and sunk.

Earlier in the day the 2,262-ton Finnish freighter Martti-Ragnar, also loaded with wood pulp for England, was torpedoed and sunk off the Norwegian coast. All aboard were saved.

The newspaper Uusi Suomi, in an editorial, declared: "It is imperative that such illegal measures end. Neutral shipping, exporters and seamen must await information of what is contraband only from a submarine captain. That is an intolerable situation."

Berlin Approves

In Berlin, officials expressed approval of the sinking of the Finnish vessels.

One said the submarine commanders "would have committed nothing short of treason" had they permitted ships "carrying material essential to powder making to continue to England. It would have meant death to many Germans had this cellulose gotten to the British. Cellulose is included in Section 2 of the contraband list."

Wood pulp is one form of cellulose.

Swedish Steamer Sunk By U-Boat Off Norway

Oslo, Norway, Sept. 24 (AP)—The 1,510-ton Swedish steamer, Gertrud Bratt, loaded with wood pulp for England, was torpedoed and sunk today fifteen miles off Langesund, southern Norway, by a submarine identified as German.

The crew of eighteen was landed safely by a Norwegian torpedo boat which saw the sinking.

A witness of the attack said an airplane accompanied the submarine.

Fourth In Three Days

The Gertrud Bratt was the fourth vessel to be sunk in three days off the southern coast of the Scandinavian peninsula.

The home port of the Gertrud Bratt was Gothenburg, Sweden. The vessel was built in 1927 and was 254 feet long, according to Lloyd's register.

German sinkings of wood-pulp carriers were creating a serious problem for Scandinavia, most of whose wood pulp goes to England.

Product Not Listed

The Wood Pulp Producers' Association said its product was not mentioned in the German contrabrand list and that ten steamers loaded with it recently passed from the Baltic through the Ore Sound toward England in a single day—one of them with a German pilot to guide it past mine fields.

The Gertrud Bratt's skipper declared the submarine commander ordered him into the submarine for examination of the ship's papers and treated him rudely.

He said the submarine crew was untidy and unshaven and appeared to have been long at sea. The submarine appeared small and old, he said.

Berlin, Sept. 24—The German high command today appeared convinced that a full-fledged war with Britain and France was a certainty.

Nazis have expressed hope that the British and French would accept Germany's conquest of Poland as a complished fact and let ma[illegible] there without pushing the c[illegible] the Western front.

The German high command seemed convinced Britain would not intend to start fighting in earnest until spring and that there was plenty of time, therefore, for army construction work.

It is known here that increasing numbers of the British expeditionary force are reaching France and, if German tactics on the Eastern front can be used as a standard, it may be expected that German bombers soon will strike at encampments of these British units.

Would Wean French

In addition, if the policy thus far followed is unchanged, it may be expected the French will be left unmolested, more or less, in the hope of weaning the French away from their British allies.

German army communiques reporting progress of the war have paid scant attention to the Western front.

Today's first communique made no mention of it, and the second gave the West only a line.

1939

30.24 - 3603

30.24-3603

The first announcement said German troops were moving "on schedule along the entire Eastern front" toward the agreed demarcation line splitting Poland between Germany and Soviet Russia.

Nazis Withdrawing

Nazi and Soviet troops are scheduled to reach that line Tuesday, and today the Germans were withdrawing steadily before the Soviet westward advance.

Germans formally gave up Brest-Litovsk, east of Warsaw, exchanging military honors with Red troops who took over the city.

A German infantry regiment with band playing paraded for the Red army commander today and a Red regiment returned the compliment for the German commander.

The first German communique said "naval forces renewed fire on Polish positions on the Hela Peninsula," the thin arm of land extending into the Baltic, where a remnant of Poland's armies is making a last stand.

Poles Reported Deserting

A "steadily growing" number of Polish deserters from encircled Modlin and Praga, outside Warsaw, also was reported by Germany.

A later communique said that "in the vicinity of Tomaszow, Zamosc and Rudoc, scattered enemy detachments attempting to escape southward were forced to fight.

"Part of these enemy detachments were encircled southwest of Zamosc, while others are traveling eastward, where they will run into Russian troops."

[Editor's Note—This region is approximately 175 miles southeast of Warsaw.]

With regard to the German-French front, the later communique said only: "In the west there was heavier artillery fire at certain points. Local enemy attacks were repulsed."

BIDDLE TELLS OF TERRORISM BY NAZI AIRMEN

Says Embassy Party Was Under Fire Thrice On 15-Day Trek

Declares Warplanes Ove Poland Make "Whole Interior A Front"

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, Sept. 24—An estimate that th German army used 5,000 warplanes t disrupt Polish production and commu nications in five days was made toda by Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr United States Ambassador to Poland upon his arrival here after a hazard ous, under-fire trek out of the country

The Ambassador, a red carnation i his lapel and his hair neatly slicke back, sat on the floor over a map i the town residence of the Unite States Ambassador to France, Willian C. Bullitt, to explain graphically hi fifteen-day odyssey to Rumania fron Warsaw.

He said his party was under fire from German planes at least three times.

Whole Interior A Front

Biddle declared German planes shuttled constantly from north to south and from southeast to northeast over Poland, "making the whole interior a front."

"In perhaps five days, bombing firs engine and airplane factories and pilo schools, then railroads and genera communications, they disrupted the country," he said. "At the same time they attempted to terrorize the civilian population."

The diplomatic corps and the Polish Foreign Office moved to five differen towns and cities in the course of hi fortnight's trip, he said. In each case he added, they were forced to mov on.

Reported Only What He Saw

Biddle said he reported to the Unite States Government only those case of civilian bombing where he himse had seen the damage or victims.

The last figure he heard when h came out of Poland, he said, was tha the Poles had brought down about 30 German planes.

Arriving with the Ambassador o the Simplon Express from Buchares today were his wife, his stepdaughter Miss Peggy Schultz; his cousin, Mis Mary Willis McKenzie, North Win ship, counselor of the Warsaw em bassy, and Charles Muchinsky, em bassy attache and an assistant instruc tor at the University of Wisconsin.

All participated in the trek fron Warsaw.

A caravan of eight automobiles carried twenty-one persons of the embassy personnel, including eleven women, among whom were embassy typists and clerks.

Biddle said he would remain in Paris for the present, awaiting orders from Washington.

He praised the conduct of the women who were in the party, declaring all proved themselves "good stomach floppers and wood duckers" when, time and again, they were forced to throw themselves in ditches or hide under trees to escape raiding aircraft.

Describes Bombing Of His Villa

The Ambassador said his private villa—Villa Constancin—near Warsaw was bombed the day before the trip started. He said eleven bombs were dropped in a 500-yard space between the villa and a small brick factory. Of the eleven, he said, six were duds.

Two bombs fell within thirty feet of the house, one exploding and hurling fragments into the villa, he added.

Biddle said he was shaving at the time and shouted to his family to get away from the exposed side of the building.

The next day the caravan left Warsaw, going successfully to Lublin, Naleczow, Luck, Dubno, Krzemieniec, then to Zaleszczyki and Kuty at the Rumanian border.

Train Bombed 72 Times

"During our trip all the way out to Rumania we had to get out of the cars and hide sometimes as much as three times in one day," he said. "We actualy were under fire from planes three times."

Before he left Poland, the Ambassador said, he learned a refugee train carrying the families of the Polish Foreign Office staff was bombed seventy-two times during a wandering trip through the country.

During the afternoon, Biddle conferred with the Polish Ambassador to Paris, Julius Lukasiewicz.

Cars Marked "U. S. A."

The French Ambassador to Warsaw, Leon Noel, also arrived on the Simplon Express and reported immediately to Champetier de Ribes, Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

Describing the experiences of his party when shot at by German planes, Biddle said some of the embassy cars had "U. S. A." marked on the tops and flew American flags, but he added that "after we were on the road a while we were advised to remove the markings, as they merely drew attention to us."

"The noise of our motors," he continued, "kept us from hearing planes, so we evolved a system of watching the peasants in the fields. When we saw them looking toward the sky and running for cover we drew up under trees or in a shadow and sought whatever cover we could find for ourselves.

"When prone in the ditches we learned the trick of edging ourselves forward or backward on our elbows to get away from the point where a plane might have first sighted us. This was because sometimes the pilots spotted you and marked your position by a tree or something and came back.

Machine-Gunned Three Times

"We actually abandoned our cars fourteen or fifteen times. We were machined-gunned three times but not hit.

"To show you how quickly the Germans knew of our presence at any given place, there is the case of our arrival at Krzemieniec."

France Sends Dr. Carrel To Important War Task

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 24—France has called on one of her most illustrious sons, Dr. Alexis Carrel, to help her fight the war.

The Official Journal announced today that Marc Rucart, Minister of Public Health, has charged the scientist with an important mission of an undisclosed nature.

Dr. Carrel is known for his work with Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh on the artificial heart and for his researches at the Rockefeller Institute in New York.

Dr. Carrel served in the World War with the French Medical Corps. He and Dr. Henry D. Dakin, a colleague of the Rockefeller Institute, invented a method of treating war wounds that saved thousands of lives.

One of the greatest surgeons in the world, he received the Nobel Prize in Medicine in 1912 for his research in blood transfusions and the transplanting of arteries and organs. He was appointed to the staff of the Rockefeller Institute in New York in 1906 and retired last July.

Son of Ex-President Acclaimed as a Hero—Fell in War

Nazi Shells Set Warsaw Ablaze And Kill 1,000

100 Heavy Guns Pound City, Bombs Fall in 11 Raids; Russians 100 Miles Away

By The Associated Press

BUDAPEST, Sept. 24.—A broadcast from beleaguered Warsaw heard here this afternoon reported more than 1,000 civilians had been killed there in the last twenty-four hours through "terrific shelling" by German heavy artillery.

[Moscow announced that Russian troops had pushed to within less than 100 miles of Warsaw, occupying positions formerly held by the withdrawing German Army. Berlin mentioned the siege of Warsaw only by reporting that the number of Polish deserters from Praga, a suburb of the beleaguered capital, and from Modlin, a fortress eighteen miles northwest, had increased in the last few days. Previously the Germans had explained that the Poles had been able to hold out in Warsaw only because of the German "consideration for the Polish civil population."]

The Warsaw radio alleged that more than 100 heavy guns had been pounding the surrounded capital ceaselessly since Saturday afternoon. The announcer asserted that hundreds of Warsaw's citizens who ventured from cellars to go to church this morning were killed or wounded by Nazi shells.

"These have been the most terrible hours since the siege began," he said, "but the spirits of our troops and our citizens are undaunted. Despite the terrible losses of human lives, Warsaw will be defended. We will never give in."

The announcer again came on the air in the evening, declaring eleven air raids had been made on the city during the day and that German planes were dropping incendiary bombs on Warsaw.

The announcer stated calmly: "At this moment German heavy artillery is shelling the city. German planes heavily bombed 'Little Jesus' (hospital) only a few minutes ago." The left wing of the hospital "became the grave for hundreds of wounded soldiers, women and children," the announcer continued. He said doctors and nurses were attempting to dig out victims.

A description of the bombing of a church in which "many were killed while praying" followed. "In a few minutes the church was in flames, but the priest calmed the people by telling them final victory was sure," the speaker said. "The Germans are unable to withstand our counter-attacks, especially at night."

The announcement said that "Kurjer Poranny," one of the city's newspapers, was still operating. The broadcast included a quotation from the paper which said: "Despite the continued attacks, the life of Warsaw is not over. There is still order. We stand at our posts. Polish soldiers stand at the front."

The announcer's first broadcast was in English, but moments later he said in French: "The opera house, National Theater, polytechnic school are now on fire. The German artillery now is concentrating its fire on the center of the city."

Apparently relaying a description of the action as it was handed to him by messengers, he said at one point:

"Planes are now dropping bombs on the workers' district as well as on museums, public buildings, artistic monuments."

German armored trucks captured by the Poles were being used to distribute food within the city, he declared, adding:

"Seventeen days of siege show the heroism of the Polish soldier and the spirit and sacrifice of our civilians. Under these conditions it is a difficult task to keep order in a city of a million and a half people at a time when death and destruction is raining upon us. Those still able-bodied will bring what aid they can to the hungry, sick and wounded lying in the streets."

At the end of the announcement, the speaker said Warsaw's second radio station was not operating because of "small technical difficulties," but that it soon would be on the air again.

"We are awaiting quick aid from our British and French allies," he concluded.

French Flyers Lead Troops In New Attack

Poilus Advancing Again on 60-Mile Front After Hot Fire Checks Nazis

500,000 Germans Defend West Wall

Planes Massed in Effort to Drive Allies Out of the Saar and Palatinate

By The Associated Press

PARIS, Sept. 24.—The French reported late tonight that they had pinned German troops to their advance guard positions and had resumed the offensive themselves to prevent development of a Nazi thrust on the western front.

Semi-official French military sources said French pressure had been resumed on the sixty-mile front between Saarbruecken and the Rhine. French planes roared out to protect advance operations and fought back German scouters.

Before the French started attacking they were reported mowing down attacking German battalions with interlocking machine gun and automatic rifle fire from nests on the forward slopes of hills which the Germans were trying to capture. The fire halted the German attacks, French reports said.

The French penetration into German territory on virtually all parts of the front was reported to have reached German fortifications so strong that there were between thirty and forty reinforced blockhouses and pillboxes to every square mile. That means the Germans are able to cover every foot of territory with withering machine-gun fire which even speedy French tanks have not been able to brave with impunity.

On the entire 100-mile front between the Moselle and Rhine Rivers, Germany is believed by the French command to have concentrated about thirty divisions, or 500,000 men. These forces were understood to be in addition to motorized divisions capable of striking with lightning speed once the front fortifications have been opened up.

The French general staff's evening communique said:

"There was local activity of our observation planes at various points of the front. Reaction by enemy artillery was particularly strong in the region to the south of Deux-Ponts (Zweibruecken).

"A number of aerial combats took place with success for our pursuit planes in protecting our observation missions."

Today's morning communique had said:

"Numerous local attacks by the enemy on our advanced positions in the region of the Saar and north of Wissembourg were repulsed during the night."

Premier Edouard Daladier conferred today with Gen. Maurice Gamelin, chief of the British-French land forces, on the situation developing on the western front, where operations have not yet reached major proportions but where the Germans are showing their greatest activity since the war started three weeks ago.

The immediate objective of the German command on the western front, which was said to have been visited yesterday by Fuehrer Adolf Hitler and the German Army commander in chief, Col. Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, appeared to be to push the French from positions in the rich industrial Saar Basin and Palatinate region of western Germany.

Military experts said it also was aimed at strengthening German positions for a possible offensive once Nazi chiefs become convinced Great Britain and France will fight regardless of German desires for peace now that Poland has been conquered. In this connection, French observers said an increasingly heavy German air force was massing behind the western front.

So far, fortress warfare between the German Limes and French Maginot lines has followed the ancient principles of siege, with heavy gunfire and swift scouting expeditions during the day followed by sharp attacks under cover of night. French artillery is being used extensively to meet the attacks.

The latest German thrusts were directed against two key sectors on the front between the Moselle and the Rhine. In the center of this northern flank, Nazi forces struck back from Saarbruecken, where the French advanced early in the war. To the east, where the French and German frontier joins the Rhine, Germans attacked just north of the French border town of Wissembourg.

Between these two points, French military dispatches reported, the Germans were exerting pressure north of [illegible]

BRITISH NOW READY TO GO INTO ACTION

Censors Release Their First 'Eyewitness' Account of Movements in France

PICTURESQUE TOUCH GIVEN

New Service Uniform Occupies Much Attention—Air Force Reserve Is Mobilized

LONDON, Sept. 24 (AP)—The British Expeditionary Force was described officially today as preparing to go into action on the Western Front.

Great Britain at the same time notified her trained civilian fliers to stand ready for a call to duty with the Royal Air Force.

Announcement that the army was moving into position came in an eyewitness story on activities issued by the Ministry of Information.

The notification for air force service went to men under 28 years of age who hold first-rate licenses in the Civil War Guard, formed by the government in peacetime to provide flying instructions for civilians.

Four other classes, including Air Guard fliers up to 40, were designated for a later call. The Air Guard supplements the regular Air Force Reserves already summoned.

The government war correspondent, in the material issued by the Ministry of Information, said that the British Expeditionary Force "is still in the stage of moving up to its positions and concentrating its forces preparatory to going into action."

This was the first British official indication that the forces actually were preparing to go into action.

"Along the straight, tree-bordered roads of France," the war correspondent said, "the army traffic moves along in a procession that is practically continuous."

In one area, "with music playing and the Union Jack flying, the troops made a triumphal entry," and "a whole village turned out."

Devoid of actual war news, the war reporter's story was confined to such "picturesque touches" as the following:

"The British soldiers may send no picture post cards home. A panoramic view of the harbor where they arrived or the towns through which they passed would give everything away.

"Many of the drivers are getting to know the roads well and their arms grow tired with waving back to the children."

Some units of the British Expeditionary Force in France "already have been mistaken for Americans on account of their caps," the Ministry of Information announced in a second eye-witness story, taken by the censor from an official report "Somewhere in France."

This statement was included in a series of "remarks" on the British Army's new battle dress, which gives officers and men virtually the same appearance.

The Ministry said this "is the object of much interested study and is apt to confuse French soldiers who want to salute the right people."

Much of the "eye witness" story was devoted to an explanation of why the military censors scrupulously left out from soldiers' letters any mention of "the weather, the materials out of which the houses are built, any description of the landscape or local customs" which "are liable to be dangerous topics."

Italy Warns

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Sept. 24—Fascist Italy, urging Europe to heed Premier Mussolini's appeal that a general war be called off, warned tonight against the frightful and perhaps world-wide slaughter which it said could be expected if there is no settlement now.

Authoritative commentors said Italy did not want to abandon her non-belligerent role, but added that if events brought her into the conflict the consequences would be extremely grave.

"An Italian intervention would signify an immediate war upheaval in eastern Europe and the Mediterranean and from there to other continents," Virginio Gayda, often regarded as il Duce's spokesman, wrote in his newspaper, La Voce d'Italia.

Sees Only German Alliance

Gayda thus indicated he could envisage Italian entry into the war on Germany's side only, for of the belligerents only Britain and France have military establishments in the Mediterranean.

Meanwhile, preparations went forward to make Italy ready for any eventuality.

Mussolini called a Cabinet meeting for next Saturday to deal with internal matters.

It will be the first meeting of the Cabinet since immediately after the outbreak of hostilities when the Cabinet announced Italy was taking no military initiative—a stand reaffirmed by Mussolini yesterday.

Full Force Of Propaganda

As Germany announced the end of the military campaign in Poland, the full force of Italian propaganda was turned on to urge the peoples and governments of Europe to listen to il Duce's warning against a general war.

The argument advanced by the press was the same as Mussolini's—that it was hopeless to wage a devastating war on the Western front for the defense of Polish frontiers which no longer exist and can never be re-established.

Gayda said that if the "imposing and inexhaustible" lines of men and death-dealing weapons facing each other on the Rhine are unloosed, those responsible should realize that such an attempt to impose their doctrine on the other side may result in "massacre of life, property and power."

Charges Paradox In Action

The "construction and paradoxes" of the situation are evident, he said, since the British and French have taken up arms against Germany but not against Russia for doing the same thing.

The Fascist press stressed what it called the favorable reception which Mussolini's speech received throughout the world but dispatches indicated the reception in Germany was much more favorable than in Britain or France.

Foreign diplomats saw in a semi-official French statement scant indication that there was much chance of the warning being accepted in that country. A backdown by Britain and France now, in the opinion of most diplomats, would be tantamount to surrender and would make Adolf Hitler master of Europe.

Partition Said to Shatter Ukraine Hope of Liberty

Italy Hears Region Is Being Sovietized Speedily

ROME, Sept. 24 (AP).—A correspondent of the newspaper "La Stampa," of Turin, in a dispatch today from the Hungarian-Polish frontier, said the Russian-German agreement to partition Poland among themselves "shattered the Ukrainians' dream of independence, the legitimate desire of 40,000,000 individuals living between the Dniester and Don Rivers."

Red commissars are establishing themselves in towns immediately after occupation by the Red army, the dispatch said, and "Sovietization" is being applied with "lightning rapidity."

"One must think with a sense of alarm of thousands of families which between evening and morning have found themselves under the banner of Stalin with the total and immediate loss of their moral, material and religious patrimony," the correspondent said.

"The Moscow radio speaks of joyful populations. Certainly there are some happy people today in Galicia, but for every joy how many sorrows!"

In the train were only a scattering of voyagers, mostly Belgian and Netherlanders. At the English harbor a new set of officials greeted us. They inspected permits, export money and British exit permits were checked four times.

Boarding a little Belgian mail steamer, the writer was immediately huddled into a bulky cork jacket and stewards warned it must be worn throughout the four-and-one-half-hour trip.

The steamer slid out of the harbor under a gray sky, following the English coast line. Soon it passed a strange long line. It consisted of almost 100 ships of neutral nations, all vividly painted with their national flags and their names in huge white letters.

They were waiting for an English approval of their cargoes before passing the war blockade. They were guarded only by gray converted freighters, each of which apparently mounted only one small gun at the stern. Not a warship was seen.

The steamer sped out into the Channel, soon losing sight of land and bumping full into the traditional dirty weather. Soon most of the passengers looked as though they did not care whether a submarine appeared. It was obvious the lifeboats hanging ready would have a difficult time riding the ten-foot waves and strong current.

After nightfall, when the lights of the coast could be seen, every one relaxed. Even the few feeble lights of Ostend quay, in the station and in the train were a revelation to visitors from London, now accustomed to the pitch-black English nights.

Belgian soldiers outnumber civilians two to one. Although this is a neutral country, the comments of the people in restaurants and on trains revealed their worry. The uncertainty was so disturbing to the normal routine that customs men neglected to examine baggage.

British Freighter Sunk, 12 Lost

By The Associated Press

DUBLIN, Sept. 24.—Survivors of the British freighter Hazelside said tonight the ship had been attacked and sunk by a German submarine off the Irish coast. Twelve of the crew of thirty-four aboard the 4,646-ton vessel were reported missing. The Hazelside was en route from British Columbia to an undisclosed European port.

The twenty-two survivors were landed in County Cork. Five of them were injured, one severely. Two of the Hazelside's crew were said to have been killed by shell fire.

Wireless Operator Birkett, treated for injuries, said the freighter was fired on without warning. He estimated the submarine shot twenty to thirty shells at the Hazelside. The master of the ship, Capt. Joseph Davies, tried to make a run for it, but failed to escape the submarine's shell fire.

Some of the survivors put overside in a lifeboat to escape, but the boat was damaged by shelling.

Passengers on Steamer in English Channel Wear Lifebelts Through 4½-Hour Trip

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Sept. 24 (AP)—Crossing the English Channel in wartime is grim business compared to the usual "ferry ride." In contrast to the long, palatial Continental trains from London, this correspondent left that city today in a three-car train after passports were scrutinized carefully at the station.

Moscow Closes River Neva to Foreign Vessels

Invokes 'War Danger' Clause of Finnish Treaty; Polish Peasants Seize Estates

MOSCOW, Sept. 24 (AP).—The Soviet Union has barred foreign ships from the strategic River Neva, it was learned here tonight.

The river flows through the outskirts of Leningrad into the Gulf of Finland, an arm of the Baltic Sea. The ban was understood to have included Finnish ships. An agreement between Russia and Finland, signed in 1923, maintained Russia's right to close the waterway to Finnish ships in case of "war danger."

Meanwhile, the Russian mobilization period was extended indefinitely in face of the international situation.

The process of Sovietization of the western Ukraine and White Russian area, newly acquired from Poland, was pushed forward. Soviet sources said the program called for a campaign against landlord and capitalist classes in the area. Reports in Moscow newspapers from the Polish front disclosed that the Red Army had stormed a number of large country homes where Polish officers and landlords had taken refuge.

In both city and rural districts of former Poland, committees of workers and peasants were being formed, it was reported. Soviet agents explained to the Polish populations now under Russian control the system of collectivism.

War on Landlords Pressed

Word reaching here said peasants now occupied the country estates of former wealthy Polish land-owners. The sources said horses, agricultural implements and land were divided among them under the supervision of the "soviets" set up by the Red Army.

A relentless campaign against landlords, many of whom have gone into hiding, was disclosed in pamphlets dropped from Soviet airplanes appealing to the peasants to "get rid" of the ruling classes. "No place must be left for them . . ." the pamphlets read. Dated Sept. 17, the day the Russian troops started to march, the leaflets said "we will give you aid against" the upper classes.

It was disclosed that Russian troops had pushed within less than 100 miles of Warsaw, occupying positions formerly held by the withdrawing German army. The return of wounded Soviet troops to Moscow indicated the Poles were still putting up some resistance.

Tonight's general staff communique on the day's operations in Poland said that the Red Army, "continuing to clear the territory" of White Russia and the western Ukraine, "in the course of liquidation of Polish troops southeast of the Brest-Litovsk fortress disarmed and took prisoner more than 10,000 soldiers and officers."

185 Miles From Warsaw

Northeast of Warsaw, the communique said, the Soviet troops captured "an infantry regiment and troops of a mechanized brigade."

The communique reported continuing advances westward toward the German-Russian demarcation line along the entire front from north to south. Of the towns reported occupied the nearest to Warsaw was Bransk, eighty-five miles east and slightly north of the capital.

Members of the Polish Embassy staff, who had planned to leave several days ago, delayed their departure indefinitely. It was understood the government was inquiring into the whereabout and fate of its embassy staff in Warsaw. It was known, however, that the Soviet Ambassador to Poland was now in Moscow.

Deep interest was shown in diplomatic circles over the arrival of Karl Selter, Estonian Minister of Foreign Affairs, and the anticipated arrival of Sukru Saracoglu, Turkish Foreign Minister. Soviet sources pointed out that the expansion of Russia's vast empire increased her influence over the Black Sea, in the Balkans and on the Baltic. Estonia was Russian territory before the World War.

Reports that Yugoslavia had moved to restore diplomatic relations with Russia could not be confirmed. Such negotiations were reliably reported from Belgrade last Tuesday.

Britain Calls on Russia To Explain Polish Policy

Maisky Tells Halifax He'll Find Out About It

LONDON, Sept. 25 (Monday) (AP).—The British government was reported in informed quarters today to have officially requested the Soviet government for information on its future policy in view of the Red Army's invasion of eastern Poland.

It was disclosed that Viscount Halifax, British Foreign Secretary, called Ivan Maisky, the Russian Ambassador, to the Foreign Office for an interview Saturday night. After a conversation which lasted nearly an hour covering latest developments in the European situation, Maisky was understood to have promised to communicate with his government and give Halifax an early reply.

Red Army Communique

MOSCOW, Sept. 24 (AP)—The Red Army General Staff communique on its operations in Poland for today said:

"During the day of Sept. 24 Red Army troops continued to advance toward the demarcation line, having occupied the towns of Seiny (Seuny), Augustov (Augustow) and Grubeshov (Grubieszow). They reached the line of Augustov-Knyshin (Knyszyn)—Bryansk (Bransk)—Rasno (Rasna about twenty-five miles northwest of Brest-Litovsk)—Pischchats (Piszczac) about twelve miles southwest of Brest-Litovsk)—Lyubom-Grubeshov-Unuv (Uhnow)—Lanuv (about twelve miles northwest of Lwow).

"Komarno, Drogobych (Drohobycz) and Boryslaw were occupied southwest of the town of Lwow.

"Continuing to clear the territory of Western White Russia and Western Ukraine of remnants of the Polish Army, Red Army troops in the course of liquidation of a group of Polish troops southeast of the Brest-Litovsk fortress, disarmed and took prisoner more than 10,000 soldiers and officers, and in the area south and southeast of Grubeshov took prisoner an infantry regiment and troops of a mechanized brigade."

Exchange Exemptions Announced By Canada

Certain Classes Of Non-Residents Are Freed From Special Control Measures

Ottawa, Sept. 24 (Canadian Press)—Exemptions of certain non-residents of Canada from restrictions of the foreign-exchange control were announced tonight.

Non-resident holders of insurance policies and annuities payable in Canadian dollars are exempted from obtaining foreign-exchange permits if the policy or contract was entered into prior to September 6, 1939.

Also exempted from permit requirements are insurance companies authorized to do business in Canada and non-resident holders of foreign securities, such as members of diplomatic and consular corps.

SPEED ADVOCATED AT PANAMA PARLEY

Haste Called Essential To Guard Interests Of Americas From War

[By the Associated Press]

Panama, Panama, Sept. 24—Delegates of twenty-one American republics to the inter-American neutrality conference debated today a proposal to speed up procedure.

Proponents of the plan, who were said to include the United States' delegation, contended speed was essential in protecting the interests of the Americas in the war-time emergency.

The first plenary session of the conference, which was opened yesterday by President Juan Demostenes Arosemena of Panama, was arranged for tomorrow. Delegates said Sumner Welles, Under Secretary of State and head of the United States delegation, would address the limitation of discussion sessions to foreign ministers or their representatives.

Two Opposing Views

This move counters suggestions that the full membership of delegations participate in consultative sessions. Opponents of this procedure contended it would slow up debates and delay final decisions.

The latter group contended that a delay might "prove fatal" to the best interests of the hemisphere in view of the swift-moving European developments.

Informed sources said the question probably would be settled in informal conferences tomorrow.

Panama's Foreign Minister, Narciso Garay, is expected to be elected permanent president of the consultations committee by acclamation. His election is to be proposed by Costa Rica's Foreign Minister, Zuniga Montufar.

Welles To Speak For U. S.

Welles is scheduled to state the United States' position on neutrality and its related economic problems.

Opening-day addresses are to be broadcast over both continents.

Major problems of the conference, observers declared, are the difficulties faced by merchantmen in the war, the serious lack of ships to carry goods and the contraband lists of England and Germany.

Delegates emphasized it is not the aim of the conference to adopt identical courses on neutrality, but to coordinate interests by "frank, harmonious exchange of views."

Reich Plans War Levies To Raise Over Two Billion

Regular Taxes Are Expected to Add to Funds

BERLIN, Sept. 24 (AP).—The current issue of "Die Deutsche Volkswirtschaft," Nazi economic monthly, throws some light on how the German government intends to finance the war.

A special war levy on incomes is expected to yield 2,600,000,000 marks annually. (Par value of the mark is 40 cents.). Contributions by cities and communes are expected to bring in 1,500,000,000 marks, and war taxes on tobacco, beer, champagne and liquors to net 1,250,000,000, a total of 5,350,000,000, or about $2,140,000,000.

Regular taxes yielding 24,000,000,000 marks also were counted by the publication saying that "a considerable portion will be diverted towards financing the war."

Press Gets More Meat As 'Laborers' in Reich

BERLIN, Sept. 24 (AP).—Foreign newspaper correspondents raised no objection today when they were told the German government had classified them as "hard laborers." This meant their weekly meat supply had been doubled, giving them slightly more than two pounds.

Hard laborers, under the ration system, get twice as much meat as white-collar workers.

Denies Nazi Officials Hold Getaway Funds

Goebbels Personally Refutes Reports Of Emergency Deposits In Foreign Countries

Berlin, Sept. 24—Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels appeared before foreign correspondents today to "deny emphatically" reports published abroad that certain members of the German Government had deposited cash in London and South American countries to protect themselves against any internal German smashup.

It was his second appearance before the correspondents since the beginning of the war.

On the first occasion, last Thursday, he denied that German forces intended to go through the Netherlands, Belgium or Luxembourg.

Reich to Honor Fritsch At Funeral Tomorrow

State Services Planned for Former Army Head

BERLIN, Sept. 24 (AP).—A state funeral for Col.-Gen. Baron Werner von Fritsch, former commander in chief of the German Army, who was killed in action before Warsaw on Friday, will be held on Tuesday in the square before Berlin's war memorial on the Unter den Linden.

High military honors will be paid the officer who, it was reported, died on a "dangerous reconnoitering operation." The announcement of his death discclosed he was participating in the Polish campaign in a role far below his former high position.

Observers said it was taken for granted that Fuhrer Adolf Hitler would attend the funeral at 11 a. m. (5 a. m., E. S. T.). The state funeral was ordered by the Fuehrer, from whose graces Fritsch fell in February, 1939. The old-line officer was partly restored to Hitler's favor last fall, however, but never to his old ranking office.

Fritsch will be buried in the Invaliden Ce[illegible] Berlin, where many offic[illegible]rs are buried.

Nazi Naval Prize Court Is Inducted Into Office

Hears Hitler Is 'Unequivocally for International Law

BERLIN, Sept. 24 (AP).—A German naval prize court was inducted into office today with a speech by the Minister of Justice, Franz Guertner, who declared that Fuehrer Adolf Hitler desired "unequivocally to observe the principles of international law" in pursuing the war at sea.

He said contraband orders showed "Germany is attempting to disturb commerce as little as possible."

Reserve Admiral Walter Gladisch, former commander in chief of the navy, was named Reich Prize Commissioner over a court of several judges.

ARMY TRAIN HITS ANOTHER

Twelve Guards Killed In Accident In Balkans

Belgrade, Sept. 24 (AP)—Twelve guards were reported killed today when a military supply train in which they were traveling crashed into a passenger train after careening out of control down a grade near Benjaluka, in Bosnia.

There were no passenger-train casualties.

Nazis Cite Poland's Fate To Warn Balkan Nations

Point Moral That Neutrality Is the Safe Course

BERLIN, Sept. 24 (AP).—"Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz," mouthpiece of the German Foreign Office, said today that Poland's fate could dissipate any desire in the Balkans to desert neutrality for the "English front against Germany."

The Balkans have the "best possibility" of keeping out of the present conflict, it said.

"Germany is ready to guard endangered interests everywhere with all its power," the commentary stated and added the southeastern states had found a "natural relationship" to Germany in a practical exchange of goods.

Beyond these successful economic relations, "Korrespondenz" continued, 'Germany has no further political interest in the southeast. It is only interested that this area does not plunge itself into an adventure which would bring about a disturbance of its own and Germany's relations.

"The southeastern states themselves won't feel any desire—alone, in view of the fate into which Poland allowed herself to be driven irresponsibly—to sacrifice themselves for the sake of some powers and their mad aims."

Nazis Building G.H.Q. 'Somewhere in West'

BERLIN, Sept. 24 (AP).—The German High Command has started construction of a bomb-proof great army headquarters (grosses haupt quartier) "somewhere in the west," apparently in preparation for prolonged warfare, it was learned reliably today.

The information said the German G. H. Q. was being built on a mountain in such a manner as to be invulnerable to enemy bombs dropped from above.

Poles in France Called To Form Special Army

PARIS, Sept. 24 (AP).—Steps were taken today to build up a Polish army in France to fight on the western front.

Juliusz Lukasiewicz, Polish Ambassador at Paris, ordered all Polish men between seventeen and forty-five years of age, whether residents or visitors in France, to report next Friday and to hold themselves ready for obligatory service in this army.

Foreign Plane Chased By Netherlands Flyers

Craft Vanishes in Direction of German Frontier Town

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 24 (AP).—Netherlands aircraft pursued briefly a foreign plane sighted over Gelderland Province, southeast of Amsterdam, this afternoon. The plane disappeared in the direction of Emmerik, a German town near Holland's frontier.

The neutral Netherlanders have forbidden flights over their country by any foreign planes, but there have been at least a dozen such violations since Sept. 3.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Sept. 24 (AP)—Col. Vassil Boldeff, chief of Bulgaria's air force, announced today that he was leaving immediately for Moscow to complete arrangements for a regular airline service between Soviet Russia and Bulgaria.

Successful negotiations with the Soviet for expansion of trade were announced last night.

SHORTAGE OF BUTTER ADMITTED BY BRITAIN

But Information Ministry Says Margarine Is Available

LONDON, Sept. 24 (AP)—A shortage of butter in Britain was disclosed tonight by the British Ministry of Information, which announced that "supplies of margarine of good quality are available as a substitute."

Effective today the retail price of all butter was fixed at one shilling and seven pence a pound in place of two prices for two different grades of butter established Sept. 13.

"It is inevitable that in present circumstances butter supplies should be less than normal," the Ministry explained. "Owing to the war, supplies from some Continental countries are not arriving, while those from other sources are temporarily reduced owing to dislocation of shipments. Withdrawals from stores have also been exceptionally heavy this month as a result of unusually large demands by traders and customers."

Britain's entire bulk stocks of butter were requisitioned Friday by the Ministry of Food "to control the initial stages of distribution and insure a fair sharing of the available stocks throughout the country in the interim period before rationing is introduced." Under this plan sales to dealers will be limited.

"Some retailers may find it difficult to serve their customers with their normal order," the Ministry warned. "In war conditions and particularly in the early months, consumers cannot expect to obtain their normal supplies of butter."

When food rationing starts each consumer will receive "a definite amount of butter and margarine," the Ministry said. "Rationing will insure an adequate allowance to every one which should thereafter be maintained."

Swiss Soldiers Freed To Aid in Fall Harvest

Trucks and Horses Released, But Border is Guarded

BERNE, Switzerland, Sept. 24 (AP).—The Swiss high command released today an unstated number of cavalry, transport and artillery units, freeing horses, trucks and men to aid in the fall harvest.

Military observers explained that since mobilization was complete there would be little movement of transport units and artillery had been placed.

Horses of cavalrymen were sent to areas from which they could reach their posts within twenty-four hours.

The command also released a large number of requisitioned automobiles. There was no relaxation in the frontier guard.

Swiss Report French Offensive

BASEL, Switzerland, Sept. 24 (AP).—French troops were reported tonight to have opened a co-ordinated series of powerful attacks on the front between the eastern Saar region and the Vosges Mountains.

Advices telling of heightened French activity reached Basel after German sources had said Nazi troops took positions on French soil on both sides of the Alsatian town of Wissembourg—a report which brought a quick denial from the French.

Reports from the forty-mile front said the French attacks, which may have been inspired by local German gains on that front or may be the beginning of an offensive, followed heavy artillery preparation by the French Maginot forts. The center of the action was on Horn Creek, between Hornbach and Zweibruecken.

On the west, troops who had been working westward from the Blies River area toward the industrial city of Saarbruecken turned northward toward Blieskastel, where the main German Limes line begins.

On the east, strong forces operating behind tanks were said to have recaptured the village of Schweix, which the Germans twice wrested back from the French. Schweix is half a mile over the border in Germany. The French eastern wing was reported to have driven northeast toward the city of Pirmasens.

Farther east, the French appeared to be engaged in an attempt to cut off the advanced Limes forts at Fischbach and Ludwigswinkel, in the Vosges forests between Wissembourg and Bitche. Still farther east on the western front, however, the French apparently still were on the defensive against German pressure on Wissembourg.

Despite the conflict between French and German claims, military advices received here said it appeared the Germans had succeeded at least in pushing the French back across the frontier in the Wissembourg area.

This action covered a fourteen-mile strip of the border between Wissembourg and the Rhine. At the eastern end of that strip Germans reoccupied the border village of Scheibenhardt and installed machine guns which forced the French to withdraw from the French town of the same name on their side of the frontier, dispatches said.

German Scheibenhardt was first taken by the French with little effort several days ago, and from it they were threatening the heart of the Bienwald.

The war front advices said the French withdrawal left Lauterbourg, near the point where the frontier joines the Rhine, exposed to fire from three sides. Normally a town of less than 2,000 inhabitants, the ancient walls and houses of Lauterbourg were said to be held by troops numbering more than four times the usual civilian population.

BASEL-SEPT-24

MAIN GERMAN ACTION SEEMED AIMED, HOWEVER, AT WISSEMBOURG WHERE NAZIS SOUGHT A FOOTHOLD ON HEIGHTS WEST OF THE CITY NEAR THE ROAD TO LEMBACH.

EVEN IF THE GERMANS WERE ABLE TO NIP OFF THE WISSEMBOURG-LAUTERBOURG-SELTZ TRIANGLE, WHICH MILITARY MEN SAID WOULD BE A TREMENDOUS FEAT, THEY WOULD HAVE LITTLE ROOM TO SPREAD OUT BECAUSE THE HUGE HAGUENAU FOREST FORTS, ONE OF THE MAGINOT LINE'S MAIN BASTIONS, LIE JUST 15 MILES SOUTH OF THE FRONTIER.

GERMANS WERE USING THE USUAL TACTICS OF FORTRESS WARFARE, RELYING MAINLY ON SMALL THOUGH NUMEROUS PATROLS TO FIGHT THEIR WAY FROM PILLBOX TO PILLBOX.

OTHER PARTS OF THE WESTERN FRONT WERE REPORTED COMPARATIVELY CALM EXCEPT ALONG THE BLIES CREEK AREA JUST EAST OF SAARBRUECKEN.

IN BASEL, THE SWISS WERE CHEERED BY REPORTS AUSTRIAN TROOPS HAD APPEARED SUDDENLY ON THE SHORE OF LAKE CONSTANCE WHICH FORMS THE FRONTIER BETWEEN AUSTRIA AND SWITZERLAND. THEY REPLACED GERMAN FORCES WHO WERE MOVED TO THE WESTERN FRONT FACING FRANCE.

SWISS LOOKED ON THIS AS INDICATION THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND HAD NO INTENTION, AT LEAST FOR THE MOMENT, OF INVADING SWITZERLAND TO OUTFLANK FRENCH BATTLE LINES SINCE THE SWISS BELIEVED IT UNLIKELY THE AUSTRIANS WOULD BE USED AS THE SPEARHEAD FOR SUCH AN ATTACK.

French Pound Nazi Lines by Air and Land

Troops Push Into Haardt Mountains After Planes Win 2 Battles Over Front

Whole Line Active, British Moving Up

Limes Forts Across Rhine Shelled From Karlsruhe to the Swiss Frontier

By The Associated Press

PARIS, Sept. 25.—The French announced tonight that they had defeated a German air fleet in two major aerial battles above the western front. The battles were fought yesterday as a preliminary to the pounding of Germany's main Limes fortifications, from one end to the other of the western front, which French big guns opened up today.

The French said "superior numbers" of German planes were defeated in two distinct fights. The French admitted they lost two planes, but said they were certain the Germans lost a greater number, despite superior strength.

The pilots and the machine gunners of two German planes shot down on French territory were captured. The French pilot of one plane shot down by the Germans parachuted safely to his squadron headquarters.

"Many" German Planes Lost

French authorities said they were certain far more than two German planes were shot down, but they were able to report only the German planes which fell behind the French lines.

The French official communique said the Germans lost "many" pursuit ships in the two Sunday fights, in which squadron after squadron took part. German military advices reaching Paris said the French lost eight planes.

[The French War Ministry attached to the evening communique, The United Press reported, a special note saying: "Contrary to a German communique this morning which claims eight French planes were shot down yesterday, our air losses on Sept. 24 total two planes. One of the two French pilots was killed and the other was able to land by parachute and succeeded in rejoining his squadron. The German aviator of two German planes shot down inside the French lines were taken prisoner."]

While the planes fought overhead, the French started the drive which today carried them into the Haardt Mountains, on the German side of the frontier, between Wissembourg and Pirmasens. Waves of French infantry, aided by artillery fire, were said to be attacking toward the only main road through the mountains in one of the most difficult sectors of the entire northern flank of the front.

As the French infantry attack began, the rest of the front sprang into action. Advices from the front said shells screamed across the River Rhine at the Limes fortifications all the way from Karlsruhe south to the Swiss frontier.

It was the first time the southern flank, where the Maginot and Limes fronts are separated only by the Rhine, had been active since some French artillery operations in the first two days of the war. German guns were reported to have replied, but the French said the enemy artillery was failing to make direct hits on advanced French positions.

British Moving Up

British troops were reported continuing to move up toward the front. It was announced authoritatively there were almost six times as many British divisions ready for service in 1939 as there were at the start of the World War a quarter of a century ago.

[An ordinary British division numbers 19,000 or 20,000 men; a motorized or other special division has 12,000 men and upward.]

The British reported thrity-two divisions were ready, some of which already had started taking their places in the front line, by contrast with the six divisions of "Old Contemptibles" in 1914. The name "Old Contemptibles" was adopted by the British from a description of them by the then Kaiser Wilhelm II.

Premier Edouard Daladier called today a Cabinet meeting for tomorrow at the Elysee Palace to review the war situation. President Albert Lebrun will preside.

The French drive into the Haardt Mountains was reaching out toward the Limes line itself, military dispatches indicated. The Haardt range, a continuation of the Vosges Mountains, covers a twenty-mile sector between the German town of Pirmasens and the French town of Wissembourg.

The Limes line, which runs just behind Pirmasens, begins to angle in toward the frontier southeast of the town, diminishing the width of the no-man's-land separating the main positions of the two armies.

The French attack in this area was what military men described as an "active defense." The quick French blows, military observers said, were designed to keep the Germans so occupied they would be unable to begin the general offensive which the French have been expecting for several days past.

Observers said the French apparently believed they had found a weak spot in the Nazi lines where the Germans trusted to the difficulty of the terrain to protect the Limes line. This mountainous area, heavily wooded and cut by small streams, is the only sector of the northern flank east of the strategic German city of Saarbruecken which the Germans failed to test in their scouting and raiding operations last week.

As the French advanced their lines, advices from the front said, heavy artillery was moved up behind them. French field guns were reported trained on the lines of casemates which form Germany's West Wall defenses.

The French official communique issued this evening said:

"Activity of our advance infantry elements east of the Saar.

"Heavy enemy artillery action in the same region.

"During aerial combats which took place on the front during the day of the 24th, our patrols of pursuit planes joined in battles twice with enemy air forces far superior in numbers.

"Many German pursuit planes were shot down, of which two fell on our territory."

The morning communique had said:

"There has been local improvement of our positions.

"Activity by enemy artillery in the region southeast of Zweibruecken."

Military observers said the French infantry advance appeared to be intended more to establish artillery positions than anything else. The main French objectives were said to be the hilltops, which could be used as observation posts for artillery emplaced on the concealed plateaus.

They said, as the war took shape on the western front, it appeared that French advances into German territory had been designed to cover the moving up of artillery within effective range of the Limes forts. The French were apparently waging an "artilleryman's war," on the theory that their heavy-caliber shells would be the most effective means of making contact with the forts and softening the reinforced concrete walls.

Now that French guns were reported emplaced on German soil all the way along the northern flank, from the Moselle River Valley, on the Luxemburg frontier, to the center of the front, at Lauterbourg, the French high command apparently had given orders for a methodical shelling of the Limes Line from one end of it to the other.

Military observers said it was significant, in this connection, that the French shelling of the southern portion of the Limes Line did not begin until today, when the guns on the northern flank had been moved into position so that the pounding, from Luxemburg to Switzerland, could be carried out in a simultaneous, co-ordinated plan.

Called Heaviest Blow So Far

BASEL, Switzerland, Sept. 25 (AP).—French troops resumed their drive against the Limes Line along a forty-mile front today, in what dispatches said was the heaviest action thus far on the western front. Co-ordinated attacks along the winding line from the Saar basin to the Vosges Mountains followed a night-long bombardment of German fortifications, the reports said.

Troops in many sectors were said to have moved up with the advance of heavy batteries from the Maginot forts which sent shells battering against the German barricades.

Swiss said the reports indicated the Poilus were closing their lines almost within the shadow of main German fortifications. Military advices noted French advances mainly in the Mandel and Blies Creek Valleys and in the area northwest of Wissembourg, in the Palatinate forest.

The strength of the French assault, sources here said, was indicated in German dispatches saying that the Nazi forces relied upon heavy artillery fire in an attempt to halt the French. The French were reported to have sent reinforcements into Wissembourg, where German forces were continuing an attack.

Increased activity of the French and British air squadrons inspired reports along the border that the commands believed they had sufficient material concentrated behind the Maginot Line to challenge Germany's claims of supremacy in the skies.

PARIS REPORTS AIR VICTORY OVER THE WESTERN FRONT

Says Superior Number Was Routed—French Shell 'Weak Spot' in Main Siegfried Line.

PARIS, Sept. 25 (A. P.).—The French General Staff announced tonight that "many" German warplanes had been shot down by the French over the western front today.

The French victories, a staff communique indicated, were won against German squadrons superior in numbers.

Two German pursuit planes, the French said, fell behind the French lines.

The text of the night communique follows:

"Activity of our advance infantry elements east of the Saar.

"Heavy enemy artillery action in the same region.

"During aerial combats which took place on the front during the day of the 24th our patrols of pursuit planes joined in battles twice with enemy air forces far superior in numbers.

"Many German pursuit planes were shot down, of which two fell on our territory."

Main German Forts Shelled.

French troops struck at German positions in the Haardt Mountains earlier in the day under cover of heavy fire by artillery which French dispatches said was bombarding main fortifications of Germany's Siegfried Line.

The entire western front sprang to life.

Military advices said shells screamed across the Rhine for the first time since the first two days of the war. The Siegfried and Maginot lines are separated only by the river along the southern half of the German-French frontier.

French troops were hitting at a Haardt Mountain road which winds through some of the most rugged terrain of the western front. A continuation of the Vosges range, the Haardts cover a twenty-mile sector between the German town of Pirmasens and French Wissembourg.

Weak Spot Believed Found.

Apparently the French believed they had found a weak spot in Germany's fortifications where the Germans had depended on rugged country as a protection.

Late today Premier Daladier called a Cabinet meeting for 5 P. M. tomorrow at the Elysee Palace to review the war. President Lebrun will preside.

Earlier military dispatches from the western front reported that French artillery had begun a direct bombardment of the main fortifications of the German Siegfried Line.

Heavy French batteries, the dispatches said, were dropping large caliber shells on the west wall casemates in an effort to blast the German defenders from their positions in the heavily fortified zone.

German guns replied to the bombardment, it was said, but the French declared that the Nazi artillery was failing to make direct hits on the advanced French positions.

Most of the artillery action was then reported centered south of the German town of Saarbruecken and along the Lauter River.

French Take Initiative.

Dispatches said that last night was comparatively quiet along the entire front as the Germans failed to renew the assaults they had been launching during the last few days with small bodies of troops between the Rhine and the Moselle.

The War Ministry's communique issued this morning said simply:

"There has been local improvement of our positions.

"Activity by enemy artillery in the region southeast of Zweibruecken."

Earlier, the French, taking advantage of the lull in German thrusts, assumed the initiative at several points, it was said, to consolidate their position and thwart Nazi preparation for new attacks.

Showing Off or Covering Up.

French dispatches said that the action extended from the Warndt Forest on the west to the Bienwald Forest in the east, and that fighting occurred near the German cities of Saarbruecken, Zweibruecken, Pirmasens and Bergzaberg. Reconnaisance flights were carried out "with success," the reports added.

[A communique issued by the German High Command in Berlin said that eight French planes had been shot down.]

The French attacking units, informed persons said, were seeking to learn the secret behind the recent numerous assaults on their advanced position. There was some speculation whether the Nazis were putting on a show for the benefit of Fuehrer Hitler, who is reported to be on the west front, or whether they were masking hurried troop displacements and new fortifications ahead of the French forces.

The French said that they had "annihilated" several German units which attempted yesterday to dislodge troops from dominating hilltop nests in the Saar, Blies and Lauter River regions.

Dispatches reported that the Germans were massing warplanes at strategic frontier points as far south as the Swiss border, indicating that great aerial operations were likely soon to overshadow the "fortress warfare" on land.

In this connection observers showed interest in the comment made in Paris by Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Jr., the American Ambassador to Poland, who estimated that Germany had used 5,000 planes in a five-day assault on Polish production and communication lines. Mr. Biddle, who arrived here yesterday after a hazardous trek from Poland, during which he said he was frequently under fire, declared that the Nazi planes shuttled constantly from north to south and from southeast to northeast over Poland, "Making the whole interior a front." He estimated that the Germans had lost 800 planes in the Polish campaign.

Intended as a Lure.

Meanwhile French military writers have asked the public to "be patient" because no general offensive had been opened on the Western front. Many observers believed that the French tactics had been designed to lure the Germans into an offensive.

Some French experts asserted that the German Army was not so powerful as the military machine the Kaiser launched against France in 1914, either in numbers or fighting ability. They conceded, however, that the German equipment was excellent, and that there seemed to be plenty of it available.

At the same time, the French have expressed satisfaction with their famous seventy-five-millimeter field guns, which played such an important part in the first world war and which they have been employing effectively to cover advances during the current fighting. This weapon, which demonstrated its potentialities at the First Battle of the Marne in 1914, was designed by Col. Joseph Albert Deport, and subsequently modified by Gen. Charles Etienne Sainte Claire-Deville.

The Germans referred to the "75's" as "Devil Guns" in 1914, a tribute to their accuracy and the high explosive force of the shells they threw.

In 1914, at the start of the war, the French had only 120 of these guns, but as their efficiency was demonstrated, the factories began pouring them out. How many the French had in 1918 was kept a secret, but just before the armistic it was estimated that they were pouring 226,000 shells daily into the German lines.

Troops On Neutral Borders In Case Foes Cross, Nazis Say

German Army Insists It Would Not Attempt To Attack Allies Through Belgium Or Holland

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 25—Germans in informed quarters explained tonight that the massing of troops near the three-cornered border of Germany, the Netherlands and Belgium was a precaution against any French or British designs to find a "soft front" for a drive through neutral soil into the Reich.

These sources said it would be against Germany's interests to carry on military operations there because of its proximity to the Ruhr coal fields and lower Rhine industrial region.

A communique meanwhile announced the sinking of an unidentified British destroyer by a German submarine and the shooting down of eight French warplanes during an aerial battle in the west.

The communique said maritime warfare was "yielding good results," and added that on the Western front there had been "reconnoitering activity and artillery activity on both sides" at undisclosed points.

With German military leaders devoting most of their attention to the Western front, the opinion was expressed in circles close to the high command that "if the Reich is vulnerable anywhere, it is along the frontier facing neutrals."

The possibility that Germany's enemies might seek to "march in or fly in" over Belgium on the Netherlands, first expressed by unquotable informed sources, was brought into the open tonight by DNB, official news agency.

Says Foes Seek To Act

Commenting on new reports in Britain that Germany was massing troops near the Netherlands and Belgium with the object of attacking from the north, DNB said:

"The constant revival of this discussion must lead to the conclusion here that there is basis for suspicion that there is the intention on the part of Germany's opponents to violate Belgian and Netherlander neutrality for which they are now seeking a plausible excuse."

The agency intimated that alarming the world with repeated reports of a vast concentration of German troops near Belgium and the Netherlands might provide such an excuse.

"Germany wants no extension of the war zone in the west and has emphasized she has no war aims against England or France," it was said in authoritative quarters.

Close To Coal Fields

"Certainly Germany would least want the battle front along the Netherlander and Belgian frontiers because that is uncomfortably close to the Ruhr coal fields and to the highly developed lower Rhine industrial region," these quarters said.

"It may be true that the neutrality of Belgium and the Netherlands is endangered, but not from the German side."

It was said that neutrals in the geographical position of Belgium and the Netherlands were in an especially uncomfortable situation because the strength of the Siegfried Line made direct attack upon Germany exceedingly difficult.

Considerations of strategy might dictate a charge around one end of the Siegfried bulwark, these quarters said.

Fight Near Air Base

DNB quoted the high command this evening that French airplanes had been sighted and fired upon over Lake Constance, near the Friedrichshafen Zeppelin base.

The German report said the planes failed to drop bombs and were chased off over Swiss territory. The high command earlier refused comment on foreign reports of a raid in the Friedrichshafen area.

[Editor's Note—Swiss border advices said unidentified warplanes Sunday night decommissioned an aircraft engine factory in a raid on Friedrichshafen.]

A high command report stated that to date, twenty-six enemy planes and four observation balloons had been shot down on the Western front. These figures did not include the British planes reported shot down in an attack on Wilhelmshafen, where the number of British planes downed was never accurately established.

German authorities still declined to give German airplane or other losses in the Polish campaign, but the Propaganda Ministry ridiculed British radio reports that between 500 and 1,000 German warplanes had been destroyed.

Wilhelm Frick, Interior Minister, ordered official mourning tomorrow for the state funeral for Col. Gen. Werner von Fritsch, former commander in chief of the army. There was no announcement as to whether Adolf Hitler would attend the ceremony. Von Fritsch was killed in action before Warsaw.

Today's German supreme army command communique follows:

"In the east, on Sept. 24, the movement of German troops toward the demarcation line (between German and Soviet Russian zones of occupation in Poland) continued frictionless everywhere and in perfect unison with Russian units.

"In repeated raids, bombers successfully attacked important military objects in Warsaw.

"At various points in the west, there were reconnoitering and artillery activity on both sides.

"Eight French planes were shot down in an air fight.

"A German submarine sank a British destroyer.

"Maritime warfare also yielded good results."

War's 10 Commandments Given to Reich Soldiers

'Fight Chivalrously . . . Spare Civil Population' Included

BERLIN, Sept. 25 (AP).—The "ten commandments of the German soldier," a copy of which is carried by every member of the Reich's armed forces, were disclosed today by the Ministry of Propaganda and Public Enlightenment, which said they reaffirmed the German determination to fight in accordance with international conventions. The commandments are:

1. Fight chivalrously, without unnecessary brutality.
2. A soldier must be uniformed.
3. A soldier must spare the life of any opponent who surrenders.
4. Treat prisoners humanely.
5. Refrain from the use of dumdum bullets.
6. Respect the Red Cross.
7. Spare the civil population unnecessary hardships and refrain from plundering.
8. Respect the neutrality of noncombatant states.
9. On capture give name and identification, but nothing respecting army organization.
10. Report violations of these principles by the enemy.

Fighting Called Heavy.

BASLE, Switzerland, Sept. 25 (A. P.).—Thousands of French soldiers, backed by tanks and complete offensive equipment, clashed with German troops today in what the dispatches described as heavy fighting along a forty-mile jagged line in the heart of the western front.

Reports reaching this frontier city said that the engagement was the result of a series of French attacks from the Saar basin to the Vosges Mountains.

It still was too early, however, to judge from the reports whether the fighting was the beginning of a French offensive, or merely a concentrated effort to recapture positions which, it was said, the German counter-attacks wrested from the Poilus in the past week.

Over the week end, reports said, fully-co-ordinated French and British aviation forces received orders to keep German airmen out of French-occupied territory for forty-eight hours at all costs. Observers here said they believed the order was given to cover extensive movements of troops and equipment from the French Maginot Line bases to the front between the industrial city of Saarbruecken and Wissembourg over yesterday and Saturday.

Nazi Attack Subsided.

The French were said to have struck straight between two areas where reported German attacks were strongest on Saturday night and yesterday morning—the Saar and the Lauter River area near the Rhine River.

German attacks south of Saarbruecken apparently subsided yesterday morning, but the German pressure was declared to be continuing on the Wissembourg-Lauterbourg line.

The French attacks were said to be concerned with virtually the whole front from the Fechinger River, just east of Saarbruecken, to the famed Palatinate castles in the Vosges Forests just west of Wissembourg. The front offers three distinct types of terrain and, consequently, three distinct types of attack and defense.

The area just east of Saarbruecken, still in the Saar Basin, is made up of small mining and manufacturing towns and rolling country, much of which was cultivated.

A No-man's Land.

Three weeks of war, however, has already turned the bitterly contested area along the right bank of the Saar and the valleys of the Mandel and Blies rivers into a shell-pocked no-man's land. Trench lines, dug by thousands of men during the nights, zigzag along the front.

The open terrain permits full use of aviation and tanks, although so far planes have been used mainly for observation.

The second area—from the Blies to Bitche—covers hilly country thickly spotted with small clumps of woods, although the land was cultivated highly. Here moving columns of supply trucks and troops may find frequent shelter from air observation.

Bitche, a few miles within the French border, has been a fortress for centuries—a traditional guard against attempts to attack France by rounding the northern foothills of the Vosges.

From Bitche to the Palatinate Castle area, the third fighting region, almost the whole front is in deep forests where planes and tanks are almost useless.

LONDON FLATLY BARS PEACE ON NAZIS' TERMS

Intensified War Work Is Britain's Reply to Il Duce's Speech.

LOOKS FOR U-BOAT CRACKUP

Official Statement Says Crews Cannot Stand Effect of Scientific Hunt.

LONDON, Sept. 25 (A. P.).—Great Britain answered Premier Mussolini's suggestion to call the war quits on Germany's military conquest of Poland by intensifying today her preparations for a fight to the finish.

An authoritative commentary on Mussolini's speech at Rome on Saturday declared that Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement of Great Britain's war aim—"to redeem Europe from the perpetual and recurring fear of German aggression"—still held good. Great Britain remained determined, it said, despite the complication of Soviet Russia's occupation of Eastern Poland.

Informed persons, however, said that the Foreign Secretary, Lord Halifax, who called the Russian Ambassador to his office for an hour's interview last night, had requested a clarification of Soviet aims in Eastern Europe.

War Developments.

Meanwhile, these war developments were disclosed:

1. British expeditionary troops are moving toward battle positions alongside the French who have already carried operations onto German soil.

2. Gilbert S. Szlumper, general manager of the Southern Railway, who was senior transport officer of the British Army in the world war, has been assigned to direct all military transport by land and sea.

3. The British fleet and air forces are widening their warfare at sea, trying to cut off the escape of raiding German submarines to hideouts.

4. Plans have been made to speed up production in British shipyards to replace the tonnage destroyed by submarines and mines, which have already sunk about thirty merchant vessels.

The latest British ship lost was the 4,646-ton freighter Hazelside. Twelve of her crew of thirty-four were reported missing.

A Ministry of Information communique, describing the relentless war on submarine raiding, said that the German underseas fleet must be feeling the full effect of the British operations. It contended that the submarine crews, with supplies running low and nerves shaken by the necessity of running a gantlet of depth charges to get back to port, would eventually crack under scientific hunting methods.

Not Recognized.

The communique commenting on Mussolini's "end the war" speech, said that British official circles understood and appreciated the Italian Premier's sincerity, but rejected the suggestion that an accomplished fact in Poland made continuation of the war purposeless.

"The suggestion that by not spreading the conflict further in view of the Russian fait accompli, Great Britain and France have compromised their moral justification for attempting to annul the German fait accompli, is not recognized here," the communique said.

"The decision of the British people to declare war was indeed the direct consequence of the invasion of Poland—but the invasion of Poland was itself but a further illustration of the lawlessness in international affairs which it is the principal purpose of this country to resist."

The British press, which a week ago assailed what it called Russia's "stab in the back" of invaded Poland, generally reflected the view that a declaration of war against Russia would have played into Germany's hands.

The Red Army, it was pointed out, has stymied any German advance to the Black Sea by quick occupation of territory bordering Rumania and Hungary.

Mr. Chamberlain was expected to amplify the Government's attitude tomorrow in his fourth war bulletin to the House of Commons.

Shortage of Butter.

A report in the Liberal News Chronicle said that there was no doubt that the Foreign Office, although still reluctant to comment on Russia's action, "now regards it more favorably than it did a week ago."

"For that reason," the newspaper said, "the attitude toward Soviet Russia taken up by such papers as the (London) Times is regretted in official quarters for, it is pointed out, that paper in no way represents any views but its own."

Clement R. Attlee and Arthur Greenwood, Labor opposition leaders in the House of Commons, prepared to present, direct to the Prime Minister, labor's demand for "full partnership" in organizing war production. Last week, Mr. Greenwood contended that labor was not being consulted sufficiently by the Ministry of Supply on plans for mobilizing industry.

Also awaiting Parliament's consideration this week was the problem of financing the war. Sir John Simon, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, was expected to introduce the first war budget on Wednesday in the House of Commons.

A shortage of butter as a war consequence was divulged by the Ministry of Information which said, however, that "supplies of margarine of good quality are available as a substitute." The ministry set the price of butter at 1 shilling and 7 pence (currently nearly 32 cents) a pound, and said that butter and margarine would be apportioned when food rationing starts.

Council Of Ten Controlling Group, Will Hold First Meeting Today

Royal Air Force Continues Its Pamphlet Raids Over Germany

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 25—The twin problems of munitions and supply occupied Britain's Government today as the Royal Air Force continued to pepper Germany with pamphlets, German submarines claimed two more victims and the nation continued its placid, almost humdrum prosecution of war.

Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and his Ministers of Supply and Labor, Leslie Burgin and Ernest Brown, talked with Major Clement Attlee and Arthur Greenwood, Labor party leaders, at No. 10 Downing Street. The interview was believed to be in preparation for tomorrow's first meeting of the Council of Ten, the group that will control munitions during wartime.

Criticisms of the Supply Ministry, especially virulent in Labor newspapers, were believed discussed today. Further consideration may be given them at tomorrow's meeting.

Two More Ships Sunk

Germany's submarine warfare yesterday accounted for two more Allied ships and eleven British lives. In each case the submarine was believed to have escaped.

A British freighter, the 4,646-ton Hazelside, was attacked and sunk off the Irish coast with a loss of eleven seamen, according to the Government's report.

The Information Ministry said Royal Air Force patrols hurried to the rescue of the Hazelside while the U-boat was trying to submerge.

Without saying any hits were made the communique said the submarine "made a good target for bombs." It added nothing further.

Watchers on the shore got their first sight of the war at sea when the French collier Phryne of 2,660 tons was sunk just off the British coast.

Destroyers raced to the scene as the crew of twenty-four reached shore in Coast Guard lifeboats.

They circled the site of the attack, but no mention of successful retaliation was made by the Government.

Munitions was one of the Government's most vexing problems during the World War.

The late Lord Northcliffe faced treason charges for exposing a shell shortage in his newspapers. Not until Winston Churchill became Minister of Munitions did their manufacture begin on a systematized basis.

Boast Of Daylight Raid

The London afternoon newspapers boasted Royal planes make daylight flight over Germany about the Royal Air Force flight Sunday which dropped pamphlets over western and northwestern Germany. All the British planes returned safely, according to the Government's report.

The Ministry of Information's translation of the text of the leaflets follows:

"Germans: Note that in spite of the German blood which has been shed in the Polish war:

"1. Your Government's hope of a successful Blitzkrieg (lightning war) has been destroyed by the British War Cabinet's decision to prepare for a three-year-war.

"2. The French Army crossed the frontier into Germany on the sixth of September or four days before German official sources admitted it. In the west British troops are already standing shoulder to shoulder with their French allies.

"3. The British and French fleets have swept German merchant shipping from the oceans, therefore your supplies of a whole range of essential war materials such as petrol, copper, steel, rubber, cotton, wool and fats are almost gone and you can no longer rely as you did in the last war upon neutral supplies because your Government can not pay for them.

"4. Night after night the British air force has demonstrated its power by flights far into German territory."

King Visits R. A. F.

King George, accompanied by Air Minister Sir Kingsley Wood, paid a surprise visit to secret headquarters of the R. A. F. coastal command "somewhere near London."

Watching the sandbagging, the King asked a workman how long the sandbags would last. "Oh, two or three years," replied the worker. "Just about the length of the war," said Sir Kingsley.

A sales tax was considered a possibility in the war budget to be introduced Wednesday by Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Sugar Price Raised

The Government disclosed a series of steps aimed at assuring a food supply for the duration of the war and raised the fixed price of sugar a farthing to about seven cents a pound.

Arrangements for scientists of the Agricultural Research Council to work in "closest cooperation" with the Ministry of Agriculture on food problems were announced.

Fish prices were reported up to one hundred per cent. and most food prices were higher, although the Government was striving to prevent profiteering by setting maximum prices and to avert hoarding by limiting purchases to a week's supply.

British Destroyer Is Sunk

Berlin Also Reports Eight French Planes Shot Down on Western Front.

BERLIN, Sept. 25 (A. P.).—The sinking of a British destroyer by a German submarine was announced in an official communique today as German military leaders were reported preparing for a prolonged war on the western front.

The communique did not identify the destroyer and gave no details of the sinking, but declared that Germany's maritime warfare was "yielding good results."

The same announcement said that eight French war planes had been shot down during an air fight in the west, where, it added, there had been "reconnoitering activity and artillery activity on both sides" at various undisclosed points.

Persons close to the High Command pointed with pride to the reported destruction of another British war ship. They said that this feat, coupled with the sinking of the British aircraft carrier Courageous a week earlier, had emphasized the effectiveness of Germany's underseas warfare.

[The loss of the Courageous was acknowledged last Monday by the British Admiralty. A converted cruiser, built in 1916, the Courageous was one of the largest of Great Britain's six airplane carriers, and the Admiralty said she had been "performing very good service protecting ships of the merchant service." The Admiralty's final report on her sinking said that 578 of her crew of 1,260 officers and men had been lost.

Today informed persons in London estimated that the German submarines had sunk thirty British merchant vessels so far.]

The War Will Be Long.

News of the sinking of the British destroyer came as informed persons reported that the German military leaders were apparently convinced that the lightning conquest of Poland could not be used as a stepping stone to a possible peace with France or Great Britain.

These persons said that the High Command, which announced the Polish campaign officially "ended," was concentrating its entire attention on the western front. The persons regarded as significant reliable information that the construction of a bombproof army headquarters had been started "somewhere in the west."

The new headquarters, designed to be invulnerable to enemy shellfire or bombs, will be used to direct operations along the entire western front, it was said.

Until now, Nazis had expressed the hope that once the conquest of Poland was accomplished, France and Great Britain might listen to peace proposals, but the High Command appeared satisfied that a prolonged war was inevitable.

Blows Aimed at British.

There were indications, nevertheless, that the Germans planned to limit hostilities against France as much as possible in the hope of weaning the French away from Great Britain.

Preparations in the west, informed persons said, were apparently directed chiefly against the British, as it became known here that English troops were being landed in France in increasing numbers.

If the German tactics on the eastern front are followed, it may be expected that the German air force will strike in the near future at British concentration areas.

Communique yesterday gave little attention to activity on the Franco-German front, saying merely that "in the west there was heavier artillery fire at certain points." They added, "local enemy attacks were repulsed."

While Warsaw continued to hold out, an official announcement said that Nazi troops were moving "along the entire eastern front" toward the demarcation line splitting Poland between Germany and Soviet Russia.

German Clockwork.

Army authorities said that the German troops were withdrawing westward with clock-like precision while the Russians were advancing toward the line from the east. It was expected that German and Russian forces would take up their positions tomorrow night on opposite sides of the new frontier extending from East Prussia to Hungary.

A German communique said that in the vicinity of Tomaszow, Zamosc and Rudoc "scattered Polish detachments attempting to escape southward were forced to fight."

"Part of these enemy detachments were encircled southwest of Zamosc while others are traveling eastward, where they will run into Russian troops," the communique declared. This region is about 175 miles southeast of Warsaw.

The communique added that "the number of Polish deserters from Praga and Modlin increased in the last few days." Praga is a suburb of Warsaw.

Casualty Lists Still Withheld.

Meanwhile, thousands of German mothers who have not heard from their sons with the army in the east anxiously awaited the posting of official casualty lists, expected within the next few days.

An army announcement described the German losses as "unusually small in comparison with the enemy," but so far the public has been given no actual figures.

Some eight United States consular officials, about fifty-five other Americans and more than a thousand persons of various nationalities permitted to leave Warsaw were expected to arrive in Berlin today. They were removed from Warsaw to Koenigsberg, East Prussia, under the care of the German Foreign Office, after German and Polish commanders at Warsaw had arranged for their exodus last week.

Some light on how the German Government expects to finance the war was given by the current issue of Die Deutsche Volkswirtschafte, Nazi economic monthly. This publication said that a special levy on incomes was expected to yield 2,600,000,000 marks annually. Par value of the mark is 40 cents.

Contributions by cities and communities were expected to bring in 1,500,000,000 marks and taxes on tobacco and alcoholic beverages another 1,250,000,000. Total revenue from these sources was estimated at 5,350,000,000 marks, or about $2,140,000,000 at normal foreign exchange rates.

Swiss Wire Censorship Lifted.

All censorship restrictions concerning Switzerland have been lifted between that country and all other neutral nations, it was announced today by Western Union. Messages not in code, however, should be written in English, French, German or Italian, the company said.

HEAVY GUNS ROAR FOR 12 HOURS OFF NORWEGIAN COAST

Concussion Shakes Houses; Unidentified Ships Seen Maneuvering.

BERGEN, Norway, Sept. 25 (A. P.).—Unidentified ships engaged in at least twelve hours of cannonading off the coast of Norway today. Natives along the coast said they believed a naval battle was in progress.

1939

Heavy firing which inhabitants of Algroi Island, six miles west of here, reported first hearing at about 6 A. M. (midnight Eastern standard time) ceased between 7 and 8 P. M. There was no assurance, however, that it would not be resumed, for there had been an earlier lull of about thirty minutes.

Inhabitants of Marstenen, a small island off Bergen, said they had seen six or seven boats to the northward, constantly maneuvering, but the distance was too great to permit their identification.

The battle—if such it was—apparently was moving closer to the coast, they said. Concussion of large caliber guns shook houses on the island.

Firing stopped temporarily at about 1:45 P. M. (7:45 A. M. Eastern standard time), but resumed about half an hour later, the island's inhabitants said.

The heavy guns, interspersed with those of lighter caliber, still could be heard at 5 P. M. (11 A. M. Eastern standard time) amid indications that they were moving northward and westward.

Ships Seen Traveling Fast.

OSLO, Norway, Sept. 25 (A. P.).—Violent cannonading far out in the Atlantic was reported from several points along the Norwegian coast today, leading observers to believe a naval battle was raging.

Reports from the coastal communities said the bark of big guns could be heard between 8 and 9:30 A. M. (2 and 3:30 A. M. New York time).

Hazy weather made it impossible to see any warships, but several German trawlers were observed steaming toward the coast as if fleeing from a battle zone.

Inhabitants of a small island south of Bergen said several ships of undetermined nationality were steaming northward at full speed last night amid a constant exchange of gunfire.

Swedish Vessels Bound For England Ordered To Meet Convoys

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 25—The Admiralty said tonight "no report had been received of a naval engagement off the Norwegian coast, as would have been the case had one taken place."

[By the Associated Press]

Copenhagen, Sept. 25—Inhabitants of communities and small islands on the coast of Norway today reported day-long cannonading far at sea which they interpreted to mean a naval battle was raging.

It was impossible to learn the time the firing started, but it stopped—at least temporarily—between 7 and P. M.

Inhabitants of a small island south of Bergen, in southwestern Norway, said they saw several ships of undetermined nationality proceeding northward at full speed last night amid a constant exchange of gunfire.

Others, however, reported first hearing the big guns at about 6 A. M. They said the concussion shook some island houses.

Change In Locale

Late in the afternoon residents along the coast said the firing appeared to be moving northward and westward—away from Norway.

Earlier the residents of Algroi Island, six miles west of Bergen, had said the battle—if it was a battle—seemed to be moving toward shore.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—Cannonading last week in the Kattegatt, between Denmark and Sweden, first was taken for a naval battle, but later proved to be target practice by Swedish batteries.]

Reports came from Marstenen, a small island off Bergen, that six or seven boats had been seen to the northward constantly maneuvering, but they could not be identified.

Survivors Picked Up

Watchers on the shore near Stavanger—one hundred miles south of Bergen—saw the Swedish steamer Suecia pick up men from two small boats adrift at sea. Belief was expressed they were victims of the "battle."

It later was learned, however, that they were crewmen of the 1,839-ton Swedish freighter Silesia, bound from Gothenburg, Sweden, to Hull, England, which was torpedoed, presumably by a German submarine.

The Silesia was the fourth neutral ship sunk in three days. Two Finnish merchantmen and another Swedish vessel were sunk earlier in the Skagerrak, an arm of the North Sea between Norway and Jutland.

Lighter Guns Heard

The cannonading lulled a half hour early in the afternoon, but when it was resumed the sound of lighter-caliber guns could be heard distinctly in coastal towns.

Reports of the firing began reaching Copenhagen at about the time it was announced that Swedish naval authorities had instructed Swedish ships bound for England to stay within territorial waters along the Swedish and Norwegian coasts until contacted by British convoys waiting for them somewhere off Norway.

Since a point off Bergen was considered by naval observers as a logical place to organize such a convoy, some sources thought it possible German warships might be attempting to disrupt it.

Polish Seamen Interned

Meanwhile, an aftermath of the Polish-German fighting found 170 Polish sailors and officers interned near Stockholm after three Polish submarines had taken refuge in Swedish waters. The third, the 980-ton Zbik, arrived today, its crew of fifty-four exhausted and nearly starved after twenty-six days at sea.

Agitation over the sinking of neutral ships in the Skagerrak continued in the northern European countries.

A Norwegian delegation left Oslo for London to confer with British authorities about Norway's shipping situation as affected by the war.

but no mention was made by the Government of successful retaliation.

The Information Ministry issued a statement accusing Germany of "murder on the high seas" for sinking the steamship Royal Sceptre on September 6, with thirty-two men aboard. This statement declared that the sinking directly violated the submarine protocol signed by Germany in 1936 because the crew was put adrift in small boats "without possible hope of reaching land."

Convoy for Swedish Ships.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 25 (A. P.).—The Chief of the Swedish Navy today requested all Swedish steamships bound for England to sail within territorial waters along the Swedish coast and then into Norwegian waters to a point on the west coast of Norway where a British convoy would meet them.

POLISH SUBMARINE ARRIVES IN SWEDEN

Third Undersea Craft Comes In to Be Interned.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 25 (A. P.).—A third Polish submarine, the 980-ton Zbik, entered Swedish territorial waters today and surrendered to the Swedish Government.

The submarine, with five officers and a crew of forty-nine men aboard, was sighted by the coast patrol, which put out a ship assuming it might be the Polish submarine that escaped from Tallinn, Estonia. Members of the crew said that they had been at sea for twenty-six days without fresh food and were subsisting on emergency rations.

The submarine was taken to Korsoeved Sandhamm, in Sweden's outermost skerries, or isle-studded waters. The crew was interned at Vaxholm along with other interned Poles. Among them were the crews of the Polish submarines Semp and Rys.

Tell of 1000 Slain in Warsaw

Radio Announcers Carry On Amid New Bombardment of Polish Capital.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 25 (A. P.).—Warsaw's radio staff, for days the Polish capital's last link with the outside world, stood by its microphones again last night to describe a new German bombardment which had killed, the announcers said, more than 1,000 civilians.

Neither continued shelling nor interference from German stations has been able to silence the broadcasters, who are rapidly assuming a legendary character in the minds of Polish refugees.

Apparently ignoring personal danger, the announcers continued to hurl challenges at the besieging Nazis and to give encouragement to the city's civilian population.

Despite the silence today of the Warsaw radio, a German broadcast in Polish acknowledged that the besieged city still was resisting. The announcer praised the "bravery" of the Polish capital's defenders, but said it was "futile" for them to hold out longer and appealed to them directly to surrender.

Without Emotion.

From their little studio high up in a modern skyscraper in the heart of the shell-scarred capital, the radio staff chronicled in calm, unhurried voices an hour-by-hour story of Warsaw's defense last night.

With no trace of emotion, the announcers described streets "running with blood" and littered with mangled bodies.

They read long lists of missing women and children, and repeated orders that execution awaits those trying to help friends leave the city.

Frequent instructions were issued directing "able-bodied men to obtain shovels and report to headquarters," advising residents to "build barricades in the streets and dig traps for German tanks," and announcing that "girl scouts are wanted for first aid work."

There were also frequent appeals to Great Britain and France for help "before it's too late," but with them went word of Warsaw's intention to hold out "to give the world a new proof of Polish heroism."

Plenty of Horse Meat.

As if reading nothing more important than baseball scores, the broadcasters told the Warsaw people: "There now is plenty of horse meat to eat because of what has happened to Polish cavalry units."

Running accounts of the German attacks on the city told of incendiary bombs setting fire to crowded hospitals, of air raids wrecking museums and of shells ripping through apartment buildings.

Glory of Poland.

When things have looked blackest the radio has made proud boasts of the glory which again will be Poland's.

Throughout the broadcasts, the announcers have made no mention of their personal plight, although the sound of air raid sirens and crashes seeming to come from exploding bombs sometimes have provided a weird background for their voices.

Many Polish refugees, hearing the broadcasts, have recalled the legend of the boy trumpeter of Krakow. According to the story handed down from generation to generation, he remained in a tower sounding warning of an enemy attack until silenced by an arrow.

One by one, other Polish stations have gone off the air, leaving only the Warsaw radio. For days the station has been operating against strong German interference. Virtually every news broadcast has come through a barrage of music and announcements from Nazi stations operating on the same wave length.

Last night's broadcast said the last few hours had been "the most terrible since the siege began."

"But the spirit of our troops and our citizens are undaunted," the announcer declared.

More than 100 heavy guns had been bombarding the capital incessantly since Saturday noon, the radio said, adding that hundreds of citizens had been killed or wounded when they ventured from cellars to go to church.

The announcer said "the Opera House, National Theater and Polytechnic School are on fire, the German artillery is now concentrating its fire on the center of the city.

"Planes are dumping bombs on the workers' district as well as on museums, public buildings and artistic monuments," he declared.

The broadcast said that one of the city's newspapers, Kurjer Poranny, was still publishing, and asserted that "despite continued attacks there is still order" in the city.

Hits Swedish Trade.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 25 (A. P.).—German submarine attacks in the Skagerrak, an arm of the North Sea between Norway and Jutland, caused sharp newspaper protests in the Scandinavian countries today. The ships were loaded with wood pulp bound for England. Germany referred to this as cellulose, which was included, she said, in the contraband list.

The Stockholm Aftonbladet wrote: "The interpretation of contraband which Germany is taking up will practically leave nothing outside the contraband list. . . . If they are going on in this manner it will, in so many words, mean that our exports will be completely stopped. The consequences which this will lead to will be unnecessary to mention."

The Aftonbladet pointed out the export of wood, wood pulp and pulpwood amounts to many millions of dollars annually and is one of Sweden's most important sources of revenue.

The Copenhagen Berlingske Tidende, in a dispatch from its Berlin correspondent, quoted an authoritative person as saying that t the sinking was witnessed the wood pulp cargoes would have been of great value in the production of munitions and that the submarine officers would have been derelict in their duty if they had not sunk the ships.

ALLIES BOMB BIG AIRPLANE MOTOR PLANT

Are Reported to Have Put Former Zeppelin Works Out of Action.

THIRTY EXPLOSIVES DROPPED

Swiss General Staff Confirms Raid—Berlin Denies Any Hits Were Scored.

ROMANSHORN, Switzerland, Sept. 25 (A. P.).—One of Germany's main airplane motor factories was reported to have been put out of action by bombs from French or British planes staging a raid on the Zeppelin works at Friedrichshafen, Germany, last night.

Reports of a raid on the Friedrichshafen area were confirmed by a communique from the Swiss General Staff. The communique said: "Sunday night after 9 P. M. an air attack took place against, in all probability, hangars of the Zeppelin factory at Friedrichshafen. The explosions of bombs were heard and very violent defensive fire with the use of tracer bullets observed. In the late evening, between 10 P. M. and midnight, many frontier towns in Switzerland reported hearing the noise of airplane motors.

Swiss Investigation Begun.

"An investigation was opened in an effort to ascertain whether our territory was really violated by the passage of foreign planes."

The first alarm in the Friedrichshafen aren—five miles across Lake Constance from here—started searchlights sweeping the skies at 8:15 P. M. (2:15 P. M., Eastern standard time) and a number of anti-aircraft batteries on the German side opened fire. Explosions of a few bombs could be heard here.

The main part of the raid apparently came when a second alarm was sounded at 11 P. M. Military observers on the Swiss side, judging by the dull roars heard here, estimated at least thirty bombs were dropped by the raiders despite heavy anti-aircraft fire, which included tracer bullets.

Reports reaching here said several direct hits on the factory were scored, but because the border was closed these could not be confirmed.

Attack Aimed at Two Plants.

These reports said the attack apparently was aimed, not only at Friedrichshafen but also at the little town of Manzell, about three miles up the lake from Friedrichshafen. The Zeppelin works, recently converted into a factory for airplane motors and other parts, opened another plant at Manzell.

It was not known whether any of the raiders—whose number also was unknown—were hit by the anti-aircraft fire or by fighter planes sent up to meet them.

[DNB, German official news agency, tonight quoted the High Command as stating that French airplanes had been sighted and fired upon over Lake Constance in the vicinity of the Friedrichshafen Zeppelin base. This report said that the planes had failed to bomb any object in Germany and that they had been chased off over Swiss territory. The High Command earlier, in comment in foreign reports that warplanes raided Friedrichshafen last night, had flatly denied there had been any raid.]

Swiss frontier patrols along the lake fired sky rockets to warn the bombers against invading Swiss territory.

Bombed by British in 1914.

The German batteries were said to have kept up their fire for two hours while searchlights criss-crossed over Friedrichshafen.

The giant Zeppelin works, which turned out all of Germany's lighter-than-air dirigibles, had been converted into an airplane motor factory and was working day and night. Special bombproof shelters had been built for the workers, deep under the plant.

If British bombers participated in the raid history will have repeated itself, for early in 1914 a British plane carried out one of the first world war air raids against the Friedrichshafen works. That raid brought a protest from Berlin to the Swiss Government, charging that the British flyer had crossed Swiss territory.

The Swiss General Staff said that earlier last night a plane of unidentified nationality flew up the Rhine, on the German side, toward Singen and crossed over Swiss territory near Schaffhausen, in the northwesternmost part of Switzerland. It wheeled away into Germany, the announcement said, when Swiss anti-aircraft batteries opened fire.

Propaganda Flight.

LONDON, Sept. 25 (A. P.).—The Ministry of Information announced today the Royal Air Force had carried out new reconnaissance flights over Germany yesterday.

It said that the planes dropped more propaganda leaflets.

One flight was made in daylight over Western Germany, the communique said and the second at night over western and northwestern Germany.

"All planes returned safely," it added. "There was no serious opposition."

The scattering of pamphlets by the R. A. F., generally believed to have been Prime Minister Chamberlain's idea, began in the first week of the war when millions of leaflets were dropped over Germany in an effort to tell the people that their leaders were taking them down the road to ruin. The Air Ministry, however, asked today that British newspapers make no reference to the previous raids.

NAZI AIRPLANE PLANT BOMBED BY AIR RAIDERS

Motor Works At Friedrichshafen Reported Attacked By French

Swiss Line Shore Of Lake Constance To Watch Night Bombardment

[By the Associated Press]

Romanshorn, Switzerland, Sept. 25—One of Germany's principal airplane-motor plants in the former Zeppelin works at Friedrichshafen was reported today to have been raided by enemy planes.

Observers here on the Swiss shore of Lake Constance, five miles away, said they saw the raids last night.

The same observers said they believed the plant had been put out of commission by several direct hits from the planes, which were not identified. But the German border was closed and the report could not be confirmed.

[Editor's Note—DNB, official German news agency, quoted the high command as saying French airplanes had been sighted and fired on over the area, but the raiders had failed to bomb any object in Germany. The agency said the planes had been chased into Swiss territory.]

Swiss Start Probe

Swiss military authorities directed an investigation to determine whether the night sky raiders had violated Switzerland's neutrality by flying over her territory.

Observers here had grandstand seats, so to speak, for the spectacular night battle between anti-aircraft gunners and the raiding planes, invisible in the black sky.

Thousands stood along the Swiss shore of Lake Constance to watch the bursting bombs on the ground and the exploding shells in the air. Darkness screened the attackers.

Watchers said the bursting bombs were visible clearly. The detonations echoed through the Lake Constance hills.

30 Bombs Dropped

Military sources estimated at least thirty bombs were dropped despite heavy anti-aircraft fire.

Reports of the raid were confirmed by this communique of the Swiss general staff:

"Sunday night after 9 P. M. an air attack took place against, in all probability, hangars of the Zeppelin factory at Friedrichshafen. The explosions of bombs were heard and very violent defensive fire with the use of tracer bullets observed.

"In the late evening, between 10 P. M. and midnight, many frontier towns in Switzerland reported hearing the noise of airplane motors.

"An investigation was opened in an effort to ascertain whether our territory was really violated by the passage of foreign planes."

Small Town Bombed

Swiss observers said the attack included the small town of Manzell, about three miles from Friedrichshafen. The Zeppelin works was converted recently into an airplane-motor factory and another plant was opened at Manzell.

Swiss observers said the anti-aircraft gunners apparently received their first warning at 8.30 P. M. Searchlights pierced the skies and a faint rumble of anti-aircraft fire was heard.

Residents along the lake shore were awakened. Townspeople watched from their homes as some time later plane motors were heard again. Heavy gun fire blazed anew and tracer bullets were visible.

Heavy detonations of exploding bombs reverberated over the lake and the air battle continued intermittently for more than an hour, Swiss residents asserted.

ESTONIAN FLIES BACK SUDDENLY FROM MOSCOW

Selter's Visit to Russia Concluded After Only Fifteen Hours.

SINGLE CONFERENCE HELD

Topic Not Disclosed, Nor Is Reason for Quick Return to Own Country.

MOSCOW, Sept. 25 (A. P.).—Foreign Minister Karl Selter of Estonia flew back home today less than fifteen hours after his arrival in Moscow for conferences with Soviet officials, it was learned tonight.

There was no inkling whether talks between Russia and her small Baltic neighbor had been broken off, but Mr. Selter obviously returned home on urgent business.

It was understood that the Estonian Minister to Moscow, Auguste Rei, also planned to fly to Tallinn tomorrow.

Unofficial reports were that Mr. Selter, who came to Moscow ostensibly for trade talks, had been summoned to confer with high Soviet officials after midnight last night.

Topic Not Disclosed.

Details of conversations were not disclosed, but significance was attached to the fact that a Turkish envoy also was in his way here.

This was Sukru Saracoglu, Turkey's Foreign Minister, and he arrived in Moscow today.

The conference with Mr. Selter started as Russia banned foreign ships from traveling the river Neva, which flows into the Baltic. The little Baltic country which Mr. Selter represents was Russian territory before the world war.

Diplomats pointed out as the Turkish envoy arrived, that the Soviet had tremendous bargaining power over Turkey now that Germany and Great Britain—her strongest rivals for Turkish trade—were engaged in war.

In foreign circles it was expected that Russia would seek a guaranty from Turkey to close the Dardanelles to any ships opposed to Russian interests. The closing of the Black Sea to European merchantmen would give the Soviet special trading privileges.

River Neva Closed.

In return, it was said, the Soviet might give Turkey guaranties against a German attack.

Diplomats speculated on the possible effects these talks might have on Anglo-Turkish relations since Turkey has not signed a defensive treaty with Great Britain.

The Neva, on the river Neva, 40-mile stream which connects Lake Ladoga with the Gulf of Finland, was said to have included Finnish ships. A Russo-Finnish agreement in 1923 gave the Soviet authority to close the waterway to Finnish ships in case of "war danger."

Polish Drive Goes On.

Meanwhile today the Reds reported taking many Polish prisoners and arms as they pushed to within about eighty-five miles of Warsaw, occupying much of the territory formerly held by the withdrawing German army.

A General Staff communique on yesterday's operations said that the Russian forces "continued to advance toward the demarcation line, having occupied the towns of Seiny (Seuny), Augustow (Augustow) and Grubeshov (Hrubieszow), they reached the line of Augustov-Knyshin (Knyszyn)-Bryansk (Bransk)-Rasno (Rasna)—about 25 miles northwest of Brest-Litovsk-Pischchats (Piszczac)—about 12 miles southwest of Brest-Litovsk-Lyubom-Grubeshov-Unuv (Uhnow)-Lanuv (about 12 miles northwest of Lwow).

"Komarno, Drogobych (Drohobycz) and Beryslav were occupied southwest of the town of Lwow.

"Continuing to clear the territory of western Byelo-Russia (White Russia) and western Ukraine of remnants of the Polish Army, Red Army troops in the course of liquidation of a group of Polish troops southwest of the Brest-Litovsk fortress disarmed and took prisoner more than 10,000 soldiers and officers, and in the area south and southeast of Grubeshow took prisoner an infantry regiment and troops of a mechanized brigade."

The return of wounded Russian soldiers to Moscow, however, indicated the Poles were still putting up a fight.

Little time is being lost in attempting to Sovietize the newly acquired area. The program, it is said, includes a campaign against the landlord and capitalist classes.

Reports reaching here say that peasants are occupying the country estates of former Polish landowners, and that horses, tools and land are being divided among them.

Pamphlets dropped from airplanes urged the peasants to "get rid" of the upper classes. "No place must be left for them," the pamphlets said.

Soviet Border With Rumania Reported Shut

Port of Odessa Also Said To Be Closed; Estonian Foreign Chief Quits Russia

MOSCOW, Sept. 26 (Tuesday) (AP).—The entire frontier between Soviet Russia and Rumania, and Russia's big Black Sea port of Odessa, were reported unofficially today to have been closed to travelers. The frontier closing was regarded the result of precautionary moves by both governments.

Russia's acquisition of Polish territory considerably increased her border with Rumania and for the first time gave her a frontier with Hungary. Rumania and Hungary were said to be uneasy.

Meanwhile, diplomatic circles said Russia might be making demands upon Estonia, a little Baltic neighbor whose territory was Russian-ruled before the World War—like Rumania's Bessarabia. Karl Selter, Estonia's foreign minister, rushed home yesterday, abruptly ending his stay in Moscow after less than fifteen hours. It was reported reliably his hurried trip concerned urgent business.

[The Berlin shortwave radio heard in New York last night said in a Moscow item that the Estonian Foreign Minister had returned to discuss with his government "weighty problems" which he could not decide for himself. It was added that economic questions were not discussed by Selter and the Russians. However, the same broadcast in a Tallinn item asserted that an Estonian government communique said that Selter had returned to discuss with his government suggestions made by the Soviet government for the completion of a commercial treaty.]

Diplomats were keenly interested in the sudden departure of the Estonian Foreign Minister. It was learned reliably that he had been called from a ballet performance to a midnight conference with Russian officials Sunday night. It was understood that after the conference he left Moscow's leading hotel, the Metropole, where he was welcomed Sunday night by a display of Estonian flags, and passed the remainder of the night at the Estonian legation.

Envoy to Fly Home

There was no inkling whether the talks had been merely suspended or broken off completely. Selter came here ostensibly to negotiate a trade treaty. It was understood that the Estonian Minister to Russia, Auguste Rei, planned to fly today to his country's capital, Tallinn.

At the same time a number of Russian officials welcomed a diplomatic mission from Turkey amid a great display of Soviet and Turkish flags. The Turkish delegation, headed by Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu, came for important diplomatic and trade talks. The welcomers were headed by Valdimir Potemkin, Vice-Commissar for Foreign Affairs. Moscow's railroad station was decorated with intertwined Soviet and Turkish flags. Among envoys at the station to greet the visitors were the Ministers of Rumania, Bulgaria, Greece, Persia and Afghanistan. A Black Sea pact has been reported numerous times in recent months as among Russia's objectives.

[The Berlin short-wave radio reported last night that the chief of the Bulgarian air force, Gen. Bojdeff, had arrived in Moscow by air with four aides to conclude negotiations for inauguration of an air line between Bulgaria and the Soviet Union.]

Has Bargaining Advantage

It was said in diplomatic circles that Russia had a tremendous bargaining advantage over Turkey now that Germany and Britain, her chief rivals for Turkish trade, was at war. Foreign circles said they expected Russia to seek a guaranty from Turkey to close the Dardanelles to any ships opposed to Russian interests, in return for possible Soviet guaranties against any German attack on Turkey.

Unofficial sources here said a group of German economic and trade experts would come to Moscow soon for conferences on a new trade and credit agreement between the two countries, as well as on matters affecting Poland. The date of the Germans' visit was not fixed, but it was expected to take place soon.

The consultations, it was said, would decide to what extent Russia will help Germany economically. The question of oil from Russia's newly won territory in Poland was expected to be one of the major considerations, since oil is one of Germany's pressing needs. Numerous other trade matters are to be settled in the division of Poland between Germany and Russia.

Red Army Advances

A Red army communique Monday reported its army had penetrated farther westward into Poland. The Soviets were said to have reached Suvalki (Suwalki) next to the east Prussian border; Yanov (Janow Podlaski), twenty miles northwest of Brest-Litovsk and ninety miles east of Warsaw; Opalin and Dubenka (Dubienka) two points twenty miles east of Chelm and about forty-five miles west of Lublin, and Koziowa, forty miles southwest of Stryi.

Tass, official Soviet news agency, said industries and civil life in Slonim, sixty miles west of the old Polish-Russian border, were operating normally. Tass said the post-office, telephone exchange, railway junction, flour mill, a factory making silk ribbon and other enterprises were open. Conferences of teachers were being held at all schools preparatory to the beginning of regular studies today, it added.

False Neutrality, Italian Press Says Of Arms Embargo Repeal

Cash-And-Carry Scheme Criticized — Gayda Doubts Allies Can Win Without "Universal Devastation"

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Sept. 25—Italian newspapers today criticized proposals that the United States sell arms on a cash-and-carry basis as "false neutrality."

At the same time, Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, expressed doubt France and Britain ever would defeat Germany except in "a victory submerged in the ashes of universal devastation."

Premier Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo D'Italia, declared:

"Signor Roosevelt is no longer neutral. . . . His recent message to Congress is an attempt manifestly directed to prepare for direct compromising of the United States in the dangerous maze of European quarrels. . . .

"The hidden reasoning is that one day this contraband will provoke the reaction of other powers and therefore the public can be given to understand that the United States must defend their business, taking a position in the conflict.

Il Popolo D'Italia, important Milan newspaper, said that in practice England and France would benefit from the cash-and-carry plan, and added: "If this is neutrality it is necessary to change the meaning of the word."

Both Il Tribuna and Il Messaggero said such a policy would only prolong the war.

In Il Giornale D'Italia, Gayda discarded the idea that propaganda could induce the German people to overthrow the Nazis, and said there were but three visible means by which the Allies could beat Germany. These he listed as:

Direct attack on the Siegfried line.

Encirclement of the Siegfried line by attack through neutral countries.

Financial and economic blockade.

The Siegfried Line is so formidable Gayda said, it never could be broken except by enormous sacrifice of men which Britain and France, with their falling birthrate, could ill afford to lose.

Won't Violate Neutrality

He expressed doubt they would violate the neutrality of neutral states.

Regarding the third method, he said autarchic Germany of 1939 is not the Germany of 1914 but had "gigantic reserves" of food and raw materials and enormous war industries augmented by the conquest of Poland.

He said it would be more likely the economic systems of France and England would crack first in event of a long war, asserting their positions were weaker than in 1914.

SCORE 'CASH-AND-CARRY'

Rome Papers Denounce U. S. Plan as 'False Neutrality'

ROME, Sept. 25 (AP)—Proposals that the United States sell arms to belligerents on a cash-and-carry basis were attacked as "false neutrality" today in some Italian circles as first editorial comment appeared on proposed revision of the United States Neutrality Act.

Two leading newspapers, La Tribuna and Il Messagero, declared that such a policy would only prolong the war and make business for arms manufacturers to the damage, said La Tribuna, of "Europe and civilization."

La Tribuna said that the cash-and-carry plan "deliberately favors the French and English" since they have "absolute superiority of gold and ships."

President Roosevelt was accused by the paper of "pharisaical compunction" in stating his desire "to serve religion and civilization."

"In reality," the paper said, "the intention of Mr. Roosevelt is not to serve civilization and reinforce neutrality but only to serve the interests of the cannon merchants and create among the neutral States a privileged position for the United States absolutely contrary to the law of nations, through false neutrality."

BALKANS PRAISE DUCE'S SPEECH

Heartened by His Purpose to Stay Neutral.

WELCOME RUSSIA'S INTEREST

Hope to Play Off Both Soviet and Italy Against Hitler.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 25 (A. P.).—The neutral States of southeastern Europe, concerned over the partition of Poland by Germany and Soviet Russia, were heartened today by Premier Mussolini's week end declaration that Italy would maintain her status as a non-belligerent.

Diplomatic circles placed the Duce's speech at the top of a list of encouraging developments which included: 1. A message of sympathy sent by Hungary to Rumania on the death of Premier Calinescu, which the Budapest press called evidence of improved relationship between the two countries; 2 Announcement of a new air line between Moscow and Sofia, which was taken as illustrating friendliness between Bulgaria and Russia; and 3. Russia's revived interest in the Southeast.

Evidence of Russia's renewed interest in this corner of Europe was welcomed for the same reason that these small nations have been cheered by Italy's recent efforts to strengthen her economic and political ties here. The States have felt the political and economic power of Germany and now see a chance to play Italy as well as Russia against it.

Although the reaction to Mussolini's speech was almost unanimous, the reasons for approval varied. In countries which gained territory through world war treaties and, therefore, are anxious to preserve the status quo, diplomatic circles saw new hope that Italy's non-belligerent attitude would enhance their own efforts to maintain territorial integrity.

In countries which lost territory, praise was heard for those parts of the speech in which the Versailles Treaty was condemned. The Budapest Ujsag, for example, said that, in Mussolini's opinion, to avoid a general war it was necessary only for every one to realize the impossibility of keeping the conditions imposed at Versailles.

The Nazi press here devoted most of the front pages today to Mussolini's speech, which, it said, has torn apart the "weak web of the democracies, spun of strong lies, by which it was hoped to wreck the Berlin-Rome axis."

Wartime Paris Is Not the City Tourists Knew

Sandbags Piled on Famous Buildings, and Darkened Cafes Shut Down at 11

PARIS, Sept. 26 (AP).—If an American tourist came back to Paris today he would not recognize the place. War has completely transformed the city. With sandbags rising by day and lights fading by night, Paris has been converted from a bright, international city for pleasure-seekers into the grim capital of a nation at war.

On a ride along routes the tourist buses used to pass regularly one sees the difference.

Khaki-clad troops are strolling everywhere among the crowds in the streets. Police wear tin helmets instead of caps. Men and women carry gas masks. Windows of shops, cafes and business houses are criss-crossed with strips of adhesive paper.

How Monuments Look

In the fourth week of war here is how celebrated monuments of Paris look:

The Opera House is incrusted with wooden scaffolding built over the roof, and sandbags are heaped around the ground floor.

In the Place de la Concorde, the Obelisk emerges from a wooden framework already erected fifty feet up its sides. Sand and empty bags lie at the base waiting to be stacked over the framework. Windows of the American Embassy facing the square are hidden behind sandbags.

In the Place Vendome, heaps of sand are piled around the base of the column, there that is topped with a statue of Napoleon.

The Louvre museum's most precious treasures have been removed, and its windows are sandbagged. The gardens outside are full of color, but the lawns no longer are freshly mowed.

Along the Seine, some bookstalls on the left bank still are open, but few have time to browse.

The delicate spire of the Sainte-Chapelle, on the Ile de la Cite is deformed by scaffolding and its stained glass windows are replaced by oiled paper.

Cathedral Protected

The heavy doors of Notre Dame Cathedral are closed and steel tubing is rising before the first of three main arched doors.

The Eiffel Tower, too big to be covered by sandbags, stands forlornly over the Champ de Mars, which is lined with air-raid trenches.

Up in Montmartre there is a sign in the vestibule of the Church of the Sacre Coeur:

"In case of an air-raid warning the faithful will descend to the crypt by staircases situated near the communion table."

Outside, as duck falls over what was once the night-life district, a few blue lights go on. Cafes bear signs: "Closing at 11 p. m."

Hitler Reported on Poland On Inspection Trip by Air

Said to Have Viewed Site of 'Greatest Battle'

BERLIN, Sept. 25 (AP).—Fuehrer Adolf Hitler was reported to have made an airplane inspection trip today over the Bzura River battlefield in the great bend of the Vistula west of Warsaw.

[Reports reaching Paris from the Western Front said Hitler was in that area Saturday.]

D. N. B., official German news agency, said Der Fuehrer looked today over the terrain of the battle which the Germans, from the point of view of prisoners and war materials captured, call the greatest in history. He saw roads still jammed with military traffic and columns of prisoners moving toward Germany, D. N. . said. He was greeted enthusiastically by German troops everywhere, the report continued.

The report declared that Polish farmers had resumed plowing and winter seeding heedless of military activity all about.

Hitler generally was expected to come to Berlin tomorrow from the Eastern Front for the state funeral for Col. Gen. Baron Werner Von Fritsch, former commander-in-chief of the German army who was killed in action before Warsaw last Friday. Fritsch's body will be brought here tonight and taken to the War Ministry Building where officers will stand a guard of honor. Funeral services will be held in the square before the memorial to World War dead.

Denies Calinescu Death Was Due To Nazi Putsch

Rumania Says Murder Was "Isolated Deed Of A Few Madmen"

Bucharest, Sept. 26 (AP)—Rumania denied officially tonight that Premier Calinescu's assassination was the result of an attempted German putsch.

Eugen Titeanu, Assistant Propaganda Secretary, said "the murder was the isolated deed of a few madmen and was not representative of public opinion or minorities."

Members of the outlawed pro-Nazi Iron Guard killed Calinescu Thursday. The Government executed many Iron Guardists—some estimates were 2,000—after the slaying.

A life pension of $350 a month for Calinescu's widow and a monument to his memory have been ordered.

Air-Raid Precautions Costly

LONDON, Sept. 25 (AP).—Great Britain's air-raid precautions costs are "astronomical," Councillor C. P. Grobel, of Finchley Borough, said tonight. He disclosed his borough alone was spending £2,312 (about $9,140) weekly.

Nazis Want To Exchange Wheat For Belgian Fuel

Proposal Regarded As "Curious" By Authorities In Brussels

Brussels, Sept. 25 (AP)—Belgian officials disclosed tonight that a German trade delegation which has been negotiating with Belgium since September 14 had offered to exchange wheat for Belgian fuel and metal products.

The Belgians commented that it was "curious" that the Germans apparently were not worried by the danger of a wheat shortage. Officials were hopeful that the British and French would permit Belgium to import not only wheat necessary for her own population but a surplus for normal business.

Several ships arrived with 40,000 tons of wheat and the French were expected to release shortly other Belgian wheat ships.

Swiss Fire on French Bomber

BASEL, Switzerland, Sept. 25 (AP).—A French bombing plane flying low over the Allschwil frontier region southwest of Basel crossed over Swiss territory late today, but was warned back by anti-aircraft shots.

Briton Gets Seven Years Under War Secrets Act

Writer Charged With Revealing Data 'Useful to Enemy'

LONDON, Sept. 25 (AP).—Donald Owen Reginald Adams, fifty-six years old, described as a racing writer for newspapers, was sentenced today to seven years' penal servitude on a charge of violating the official secrets act.

Adams pleaded not guilty when brought before a police magistrate on June 30 on a formal charge of recording information in 1938 "which was calculated to be or might be directly or indirectly useful to the enemy."

Details of the charge were not made public. Adams denied giving out anything "not in the public press."

Swedes Say Spy Hunts Imperil Warsaw Aliens

Declare City Learned of Soviet Invasion Only Few Days Ago

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 25 (AP).—Swedes returning from besieged Warsaw today said the biggest danger to foreigners there was the risk of being shot as spies.

Members of a party of twenty-five said Poles chased German planes away the first few days, but later squadrons flew over the city, machine-gunning directly into apartments.

There was no lack of food, but it was impossible to buy clothing, and banks were closed, the travelers stated.

They said German flyers dropped cigarettes which civilians were afraid to pick up.

Warsaw learned only a few days ago of the occupation of part of Poland by the Russian Army, they added.

War's Irony

London, Sept. 25 (AP)—Six-year-old Trevor Thomas was among thousands of city children sent to the country when war broke to get away from possible air raids.

He died today of injuries suffered when a dummy bomb accidentally was dropped by a Royal Air Force plane on the house where he was billeted.

Veterans Join Swiss Army

1,000 Sharpshooters Over 60 Taken For Auxiliary Service

LUCERNE, Switzerland, Sept. 25 (AP).—One thousand veteran sharpshooters, all over sixty, asked wiss Generalissimo Henri Guisan today to accept them in the army for auxiliary service.

Guisan wired his thanks to the volunteers and said they could serve in the auxiliary service as they desired.

Leaders of the organization said most of the 3,000 members were ready to offer their services if Switzerland were attacked.

AMERICANS AID REFUGEE POLES IN RUMANIA

Begin Organizing Relief Work Among Thousands In That Country

Use Scanty Emergency Funds From United States Sympathizers

[By the Associated Press]

Bucharest, Sept. 25—Americans using scanty emergency funds from United States sympathizers began organizing relief work today among thousands of Polish refugees scattered throughout Rumania.

Mindful of relief work performed by American organizations in the World War, Paul Super, Warsaw Y. M. C. A. general secretary, started organizing agencies to provide food and shelter to Poles who fled across the frontier before the advancing German and Soviet Russian armies.

Only One Meal A Day

Super said Polish groups had established relief camps with straw mats for beds and providing one meal a day.

An estimated 12,000 Polish officers and men have been disarmed and interned in Rumania military camps. Polish Government and provincial officers totaling 10,000 also were in Rumania.

Other uncounted thousands crossed the Dniester and Pruth rivers and entered the country by every available roadway. Many disappeared into hiding in the countryside, while some obtained refuge with friends and relatives.

Given 15 Days To Leave

These "people without a country" reported they were warned they must leave within fifteen days.

Neighboring Hungary faced a similar problem and did not welcome the influx of more refugees.

Yugoslavia shut the door on the wanderers, refusing to issue visas or offer residence on the grounds the country already was crowded with Albanian and Czecho-Slovak refugees.

Restrictions In France

France has imposed sever restrictions, and offered no haven.

Some wealthy Poles have been successful in obtaining visas to other countries, including the United States and South American republics, it was reported.

Despite the flight of thousands, it was estimated more than 30,000,000 Poles remained in Poland either under German or Soviet Russian rule.

U. S. Red Cross Official Moves To Aid Refugees

Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 25 (AP). Malcolm Davis, United States assistant secretary of the general league of Red Cross societies, today left by way of Germany for the Baltic States to consult national Red Cross offices concerning the needs of Polish refugees in Lithuania and Latvia.

Davis plans to return by way of Sweden, Norway and Denmark to determine whether Polish sailors interned there need aid.

Explanation Offered On Submarine Report

Trading Vessel On West Coast May Have Been Mistaken For U-Boat

Vancouver, B. C., Sept. 25 (Canadian Press)—Mariners suggested today a "foreign submarine" reported seen recently in southern Alaska waters might have been the Audrey B, which arrived yesterday from Dutch Harbor, Alaska.

The Audrey B, painted gray, has a superstructure which from a distance resembles the conning tower of a submarine. The trapping and trading vessel passed along the Alaska coast en route from the Aleutian Islands.

"We saw one big steamer and though we saw some fishing boats," said Wilfred Purcell, of Seattle, Wash. "They might have reported us as a submarine. I guess we look a lot like a submarine four or five miles away."

CENSORSHIP RULES LISTED BY CANADA

Instructions Have Full Authority Of Law—Penalties Are Prescribed

Ottawa, Sept. 25 (Canadian Press)—Censorship regulations in effect under the War Measures Act have been made public here. On Canada's declaration that a state of war existed with Germany, general directions were issued to the press and radio stations by censorship authorities. These directions now have been followed by detailed instructions which have full authority of law.

Walter S. Thompson, director of censorship, said that the regulations were drawn up as a result of conferences between departments of the public service.

Prohibitions Listed

The regulations prohibit the making or publication of the following:

Any adverse or unfavorable statement, report or opinion likely to prejudice the defense of Canada or the efficient prosecution of the war.

Any report or statement likely to cause disaffection to his Majesty or to prejudice his Majesty's relations with foreign powers.

Any report or statement likely to prejudice the recruiting, training, discipline or adminstration of the forces.

Any information with respect to the movements or numbers of any of the armed forces of the Allies or relating to the storage of war material or fortifications.

Any leaflet or pamphlet relating to the war or to the making of peace which does not carry the name and address of author and printer.

All copies of any newspaper, tract, periodical, book, circular or other printed publication contravening the regulations may be seized and radio station licenses may be suspended or canceled.

Other penalties by way of fine and imprisonment are provided for infraction of the regulations, which apply not only to newspapers and radio stations but to those who speak at public meetings.

BOMBERS AT MANILA

14 Complete First Mass Flight From Hawaii.

MANILA, Sept. 25 (A. P.).—Fourteen United States Navy patrol bombers alighted at Cavite today, completing the first Hawaii-to-Manila mass flight ever attempted.

The bombers came here to join the aircraft carrier Langley and other American naval craft assigned to a "neutrality patrol" of Philippine waters.

SUBMARINE WAR IS BELITTLED

Naval Experts Say U-Boats Cannot Win Sea Control.

SHORTCOMINGS ARE OUTLINED

Sinking of the Aircraft Carrier Courageous Called a Fluke.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25 (A. P.).—Submarines may harass and challenge shipping, but preponderant naval opinion here believes they never could win control of the seas by themselves.

Elusive, annoying and often extremely destructive, the U-boat nevertheless has serious disadvantages when matched against surface war craft, the experts contend.

These disadvantages, they say, make it unlikely that the German submarine fleet could deliver a knockout blow to the British fleet. Here are some of the reasons they advance:

The submarine cannot be submerged indefinitely. Cruising ranges under water are from 75 to 250 miles. It must surface to replenish air and power. Above water it is vulnerable to a single well-placed shot. Its vision, too, is limited. Wear and tear on machinery and men are extraordinarily great. One expert estimated that only one-third of the German world war sub fleet could be kept wholly active at any given time.

Run Heavy Risks.

To reach the British fleet German submarines would be forced to run heavy risks. Most of the fleet is grouped together in one port or another, aided by listening devices, nets and mine fields across the approaches to fleet concentrations.

In attacks on isolated units U-boats have greater advantages. Nevertheless, they must be stationed roughly in advance of any warship in order to intercept and attack. They cannot pursue. Anything from a destroyer to a battleship can outrun a sub, which travels at an average of only twenty knots on the surface and ten undersea.

Sinking of the British aircraft carrier Courageous was considered something of a fluke in naval circles. There are indications that the Courageous was taking aboard airplanes when she was torpedoed. Proceeding, therefore, in a straight line at constant speed, she was a target as big as a barn door to a popgun.

Whereas one torpedo usually will dispatch a merchant ship, an armored battleship with its hull divided into watertight compartments would take five or six before foundering.

Within Gun Range.

Germany's biggest known undersea boat, weighing 712 tons, has six torpedo tubes, and probably carries 12 torpedoes. It might use all in a single set-to. Then, virtually disarmed except for a 3.5-inch cannon and a one-pound anti-aircraft gun, perhaps, it might be at the mercy of its natural enemy, the swift and agile destroyer. To fire a torpedo effectively, in the first place, a sub must go within gun range of a warship.

Of the fifty-five German submarines operating last year, ten were in the 700-ton class, twenty-one in the 500-ton class and twenty-four were of the 250-ton coastal type with three tubes. More than a score of others were being built and planned.

Besides guns that can be fatal to surfaced submarines, warships may be equipped with anti-submarine screens, depth bombs and reconnaissance and bombing airplanes.

Submarines are not totally ineffective against warcraft, however. Their victims represented one-third of all British naval tonnage sunk during the world war. The British themselves penetrated the mine-infested Dardanelles to pester the Turkish fleet and into the Baltic to harass the Germans.

—CASH AND CARRY—

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 23—What is "cash and carry?"

An official who has been working on neutrality legislation said today, "Nobody knows what it is because it has never been tried out."

Starting from that basis, let's see what it may be, judging by what it was originally in the Neutrality Act, what is left of it in that statute now, what the Administration wants it to be and what Key Pittman (Dem., Nev.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, is incorporating in the Administration's bill to repeal the arms embargo.

The Plan That Expired

The "cash-and-carry" provision of the Neutrality Act expired May 1, too soon to be tried out in the present conflict, and was not renewed. It made it unlawful for an American ship to carry to warring nations certain goods enumerated by the President and to export those goods to a belligerent unless they had already been sold to a foreigner.

This was in addition to the flat prohibition against arms exports to warring nations, which is still in the statute.

Other Unexpired Provisos

Other unexpired parts of the Neutrality Act retain:

1. A portion of the "cash" idea in the section prohibiting loans to belligerents, but permitting "ordinary commercial credits."

2. A portion of the "carry" idea in the section prohibiting American ships from carrying arms, ammunition or implements of war to any belligerent.

What Roosevelt Wants

Here are things the President has indicated he wants, together with reasons given by an Administration official for each of the proposals:

1. Title to goods sent to belligerents should be transferred to the foreign purchaser. That means the foreign purchaser must be the owner of the goods before they leave our shores.

THE REASON—"If a submarine sinks the ship or a warship seizes the cargo, that's too bad for the foreign buyer, but it's not going to make the American Government jump into hot water over it."

Credits And Ships

2. Prevent war credits from being granted to belligerents. Do it by legislation continuing the provisions of the present law, or by proclamation.

REASON—"Don't let war credits pile up so that the American manufacturers and workers get a vested interest in the war and want the side they're supplying to win."

3. Keep American ships from entering danger zones. Congress can't fix war zones because they change too quickly. The State Department should do it.

REASON—"It's in the danger zones that most ships are sent to the bottom. If an American ship defies Congress or the President and goes into a danger area, this Government does not have to put itself out on a limb on the ship owner's behalf."

What Is "Cash"?

In "cash and carry," what is cash? Does it mean banknotes on the barrelhead, or promises to pay in thirty days, sixty days or ninety days?

A special committee headed by Under Secretary of the Treasury Hanes is studying the matter.

At the moment it looks as if the committee would recommend that decisions be made case by case, requiring the American manufacturer or exporter who is willing to work on time to ask its advice.

How That Might Work

Under such a system there would be no "hard-and-fast" rule. It might work like this:

Mr. Manufacturer says: "I've got an order from Great Britain for 25,000 bales of cotton on ninety days? What'll I do?"

The Treasury Department, or any of the twelve Federal Reserve branches, says: "What arrangement did you make with the same people before the war?"

Mr. Manufacturer replies: "Generally, sixty days."

The Treasury responds: "Let's make it sixty days."

Could Be Checkups

There could be some method of check-up to make sure that the notes were met promptly and that extension and accumulation did not combine to produce abnormal credits.

The President said the existing provision against American ships' carrying arms to belligerents "should not be disturbed."

Senator Pittman said the bill now being drafted by a group of Democratic Administration supporters on the Foreign Relations Committee could be described as more of a "come-and-get-it-and-take-it-away-in-your-own-ships" bill than a "cash-and-carry" bill.

Bill Won't Mention "Cash"

This, he explained, was because the bill would not mention "cash" but would require the foreign purchaser to show he had acquired title before shipping the goods. Pittman intimated that title could be transferred on short-term credit.

In addition, Pittman proposed a strict prohibition against any American ship carrying "any articles, materials or passengers" to any belligerent.

Asks War Ban By Americas

Panama, Sept. 25 (AP).—The United States, through Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, today urged the republics of the New World to resist all aggression—direct or indirect—and offered economic help to soften the European war's effects on the American continents.

Representatives of the other American republics heard Welles declare at the first plenary session of their neutrality conference that the time had come for all 21 republics in the New World to come out clearly against any belligerent activities "in close proximity to the shores of the new world."

Sea Protection Urged.

Immediately after Welles spoke, the conference heard proposals from Peru and Cuba for protection of American seas from activities of the belligerents.

Opening the session, the Panama Foreign Minister, Narciso Garay, declared it was time for immediate action to conserve peace. He was elected permanent president of the meeting.

Several delegations later were reported unofficially as favoring a cooperative naval patrol for the American continents.

Numerous delegates, including the Mexican Foreign Minister, Eduardo Hay, voiced complete support of Welles' call for a stand against activities in new world regions by the warring powers.

Foreign Minister Enrique Goytisolo of Peru, called for creation of a neutral maritime zone surrounding the American continents "of sufficient extension that inside it we can continue the habitual and necessary liberty of our commercial traffic."

He proposed a zone extending from mid-Atlantic to mid-Pacific.

The Cuban Secretary of State, Miguel Angel Campa, proposed that the republics "reprove" all actions by the belligerents which would tend to carry their hostilities to American waters.

The Cuban statement was regarded as an expression of the almost unanimous stand of Caribbean and Central American nations for a coastal patrol of both continents by American navies. It was recalled that Argentina, Uruguay and Brazil recently instituted a co-ordinated patrol for their Atlantic coasts.

The Foreign Minister of Panama told the conference that its meeting would gain "imperishable glory" if "through our efforts and determination we may declare peace throughout the world."

He asserted the Western Hemisphere would resist any attempts to establish an "oppressive peace based on the points of bayonets and the mouths of cannon."

The Cuban Secretary of State in addressing the conference said his delegation proposed that the "free nations of America ratify their intention of remaining neutral in the conflict unfortunately disturbing world peace, and having decided to remain out of it reprove all actions by the belligerents which would tend to carry hostilities to American waters."

It was said unofficially that the Bolivian delegation was planning to propose a common neutrality declaration by all republics at the conference to supplement previous individual proclamations to strengthen continental neutrality.

Morning and afternoon executive sessions were planned for the conference after today's open meeting. The final session is expected to be open.

DISCUSS NEUTRALITY

Western Nations Take Action on War-time Problems.

PANAMA, Sept. 25 (A. P.).—Representatives of twenty-one American republics met in informal session today to work out procedure in order to speed action on Western Hemisphere wartime problems at this afternoon's plenary meeting of the inter-American neutrality conference.

Among the measures to be discussed were proposals for co-operative coastal patrols and limitation of the activities of belligerent vessels in American waters.

Delegates said it appeared probable some plan would be worked out for a permanent inter-American neutrality committee.

A full committee of the conference voted to streamline the deliberations in view of what was termed the urgent need for speed in acting on proposals for the defense of continental interests against the effect of hostilities in Europe.

The delegates agreed that only foreign Ministers or their representatives would participate in the actual consultations and to hold both morning and afternoon sessions which would be executive and secret.

AMERICAN PARLEYS

[By the Associated Press]

Panama, Sept. 25—With preliminary talks indicating little divergence of views as to major objectives, delegates to the Inter-American Neutrality Conference declared themselves prepared today to begin formation of a program designed to keep war from the Western Hemisphere.

At the first plenary session, delegates from twenty-one American republics will decide whether full delegations or only the leaders will debate. The latter method is being urged for the sake of speed.

Delegates Agree

Informed sources said virtually all of the delegates are agreed on the vital need for defining a continental stand against war involvement.

The informant said all delegates are determined to seek cooperative means of maintaining markets, obtaining recognition of neutral rights from belligerents, maintaining peace and exerting some influence on conditions under which peace terms may be reached eventually.

Sumner Wells To Speak

After the formal election of Panama's Foreign Minister, Narciso Garay, as permanent o fthe consultations committee, this afternoon, Under-Secretary of State Sumner Welles was to speak for the United States.

Welles was expected to offer cooperation largely in the field of economics, promising long-term credits, ships for commercial cargoes and aid in relieving exchange difficulties.

Expect Economic Aid

Much economic aid is expected from the United States Export-Import Bank and other official and private banking sources in the United States.

Some of the chief problems to be discussed, it was said, are the wartime difficulties of merchant ships, the scarcity of ships and the contraband lists of Great Britain and Germany.

Text of Sumner Welles Plea to Keep War Out of the Americas

PANAMA CITY, Sept. 25 (AP).—The text of Sumner Welles's address before the Inter-American neutrality conference here today, follows:

In accordance with the principles of the convention for the maintenance, preservation and reestablishment of peace, the declaration of inter-American solidarity of Buenos Aires, and the declaration of Lima, the Ministers of Foreign Relations of the American republics or their representatives are meeting here in Panama for the purpose of consultation. Under the terms of the agreements I have cited, this coming together to consult is not an undertaking into which we have entered lightly. We have, on the contrary, agreed and clearly stipulated that the consultation provided for in these agreements shall be undertaken when there exists in the belief of our respective governments a menace to the peace of the continent.

I speak, of course, solely in the name of my own government, but I venture to assert that the government of every American republic coincides in the opinion that the outbreak of the general war with which the world today is confronted constitutes in very truth a potential menace to the well being, to the security, and to the peace of the New World. And it is for that reason that we are meeting here in this historic City of Panama. We are today creating a precedent. The conference for the maintenance of peace of Buenos Aires was called, as we all recognize, for the specific purpose of reaching a common understanding while world peace existed as to how the nations of the New World might best safeguard their legitimate interests, and most readily preserve the peace of their own peoples, in the event that war broke out in other parts of the world.

The meeting here assembled is the first and the direct result of the engagements undertaken at the conference of Buenos Aires.

An Ideal Achieved

It is a meeting of the American neighbors to consider, in a moment of grave emergency, the peaceful measures which they may feel it wise to adopt either individually or jointly, so as best to insure their national interests, and the collective interests of the nations of the New World.

And it is singularly fitting that this great practical demonstration of inter-American solidarity should be realized in Panama. Every one of us who meets here today will recognize that this assembly constitutes the realization of an ideal—the realization of the vision that Bolivar possessed more than a century ago—an ideal which time and again it had seemed could never be attained. It lies within the power of those of us who have the privilege of representing our governments upon this occasion to insure not only the attainment of that ideal, but also by so doing to insure the lasting establishment of a peaceful form of practical co-operation and interdependence between equal and sovereign states on a scale which the world has rarely witnessed, and which, at this moment, is more than ever imperative.

The purpose for which we meet, and the topics which will come up for consideration, are clearly set forth in the agenda upon which we have agreed. As my government envisages it, it is our common desire to take under consideration the complicated question of our rights and duties as neutrals, in view of the outbreak of general war in Europe, with a view to the preservation of the peace of our respective nations, and with a view toward obtaining complete respect on the part of all belligerents for our respective sovereignties.

Uniform Program the Aim

It would seem to me desirable, so far as conditions and our untrammeled rights of individual action make it possible, for us in this connection to give some thought to the desirability of our reaching some uniform standards of approach with regard to the steps which we may individually take in determining and in asserting our rights and obligations as neutrals. It would seem to me to be self-evident that should it be possible to attain such an objective, our individual capacity to maintain our sovereign rights unimpaired, as well as our ability to preserve the peace of our continent would be correspondingly enhanced.

We are further agreed that we will give the fullest consideration to all measures which we may individually or collectively undertake to preserve the American continent free from conflict and to keep war away from our new world.

Finally, we are agreed that we will undertake to discuss and to consider those practical steps which can most advantageously be undertaken to cushion our national economies from the shock of the war which has broken out, and to prevent so far as may be possible that disruption and dislocation of inter-American economic, financial, and commercial intercourse, which wrought such havoc during the years of the great war of 1914-18. We are also in accord that we will give thought to the continuation and expansion of long-range programs for commercial and economic co-operation among our several republics.

In the economic sphere the struggle that is going on confronts us with difficulties of both an immediate and an ultimate character. We are already experiencing dislocations in our usual commerce. Some of the markets for our products will be closed or diminished; others will be greatly changed. We must anticipate difficulties disposing of war created surpluses in some directions, which will result in lowering prices or in bringing new burdens to our public finances. In other directions we must anticipate an abnormally increased demand which will result in price increases, unexpected gains, and the dangers of expansion on temporary and unstable foundations.

Each of our nations will no doubt determine upon a program aimed to lessen the effects upon its own welfare of these dislocations. But there are many ways in which the American republics can assist each other in the task. We may be able, without undertaking discriminations against the rest of the world, substantially to increase our commerce with one another. Countries which have similar surplus problems may be able to devise temporary arrangements with each other that will ameliorate their situation.

By our concerted effort we may be able to achieve something in the maintenance of our usual trade in staple peace-time commodities with other neutral countries.

We all of us remember only too well the havoc which was occasioned our inter - American economic system after the war broke out in 1914. Inter-American shipping communications were either abandoned, or were seriously crippled; the legitimate export trade of many republics—even that to their American neighbors—upon which in great part their national economy depended, was disrupted or destroyed with resultant misery and distress to their respective peoples. It appears to my government that the opportunity is now afforded for us severally to assure ourselves and each other that this will not occur again.

So far as my own government is concerned I am authorized to state that so long as the present situation continues, the regular transportation facilities of the shipping lines between the United States and its American neighbors now in operation will not only not be curtailed, but will be strengthened and increased, whenever such increase may be found to be desirable and feasible.

Financial assistance and co-operation may be developed to tide over short emergency periods and to develop in individual countries new fields of production to replace those temporarily depressed.

Credit Plan Outlined

I am authorized to state that the United States government wishes to co-operate with all other American republics in such efforts of each to develop the resources of its country along sound economic and non-competitive lines. When desired it will assist in making credit available to them through the services and facilities of its privately owned banking system as well as its government-owned agencies when the latter have funds available for such purposes.

In financing current matters it is expected that only short-term credits will be requested, but in the purchase of rail and mill equipment, heavy goods, et cetera, longer term credits appropriate to the circumstances will be required. Also, it is, of course, recognized that war conditions may shift certain international trade markets and this will need to be taken into account.

My government likewise recognizes that excessive or unwarranted fluctations in inter-American exchanges brought about by conditions resulting from the war situation would seriously prejudice beneficial trade between the American republics. It is my hope that our deliberations may result in agreement. To the extent that we sustain bases of commercial policy that are universal in character, and leave trade open to all countries on substantially the same terms, and to the extent that our commerce is not dictated by special agreements of an exclusive character, to that extent can we insure that our political independence cannot be subjugated to alien political systems operating through commercial channels.

Insulation Relative

There is also incumbent upon us the task of keeping vigorous our belief that work and production should be primarily for peaceful welfare. If by our joint effort and strength we keep this continent free from the threat of aggression, we will greatly lessen the need of subordinating our individual productive energies by making preparatory arrangements which may assist in safeguarding against this danger.

These, as I understand them, are the specific and practical measures which we are called upon to consider. They are all of them problems of vital importance to the American republics—problems of the highest and most legitimate self interest; but we all of us recognize, I am sure, that however much we may desire to insulate ourselves from the effects of this present conflict, such insulation can be only relative. It cannot in any event do more than mitigate in so far as we are able the distasters which will affect all peoples, belligerent or neutral, as a result of this world calamity.

Beyond these immediate problems produced by the war crisis there are problems which are deeper and more fundamental. We have prospered by regarding our commerce and production as designed to serve, through the exercise of individual initiative, the ends of public welfare, and not the ends of political strategy.

A Strong Defense

We shall be faced by the fact that various powerful countries in other parts of the world have now completely converted their own system of trade and production to another basis—making it an instrument of political or ideological ambition. By common determination and co-operation we can do much to avoid having our own purposes dominated by those of others or subordinated to military demands. But, since in these days it is essential to be strong (for we have seen all too often the fate of the weak), we can make every effort to see that our program of defense is of a character that reaffirms our faith in the powers of individual initiative and of free men. We can draw our strength from our liberties and from the contribution of men and women become strong and disciplined under conditions of freedom.

I believe that the time has come when the twenty-one American republics must state, and state clearly and in no uncertain terms, to all of the belligerents, both as a right of self protection and as a right inherent in their position as peaceful and independent powers, constituting an entire continent remote from the causes of the hostilities which have broken out, that they cannot agree that their security their nationals or their legitimate commercial rights and interests should be jeopardized by belligerent activities in close proximity to the shores of the New World.

This assertion of principle, I believe, must be regarded as constituting a declaration of the inalienable right of the American republics to protect themselves, so far as conditions in this modern world make it possible, from the dangers and the repercussions of a war which has broken out thousands of miles from their shores, and in which they are not involved.

War and the People

But, in the larger sense, every one of our nations, every one of our fellow citizens, is affected or will be affected by the growing tragedy of this new war.

War spells ruin, waste, torture and death—not perhaps to the leaders who have wrought it, but to the countless numbers of humble men and women throughout the world who would have none of it. For there is nothing surer in the world today than that the vast mass of the common people everywhere have wanted above all else to prevent the war which has now broken out.

Far removed from the initial scene of hostilities as the peoples of the Americas are, their interests have been jeopardized by the commencement of war. In modern civilization, every country has a natural right that war shall not be loosed upon humanity. This right was subscribed to by every nation of the civilized world in the so-called Pact of Paris, and it is this right, so solemnly subscribed to, that is today being flagrantly violated

There is no moral justification for any nation to loose war upon humanity when the resort to peaceful procedure for the solution of controversies or of inequities is available.

Co-operation Needed

The only possible road for achieving peace is through co-operation; this implies the juridic equality of every nation, and the acceptance of a moral order and of effective international law. It assumes that controversies will be settled by peaceful processes and that all peoples will, under these pacific processes, co-operate on equal terms with generosity and with justice. It assumes that economic arrangements can be made which are entirely susceptible of satisfying the reasonable needs of any nation for beneficial trade, which will provide access on equal terms to world markets, access on equal terms to raw materials, and which will satisfy the legitimate demand of all nations for those component factors which make for a peaceful life.

There is existing now and at this moment an overwhelming will on the part of peoples everywhere for peace based on renunciation of force, on justice, and on equality, could it find expression.

It may well be that the facilitation of that means of expression will be determined by the part we play in this Western Hemisphere. We, the American republics, share in common a great heritage—the principles of democratic constitutional government, devotion to justice, respect for the pledged word, love of peace. We have created an American system, an American way of life, which is our chief contribution to world civilization. This way of life we must make every effort to protect, to safeguard, to pass on intact to future generations of our own peoples, and to maintain as an unflinching standard in a world in which each day that passes sees more standards, once believed inviolate, shattered and destroyed.

Need of Purpose

As the shadows created by the outbreak of this monstrous war darken and spread rapidly across the length and breadth of the world in which we live, the twenty-one free nations of the new world can still preserve for posterity those ideals and those beliefs which may well constitute the last great hope of the civilization which we have inherited.

Our influence for peace and for the re-establishment of a world order based on morality and on law must be unshaken and secure. To accomplish this we must, and we can, resolutely defend our continent from all menace of aggression, direct or indirect. To do so, we must make every effort to keep alive our liberal commercial policy in our relations with those other nations of the world who are willing to join with us. To do so, we must strengthen and fortify the solidarity of understanding, and the identity of individual purpose which bind us closely together. To do so we must rally ever more resolutely upon the principles of freedom and of democracy, and upon the ideals of our Christian faith, through which our nations have had their being, and only through which can their future rest secure.

IN THE FIRST WORD AT THE CONFERENCE FROM THE UNITED STATES, WELLES SAID HE BELIEVED THE TIME HAD COME WHEN THE AMERICAN REPUBLICS "MUST STATE, AND STATE CLEARLY AND IN NO UNCERTAIN TERMS, TO ALL OF THE BELLIGERENTS, BOTH AS A RIGHT OF SELF PROTECTION, AND AS A RIGHT INHERENT IN THEIR POSITION AS PEACEFUL AND INDEPENDENT POWERS, CONSTITUTING AN ENTIRE CONTINENT REMOTE FROM THE CAUSES OF THE HOSTILITIES WHICH HAVE BROKEN OUT, THAT THEY CANNOT AGREE THAT THEIR SECURITY, THEIR NATIONALS, OR THEIR LEGITIMATE COMMERCIAL RIGHTS AND INTERESTS SHOULD BE JEOPARDIZED BY BELLIGERENT ACTIVITIES IN CLOSE PROXIMITY TO THE SHORES OF THE NEW WORLD.

"THIS ASSERTION OF PRINCIPLE, I BELIEVE, MUST BE REGARDED AS CONSTITUTING A DECLARATION OF THE INALIENABLE RIGHT OF THE AMERICAN REPUBLICS TO PROTECT THEMSELVES, SO FAR AS CONDITIONS IN THIS MODERN WORLD MAKE IT POSSIBLE, FROM THE DANGERS AND REPERCUSSIONS OF A WAR WHICH HAS BROKEN OUT THOUSANDS OF MILES FROM THEIR SHORES AND IN WHICH THEY ARE NOT INVOLVED."

WELLES DECLARED HE WAS AUTHORIZED TO STATE THAT HIS GOVERNMENT "WISHES TO COOPERATE WITH ALL OTHER AMERICAN REPUBLICS IN SUCH EFFORTS OF EACH TO DEVELOP THE RESOURCES OF ITS COUNTRY ALONG SOUND ECONOMIC AND NON-COMPETITIVE LINES."

"WHEN DESIRED," HE ADDED, "IT WILL ASSIST IN MAKING CREDIT AVAILABLE TO THEM THROUGH THE SERVICES AND FACILITIES OF ITS PRIVATELY-OWNED BANKING SYSTEM AS WELL AS ITS GOVERNMENT-OWNED AGENCIES WHEN THE LATTER HAVE FUNDS AVAILABLE FOR SUCH PURPOSES."

THE STATE DEPARTMENT OFFICIAL SAID THAT AS LONG AS THE PRESENT SITUATION CONTINUES THE REGULAR TRANSPORTATION FACILITIES OF THE SHIPPING LINES BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND ITS AMERICAN NEIGHBORS WOULD BE MAINTAINED AND WOULD BE STRENGTHENED AND INCREASED "WHENEVER SUCH INCREASE MAY BE FOUND TO BE DESIRABLE AND FEASIBLE."

"OUR INFLUENCE FOR PEACE AND FOR THE REESTABLISHMENT OF A WORLD ORDER BASED ON MORALITY AND ON LAW MUST BE UNSHAKEN AND SECURE," SAID WELLES.

"TO ACCOMPLISH THIS WE MUST, AND WE CAN, RESOLUTELY DEFEND OUR CONTINENT FROM ALL MENACE OF AGGRESSION, DIRECT OR INDIRECT."

SINKING OF THE 4,646-TON BRITISH FREIGHTER HAZELSIDE OFF THE IRISH COAST BY A SUBMARINE SUNDAY RAISED TO 49 THE TOTAL OF MERCHANT SHIPS LOST IN SEA COMBAT.

SINCE WAR WAS DECLARED SEPT. 3, 38 BRITISH, ONE FRENCH, NINE GERMAN AND NINE NEUTRAL VESSELS HAVE BEEN DESTROYED.

TWELVE OF THE HAZELSIDE'S 34 CREW MEMBERS WERE REPORTED MISSING.

SURVIVORS SAID THE FREIGHTER WAS SUNK WITHOUT WARNING.

LIKE THE FINNISH FREIGHTERS MARTTI-RAGNAR AND THE WALMA, THE 1,210-TON SWEDISH CARGO CARRIER GERTRUD BRATT, TORPEDOED OFF NORWAY SUNDAY, WAS BOUND FOR ENGLAND WITH WOOD PULP, LISTED BY THE GERMANS AS CONTRABAND. THE WOOD PULP CONTAINS CELLULOSE, IMPORTANT IN THE MANUFACTURE OF EXPLOSIVES.

ALTHOUGH FINLAND PROTESTED THE SINKING OF ITS TWO FREIGHTERS AS A VIOLATION OF NEUTRALITY, A GERMAN OFFICIAL SAID THAT IF EITHER VESSEL MERELY HAD BEEN ORDERED TO RETURN TO ITS HOME PORT, IT WOULD HAVE SOUGHT SOME OTHER WAY TO ENGLAND.

"SO THERE IS NOTHING LEFT FOR US TO DO IN SUCH A CASE EXCEPT SINK IT," HE SAID.

EACH NEUTRAL SHIP WAS WARNED BEFORE IT WAS SUNK. ALL CREW MEMBERS APPARENTLY REACHED SAFETY.

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE BEFUDDLED EUROPEAN WAR CONTINUES TO SIT ON THE CURB-STONE WITH ITS FEET IN THE DUST, WAITING FOR COMMUNIST CHIEFTAIN STALIN TO COME ALONG AND DISCLOSE WHAT RUSSIA IS GOING TO DO ABOUT IT.

FOR WHAT THE MUSCOVITES DO IS A MATTER OF MIGHTY MOMENT BOTH TO THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES AND TO HERR HITLER.

SO MUCH SO THAT THE SILENCE OF THE KREMLIN IS LOUDER THAN THE BOOM OF THE BIG GUNS ON THE WAR FRONT AT THE MOMENT.

SEP 26 1939

BRITISH FOREIGN SECRETARY LORD HALIFAX IS REPORTED TO HAVE TRIED AGAIN TO GET AT THE BOTTOMOF THE MYSTERY SATURDAY NIGHT. THIS GREAT PERSONALITY, WHOSE OWN OPINIONS HAVE SO MUCH WEIGHT IN THIS CRISIS, IS SAID TO HAVE SENT FOR SOVIET AMBASSADOR MAISKY AND REQUESTED THAT THE ENVOY CLARIFY HIS COUNTRY'S AIMS IN EASTERN EUROPE.

WHAT MAISKY REPLIED HASN'T BEEN MADE PUBLIC, BUT IF HE SAID ANYTHING WORTH WHILE IT'S A SAFE BET FUEHRER HITLER WOULD GIVE MUSSOLINI ANOTHER SLICE OF HIS NEW POLISH TERRITORY TO HEAR IT. THE LITTLE COUNTRIES OF EASTERN EUROPE WOULD GIVE A PRETTY BIT TO HEAR IT, TOO.

THE WHOLE OF THAT PART OF THE CONTINENT, FROM NORTHERNMOST FINLAND, RIGHT DOWN THROUGH THE BALTIC STATES, HUNGARY AND THE BALKANS, IS SHIVERING WITH ANXIETY AS THE RESULT OF RUSSIA'S ANTI-AGGRESSION PACT WITH GERMANY AND THE SOVIET OCCUPATION OF EASTERN POLAND.

SO FAR AS CONCERNS HERR HITLER HE MUST BE WONDERING HOW GOOD A PROPHET HE REALLY IS. WHEN HE GAVE HIS FOLLOWERS MEIN KAMPF HE WARNED THEM IN BURNING LANGUAGE TO KEEP AWAY FROM ENTANGLEMENTS WITH RUSSIA.

SEP 26 1939

NOW THAT HE HAS VIOLATED HIS OWN ADMONITION, THERE IS WIDE-SPREAD SPECULATION AS TO WHETHER STALIN OR HITLER IS TOP-SERGEANT AND GIVING THE ORDERS. CERTAINLY RUSSIA'S INTERVENTION HAS CHANGED THE ENTIRE COMPLEXION OF THE EASTERN EUROPEAN SET-UP, WHICH HAD BEEN HIGHLY FAVORABLE TO HERR HITLER. LOOK AT THIS:

FIRST OFF, RUSSIA NOW TAKEN THREE FIFTHS OF POLAND, A CONSIDERABLE PORTION OF WHICH HAD BEEN BATTLED FOR BY THE GERMAN ARMY.

HITLER HAS HAD TO ABANDON HIS PET SCHEME OF TAKING OVER THE WONDERFULLY RICH RUSSIAN UKRAINE, TOWARD WHICH HE HAS BEEN LOOKING WITH LONGING EYES SINCE DAYS BEFORE HE CAME TO POWER.

DIPLOMATIC QUARTERS IN MOSCOW EXPRESS THE OPINION THAT RUSSIA'S OCCUPATION OF EASTERN POLAND HAS PREVENTED ANY DIRECT GERMAN MARCH INTO RUMANIA THROUGH POLAND. THE ONLY WAY GERMANY NOW COULD GET TO RUMANIA--SHOULD IT WISH TO--IS THROUGH HUNGARY.

THESE OBSERVERS SAY THIS MIGHT BE A VITAL FACTOR IN THE EUROPEAN WAR, SINCE GERMANY HAS BEEN STRAINING EVERY NERVE TO SECURE RUMANIA'S VAST OIL SUPPLIES AND WHEAT. THE NAZIS NEED THESE BADLY, ESPECIALLY THE OIL, FOR PROSECUTION OF THE WAR. Ppremier CALINESCU, WHO WAS ASSASSINATED LAST WEEK BY PRO-NAZI IRON GUARDSMEN, HAD BEEN BLOCKING BERLIN'S AIMS IN THIS RESPECT.

HUNGARY, WHICH HAS BEEN AS CLOSE TO GERMANY AS TWO CROSSED FINGERS, AND ONLY A FEW MONTHS AGO PLEDGED ITS HATRED TO COMMUNISM BY SIGNING HITLER'S ANTI-COMINTERN PACT, WAS RUSHED TO RENEW DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH THE SOVIET.

THE TURKISH FOREIGN MINISTER IS ON HIS WAY TO MOSCOW TO DISCUSS SOME SORT OF AGREEMENT. TURKEY HAS BEEN IN HITLER'S TRADE CORRAL ALONG WITH THE BALKAN STATES, AND ALSO HAS A DEFENSIVE AGREEMENT WITH BRITAIN. ONLY A COUPLE OF YEARS AGO TURKEY WAS SHRUGGING ITS SHOULDERS AT MOSCOW.

BULGARIA, WHICH HAD BEEN SLIDING DOWN HITLER'S CELLAR-DOOR IN THE MOST FRIENDLY FASHION, IS REPORTED TO BE ABOUT TO MAKE A TRADE PACT WITH RUSSIA.

THE GREAT YUGOSLAVIA, WHICH HASN'T HAD DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH MOSCOW, IS SAID TO BE OPENING THEM UP. THE VIRTUAL RULER OF YUGOSLAVIA, PRINCE REGENT PAUL, HAS BEEN A BITTER FOE OF COMMUNISM. HIS MOTHER WAS A HESS-BORN RUSSIAN AND MANY OF HER FAMILY LOST THEIR LIVES IN THE BOLSHEVIST REVOLUTION.

IN SHORT, EVERYBODY IN EASTERN EUROPE IS RUSHING TO GET A NICE SPOT IN THE RUSSIAN SUN.

SO IT WILL BE SURPRISING IF HITLER ISN'T WONDERING WHETHER HE WASN'T IN FACT A GOOD PROPHET WHEN HE WROTE MEIN KAMPF. HOWEVER, THE NAZI CHIEFTAIN IS TOO ASTUTE NOT TO HAVE HAD HIS EYES OPEN WHEN HE STARTED TO SWAP HORSES WITH STALIN. HITLER'S PROBLEM NOW, IN THE VIEW OF MANY OBSERVERS, IS TO FIGURE OUT WHETHER IF HE WINS THE WAR FROM THE ALLIES HE MAY NOT LOSE IT TO RUSSIA.

WORD FROM MOSCOW IS THAT THE SOVIETIZING OF THE NEWLY ACQUIRED POLISH TERRITORY IS PROCEEDING APACE. THE PROGRAM IS SAID TO INCLUDE A CAMPAIGN AGAINST LANDLORD AND CAPITALIST CLASSES.

ALL OF THE FIGHTING HAS BEEN TAKING PLACE IN THE WIDE NO-MAN'S-LAND WHICH LIES BETWEEN THE TWO GREAT DEFENSIVE LINES--THE GERMAN WEST-WALL AND THE FRENCH MAGINOT LINE.

A HEAVY BOMBARDMENT FREQUENTLY WILL BE SET OFF SIMPLY BECAUSE SOME SENTRY WITH A NERVOUS TRIGGER FINGER HAS FIRED A SINGLE SHOT AT A MOVING SHADOW. THE ENEMY MAY FEAR THIS MEANS A RAID OR EVEN THE BEGINNING OF AN OFFENSIVE.

ALL THE GAINS AND LOSSES THUS FAR RECORDED HAVE BEEN IN THE NO-MAN'S BELT. APART FROM ARTILLERY BOMBARDMENT, THERE WOULD APPEAR TO HAVE BEEN NO ATTACK AGAINST THE MAIN DEFENSES OF EITHER THE MAGINOT OR WEST-WALL LINES.

French Guns Dent Limes Line

By The Associated Press

PARIS, Sept. 27 (Wednesday).—French artillery was reported today to have blasted a hole in the Limes fortifications between Merzig and Saarbruecken.

Dispatches said the entire French-German frontier, between the borders of neutral Luxembourg and Switzerland, blazed with artillery fire.

These advices said heavy German counterfire on advanced French positions in the Saar and Palatinate regions was designed to protect feverish efforts by German troops to rebuild shattered blockhouses backing their line from Merzig to Saarbruecken—a distance of about twenty miles.

French infantry, edging forward yesterday under cover of a heavy artillery barrage, was said by military sources to have hit Germany's main Limes line through a salient formed at Hornbach, on the western front.

These sources described the battle thus:

German big guns replied to the French barrage, sending shells into the wooded hills and steep ravines southeast of the German town of Zweibruecken, called Deux Ponts by the French. This town was the immediate objective of the French attack in this sector. Overhead French and German air forces clashed, the French holding their own against superior numbers.

Despite violent German reaction, the French succeeded in consolidating the Hornbach salient, which was one of the most important strategic positions taken by the French on the northern flank of the front between the Rhine and Moselle Rivers. Hornbach lies a little more than a mile within German territory in the valley of the Horn River. Zweibruecken is four miles farther north.

The general staff's evening communique, No. 46, said:

"Activity of the enemy artillery in the region south of Deux Ponts and south of Pirmasens.

"At dawn a raid was repulsed on the front of the Lauter."

The morning communique, No. 45, said:

"Persistence of activity by enemy artillery southeast of Zweibruecken. During the day of Sept. 25 several combats matched our fighting planes against German fighting planes."

The general staff's evening communique showed that German firing spread from the sector south of Zweibruecken to a parallel region south of Pirmasens, twelve miles to the east on the other side of France's Hornbach salient. It was through this rugged area that the French had been infiltrating gradually. Moving north from the Bitche Plateau, military dispatches said, they seized border villages and occupied crests around Hornbach, took the town and pushed on to Alt (Old) Hornbach.

On the eastern end of the north flank, where the French communique said a German surprise attack at dawn in the Lauter River Valley was repulsed, dispatches indicated that a German raiding party had attempted to take a farm near the no-man's land village of Saint Paul north of the French border town of Wissembourg, but was turned back.

French troops, after three weeks of fighting through outposts of the Limes Line, were said to have come into contact with a principal field of pillboxes and trenches around Hornbach. This is one of the points where the Limes Line curves closest to the frontier.

An indication of an increase in activity in this sector was given in military dispatches which formerly reported companies of 250 men in action. They now said battalions of 1,000 were engaging in combat.

Asserting that outlying villages and machine-gun nests of the Limes Line had been taken, French observers said their artillery was pounding main fortifications on a 100-mile northern flank running through Merzig, Saarbruecken, Zweibruecken, Pirmasens and Bergzabern.

Series of Attacks Succeed

BASEL, Switzerland, Sept. 26 (AP).—French forces were reported in advices reaching Basel today to have attained a number of limited objectives set at the beginning of a series of attacks launched Saturday along a forty-mile stretch on the western front.

Only before the towns of Zweibruecken and Pirmasens, in the central sector fifteen and thirty miles east of the industrial town of Saarbruecken, were the French attacks said to have been thwarted by the Germans.

The central area was reported to have been the scene of a heavy German counter-attack this afternoon following three days of stubborn resistance to the French attacks.

Dispatches reaching Basel said the fighting had been so intense between small, picked forces since Saturday that the village of Bottenbach, just north of the frontier between Pirmasens and Zweibruecken, had changed hands five times. These reports related that several squadrons of German planes cooperated with Nazi land forces which were said to have struck south from the main Zweibruecken-Pirmasens road, bombing trenches and pillboxes around the French fort just north of Rolbing.

One of the first positions the French captured at the outbreak of the war was a high hill in the southern Palatinate forests. Atop it are ruins of Wegelnbourg Castle, destroyed by French guns. The ruined border castles of Hohenbourg, Wasigenstein and Flechenstein, all of which were scenes of battles centuries ago, were among other bases from which the French drove northwest through heavily forested country. A column of troops from Wegelnbourg Castle was reported to have cut a secondary rail line and road between Fischbach and Bundenthal on the west, reaching the Suaer watershed north of Fischbach.

Basel, wondering for three weeks whether it would hear a shot or see action on the heretofore dormant Rhine front, stretching north of the city, both saw and heard today.

A French plane flew over the German side of the frontier near by apparently to see how far it could go.

The French plane winged its way about a quarter of a mile over Nazi territory, then circled back, then turned over the border again.

Its second sortie across the border brought such a concerted burst of German anti-aircraft fire that thousands of Basle citizens scrambled to rooftops in anticipation of witnessing their first air battle.

A French squadron, however, came into sight, crossed the Rhine and escorted the plane safely back to the French side. Apparently none was hit by the German guns and the Nazis failed to send challenging planes into the air.

positions taken on the northern flank between the Rhine and Moselle rivers.

A General Staff communique issued this morning reported several combats between French and German fighting planes were noted, but no details were given.

[A dispatch from Basle, Switzerland, says that the French were reported there to have repulsed with heavy losses a counter-attack launched by the Germans during the night in an effort to relieve pressure on key forts near Zweibruecken. The German drive, the reports declared, was caught in a heavy cross-fire from the French advance posts and was met by a wave of French forces on both flanks. The Nazis were said to have withdrawn into the fortifications near Mittelbach, leaving hundreds of dead and many wounded on the battlefield.

[The French themselves, the Basle dispatches added, sustained heavy losses during the night in the sector between the Saar River and Bliss Creek, where they were reported attempting to hold newly won positions under machine-gunfire and a bombardment from the Siegfried Line fortifications.

[In full view from Basle today a French observation plane flew over the Rhine and drew such heavy fire from the German anti-aircraft batteries that a squadron of French planes took to the air to rescue it. The French planes wheeled back to French territory before any German planes had risen to meet them.]

Main Nazi Defenses Assaulted at Hornbach Under Heavy Artillery Support—Aerial Combats Continue.

PARIS, Sept. 26 (A. P.).—The French General Staff's communique tonight merely reported the repulse of a German raid on the Lauter River sector and activity of German artillery in the sectors south of Zweibruecken (Deux Ponts) and south of Pirmasens.

However, French military dispatches said that French infantry had hit Germany's main Siegfried Line at Hornbach, while French artillery continued to hurl shells across the Rhine River in an attempt to break up new German troop concentrations reported north of the Swiss border.

Hornbach is about a mile inside German territory in the valley of the Horn River. The advance there, the dispatches said, was made under the protection of a heavy artillery barrage, which drew German bombardment in return.

Aerial Combat Reported.

The salient at Hornbach was described as one of the most strategic Expect Huge Nazi Force.

Advices from the front said that the combined French and British air forces had played a major role in detecting new disposition of the German troops.

French experts hazarded the opinion that the reported German concentrations near the Swiss border might presage an attempt on the part of the Nazis to cross the Rhine below the Black Forest, at the extreme end of the Maginot line. These persons said, however, that such an attempt would be hazardous from the German viewpoint, because of heavy French forces stationed near Belfort.

French military men estimated that as a sequel to the lightning occupation of Poland, the Germans might soon be able to mass from 100 to 110 full divisions on the western front. This would compare, they said, to Germany's world war strength in the west of about 240 divisions. A German division is composed of roughly 12,000 men.

The French reported last night that their air forces had defeated a German air force in two major air battles which preceded yesterday's bombardment of the heavily fortified Siegfried Line.

The dispatches said that the French had lost two planes in the engagement, but declared that the Germans, though superior in numbers, were believed to have suffered heavier losses. One Nazi plane fell behind the French lines, it was said, and observers reported that they had seen other German ships plunge to earth in flames.

During the heavy artillery action yesterday, the French said, their batteries swept German hill defenses along a 100-mile front between the Moselle and the Rhine.

Dual Objective.

French infantry movements in the Saar River sector, which accompanied the bombardment, were said to have had the dual objective of establishing new artillery positions and seizing prisoners in a quest for information.

An undisclosed number of captured German soldiers were reported taken back to Thionville for questioning.

The French said that the entire area north of the Saar, between Merzig in the west and Saarbruecken on the east, was threatened by their artillery emplacements.

Coincident with the action in the Saar River sector, French forces struck at German positions in the Haardt Mountains, which stretch along a twenty-mile front between the German town of Pirmasens and the French town of Wissembourg. The French attack in this sector, one of the most difficult on the entire northern flank of the front, was described by military men as "an active defense."

In the diplomatic field, meanwhile, France and Great Britain pressed efforts to learn the full significance of Soviet Russia's intervention in Poland.

The French Vice-minister for Foreign Affairs, Auguste Champetier de Ribes, conferred for some time yesterday with the Russian Ambassador, Jakob Surits. At the same time, it was learned, Lord Halifax, the British Secretary for Foreign Affairs, interviewed Ivan Maisky, the Russian Ambassador to London. The outcome of the talks was not disclosed.

Obituary notices for fallen French soldiers appeared in increasing numbers in the press today. One newspaper carried three of these notices with such accompanying phrases as "died for France" or "fallen gloriously for France." In civilian life the three had been a clerk, a newspaper employee and an official of the Marine Ministry.

French Advance.

BASLE, Switzerland, Sept. 26 (A. P.).—Reports reaching Basle today said that the French advance along the road leading to Zweibruecken had passed beyond the little hamlet of Althernbach.

Further east the French were reported to have almost surrounded German forts at Fischbach and Ludwigswinkel, outposts of the Siegfried Line. This was accomplished, dispatches said, by a single powerful attack through thick woods from the ruins of the famous fourteenth century Palatinate Castles, which the French have turned into bases.

One of the first positions the French captured at the outbreak of the war was a high hill in the southern Palatinate forests, on top of which are ruins of Wegelnbourg Castle, destroyed by French guns.

The ruined border castles of Hohenbourg, Wasigenstein and Flechenstein, all of which were scenes of battles centuries ago, were among other bases from which the French drove northwest through heavily forested country.

A column of troops from Wegelnbourg Castle was reported to have cut a secondary rail line and road between Fischbach and Bundenthal on the west, reaching the Suaer watershed north of Fischbach.

A German force estimated at several thousand was said, however, to have remained in the vicinity of Fischbach, still linked with the rear by a secondary forest highway.

The French advance through forest areas famed for their weird sandstone rock formations was delayed frequently by minefields and barbed wire, but defended only by a few patrols of German troops.

Neither side has given official or semi-official estimates of losses during the past two days, but reports reaching Basle said that the French casualties numbered more than a thousand for the period beginning Sunday and ending at noon yesterday.

Military observers here said that this estimate seemed low for attacking forces on such a wide front, although the French were known to have relied mainly on small patrols for their assaults.

Until today's counter-attack south of Zweibruecken the German losses were reported light.

French artillery was said to have taken a heavy toll during Monday's barrage, which continued today in some sectors.

NAZI DIVISIONS TRY STORMING POLISH CAPITAL

Fallen Fortress One of Four Guarding City From South and West.

BERLIN CLAIMS AIR VICTORY

Says Six More French Planes Were Shot Down Over Western Front.

BERLIN, Sept. 26 (A. P.).—An army communique indicated today that the German forces had started to storm the defenses of Warsaw after all efforts had failed to convince the Polish commander of the "gruesomeness and uselessness of resistance."

The Polish capital has been under siege since September 8. The final drive to crush Warsaw's resistance was launched yesterday.

In a surprise attack, the communique said, the Germans captured Mokotowski fortress and then pushed into the Warsaw suburb of Mokotow. Mokotowski is one of the four forts guarding Warsaw from the south and west. The others are Forts Bema, Wolski and Szczesliwicki.

Today's communique said that the army in Poland was moving toward the Russo-German line of demarcation and that in brief fights with the Poles along the lower course of the San River 2,000 prisoners were taken by an armored division.

Adolf Hitler returned today from the eastern front. No further details were divulged.

Aerial War in West.

Artillery fire and minor scouting activities were reported on the Western front along with the shooting down of six French planes and two captive balloons. This boosted the air toll in the West, according to German figures, to thirty-two planes and six balloons.

Meanwhile, today a new Nazi gesture of friendliness to France was expected in informed quarters. Rumors, completely without official confirmation, were to the effect that Germany might release all French prisoners taken to date on the Western front.

The same rumors had it that Germany believed the soldiers would be good peace propagandists, if they could be convinced that the Reich feels no animosity toward France.

Germany's submarine warfare continued. Military sources said that U-boats were hampering British trade severely, and that British ships, totaling 300,000 tons, had been sunk.

Bombardment of Warsaw.

Mopping up in the east centered around Warsaw, which was holding out despite heavy land and air bombardments of the capital's "military objectives."

[A Budapest dispatch reported last night that a German announcer, using the wave length of the Warsaw station, said that Warsaw was again under heavy artillery fire, and that Modlin, twenty miles northwest, was surrounded. The announcers spoke Polish with a strong German accent.]

The remainder of the German Army in Poland, according to official communications, has withdrawn to the demarcation line, followed by the advancing Russians.

Meanwhile, Germany abolished what frontiers were left between German and Polish Upper Silesia. The rich industrial and mining territory has been incorporated as a part of Germany.

The commentary Dienst aus Deutschland pointed out today that Polish Upper Silesia produced 1,500,000 tons of steel during 1938. With 1,600,000 tons of steel produced in the Protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia (formerly part of Czecho-Slovakia) and Germany's own 1938 production of 23,300,000 tons, Dienst aus Deutschland said that Nazi production would surpass the total of all the rest of Europe.

Official persons contended that Germany has no war aims regarding France and that her chief concern is that her opponents may violate the neutrality of Belgium and the Netherlands to attack Germany at a spot unprotected by the Siegfried Line. Concerning the expressed fear of the Allies that the German troops massed near the Dutch and Belgian borders might strike out toward France through neutral territory, DNB, the official German news agency said: "It may be true that the neutrality of Belgium and the Netherlands is endangered, but not from the German side."

DNB added that Germany "would least want the battlefront along the Dutch and Belgian frontiers because that is uncomfortably close to the Ruhr coal fields and to the highly developed lower Rhine industrial region."

A person close to the Government said in summing up German policy: "We are ready for peace, and we are ready for war, but the initiative for warlike actions must be taken by Germany's opponents."

Mussolini's Speech.

The German afternoon press gave prominence today to Premier Mussolini's "strong exhortation" for peace and "Mussolini's battle for reason and peace."

Basing its comment on Il Duce's Saturday speech and on the reaction to it throughout the world, the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung observed that "especially neutrals well understand that Il Duce, in an effort to direct the war thirsty democracies' attention to the immeasurable consequences of an expanded war, also represented their interests."

The article continued: "Likewise it was understood in Germany that the attitude of Il Duce, behind whom the mobilized power of the Fascist empire stands, had the axis policy as the basis.

"There is still time from diplomatic and military viewpoints to tread the path which Il Duce pointed out."

Dienst aus Deutschland, a commentary reflecting Government views, said that "apparently in agreement with Germany he (Il Duce) once more made poignantly clear to the Western Powers the responsibility they would have to assume before history if irrevocable actions in West Europe should bring real war and catastrophe."

"In West European capitals this step of Mussolini was interpreted as a continuation of German efforts to split England and France," the commentary observed.

But Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter stamped such an attitude as "foolish" because, it said, "with the turning away of France from London the last brake on the Anglo-Saxon-Jewish war machine would be taken away—namely, cool French reason."

NAZI 'PATIENCE' DECLARED TO BE NEARING END

Ultimatum To England Either To Make War Or Peace Indicated

Reich Pictured As Getting Ready To Take Unretraceable Step

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 26—Adolf Hitler returned to Berlin tonight to concentrate his energies on the war on the Western front, while his Foreign Minister prepared to leave for Moscow to discuss "political questions" arising from the German-Soviet Russian occupation of Poland.

Hitler's saw his personal flag hoisted over his official residence and thereupon concluded the war on the Eastern front virtually was finished. Now it was expected he would devote himself energetically to the problems in the West.

The taking of Warsaw appeared to be the most serious business remaining in the East. A communique today said Germ[illegible] forces had started to storm the city after failing to win a negotiated surrender.

Goes To Russia Today

It was announced officially that the Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, would leave for Moscow tomorrow at the invitation of the Soviet Government.

Hints were heard, meanwhile, that "German patience," about which Hitler speaks frequently, was approaching the exhaustion point over the situation along the Western front and at sea and that England soon would be called upon to declare positively whether she wants war or peace.

War News Sketchy

Today's military communiques mentioned only artillery fire and minor scouting operations on the Western front.

In official quarters it was pointed out that Germany thus far has not recognized a state of war between her and England and France, but it was expected in many quarters that the German attitude toward the Western opponents soon would be clarified.

There were informal reports in informed quarters, but without official substantiation, that an ultimatum to England either to make war or peace was among suggestions being weighed by the German Government.

Many of Hitler's advisers, including Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, were in Berlin and conferences tonight and tomorrow were expected to throw light on developments which may be expected in the near future.

Hitler was represented as being particularly exercised over the British sea blockade of Germany—which Germans call a war on women and children.

Air Force Str[illegible]

In this connection, it was recalled, official quarters in Berlin have intimated that in its air force Germany has a weapon as powerful as the British navy and that in the event it came to a "serious war on women and children" Germany was in a position to "retaliate with the weapons at her disposal."

Military quarters observed that the action on the Western front up to now merely was irritating but that it presented a situation which a first-class power could not with dignity tolerate indefinitely.

It was emphasized that in the West Germany had refrained from undertaking a single offensive exploit. There were broad hints, however, that with Hitler back in Berlin more energetic counter-action on sea as well as on land might be contemplated.

The high command communique today which stated that an assault had been resumed on the Polish capital gave no further details, except to say that the Mokotowski Fortress, in a southwestern suburb, had been taken in a surprise storming. Warsaw has been under siege since September [illegible].

Warsaw Radio Station Remains Silent For Day

Budapest, Wednesday, Sept. 27 (AP)—The Warsaw radio station, over which announcements for nearly three weeks flung challenges to the Nazis, was silent today.

There was no direct word how defenders of the isolated city of more than 1,000,000 population—shelled, bombed and stormed by German troops—were faring.

Observers in southeastern Europe, who had been following the Polish capital battle by listening to the dramatic broadcasts, had been unable to get the station since early Monday morning.

Lochner, U. S. Writer, Tells Of Trip Along Siegfried Line

Says He Saw No Signs That Belgium And Luxembourg Are Taking Precautions Against Nazi Attack

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

With the German Army on the Western Front, Sept. 26—German officers told me on a tour of the German border facing Belgium and Luxembourg today that their preparations had left nothing undone to smash any attempt of Britain or France to break through these neutral countries.

But from the German side of the border I saw no signs that these two countries were making preparations which might indicate fear of a German attack.

Together with five other newsmen—two Americans, one Netherlander, one Norwegian and one Finn—I was able today to go where no Americans hitherto have set foot—on the Siegfried Line for 200 miles from Cologne to Trier and more particularly on one hundred miles of German soil directly and immediately along the Belgium-Luxembourg frontier.

More than that, we were taken into the depths of that gigantic fortification and were shown things that, according to conservative estimates, not more than one hundred living persons have seen to such an extent and over such a vast space.

During the visit to the front, we were unable to see that Belgium or Luxembourg had taken precautions to protect themselves against Germany along the very frontier from which the Germans poured into both countries in August, 1914.

We drove along roads skirting the Belgium frontier within ten feet.

Along one hundred miles of the Belgium-Luxembourg border we saw exactly six persons in uniform. They were Belgian customs officials.

We did not encounter a single German tank or any indication of an impending attack.

But we did see plenty of German troops engaged in artillery practice, in infantry maneuvers in sham battles with an imaginary enemy, in anti-aircraft practice, in signal corps drill. German officers explained that these merely were exercises.

Right next to the soldiers so engaged were farmers peacefully harvesting their autumn crops.

None of the cities through which we passed, notably Cologne, Aachen or Trier, had been emptied of their civil inhabitants, nor were any of the numerous villages through which we rode on our 200-mile journey.

Women were doing their shopping, children were playing on the sidewalks, cows grazed in the pastures.

On all buildings and industrial plants of this area, however, anti-aircraft guns were stationed and manned.

Another angle I noticed was the apparent stability and the detailed mechanism of the German fortifications.

It is difficult to imagine how any maneuvering can develop amidst a maze of barbed-wire entanglements, concrete blocks of every conceivable size and shape strewn into the landscape like so many dragon's teeth, pill boxes or bunkers of concrete and steel subterraneously connected with each other and fortress-like, armor-plated dugouts, with all the supplies, gadgets and conveniences of—for example—a super-submarine.

Assuming that the Maginot Line of the French army is similarly fortified, an attack either way would seem coupled with enormous sacrifices of men and materials.

Retiring Nazis Leave Desolate Polish Border

Dazed Peasants Returning to Nowogrod; Reds Not Yet at the New Frontier

NOWOGROD, Poland (German-Russian demarcation line) Sept. 26 (AP).—Soviet Russian Army troops tonight were from one to two days behind schedule in their danvce toward this northernmost end of the several hundred mile boundary that at least temporarily again gives Russia and Germany a common frontier.

The Communist forces were due at the shot-to-pieces town of Nowogrod at noon today, but none showed up. The last German troops, except for an outpost, crossed the improvised plank bridge across the Narew River, where the Pisa River flows into it, at 11:45 a. m.—a company of Germany's modern cavalry on bicycles. With tanks, armored cars, artillery and infantry divisions they were returning from Bialystok. They said they had seen no Russians in Bialystok and the progress of their advance has not been reported.

The battered German tanks and armored cars were decorated with Polish souvenirs, especially Polish red lion shields taken from post-offices or other public buildings. The Nazis left behind a small outpost of men to await the Russians.

The troops went to border railway stations in the east Prussian lake region, where tonight the artillery units entrained for the west.

Pontoon bridges and similar military equipment were removed, but improvised wooden bridges were left behind for the Red army. Heavy fighting took place only two weeks ago all along the northern front, which Poland had fortified with chains of what the German officers said were specially built and strategically arranged bunkers.

The bunkers were designed to prevent the Germans from crossing the 100-foot-wide Narew River between the Fort of Modlin, north of Warsaw, and Bialystok.

The German high command's communique several times mentioned this fighting at Pultusk, Lomza and Nowgorod.

One of the most bitter smaller engagements of the campaign resulted when Germans forded their way between Sept. 7 and Sept. 10 across the Narew below Nowogrod, a town of 4,000 inhabitants, in the face of terrific fire from the bunkers.

Several hundred men fell in the crossing.

The retirement across this same river today was carried out under more agreeable circumstances.

Today German officers were warming over the Polish strongholds with pads and pencils and precision instruments, taking last-minute measurements before the territory east of the river fell into Russian hands. They were carefully noting the sizes of the bunkers' machine-gun turrets and what effect German artillery fire had on the steel and concrete defense structures. The general construction plans were being checked also.

So strong were the bunkers that only one shell had completely pierced one bunker in this region.

All guns and munitions had been removed by the Germans—but some occupants were neither shot nor taken captive. Hordes of mice, hopping around in the straw, were left for the Soviets to claim as booty.

Immediately behind the bunkers lay Nowogrod, now a charred mass of ruins.

By some fluke, one house of the public square stood undamaged above the debris.

Here and there sad-looking Poles were piling up burned timber, working, it seemed, against fate to salvage what they could of their former homes.

Some had made shacks and were living in them.

Many women stood about, just gazing, while their children begged for bread. Their husbands had gone off to war and had not returned.

Whether the men were dead or captives, their wives did not know. The fears of the women increased each time they passed the town's edge on the way to the next village, where they were being sheltered—for there was a large mound of fresh dirt with a cross and a steel helmet on top.

On the cross was written:

"Two officers and twenty-seven men."

In a near-by heap were their helmets, gas masks and other equipment.

These Poles did not know that once again after twenty years of freedom they were under Russian rule.

They watched the German troops retiring along roads back toward home, but they did not know why.

West of the demarcation line, the German Fuehrer, Adolf Hitler, is sending reserve divisions as occupation troops to replace younger soldiers more needed for the Western front.

Complete calm has not been restored because, the Germans reported, of a continuation of sniping activities which bothered the invaders from the start of the war.

Farther west in the former corridor region, battalions of labor service men were rebuilding bridges clearing debris and repairing roads.

Farmers are at work in their fields as if nothing had happened.

In this region, wagon loads of refugees, including many children, could be seen slowly returning to their homes, many bringing cows with them.

Russia Reports Thousands Captured

MOSCOW, Sept. 26 (AP).—The Soviet high command issued the following communique tonight on the day's operations in Poland:

"Red Army troops, continuing their advance toward the demarcation line, occupied the fortress of Ossovets and the towns of Holm (Chelm), Zamostie, Rawairusska and Sambor and reached the line of Raigorodok, Ossovets, Sokoly, thirty-five kilometers (twenty-two miles) southwest of Byelostok (Bialystok), Meleichitsky, twenty-five kilometers (fifteen miles) southwest of Byelostok, Byela, Holm, Zamostie, Yarvorov, Sambor and Turka, forty kilometers (twenty-five miles) southwest of Drogobych.

"In the course of liquidation of resistance from remnants of Polish troops in western Byelo-Russia (White Russia) and the western Ukraine Red Army troops disarmed and [illegible] prisoner [illegible],000 men in the railway trains between Brest-Litovsk and Voldava.

"Besides 1,000 men taken prisoner south of Kobrin, 8,000 men were taken prisoner and 1,000 horses captured in the area of Holm and 2,500 men with arms and various military equipment were taken prisoner in the area of Yanovka, twenty kilometers (twelve and a half miles) southwest of Holm."

Germany meanwhile was making good use of more than 500,000 Polish war prisoners as laborers in industry and on farms. Particularly useful were those put to work in helping harvest the sugar beet crop. The appearance of the prisoners in such great numbers made it unnecessary to call up several more categories of German women for emergency labor.

Text of Communique

The Supreme Army Command communique issued today follows:

"In the east movement toward the demarcation line was continued. Only to the eastward of the lower course of the San River were there short fights with scattered parts of the enemy, in the course whereof 2,000 prisoners were taken by an armored division.

"After all efforts failed at convincing the Polish commander of the gruesomeness and uselessness of resistance in Warsaw, fighting operations against the city were begun yesterday. Mokotowski fortress was taken in a surprise attack and thereafter a part of the suburb of Mokotow was captured.

"In the west there was artillery and barrage fire and minor scouting activities. French planes, which were unmistakably recognized as such, flew over Belgian territory. In air fights five French planes and two captive balloons were shot down. Anti-aircraft guns shot down one French plane.

SIX-POWER BALKAN PACT TO CONFINE WAR FORMING UNDER ITALO-RUSS AEGIS

Small States Seek To Keep Status Quo In Southeastern Europe

Turkey, Deal's Initiator, Discusses Final Terms In Russian Capital

Nowogrod, Poland, Sept. 26 (At the German-Russian Demarcation Line) (AP)—Nine German Labor Service men lost their lives east of here, reports said tonight, because the Soviet Russian troops mistook them for Polish troops and fired.

The Labor Service wears brown, while the German Army is clad in field gray.

By LLOYD LEHRBAS
Associated Press Correspondent

Bucharest, Sept. 26 — Diplomatic circles here disclosed tonight that negotiations are under way for a Soviet-Italian-Balkans pact designed to insure against spreading of war into southeastern Europe.

The negotiations, initiated by Turkey, aim at arranging mutual guarantees of the Balkan status quo.

The Foreign Minister of Turkey, Sukru Saracoglu, who now is in Moscow, was reported by diplomats to be discussing the final terms of the proposed pact with Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff.

Tacit Approval Reported

This stage was reported reached after extensive diplomatic soundings during which a tacit approval of the plan was said to have been received from all the interested nations.

Germany's Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, was reported here to have decided to fly to Moscow as soon as he heard of the subject of the conferences between the Russian and Turkish diplomats.

Negotiations for the pact have been conducted in Italy and the Balkan countries by Turkish envoys, it was said here.

Six To Form Union

Under the plan as disclosed by diplomatic sources, Turkey, Rumania, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Hungary and Greece propose to form a Balkan union under the aegis of Italy and Soviet Russia with the objective of remaining a strong neutral bloc and keeping the war from southeastern Europe.

The five vitally interested Balkan nations and Russia, Italy and Turkey would guarantee the status quo of the eastern Mediterranean and control the Dardanelles Straits, entrance to the Black Sea and the mouth of the Danube.

Land Claim Concessions

Concessions in land claims and boundary disputes which have caused numerous Balkan wars and prevented the nations from completely trusting one another were scheduled to be made, it was reported.

To enable the Bulgarian Government to enter the proposed union, Rumania was reported willing to make a token rectification of the Rumanian-Bulgarian boundary, but would not be required to give up Dobruja, the province Bulgaria has desired.

In exchange for Rumanian and Bulgarian frontier rectification, Rumania was reported to have requested Russia to recognize Rumania's annexation of Bessarabia, which she obtained from Russia after the World War.

Waive Claim To Transylvania

Hungary was understood to be willing to waive her claim to Transylvania, which she ceded to Rumania in the World War, providing she obtains a guarantee of her present territorial integrity and the support of neighboring nations against aggression.

Russia's interest in obtaining such a pact lies in her desire to insure protection against German dominance of the Balkans and the eastern Mediterranean. By annexation of Austria, Germany placed herself astride the Danube and took a long step toward reviving her old "march to the East" policy, which would seriously threaten Russian interests.

The pact would protect Italy against similar threats to Italian interests in the Balkans and southeastern Europe by her Axis partner, Germany.

POLES TO CALL IN PADEREWSKI

Plan to Make Him President of Reconstituted State.

PARIS AS ABSENTEE CAPITAL

Moscicki Resignation Counted On by Leaders.

BUCHAREST, Sept. 26 (AP.)—Authoritative Polish refugee sources said today that Ignace Jan Paderewski, the world-famous pianist and former Polish Premier, was a likely choice for President of Poland to succeed Ignace Moscicki. This was learned as refugee Polish political leaders negotiating to reconstruct the Government—whose leaders are now held in Rumania—were reported near a successful completion of their plans.

Authoritative persons disclosed that the plans call for: 1. The resignation of Moscicki, now living in "restricted residence" at King Carol's hunting lodge at Bucaz; 2. The appointment of a new President by Moscicki, acting under the power granted by the Polish Constitution permitting the President to designate his successor pending a new election, Poland having no Vice-President; and 3. The new President's organization of a completely new Government with an "absentee capital" at Paris, cooperating with the Allied governments.

Two Candidates.

Informed persons said that the election of a new President had narrowed down to a choice between Paderewski and August Zaleski, the former Foreign Minister. Paderewski is believed to be in Switzerland, Zaleski in Paris.

A final decision on Moscicki's resignation and the appointment of a successor was expected tonight or tomorrow.

Paderewski, who headed the State of Poland created after the world war, has taken no part in recent political affairs.

He suffered a heart attack in New York on May 25 last, shortly before a scheduled concert. He sailed for Switzerland May 30. His condition recently was described as much improved.

Trip to Paris.

Zaleski was one of the first Polish political leaders who passed through Bucharest en route to Paris after fleeing Warsaw. It was understood he went to Paris to negotiate for the transfer of the Polish Government there after its exodus from Poland.

On the outbreak of the war Moscicki issued a decree designating Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz as Poland's virtual military dictator and his successor as President should Moscicki's office become vacant before the expiration of his term next year. Officials said that the decree could be canceled, however, and Moscicki could designate another successor since Smigly-Rydz, interned in Rumania, was incapable of assuming office.

With Moscicki's resignation he would revert to the status of a private citizen. Then, it was expected, the Rumanian Government would remove its restrictions on his residence and movements.

It was thought that Smigly-Rydz and Foreign Minister Joseph Beck would remain interned indefinitely.

Declare Italy's Status Allows Economic Gains

Rome, Sept. [illegible]—Italy, Fascist leaders said today, is taking advantage of her non-belligerent status in the European conflict to gain business and build up her industrial and commercial power.

Il Lavoro Fascista, organ of Fascist labor, said that Italy's present position not only gave her political actions greater influence in Europe but also gave her a tremendous economic influence since she was the only big European country not at war. The newspaper evidently considered that Russia's invasion of Poland made her a belligerent.

Warns Of Selfish Gains

"Italian industrial and commercial expansion in this period does not mean merely the prospect of selfish economy in favor of our country, but places many neutral countries, and belligerents also, in a position of assuring their population's food and supplies, the lack of which would mean painful privation," the paper said.

Il Lavoro Fascista warned that trade gains should not merely be for the benefit of private interests, but should be made to benefit the country as a whole, by building up its industry and commerce.

It forecast gains for Italian exports, but added that throughout any period of quickened industrial activity the nation must remain ever ready to march to war and its industries must remain ready to turn out war supplies which Italy would need.

Roosevelt Criticized

At the same time some Fascist newspapers criticized President Roosevelt's neutrality plan on the ground that it favored Britain and France and others on the ground that the United States sought to make money out of the war.

The importance of Italy's using all her ingenuity for achieving economic self-sufficiency was emphasized by Premier Mussolini.

He told the executive committee of the Confederation of Fascist Industrialists that European events had demonstrated a powerful autarchy—self-sufficiency—was essential to guarantee the life and political independence of a nation.

ROME, SEPT 26-(AP)-PREMIER MUSSOLINI TODAY DECLARED IT WAS MORE IMPORTANT THAN EVER FOR ITALY TO USE ALL HER INGENUITY FOR ACHIEVING ECONOMIC SELF-SUFFICIENCY.

PARIS CABINET DISSOLVES ALL RED AGENCIES

Acts in Reprisal for the Soviet's Invasion of Poland.

RIBBENTROP GOING TO RUSSIA

Due There Tomorrow to Discuss Poland—Reported Seeking a Military Pact.

PARIS, Sept. 26 (A. P.).—Premier Daladier's war cabinet today decreed the dissolution of the Communist Party in France. The action was taken as reprisal for Soviet Russia's non-aggression pact with Germany and her invasion of Poland, France's eastern ally.

The decree, submitted by Albert Sarraut, Minister of the Interior, and signed by President Lebrun, dissolved the Communist Party and all affiliated organizations and forbade propaganda of the Communist International in France.

A Cabinet communique said penalties were prescribed for violation of the decree. Severity of the penalties will become known upon publication of the measure in the official journal.

Had 72 Seats in Chamber.

The decree ended the career in France of a party which once counted millions of supporters, held seventy-two of 618 seats in the Chamber of Deputies and formed part of the People's Front which governed the nation from 1936 to 1938.

Such action has been long anticipated since Premier Daladier's Radical Socialist Party broke with the communists last year.

The Cabinet adopted a series of other wartime measures, including the creation of the war cross decoration.

French Communist Party Outlawed By Government

Paris, Sept. 26 (AP)—The French Government today outlawed the Communist party in France in what political circles interpreted as an answer to Soviet Russia's lineup with Germany and invasion of Poland.

The severe decree adopted by Premier Daladier's War Cabinet also meant the end of all the party's affiliates and banned Communist propaganda in France. Penalties not yet revealed were provided for violations.

The action had been foreshadowed by suppression of the newspapers L'Humanite and Le Soir, dismissal of Communists from parliamentary committees and a break between the Communists and the General Confederation of Labor.

Ribbentrop Going to Russia.

MOSCOW, Sept. 26 (A. P.).—Tass, the official Russian news agency, announced today that Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Foreign Minister, would arrive in Moscow tomorrow "to discuss with the Government of the Soviet Union problems connected with developments in Poland."

The agency said Herr von Ribbentrop was coming on the invitation of the Russian Government.

Unconfirmed reports circulated that Herr von Ribbentrop was seeking a military accord with the Soviet Union to follow up the German-Soviet non-aggression treaty which was signed on August 23.

Turkey's Foreign Minister, Sukru Saracoglu, who is in Moscow for important negotiations, attended a conference in the Kremlin which significantly included the Soviet War Commissar, Marshal Klementi Voroshilov. The Turkish military attache, Col. Behcet Turkmen, also was present.

There were reports that Foreign Minister Karl Selter of Estonia, who returned to Tallinn yesterday after only fifteen hours in Moscow, would come back to Moscow tomorrow for more talks.

Diplomatic quarters still were speculating today on the possibility of the creation of a small buffer "Polish State" between Germany and Russia.

The intentions of Russia toward Bessarabia, taken from her by Rumania after the world war, and toward Estonia on the Gulf of Finland aroused intense speculation in foreign quarters today as the Red Army of occupation in Poland reached the demarcation lines arranged with Germany.

Closing of Border Denied.

It was understood a number of Soviet troops were marching toward the recently increased frontier with Rumania which resulted from the German-Russian division of Poland.

The Rumanian Legation denied that this border was closed, as reported in unofficial advices last night. Intourist, the Soviet travel agency, said trains were running from Moscow direct to Bucharest. Intourist also denied reports that the Russian Black Sea port of Odessa had been closed, and offered to sell steamship tickets from Odessa to Istanbul, Turkey.

The best unofficial estimates set the Russian army strength in the Rumanian sector at about forty divisions, either near the frontier or on the way.

[In Bucharest, the Rumanian authorities said that Russian and Rumanian troops along the border were on the best of terms.]

100 Russian Divisions On Front.

It was believed that Russia had slightly more than 100 divisions on her western front from Estonia to Rumania. There was speculation in some quarters whether Russia in her recently suspended negotiations with the Estonian Foreign Minister wanted to blockade the Gulf of Finland on which Estonia is situated.

The Estonian Minister to Moscow, Auguste Rei, flew to Tallinn today, after the hasty return there yesterday of the Estonian Foreign Minister. A legation spokesman said that Mr. Rei, who was accompanied by his wife, expected to return in about a week. The spokesman declined to discuss the purpose of Mr. Rei's journey.

Russia was believed, too, to be seeking an important agreement concerning the Dardanelles in negotiations with the Turkish Foreign Minister, who arrived here last night.

As the program of collectivization was pressed in one-time Polish areas, hundreds of thousands of women took up jobs in factories and farms and other places from which their husbands and brothers were called to the colors.

Russians Get Out of Warsaw.

Reliable reports said sixty-two Russian men, women and children who have been virtual prisoners in the Soviet Embassy at Warsaw since the siege of the city began were handed over to the German high command early today under a truce. The Soviet Government had appealed to the German high command to help in getting the Russians out of Warsaw.

The staff of the Polish Embassy here, as well as the Polish consular staffs from Leningrad, Minsk and Kiev, were still in the embassy building in Moscow.

The Turkish delegation lunched at the Kremlin and paid formal calls on Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov and President Michael Kalinin this afternoon and were scheduled to attend the opera tonight. It was announced that the Turks would remain here only three days. They will give a luncheon tomorrow at the Turkish Embassy honoring the Ministers of Greece, Afghanistan, Bulgaria, Persia and Rumania.

Diplomatic observers have been speculating about the possibility of the creation of a new Balkan-Near East bloc under the leadership of Turkey and possibly also of Russia.

'All Calm in Estonia.'

TALLINN, Estonia, Sept. 26 (By telephone to Copenhagen) (A. P.).—Premier Kaarel Eenpalu declared through his secretary today that he was confident that Russia would respect Estonia's declaration of neutrality.

"Certainly Russia will do that—we are quite sure," the secretary quoted the Premier as saying.

The spokesman declined to discuss reports that conversations with Russia over possible trade and non-aggression pacts were not going well. Nor would he discuss the reasons for the sudden return of the Estonian Foreign Minister, Karl Selter, from Moscow yesterday.

Mr. Eenpalu expressed regret that his day was so taken up with important meetings that he was unable to give the interview personally.

"Everything in Tallinn and Estonia is very calm today," the secretary said, and added that if new Russian troops had arrived at Estonia's frontiers, "we would know it, but in Tallinn we have not heard a word."

Russ-Nazi Military Pact Is Rumored In Moscow

SEP 27 1939

Moscow, Sept. 26 (AP)—Soviet Russia announced tonight the expected arrival of Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Foreign Minister, tomorrow for a second history-making visit which diplomatic quarters predicted might lead to a Russian-German military pact.

At the same time the Moscow Government lifted the veil on mysterious negotiations with neighboring Estonia by charging that country was harboring unknown submarines in her Baltic waters.

Privileges Bid Forecast

An indication that Russia was demanding from Estonia special privileges in the Gulf of Finland and in the Baltic, including the banning of "enemy warships," was given in the midnight broadcast of the Soviet radio.

It disclosed that the "question of guarantees" to the U. S. S. R. in these waters against "diversions of foreign warships" is "assuming much significance."

Tass, Soviet official news agency, announced von Ribbentrop was coming at Moscow's invitation "to discuss with the Government of the Soviet Union [illegible] items connected with developments in Poland."

Some observers expressed the belief that von Ribbentrop was following up his August 23 visit, when he signed the German-Russian non-aggression pact, to negotiate a military pact between the two governments.

Story "Unsatisfactory"

The accusation against Estonia was included in a communique which said negotiations had begun with Estonia when her explanation of the escape of the interned Polish submarine Orzel proved "unsatisfactory."

The submarine made a dash to freedom from Tallinn, Estonia, September 18 after having taken refuge in the harbor there. The Estonian Government said the craft escaped under fire but Russia accused the Tallinn regime of "abetting."

"Security Of Russ Waters"

In view of dissatisfaction at the Estonian explanation, the Soviet communique tonight said the negotiations were opened "regarding measures ensuring the security of Soviet waters against diversionist acts on the part of foreign submarines hiding in Baltic waters."

The communique said that according to the Estonian account, the submarine was damaged when it entered Tallinn harbor, and added that "it is incomprehensible how, under the circumstances" it could have escaped.

"It is believed as most verisimilar—(having the appearance of truth) that in Tallinn the submarine was repaired and probably provided with fuel," the communique said.

30.24-3633

More Subs Sighted

"Bearing in mind that according to a report from Leningrad, periscopes of unknown submarines were sighted today at two spots in the area of Luga Bay, one can arrive at the conclusion that some unknown submarines have a secret base somewhere near the Estonian coast.

"In consequence of these circumstances the question of ensuring the security of Soviet waters against diversionist acts on the part of hiding submarines acquires great importance."

Luga Bay is a branch of the Gulf of Finland. The bay is within Soviet borders but adjacent to Estonia. Estonia has an extensive coastline along the Gulf of Finland, which serves as the water approach to Leningrad.

Seize More Towns

A Soviet high-command communique meanwhile said Soviet troops advancing toward the German-Russian demarcation line in Poland occupied a number of additional towns on a line running southwest from Bailystok.

Thirty trainloads of Polish troops numbering about 25,000, were said to have been seized between Brest Litovsk and Voldava.

The belief was expressed in some Moscow quarters that Germany and Russia may have agreed upon the division of Poland at the time their non-aggression pact was concluded.

Turkish Foreign Chief There

Moscow tonight was a center of European diplomatic activity with von Ribbentrop's arrival awaited and the presence of Turkey's Foreign Minister, Sukru Saracoglu.

The Turkish delegation attended a conference at the Kremlin which significantly included Defense Commissar Marshal Klementi E. Voroshiloff and Col. Behcet Turkmen, Turkish military attache.

The presence of the Turkish Foreign Minister led to some speculation that Russia was seeking an important agreement concerning the Turkish-controlled Dardanelles, the entrance to the Black Sea.

Passage through the Dardanelles is vital to France and Britain should they need to go to the assistance of Rumania.

Rumanians continued to deny foreign reports that the Soviet-Rumanian frontier was closed.

40 Divisions In Sector

Soviet troops were understood to be on the move toward the frontier with Rumania, now extended by Russian occupation in Poland. The Russian army strength in the Rumanian sector was unofficially estimated at about forty divisions, either near the frontier or on the way.

Rumanian circles here said telephone calls were coming through from their homeland and travelers were arriving. Intourist, the Soviet travel agency, said trains were running from Moscow direct to Bucharest. The agency likewise offered to sell steamship tickets to Turkey, denying that the port of Odessa was closed.

It was believed that Russia had slightly more than one hundred divisions of troops on her western front from Estonia in the north down to Rumania.

Women Take Factory Jobs

Hundreds of thousands of women took up jobs in factories and farms and other places from which their men were called to serve in the Red armies.

Reports from occupied sections of Poland said the program of collectivization was being pressed throughout the area, including the dissolution of large estates.

Reports that the Red army was nearing the lines of demarcation in Poland arranged with Germany indicated the Russians were approaching Warsaw which was still holding out against the German siege and bombardment.

Sixty-two Russian men, women and children who have been in the Soviet Embassy at Warsaw since the siege of the city began were turned over to the German high command today under a truce.

The Soviet Government had appealed to the German high command to help get the Russians out.

The staff of the Polish Embassy here, as well as the consular staffs from Leningrad, Minsk and Kiev, were still in the embassy building in Moscow. They were planning to leave here the end of this week, probably through the Baltic countries.

Want 'Submarines' Removed

MOSCOW, Sept. 26 (AP).—The security of Soviet Russian waters against "hiding submarines" has acquired great importance, a Soviet communique said today in explanation of the negotiations that have been going on with Russia's Baltic neighbor, Estonia.

The announcement by Tass, official news agency, said:

"In view of the fact that explanations of the Estonian government regarding the circumstances and disappearance in an unknown direction of a Polish submarine interned in the port of Tallinn proved unsatisfactory, negotiations were begun between Estonia and the U. S. S. R. regarding measures insuring the security of Soviet waters against diversionist acts on the part of foreign submarines hiding in Baltic waters.

"According to explanations of the Estonian government, the Polish submarine entered Estonian waters having 'damaged mechanisms impeding its movements.' It is, however, incomprehensible how, under these conditions, the damaged submarine could escape from the guards and flee from the port of the Estonian capital. It is believed as most verisimilar (having the appearance of truth) that in Tallinn the submarine was repaired and probably provided with fuel and thus enabled to escape.

"Bearing in mind that according to a report from Leningrad, periscopes of unknown submarines were sighted today at two spots in the area of Luga Bay, one can arrive at the conclusion that some unknown submarines have a secret base somewhere near the Estonian coast.

"In consequence of these circumstances, the question of insuring the security of Soviet waters against diversionist acts on the part of hiding submarines acquires great importance."

Submarines Reported

Soviet patrol ships were reported to have sighted the periscopes of two submarines at approximately the same time between 2 p. m. and 3 p. m. yesterday at two different spots near Luga Bay, in the Gulf of Finland. The command of the Baltic Sea Red Fleet sent submarine destroyers to the scene.

There was speculation in some quarters whether Russia, in the suddenly suspended conversations with the Estonian Foreign Minister, sought to effect a blockade on the Gulf of Finland on which Estonia is located.

The intentions of Russia toward Estonia, on the Gulf of Finland, and toward Bessarabia, incorporated into Rumania after the World War, aroused intense speculation in foreign quarters, as the Red Army in Poland neared the lines of demarcation arranged with Germany.

[Premier Kaarel Eenpalu of Estonia declared through his secretary that he was confident Soviet Russia would respect Estonia's neutrality. The spokesman refused to comment on reports that negotiations over possible trade and non-aggression pacts were not going well, and said Estonian officials were not aware of any special Soviet troop movements near Estonia's borders.

[Authoritative Estonians at Riga, Latvia, said the Estonian Foreign Minister had gone into conferences with President Konstantin Paets and Gen. Johan Laidoner, commander in chief of the Estonian Army, immediately upon his return to Tallinn Monday.]

The Estonian Minister at Moscow, Auguste Rei, flew to Tallinn today, following the Foreign Minister. He was expected back in about a week.

Churchill Declares Germany Has Lost Tenth of U-Boats

Admiralty Head Reports England Seized More Goods Than It Lost—Chamberlain Warns Results Will Not Be Quick.

LONDON, Sept. 26 (A. P.).—The British War Cabinet announced to Parliament today the defensive arming of many merchant ships and the seizure of more German goods since the war started than Great Britain has lost in submarine attacks.

Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, made this disclosure in the House of Commons after Prime Minister Chamberlain, in his fourth war report, had announced complete agreement with France on "procedure for co-ordinating and perfecting" munitions and supplies.

Mr. Chamberlain told the House that Germany already possessed stocks of raw materials and foodstuffs she has to import, so that quick results from the economic blockade should not be expected. But he said if Great Britain could stop the flow of raw materials Germany needs for "the functioning of her war industries the result will be to effectively cripple her power to prolong hostilities."

Ships Armed All Over World.

Mr. Churchill, who asserted that a tenth of the German submarine fleet had been destroyed, said that the British convoy system now was in full operation and that merchant ships all over the world were being armed to fight off submarines and airplanes.

"So far as the submarine is concerned," he declared, "the British Empire and all its friends in every quarter of the globe will be able to develop their immeasurable latent forces, and their man-power can be concentrated in ever growing intensity on the task we have in hand, in which task we have only to persevere to conquer."

He was cheered loudly.

Asserting that Great Britain had "seized and converted to our own use 67,000 tons more of German merchandise than have been sunk in our own ships," Mr. Churchill added:

"We have got more supplies in this country this afternoon than we should have had if no war had been declared and if no U-boat had gone into action."

Mr. Churchill gave a detailed statement of what Britain in doing to crush the submarine menace.

"In a short time the immense mercantile marine of the British Empire will be armed," he said. "All guns and equipment are ready at various stations, together with trained gunners to man them and instruct the seamen.

"Our attacks on submarines have been five or six times as numerous as in any equal period in the last war."

Admits Serious Losses.

He admitted serious losses of British shipping in submarine attacks in the first week of the war, but declared that undefended British vessels were attacked at the outbreak of hostilities "by lurking U-boats carefully posted beforehand."

"We replied in two ways—first by a convoy system which could be quickly put into effect for outgoing ships, but was more difficult for homeward bound vessels. This is now in full operation both ways.

"Our second reply to the U-boats attack is to arm all our merchant vessels and fast liners with defensive armaments against both U-boats and airplanes. For a fortnight armed ships have been continually leaving the harbors in large numbers.

"A third reply is of course the British attack on the U-boat. This is being delivered with the utmost vigor and intensity.

"By the end of October we expect to have three times the hunting force which was operating at the outbreak of the war."

He added that the six or seven German submarines which Great Britain contends already have been destroyed constituted "one-tenth of the German submarine fleet or one-quarter or possibly one-third of the U-boats actively employed" by the Reich.

"In the first week we lost 65,000 tons, the second week 46,000 tons, the third week 21,000 tons. In the last six days—just 9,000 tons," he said.

The House cheered uproariously.

Mr. Churchill went on to declare that one submarine commander, who had sent him a personal message by the crew of a sunken ship, "is now in our hands."

He praised the fleet air arm and the Royal Air Force alike for playing important parts "in this stern warfare" against undersea attackers.

Explains Sinking of Courageous.

The members roared and cheered when Mr. Churchill declared that "the U-Boats now seem to prefer neutral shipping to our own." He referred to several sinkings of neutral ships by submarines in the last few days.

Arming of the empire's mercantile marine, Mr. Churchill said, "applies not only to the United Kingdom, but to our ports all over the world."

Explaining for the first time how the aircraft carrier Courageous became vulnerable to an attack which sent her to the bottom of the sea with more than 500 dead nine days ago, he declared:

"The Courageous was attended by four destroyers, but two had to go and hunt a U-boat which was attacking merchant shipping.

"When the Courageous turned into the wind at dusk to enable her own aircraft to land on her deck, by a 100 to 1 chance she was attacked by a U-boat on an unpredictable course.

"But this stroke of war in no way diminishes our confidence in methods which are now at our disposal. Our confidence has grown with every day they have been employed."

Detailing gains from Great Britain's contraband control, he said that as compared with losses from submarine warfare, Mr. Churchill said that "even in oil, where we were unlucky in losing tankers, we have lost 60,000 tons in the first fortnight and have gained 50,000 from the enemy apart from enormous stores we have brought safely into the country in the ordinary way."

Tonnage Being Replaced.

While remarking that many German submarine commanders had tried hard to behave with humanity, Mr. Churchill said that on the other hand there had been "cruel and ruthless acts by U-boats."

Recalling that in the last war one-third of all damage to British and neutral commerce was done by twenty-five experienced submarine commanders, he said:

"It will be much easier for our enemy to build more U-boats than it will be to replace the highly skilled and professional officers and crews which are now being captured or destroyed:

"Therefore, we hope to have a much larger margin in the future to meet new forms of attack or a new scale of attack."

In a bit of reminiscence the First Lord in two wars told how early in 1917 it seemed that submarine attacks on coastal shipping "might encompass our total ruin."

"I watched with a fear I never felt at any other moment in the struggle the deadly upward effect of the curve of sinkings over the arrival of new constructions," he said. "In my opinion it was the gravest peril we faced in the war.

"But we have no reason to believe such a situation will return. We are replacing tonnage. There is an enormous building program of ships of a simple character, rapidly built, already in full career."

In his statement to the House Mr. Chamberlain said that last Friday's Allied war council in England had resulted in agreement on munitions and supplies.

He also launched anew into the effects of the Russian invasion of Poland, but said that Soviet troops apparently had not yet "occupied all the territory allotted to them under the arrangement (with Germany), which amounts to more than half the total area of the Polish republic."

He called particular attention to the fact that the German-Soviet line of demarcation running through the middle of Poland "brings the Soviet forces up to the suburbs of Warsaw and leaves the Polish oil fields in Soviet control."

Dominions Send Supplies.

He then declared that "supplies of finished munitions, raw materials and foodstuffs from the dominions are being made available in ever increasing volume for the common cause."

Mr. Chamberlain added that "our command of the sea meant that from the day war broke out Germany was cut off from many of her sources of supply, and figures for the first three weeks of war show that we have seized about 256,000 tons of goods, as to which there was evidence that they were contraband consigned to Germany."

"These include some 62,000 tons of petroleum products, 65,000 tons of iron ore and 27,000 tons of manganese ore," he added.

He branded as false the German claims that the British contraband control would have no effect on Germany, but would merely strangle neutral trade.

"The facts speak for themselves," he asserted, "and neutral opinion will, I am sure, make its own comparison between our clearly defined policy on the one hand and on the other the thinly veiled menaces of Germany toward neutrals—menaces which in the past few days have been translated into action by the sinking of three neutral ships under circumstances constituting a clear breach of international law."

Chamberlain's Warning

Chamberlain told Commons that last Friday's Allied war council in England resulted in agreement "on the procedure for co-ordinating and perfecting" munitions and supplies plans by Britain and France.

He called attention to the fact that the German-Soviet line of demarcation running through the middle of Poland "brings the Soviet forces up to the suburbs of Warsaw and leaves the Polish oil fields in Soviet control."

The Prime Minister warned against over-optimism as to choking off Germany's supplies.

"Germany already possesses stocks of raw materials which she requires to import and quick results therefore cannot be expected from the (British) Ministry of Economic Warfare," he said.

day over the release of news of the return to London of Queen Elizabeth. It said:

"Nine out of ten men and women in the street are baffled, bored, fed up or furious. . . .

"Against a debit (the sinking of the liner Athenia and the aircraft carrier Courageous and about 200,000 tons of shipping) we set the dashing raid on Kiel, some propaganda flights over Germany and the bare report of half a dozen U-boats sent to the bottom.

"Many ask what else have we done?"

The paper said that "happily there are private citizens, more intelligent than the bureaucrats now gagging the press and radio, who realize that many great tasks must have been greatly accomplished."

Britain Calls Hitler Its Tool

Regards Him as Its Propagandist in U. S.—Ministry of Information Attacked.

LONDON, Sept. 26 (A. P.).—Great Britain's Minister of Information, Lord MacMillan, told the House of Lords today that he considered Adolf Hitler "our propagandist" in the United States.

Discussing the ministry's functions in wartime, Lord MacMillan said:

"We have always regarded the position of the United States as quite different from other countries. The policy is that there shall be no propaganda in the United States of America. We contend that Herr Hitler is our propagandist, and no one could be more efficient. We prefer in the case of the United States that facts should speak for themselves, but that does not absolve the ministry from a very important duty.

"In so far as the American people desire information from us on facts, it is our duty to supply these, and we do our best to put at their disposal the information that they desire, but the request must come from them."

Lifeblood of Freedom.

Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard, in a front page statement and editorial today, vehemently attacked "the still blundering" Ministry of Information.

The statement told of a mixup to-

Cites 'Unprintable Trash.'

Continuing, the paper said:

"This ministry of information has three separate functions: 1. To censor news. This it does stupidly. 2. To prepare propaganda. This is unprintable trash. 3. To transmit news from the Government, especially from the defense ministries. If some 'sealed lips' in a Sam Browne belt holds up that news, the Ministry of Information can do nothing but protest. . . .

"News is the lifeblood of a free people and we are not fighting a big Hitler on the Rhine only to set up little Hitlers here."

The powerful National Council of Labor in a statement said it was "deeply dissatisfied" with the Ministry of Information and the British Broadcasting Company regarding the supply and release of news and information.

Attacks on censorship in the House of Commons during the afternoon brought an admission from a Government spokesman that of 999 employees of the Ministry of Information only forty-three were "professional journalists."

Amid jeers from all sides of the House, Sir. Edward Grigg, parliamentary secretary to the ministry, said that "the Minister of Information realizes that the situation requires investigation."

REPLIES TO LLOYD GEORGE

Polish Ambassador Blames Him for Weak Frontiers

LONDON, Sept. 26 (AP)—Count Edward Raczynski, Polish Ambassador, replying to David Lloyd George's statement that Poland was "entirely unprepared" for the present war, declared today that the British World War Prime Minister was responsible for "some of the strategically indefensible frontiers of Poland."

Count Raczynski, writing in answer to criticisms made by Mr. Lloyd George in a newspaper on Sunday, said the former British Prime Minister had "the least right to criticize the inadequacy of Polish defense."

The Ambassador declared that Mr. Lloyd George failed in 1919 to provide "for the demilitarization of East Prussia" and that he prevented, "against the proper judgment of the unanimous expert commission, the restoration of the historic union of Danzig with Poland."

"Is it your intention to convince the British public that a Soviet Poland established by Stalin with the blessing of Hitler can be one of the legitimate aims of this war?" the Ambassador asked.

"If so, your intention can only be to relieve Great Britain of all responsibility for the guarantee given to Poland."

U-Boat Chief Who Sent SOS for Victims Seized

Churchill Reveals Capture of the Firby's Assailant

LONDON, Sept. 26 (AP)—The commander of a German submarine who sent the British First Lord of the Admiralty, Winston Churchill, an S O S on behalf of a British steamer he sank, has been captured by the British, Churchill told the House of Commons today. The capture, Churchill said, answered the question as to where he might address a reply.

The announcement, which gave no details of the German's seizure, came when Churchill said some submarine commanders had tried hard to behave with humanity.

"One German captain signaled to me personally the position of a British ship which he had just sunk and urged that rescuers should be sent," Churchill said. "I was in some doubt at the time as to which address a reply might be sent. However, he is now in our hands and is treated with all consideration."

The steamer was the Firby, sunk off the Scottish coast on Sept. 11. The chief officer, James Woodruff, told several days later how the submarine commander gave him a "stiff drink" and bread and bandages for four crewmen wounded by shells. The Firby's crew of more than forty passed thirteen hours in lifeboats.

Text of Chamberlain's Report on the War to House of Commons

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 26—Following is the text of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's statement to the House of Commons today:

My first task today is to give a report to the House of the second meeting of the Supreme War Council, which was held Sept. 22, this time in England.

The meeting was attended by Premier Edouard Daladier, Air Chief Raoul Dautry, General Maurice Gamelin and Vice Admiral François Darlan of France and by Lord Halifax, Lord Chatfield and myself for Britain.

It was a great pleasure for us to be able to welcome Daladier and his colleagues to our shores. The council met in the morning and again in the afternoon.

I am glad to be able to inform the House that we found ourselves in complete agreement with the French representatives on the course to be followed to meet the developments which have taken place since our last meeting on Sept. 12 and to give effect to the allied plans.

Agreement was also reached on the procedure for coordinating and perfecting arrangements to be made by the two governments on the question of munitions and supplies.

Nazi-Soviet Moves Reviewed

Since my last statement on Sept. 20 the effects of action by the Soviet Government on Poland have become clearer. The Soviet forces everywhere rapidly advanced and on Sept. 23 a German-Soviet communiqué was published in Moscow according to which the German and Soviet Governments established a demarcation line between the German and Soviet armies running roughly north and south from East Prussia through Warsaw to the junction of the Hungarian and Slovak frontiers.

It will be noticed that this line brings the Soviet forces up to the suburbs of Warsaw and leaves the greater part of the Galicia and Polish oil wells in Soviet control.

Communiqués recently issued by the Red Army do not, however, suggest that the Soviet troops have as yet occupied all the territory allotted to them under this arrangement, which amounts to more than half of the total area of the Polish Republic.

In these circumstances the Polish armies, taken in the rear as well as in front, have naturally been unable to maintain their ground. The Polish people have not given up the struggle, and the whole world is deeply moved by the magnificent heroism of the defenders of Warsaw and the Hela Peninsula, who are still holding out against surrounding German forces despite ruthless and continuous bombardment.

In my statement of Sept. 20 I made brief reference to the problem with which the Rumanian Government was confronted by the passage of Polish troops and civilians into Rumanian territory.

His Majesty's Government are watching with sympathy the efforts of the Rumanian Government to meet these problems. When they learned of the cowardly assassination of Armand Calinescu, President of the Rumanian Council, on Sept. 21, His Majesty's Minister in Bucharest was at once instructed to convey to the Rumanian Government an expression of the horror felt by His Majesty's Government and the British people at this outrage and their sincere and heartfelt condolence in the great loss which Rumania had thereby suffered.

"All Gains Intact" on West

On the Western Front the French have continued to make progress in certain localities and have succeeded, notwithstanding increasingly energetic German reaction, in maintaining all gains intact.

In the air the normal work of reconnoisance, and anti-submarine patrol in cooperation with the Royal Navy, have been continued.

The House will have heard with interest and pride of the rescue of the master and crew of the Kensington Court by two Royal Air Force flying boats and will, I am sure, desire to join with me in congratulating the officers and men concerned upon their enterprise and skill.

Many attacks have again been made on enemy submarines. The great developments in the endurance, speed and reliability of aircraft since the last war have enabled them to play a most important part in the work of defeating submarines.

The value of the employment of aircraft for this purpose is not limited to reconnoisance reports or attacks carried out, but consists also in the fact that the continued air patrols make it far more dangerous for hostile submarines to come to the surface.

The work of the coastal command patrols has thus proved of utmost assistance to the Royal Navy in combating the submarine menace.

I do not propose to say anything today about the war at sea as the First Lord of the Admiralty will make a full statement on this subject after I sit down.

In the dominions, the preparations of His Majesty's Governments continue with gathering momentum. Dominion naval vessels are cooperating with our own. Dominion army units are being trained for services as circumstance may demand. Dominion air strength is being made ready for use overseas.

Supplies From the Dominions

Nor should I forget to mention another most important contribution which is being made. As a result of close cooperation supplies of [illegible] munitions, raw materials and foodstuffs from the dominions are being made available in ever-increasing volume for the common cause.

In previous reports which I have made to the House, I have dealt fully with civil defense services, and there is little which it is necessary for me to say on this subject today.

I would only emphasize again that nothing must be done, either by way of relaxing restrictions or reducing the scale of preparations, which is likely to make us less capable of meeting the air menace by which we are constantly threatened.

I have endeavored in which I have said so far to give the House, as I have done on previous occasions, a brief résumé of events abroad on the various fronts and the activities of our fighting and defense services.

I think it may be of interest to the House and the country if I make my main theme today the development of some vast undertakings vital to winning the war now being entered upon on the home front and the repercussions of these undertakings upon national life.

Rise of Economic Warfare Unit

Let me begin with a short account of the work of the Ministry of Economic Warfare. This department will perform, broadly speaking, the functions carried out in the last war by the Ministry of Blockade, but whereas this last Ministry was not set up until 1916, the Ministry of Economic Warfare has been under organization for the past two years and a complete staff necessary to run it was selected many months ago.

The general object of the Ministry is to disorganize Germany's economic structure to such an extent as to make it impossible for her to carry on the war.

For every man in the front line you must have many behind the lines engaged in production and the servicing of weapons of war, and if Britain can prevent Germany from importing raw materials essential for the functioning of her war industries, the result will effectively cripple her power to prolong hostilities.

A word of warning against over-optimism is necessary. Germany already possesses stocks of varying size of raw materials which she is required to import, and quick results cannot therefore be expected from the Ministry of Economic Warfare, but our command of the sea means that from the day war broke out Germany was cut off from many of her sources of supply, and figures for the first three weeks of war show we have seized about 256,000 tons of goods as to which there is evidence they were contraband consigned to Germany.

These include some 62,000 tons of petroleum products, 65,000 tons of iron ore and 37,000 tons of manganese ore.

German propaganda, meanwhile, has been active in alleging that our contraband control have no effect on Germany, as she is self-sufficient, but that it will, on the other hand, completely strangle neutral trade.

I do not know which of these statements is the further from the truth. The fact is that we made it plain from the beginning of the war that we are anxious to take into account bona fide trading and the needs of neutral countries and that His Majesty's Government would gladly consider any suggestions of neutral governments which might be put forward for this purpose.

The facts speak for themselves and neutral opinion will, I am sure, make its own comparison between our clearly declared policy on the one hand and on the other the thinly veiled menaces of Germany toward neutrals—menaces which in the past few days have been translated into action by the sinking of three neutral ships under circumstances constituting a clear breach of international law.

Much play has been made in German propaganda of the inclusion of foodstuffs in the category of conditional contraband, and it is represented that we thereby are conducting an illegal and inhumane blockade.

But in this respect a naval blockade is in no way different from a land siege, and no one has ever suggested that a besieging commander should allow free rations to a besieged town.

In any case, the German Government should be the last to make such an accusation at a time when their submarines are attacking all shipping coming to these islands with complete and callous disregard for humanity and the rules of submarine warfare to which they had solemnly agreed.

In its effects upon the life of the nation the great change now taking place in the scope and purpose of industry is all important.

All Industries United for War

Practically the whole force of our industry is now to be concentrated directly or indirectly on war needs, and the size and difficulty of the problems involved in the change-over were made apparent in the debate last week on the work of the Ministry of Supply.

If this great task is to be carried through successfully, the cooperating of the working people themselves is the first essential, and I take this opportunity of declaring that the government is ready and anxious to take any steps necessary to secure their good-will.

We shall be very glad to consider any prop sals made to us to secure the cooperation of all parties in industry. In the government's view, the support of employers' and workers' organizations is essential if the country is to put forth the maximum effort.

The trade unions, which agreed under proper safeguards to relax normal conditions, saved us from difficulties which confronted us in the last war and made a contribution for which the whole country is grateful.

Discussions now taking place, which we hope will lead in the next few days to a conference between the Minister of Labor and representatives of the Employers Confederation nd of the Trade Union Congress, will have the most important results.

It will, I hope, begin the construction of a joint machine for the regular discussion of common problems.

Regarding our general attitude toward the war, no one can doubt that in modern warfare it is on the determination, courage and endurance of ordinary men and women that victory ultimately depends.

No one familiar with conditions in this country can have any doubts as to where we are standing in these respects. Never have our people been more united or more determined. They are resolved—and this simple fact cannot too often be stressed—to rid themselves once and for all of the perpetual threat of German aggression, of which Poland is only the latest instance.

We and France entered the war to rid ourselves and the world of that menace, and our peoples are united as they have never been united before in their resolve to achieve that purpose.

Leaflet Planes Rout Nazis; Blitzkrieg Declared Failure

Their Supplies Low, German People Told—18 Million Pamphlets Dropped

LONDON, Sept. 26 (AP).—The Air Ministry announced today that Royal Air Force planes in reconnaissance and leaflet-dropping flights over Germany yesterday fought off German attack planes and returned safely to their bases.

Text of the announcement follows:

Royal Air Force aircraft again carried out successful reconnaissances over the Western Front and northwest Germany during yesterday.

"Attacks by enemy fighters were driven off, and our aircraft returned safely to their bases.

"Last night further reconnaissance flights were carried out over Germany in the course of which leaflets were dropped. All our aircraft have landed safely."

The Leaflet Message

Text of the pamphlets dropped Sunday follows:

"Germans: Note that in spite of the German blood which has been shed in the Polish war;

"(1) Your Government's hope of a successful Blitzkrieg (lightning war) has been destroyed by the British War Cabinet's decision to prepare for a three years' war.

"(2) The French army crossed the frontier into Germany on the Sixth of September or four days before German official sources admitted it. The West British troops are already standing shoulder to shoulder with their French allies.

"(3) The British and French fleets have swept German merchant shipping from the oceans, therefore your supplies of a whole range of essential war materials such as petrol, copper, nickel, rubber, cotton, wool and fats are almost gone and you can no longer rely as you did in the last war upon neutral supplies because your Government cannot pay for them.

"Night after night the British air force has demonstrated its power by flights far into German territory."

18 Million Pamphlets

The Ministry of Information later announced the Royal Air Force had "dropped [illegible] million pamphlets through the bomb hatches of planes."

"Since the war began," the Ministry said, "night flights have covered thousands of miles over enemy territory. Germany has been penetrated to a considerable depth.

"The pamphlets were loaded in bundles the size of a heavy brick. They were released to fall on a particular area and reach inhabitants of selected towns and cities.

"Crews worked at top speed and as the bricks fell the pamphlets spread out in a paper shower.

"That most of them fell in the right places shows the high degree of navigational skill of pilots in choosing during hours of darkness the correct points at which to drop the bundles.

"The value of these paper raids has proved to be considerable. The pamphlets have given millions of people in Germany an opportunity to receive authoritative presentations of the Allied case.

"The flights have also been most useful as reconnaissance."

LONDON--SECOND ADD AIR FORCE XXX AS RECONNAISANCE."

AN R.A.F. STATEMENT SAID THAT "DURING THE RAIDS THE PLANES FLEW AT A GREAT HEIGHT."

"ON THE NIGHT ON WHICH ONE OF GERMANY'S BIG INDUSTRIAL CITIES WAS PAPER-RAIDED--WHICH SET WARNING SIRENS SCREAMING IN BERLIN-- THE 'BRICKS' WERE RELEASED OVER 50 MILES AWAY FROM THE TOWN.

"BY THE TIME WIND AND GRAVITY HAD CARRIED THE PAMPHELTS DOWN TO THE STREETS, OUR AIRCRAFT WERE WELL ON THEIR WAY HOME."

SWEDEN ACTS TO END U-BOAT WAR ON SHIPS

Ore Products Desired by Germany to Form Basis of Argument.

EXPORTS MAY BE HALTED

Sinking of Two Freighters Bound for England Reported to Have Stirred Stockholm.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 26 (A. P.).—Sweden, holding as a basis for argument ore products desired by Germany, was expected by informed Danish circles today to take prompt steps to settle with Berlin the future of her sea trade.

German submarines are reported to have sunk two Swedish and two Finnish ships in less than a week.

The captain of the Silesia, Swedish freighter sunk yesterday, said the submarine which torpedoed his ship apparently was directed by planes. The crew was given twenty minutes to take to lifeboats. The seamen were rescued by another Swedish steamship.

Three of the four sunken boats were loaded with woodpulp bound for England, shippers said. The nature of the Silesia's cargo was not disclosed. Germany has referred to the cargoes as cellulose, which she said was included in the contraband list.

May Halt Exports.

Following the sinking of the Silesia, the Stockholm Foreign Office consulted various trade organizations, and observers said it was possible all exporting would be halted until negotiations with Germany could be completed.

Whether Sweden would make use of her ore argument immediately was not known. Government officials and the press were silent on that question.

German [illegible] supplying some 70 per cent of her ore requirements from Sweden, was said to have received a Swedish promise to maintain ore exportation when war started. Informed sources believed Sweden based this on the maintenance of normal trade connections.

The Nazi Government apparently has listed all forms of wood as contraband.

Seeking Trade Treaties.

LONDON, Sept. 26 (A. P.).—The newly-formed British Ministry of Economic Warfare and the Board of Trade are negotiating wartime trade agreements with neutral nations in an attempt to divert their trade with Germany to Britain and her allies, it was said today.

Attention is being focused on trying to reach an agreement with Sweden, from which Britain obtains about 90 per cent of her wood pulp imports, an informant said.

Britain was said to be urging that such agreement would prevent interference with the foreign trade of neutral countries caused at present by confiscation and searches under British contraband regulations.

Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, told a questioner in the House of Commons today that British trade officials were being continued in foreign posts in the interest of maintaining trade with the Baltic States and Finland.

In authoritative quarters it was said: "There already is evidence that Germany has threatened some neutral countries with reprisals if trade agreements are signed with Britain."

For this reason it was called "more than likely that such agreements would remain secret treaties if they are concluded.

Germany Takes Action.

BERLIN, Sept. 26 (A. P.).—German officials took notice today of the reaction aroused in Finland and Sweden by sinkings of Swedish and Finnish ships by outlining again Germany's prize law contraband list.

They mentioned specifically the sinkings of three ships, which survivors attributed to German submarines. Two were Finnish vessels carrying cellulose and the other was a Swedish ship carrying wood pulp to England.

Authorities asserted that Germany set up an extensive contraband list "only after Great Britain issued one going far beyond the limits of international law."

"Germany was forced, for her own protection, to take countermeasures," one spokesman said.

German submarine commanders are acting in fulfillment of their duty if they hold up and sink ships carrying contraband, he added.

"If the cellulose had reached England it would have come back to Germany as explosives," he declared, adding that cellulose is on the contraband list.

Authorities said that certain types of wood are regarded as used for the manufacture of contraband goods.

Officials declined comment on the Swedish intimation that ore shipments would be withheld from Germany as retaliation for the ship sinkings.

SINKING OF TWO SWEDISH SHIPS IS PROTESTED

Complaint To Nazis Regarded As Move To Clarify Future Policy

[By the Associated Press]

Copenhagen, Sept. 26—Sweden protested to Germany today against the sinking of two ships in what diplomatic observers here believed to be the forerunner of pressure by neutral northern countries for an early agreement on the future of their maritime commerce.

The Swedish ships and two Finnish ships were sunk within the past week by their crews [illegible] German submarines.

Finland lodged a protest in Berlin Saturday.

Three of the ships were carrying wood pulp to England. Germany referred to the cargoes as cellulose, which she said was included in her contraband list. The nature of the cargo of the fourth ship has not been disclosed.

Expected To Take Lead

Sweden was expected by informed Danish sources to take the lead in seeking a settlement with Germany regarding sea trade, since Germany gets more than seventy per cent. of her ore requirements from Sweden.

Some observers said Sweden could halt all exports until negotiations with Germany were completed. Whether she would use the ore as an argument was not disclosed.

Germany was said to have received a Swedish promise to maintain ore exportation when the war started, although informed sources believed the Stockholm Government based this on the maintenance of normal trade connections.

To Keep Ships At Home

A hike in war-insurance rates on boats carrying wood pulp from three to five per cent. was announced in Stockholm today, and many owners decided to keep their ships at home.

The question of assigning naval convoys to such vessels was raised in Stockholm, but the Defense Ministry said such action was not considered because it might be interpreted as meaning Sweden was entering the war.

Negotiations with the governments concerned, it was said in the Swedish capital, was considered the only method at present feasible for safeguarding shipping.

Food Being Exported

Denmark still was managing to export large quantities of food to England. According to official statistics more than 5,792,410 pounds of butter was shipped to England during the week ended September 24 out of a total of more than 7,633,010 pounds. Only 1,840,709 pounds went to Germany.

The entire egg export for the week, 8,904,000 pounds, went to England. Out of a total export of approximately 37,000,000 eggs, 27,000,000 went to England and 10,000,000 to Germany.

Finland Seeks Safeguard For Shipping Of Neutrals

Helsinki, Finland, Sept. 26 (AP)—The Government appointed a committee today to prepare the formation immediately of a navigation board to safeguard neutral shipping as a result of the sinking of two Finnish ships by submarines in the past week.

The board also will assist foreign trade and promote cooperation of other northern European countries.

Swedish Envoy Gives Berlin U-Boat Protest

Stockholm Bans Shipments of Wood Pulp and Orders Ships to Neutral Waters

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 26 (AP).—The Swedish minister to Berlin today delivered his government's protest against submarine sinkings of two Swedish steamers, the Gertrud Bratt on Sunday and the Silesia yesterday. Both were England-bound.

War insurance rates on boats carrying wood pulp to England were raised from 3 to 5 per cent

The question of assigning warships to convoy such vessels had been raised, but the Defense Ministry said the government was not considering such action, because it might be interpreted under international law as meaning Sweden was entering the war.

MORE NAVAL FIRING HEARD OFF NORWAY

Mysterious Skirmish Reported Involving 3 Major Craft and Two Submarines

SECOND ACTION IN 2 DAYS

Attack on Merchant Convoy or Brush With Reich Fleet a Possible Explanation

SEP 27 1939

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 26 (AP).—The situation off the Norwegian coast for the last twenty-four hours or more remained a mystery tonight in the absence of British, French or German confirmation of reports telling of a "naval battle."

The latest reported action was between noon and 1:40 P. M. [6 and 7:40 A. M., New York time] today off Lister Fjord in Southern Norway. Inhabitants of that region said they clearly saw three warships, two submarines and smaller war craft, and heard between thirty and forty shots and the drone of airplane motors. They said eight or ten mercant vessels had steamed toward shore during the activity.

The mystery deepened when newspaper men at Farsund, near Lister, questioned by telephone from Copenhagen, said the police had forbidden them to talk to any points outside of Norway.

The Norwegian Admiralty discounted any connection between sounds resembling gunfire heard yesterday off Bergen and ships reported manoeuvring off shore. An official statement said dynamiting in necessary works on near-by islands caused the explosions and concussions heard and felt in the area.

One thing certain was that German submarine activity has been intense off the Norwegian coast, with five ships sunk within four days. It was assumed here that the British were trying to halt such activity.

ANOTHER SEA FIGHT JUST OFF NORWAY

Warships and Planes Seen in Action From Shore.

OSLO, Norway, Sept. 26 (A. P.).—Dispatches from Farsund, in southwestern Norway, reported that a naval skirmish occurred today just west of Norway's southern extremity, beginning about noon and ending at 1:40 P. M.

Watchers from the shore said they saw three large warships, two submarines and many small craft taking part in the action and airplanes maneuvering overhead. They estimated that between thirty and forty shots were fired.

First reports did not identify the ships or estimate the damage.

Three Norwegian airplanes watched the encounter to see that Norwegian territorial waters were not violated.

Eight or ten merchant vessels hastened toward shore during the engagement, which started just twenty-four hours after another naval action was believed to have begun off the Norwegian coast a little further north. The gunfire today could be heard plainly at Lister Fjord.

The newspaper Gula Tidend of Bergen said that British and German warships took part in yesterday's reported encounter and that the gunfire was heard for twelve or thirteen hours. Residents of that area said that all was quiet today and that there was no evidence of any crippled ships.

The Norwegian Admiralty discounted reports that there was any battle yesterday. An official statement said that dynamiting in necessary works on islands caused the sounds and concussions which shook some houses in the vicinity.

The British Admiralty said last night that it had no reports of any naval battle off Norway "as would have been the case had one taken place."

DUTCH CIVIL PLANE ATTACKED IN AIR

SEP 27 1939

Swedish Passenger Killed Near Helgoland.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 26 (A. P.).—One Swedish passenger was killed today as a K. L. M. (Netherlands) passenger plane was fired on by an unidentified seaplane off Helgoland, German naval base in the North Sea.

The plane, en route from Copenhagen, reached Amsterdam safely.

The air liner was about eighteen miles northwest of Helgoland, flying at an altitude of 2,400 feet, when the attack occurred.

After firing, the airplane disappeared in an easterly direction, toward Germany.

The Dutch plane's hostess, though at first unaware of the action, noted something wrong and checked the passengers. She found a Swedish pasenger named Lamne, who had reported hearing a shot, critically wounded. He was dead when the plane reached Amsterdam.

Airport mechanics found several holes, presumably caused by bullets, in the plane's fabric.

AIRLINER PASSENGER IS SLAIN OFF GERMANY

Berlin Regrets Plane Attack on Netherland Craft

AMSTERDAM, the Netherlands, Sept. 26 (AP)--An unidentified seaplane, attacking from the rear, killed a passenger aboard a Netherland K. L. M. airliner off the German fortified island of Helgoland today while eight other passengers sat calmly unaware. Then the seaplane flew off toward Germany.

The assailant's fire continued for five minutes, a member of the transport's crew reported, but most shots struck luggage. The transport was en route from Copenhagen to Amsterdam.

One bullet through the back of his chair killed Gustav Lamm, a Swede. Fifteen bullet holes were found in the plane.

The transport's stewardess, Hanneki Winoldi, saw the other plane approach, and warned her crew of three. The pilot, J. J. Moll, dropped from an altitude of 2,400 feet to about 1,700 during the attack, then reported to Amsterdam by radio.

The neutral plane bore the name "Holland" painted in large letters on both sides. One informant said K. L. M. is the only line in Europe now using the type of transport that was attacked.

The Netherland Government is awaiting further information before any action.

Among the passengers was a courier en route to the Swedish Ambassador at The Hague.

Germans Admit Attack

BERLIN, Sept. 26 (AP).—An official announcement late tonight said a Netherlands commercial airplane flying over the North Sea near Helgoland was shot at by German aviators but managed to continue its flight.

The statement said the "regrettable incident" occurred because the attacked plane resembled a type of enemy aircraft and had no distinguishing marks visible at a long distance. It added that the impression that the plane was hostile was increased when the pilot apparently attempted to escape into the clouds.

BAHIA, Brazil, Sept. 26 (AP)—A nineteen-day mystery surrounding the fate of the sunken British freighter Royal Sceptre's crew was cleared up today when thirty-two survivors reached port aboard the British steamer Browning.

They reported their captain had been killed. Nine of them were seriously wounded.

The crew was picked up near the island of Madeira, 338 miles west of Africa, after the freighter had been sunk by the German submarine U-48 on Sept. 7.

British embassy sources in Rio de Janeiro said the Browning did not report the rescue for fear radio signals would give enemy ships her position.

32 BRITONS RESCUED FROM TORPEDOED SHIP

Royal Sceptre Survivors, Picked Up Near Madeira, Reach Brazil

BAHIA, Brazil, Sept. 26 (AP)—Thirty-two survivors from the British freighter Royal Sceptre, sunk Sept. 7, arrived today aboard the British freighter Browning.

[The British Information Ministry on Sept. 23 said it was feared all aboard the Royal Sceptre were lost after search of Atlantic waters where she sank.]

Passengers [illegible] Royal Sceptre's crew were picked up from lifeboats near the island of Madeira, 338 miles west of the African coast, after the vessel had been torpedoed by the German submarine U-48. Captain Mestre of the Royal Sceptre was said to have been killed and nine members of his crew wounded seriously.

The Browning left Liverpool Aug. 28 for an unrevealed destination. It was suggested in shipping circles that the rescue was not reported because of a general Admiralty order banning radio operations on British freighters, due to the dan-

GEN. VON FRITSCH BURIED IN GERMANY

Eulogized by Staff Chief—Hitler Not Present.

SEP 27 1939

BERLIN, Sept. 26 (A. P.).—The body of Col.-Gen. Baron Werner von Fritsch, one-time commander-in-chief of the German army, was buried today with full military honors. He fell before Warsaw last Friday.

The general's aged mother and Field Marshal Hermann Goering stood in a cold rain for the state funeral ceremony at Berlin's world war memorial.

Thousands of persons waited in the rain along Unter den Linden to see the cortege pass. Soldiers flanking the roadside presented arms as the coffin went by on a gun carriage drawn by a caterpillar truck.

Speaking at the bier, Col.-Gen. Walter von Brauchitsch, Chief of the Staff, eulogized Von Fritsch as an officer of "crystal clear thinkhero's death carrying out a dangerous reconnoitering operation."

"We mourn deeply over the loss of this unique, irreproachable man."

As flags and standards were lowered to the playing of "The Song of the Good Comrade," the coffin was replaced on the gun carriage to the accompaniment of 21 [illegible]-gun salutes.

Grand-Admiral von Raeder, high army officers and other officials walked behind the coffin to the Invaliden Cemetery, followed by several infantry regiments, mounted guards and cavalry and artillery.

"A real League of Nations might have turned the world into a new course in 1918-19; a real federation of mankind might do as much tomorrow.

"These are the main aspects of the task before us, but it is quite a hopeless task unless it is undertaken in a blaze of light."

Mr. Wells added that to "suppress open discussion . . . for some slight or fancied strategic advantage is to sacrifice our end to our means."

The fortifications have been constructed "with utmost secrecy and a steadily accelerating tempo," it was announced.

BUCHAREST, Sept. 26 (AP).—Polish air force losses during the nineteen days of warfare with Germany are estimated in an unofficial survey at between 600 and 700 planes.

It was understood that Washington had asked the Soviet Government assist Mr. Morton to reach Rumania and that Moscow had promised such aid. It was not known why Mr. Morton was taken to Kamieniec-Podolsk. He was cut off when the frontier was closed with the invasion of Poland by the Red Army.

Four Explosions Heard Near Belgian Border

Detonations Occur Mile And Half From German Frontier Near Verviers

Brussels, Sept. 26 (AP)—Four projectiles exploded a mile and a half inside the Belgian border near Verviers today, but their nature was undetermined.

No one was injured, but windows were shattered. It was learned that Belgian soldiers were holding exercises near this frontier, and this was offered as a possible explanation.

Traffic on the main railroad between Belgium, France and Switzerland moved on temporary rails tonight as officials investigated an accident which destroyed a mined bridge at Stockem, an important railroad center, shortly after the Brussels-Luxembourg express crossed. Four of the six mines under the bridge did not explode.

Sir William Henry Peat, financial secretary to the Food Ministry from 1917 to 1920, took his old place, and Sir Quintin Hill, former secretary of the Royal Commission on Food Prices, was named deputy secretary.

Promises Arabs Will Do Nothing To Hurt France

The promise was made to Gabriel Puaux, High Commissioner, as a token of appreciation for the asylum France has provided for the Grand Mufti and thousands of other Palestinian exiles in Lebanon, which Frances rules under a League of Nations mandate.

The Grand Mufti, here for two years, also said Arabs of Palestine who were defending their "rights and liberties" have no relations with any foreign powers.

Four Boat Crews Say They Saw Submarines

Unidentified Craft Reported Sighted Along New Jersey Coast

Atlantic City, Sept. 26 (AP)—Four boat crews reported seeing submarines along the New Jersey coast today, but none were able to determine whether they were foreign craft.

The Radio Marine Corporation's station at Tuckerton picked up a wireless message from the tanker Japan Arrow saying it sighted a submarine this afternoon [illegible] Cape May Point. Capt. Harold Sturm, of the yacht Buccaneer, Atlantic City, reported he saw a submarine twenty-five miles southeast of here while fishing.

AMERICAS PLAN SAFETY ZONES

Cuban Minister Offers Idea to Restrict Sea War.

WOULD LIMIT BELLIGERENTS

Boundary Would Prevent Acts Against Neutral Rights.

PANAMA, Sept. 26 (A. P.).—The creation of a "zone of American safety" in American waters in which any belligerent activities would be considered "acts against the security of the Americas" was proposed today by Miguela Campa, Cuban Foreign Minister.

Campa presented his plan to today's session of the neutrality conference of twenty-one American nations. The exact boundaries of such a zone have not been decided upon.

Campa proposed, however, that the zone be bounded by "an imaginary line established on intermediate points between Europe and Africa on the east and America on the west (the line of the Atlantic) and an imaginary line established on intermediate points between Asia on the west and America on the east (the line of the Pacific)."

"Within this safety zone belligerents will refrain from committing acts of war or exercising any rights as belligerents which present obstacles to commerce or to American relations," Campa's statement said.

Representatives of twenty-one American republics met in a closed session today to determine the limits of neutral zones in American waters from which all belligerent activity would be barred.

Delegates to the neutrality conference indorsed assertions that the Western Hemisphere never could concur in an "oppressive peace" as they turned to practical measures to protect their own neutrality.

Proposals under discussion at today's session included those for prohibition of all belligerent activities in the yet-to-be-defined neutral seas zone, including actual naval combat, submarine torpedoing of war or merchant vessels, search and seizure, enforcement of any blockade and halting of vessels carrying articles on the contraband lists of either Germany or Britain.

At the end of the morning session delegates said that a sub-committee was formed to study proposals submitted by the delegates and that preliminary discussion had been held.

The Bolivian Foreign Minister, Alberto Ostria Gutierrez, submitted a resolution calling for a declaration of "general neutrality of the American nations." The resolution also called for means of maintaining contact between the nations to assure uniform action in the application of neutrality and the defense of each nation's fundamental rights.

Plans Protest on Contraband.

The Uruguayan delegation was understood to be planning to submit a resolution protesting the contraband lists announced by Germany and Britain.

Sumner Welles, United States Under-Secretary of State, announced he favored a concerted action to maintain, at least, in part, "our usual trade in staple, peace-time commodities with other neutral countries."

The public and even Panama Government officials were barred from today's conference.

There was understood to be some difference of opinion on the extent of the neutral zone to be established. It was reported that the United States and Cuba favored an extension of the zone as far eastward as boats travel in a direct course between North and South America. Peru was said to favor an even wider band.

Favor Nearer Patrol Line.

The Argentine, Brazilian and Uruguayan delegations were understood to feel their navies were inadquate to undertake policing such an area and to favor drawing the patrol line nearer the coast.

AMERICAS DRAFT NEUTRALITY PLAN

Consider Co-operative Patrol and a Common Declaration

PANAMA CITY, Sept. 26 (AP).—Representatives of twenty-one American republics, hailing assertions that the Western Hemisphere never can concur in an oppressive peace, turned today to consideration of practical measures to protcet their neutrality in the European war.

Delegates apparently were almost unanimous in approving the keynote speech of Panama's Foreign Minister, Narciso Garay, president of the conference, who said the Western Hemisphere would resist all attempts to establish an "oppressive peace based on the points of bayonets and the mouths of cannon."

Diplomats voiced belief European hostilities had brought the American nations closer together, and European observers indicated they were impressed with the business-like manner in which the conference settled down to discuss concrete means of guarding the neutrality of the two American continents.

Proposals Considered

Among proposals expected to receive consideration were:

(1) Establishment of a co-operative patrol of American waters to protect shipping lanes against belligerent activity threatening normal commerce.

(2) A common neutrality declaration to supplement previous individual proclamations and strengthen continental solidarity.

(3) "Reproval" of all actions by belligerents tending to carry hostilities to American waters.

(4) Mutual commercial aid where required, supported by bilateral arrangements to relieve the problem of surpluses in many countries.

In connection with the last point, the delegates studied with interest the speech of United States Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, who said yesterday his country "wishes to co-operate with all other American republics in the efforts of each to develop its resources along sound economic and non-competitive lines."

Numerous delegates voiced support also of Welles' call for a stand against activities in New World regions by warring European Powers.

NAVY TO DISPATCH A FORCE TO HAWAII

A 'Pretty Fair-Sized' Detachment Will Go for Training and Decentralization

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (AP)—The navy has decided to shift a "pretty fair-sized" force of vessels to Hawaii, in a move which appears to be linked with the European war and international tension in the Far East.

A high official, disclosing the decision today after a conference at the White House, asserted that the purpose was to train and decentralize the fleet and that it involved "no ulterior motive."

The transfer conforms, nevertheless, to a long-considered proposal to station a scouting force at the Pacific outpost.

The main body of the fleet, including battleships, is to remain on the Pacific Coast, where it returned hurriedly in April from an Atlantic cruise that was cut short several weeks by order of President Roosevelt.

An early announcement is expected of just what forces are to be dispatched to Hawaii. They will be based temporarily at Pearl Harbor, the navy's principal Pacific outpost, which would be the fleet's advance base in the event of this country's involvement in the Far East.

Pearl Harbor is headquarters now for eighteen submarines, about seventy-five patrol bombers and other aircraft, the fleet's mine force of eight ships, and miscellaneous auxiliary vessels. It is safeguarded by the army's largest single garrison, a force of about 23,000 troops, and fortifications rivaled only by those at the Panama Canal.

In a shift last week of naval forces westward in the Pacific, fifteen long-range patrol planes and the tender Langley were moved from Honolulu to Manila with the announced aim of enforcing American neutrality in the Philippines. The planes already have been replaced at Hawaii by a squadron which flew non-stop to Honolulu from San Diego.

The announced purpose of decentralizing the fleet directed attention to recommendations of Rear Admiral J. K. Taussig. He urged last Spring that the fleet's scouting force be divided between Hawaii and the Atlantic, while the battle force of twelve battleships, numerous light cruisers and other craft remain close to Southern California bases.

Admiral Taussig, former assistant chief of operations, proposed that a force of nine heavy cruisers, half the fleet's submarines, a squadron of destroyers and one aircraft carrier take position at Hawaii, and that a like force be based in the Atlantic.

Each would afford "at least temporary security" and be in a position to obtain essential information in the event of war, he said.

NAVY-GUARDED ZONE OF PEACE MAJOR ITEM

Closure Of All Ports To Submarines Also Proposed At Conference

Suppression Of Subversion And Economic Precautions Included

[By the Associated Press]

Panama, Panama, Sept. 26—The United States today proposed to the Inter-American Neutrality Conference a sweeping program designed to keep the European war at a distance from the western hemisphere.

The program, which would be undertaken in cooperation with the other American republics, was presented by the chief United States delegate, Sumner Welles, Under Secretary of State.

Six Main Proposals

Six main points provided for:

A safety zone for merchant shipping, in the patrolling of which the United States navy would cooperate and, in effect, bear the chief burden. An attempt to prevent searches, seizures, commerce raiding and other belligerent activities in this zone would be made.

A ban on belligerent submarines in the ports of American republics.

A joint representation to the belligerents setting forth the neutrality declarations of the Americas.

An inter-American advisory committee to study stabilization of monetary and commercial relationships among the American republics.

Preservation of liberal trade policies in the western hemisphere.

Suppression of subversive activities and activities violating neutrality.

U. S. Navy Aid Offered

Welles stated plainly that the United States Navy would cooperate in patrolling waters adjacent to the coasts of the Western Hemisphere.

This cooperation would be forthcoming, Welles said, when the American republics, after consultation, "determine what the need exists."

The patrol would be undertaken "either individually or collectively, as may be agreed upon by common consent," Welles declared.

Welles set forth this stand at a meeting of the foreign ministers of American states. The partol proposal had been advanced by several delegations, the only major disagreement apparently being on the extent of the "safety zone" in which it would operate.

Reason For U-Boat Ban

Prohibition of entry of submarines into American ports, Welles said, would prevent submarines from using neutral ports as a base of operations and do much to prevent incidents which might affect American neutrality.

Declaring that warships of belligerent nations have been sighted in waters adjacent o the American continent and recalling the attacks on merchant shipping between American republics during the World War, Welles said the United States program aimed at prevention of the commission of any hostile act by belligerents in American waters.

The proposals call on the American republics to declare "as a measure of self-protection that so long as they maintain their neutrality they are entitled to have waters adjacent to the American continent, which are regarded as of primary and direct utility and concern, free from commission of any hostile act by any non-American belligerent nation, whether such an act be undertaken from land, sea or air."

Suppression Of Subversion

Under the suppression of violations of neutrality and subversive activities the American nations would resolve to take action against persons, whether native or alien, committing acts endangering the neutrality of American nations.

The measure also provides for the prevention of enlistment within American territory of persons to serve in belligerent forces and for prevention of the fitting out of expeditions in the interest of any belligerent.

It also would prevent the arming of belligerent vessels by American neutrals and the use of their territories or waters as bases for belligerent activities.

The United States was understood to propose a neutral zone to include normal shipping lanes for sea traffic between North and South America.

Canadian Waters Exempt

The territorial waters of Canada, already at war, and of the colonies and possessions of European countries within the area would be exempted.

As normal shipping lanes run far to sea from the United States to the northern part of South America, an informed person said it would be necessary for the United States Navy to patrol a wide area hundreds of miles at sea.

However, the routes are close to the South American coast, making a patrol easy in the case of Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay, who already have a coastal patrol agreement among themselves.

A large area for patrol also is considered unnecessary by countries on the west coast of the southern part of South America.

Other Zone Plan

The proposal for a safety zone also was advanced by Miguela Campa, Cuban Foreign Minister, who suggested that the line stretch to mid-Pacific and mid-Atlantic areas.

Economic difficulties created by the war were touched upon by Peru's Foreign Minister, Enrique Goytisolo, when he proposed to the conference that the most-industrialized nations of the American continent take measures tending to stabilize prices of manufactured articles destined for exportation to other American nations.

He also recommended that governments "dictate in conformity with their own laws" measures to prevent steamship companies operating between the different countries on the two continents and insurance underwriters in their territory from increasing rates or premiums "in a proportion not justified by special costs and risks arising under the existing conditions."

PANAMA--FIRST ADD SECOND LEAD NEUTRALITY X X X BELLIGERENTS."

WELLES SAID AFTER THE MEETING THAT THE PROPOSAL HAD BEEN SUBMITTED TO THE EXECUTIVE SESSION OF THE NEUTRALITY MEETING AND THAT THEREFORE HE WAS UNABLE TO DISCLOSE THE COMPLETE TEXT, WHICH WILL BE STUDIED BY THE NEUTRALITY COMMITTEE IN CONJUNCTION WITH A CUBAN PROPOSAL MADE TODAY FOR A "SAFEY ZONE" AND WITH SIMILAR PROJECTS FOR COASTAL PATROL.

WELLES ALSO PRESENTED A PROPOSAL FOR CREATION OF AN "INTER-AMERICEN ADVISORY COMMITTEE" TO STUDY "THE MOST PRACTICAL WAYS OF PROVIDING FOR STABILITY OF THE MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL RELATIONSHIPS AMONG THE REPUBLICS."

SEP 27 1939

THIS WAS ONE OF TWO MEASURES FOR THE DEFENSE OF THE AMERICAS' ECONOMIC POSITION AGAINST THE SHOCKS OF THE EUROPEAN WAR. THE OTHER, ALSO SUGGESTED BY THE UNITED STATES, WAS AIMED AT "PRESERVATION OF TRADE AND LIBERAL COMMERCIAL POLICIES BY THE AMERICAN REPUBLICS."

UNDER THIS, WELLES SAID, THE GOVERNMENTS "WOULD RESOLVE TO COOPERATE WITH EACH OTHER TO LESSEN OR OFFSET ANY TRADE DISLOCATIONS WHICH MAY ARISE FROM WAR AND MAKE EVERY EFFORT TO MAINTAIN TRADE AMONG THEMSELVES AND WITH THE REST OF THE WORLD AS FAR AS POSSIBLE ON THE BASIS OF LIBERAL PRINCIPLES OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE AFFIRMED IN THE RECENT INTER-AMERICAN CONFERENCES AT BUENOS AIRES AND LIMA."

THE MEASURE PROPOSED THESE PRINCIPLES AS THE BASIS OF A LONG TERM TRADE POLICY "IN ORDER THAT THE WORLD WILL NOT LACK A BASIS FOR WORLDWIDE INTERNATIONAL TRADE IN WHICH ALL MAY PARTICIPATE AFTER WORLD ORDER AND PEACE MAY BE RESTORED."

AN ADVISORY MONETARY COMMITTEE WOULD STUDY "ANY PROBLEMS OF MONET-ARY RELATIONSHIP, FOREIGN EXCHANGE, AND THE MANAGEMENT OR BALANCE OF PAYMENTS WHICH MAY BE PRESENTED TO IT BY ANY ONE OF THE GOVERNMENTS OF THE REPUBLICS AND OFFER RECOMMENDATIONS TO THAT GOVERNMENT."

INTENDING TO HELP LATIN AMERICAN COUNTRIES TO CLOSE ALL DOORS AGAINST ATTEMPTS BY BELLIGERENTS TO ABUSE THE RIGHTS OF ANY AMERICAN NATION, WELLES FURTHER SUGGESTED "THE SUPPRESSION OF VIOLATIONS OF NEUTRALITY AND SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES."

UNDER THIS THE AMERICAN NATIONS WOULD RESOLVE TO TAKE ACTION AGAINST PERSONS, WHETHER NATIVE OR ALIEN, COMMITTING ACTS ENDANGERING THE NEUTRALITY OF AMERICAN NATIONS. THE MEASURE ALSO PROVIDES FOR THE PREVENTION OF ENLISTMENT WITHIN AMERICAN TERRITORY OF PERSONS TO SERVE IN BELLIGERENT FORCES AND FOR PREVENTION OF THE FITTING OUT OF EXPEDITIONS IN THE INTEREST OF ANY BELLIGERENT.

IT ALSO WOULD PREVENT THE ARMING OF BELLIGERENT VESSELS BY AMERICAN NEUTRALS AND THE USE OF THEIR TERRITORIES OR WATERS AS BASES FOR BELLIGERENT ACTIVITIES.

SEP 27 1939

OTHER UNITED STATES PROJECTS CONCERN "ENFORCEMENT OF THE OBLIGATIONS OF BELLIGERENT PUBLIC AND PRIVATE VESSELS AND AIRCRAFT IN NEUTRAL TERRITORIAL WATERS AND AREAS," THE "FLIGHT OF AIRCRAFT OF BELLIGERENT NATIONS OVER THE TERRITORY OF ANY AMERICAN REPUBLIC," THE "HUMANIZATION OF WAR," THE "DISCHARGE OF NEUTRAL OBLIGATIONS TOWARD BELLIGERENT NATIONS," AND THE WORK OF RED CROSS SOCIETIES FOR THE RELIEF OF WAR SUFFERERS.

THE LAST RESOLUTION EXPRESSED THE HOPE THAT AMERICAN NATIONS CONSIDER BROADENING THE SCOPE OF THE RED CROSS FOR THE RELIEF OF WAR SUFFERERS.

PANAMA, PANAMA, SEPT. 26-(AP)-THE EXTENT OF A PROPOSED "ZONE OF AMERICAN SAFETY" TO PREVENT BELLIGERENT ACTIVITY IN AMERICAN WATERS TONIGHT CREATED DIFFERENCES OF OPINION AMONG DELEGATIONS ATTENDING A NEUTRALITY CONFERENCE OF 21 NEW WORLD REPUBLICS.

A CONCRETE PROPOSAL FOR A SAFETY ZONE AGAINST SEARCHES, SEIZURES AND COMMERCE RAIDING WAS ADVANCED BY MIGUELA CAMPA, CUBAN FOREIGN MINISTER, WHO SUGGESTED THAT THE LINE STRETCH TO MID-PACIFIC AND MID-ATLANTIC AREAS.

SEP 27 1939

IT WAS UNDERSTOOD, HOWEVER, THAT THREE SOUTH ATLANTIC COASTAL NATIONS, ARGENTINA, BRAZIL, AND URUGUAY, FELT THEIR NAVIES WERE NOT SUFFICIENT TO UNDERTAKE THE POLICING OF SUCH AN EXTENSIVE SECTOR IN THE ATLANTIC. THEY WERE SAID TO FAVOR A LINE NEARER THE COAST.

IT WAS REPORTED THE UNITED STATES FAVORED AN EXTENSION AS FAR EASTWARD AS BOATS TRAVEL IN COMMERCE BETWEEN THE AMERICAN CONTINENTS, WHILE PERU WAS SAID TO SUPPORT AN EVEN WIDER SAFETY BAND.

FOREIGN MINISTER CAMPA TOLD THE SECOND DAY'S SESSION OF THE SPECIAL NEUTRALITY CONFERENCE THE ZONE SHOULD BE BOUNDED BY "AN IMAGINARY LINE ESTABLISHED ON INTERMEDIATE POINTS BETWEEN EUROPE AND AFRICA ON THE EAST AND AMERICA ON THE WEST (THE LINE OF THE ATLANTIC) AND AN IMAGINARY LINE ESTABLISHED ON INTERMEDIATE POINTS BETWEEN ASIA AND AMERICA ON THE EAST (THE LINE OF THE PACIFIC)."

NEUTRALITY PROPOSALS SUBMITTED BY CUBA, MEXICO, BOLIVIA, URUGUAY, COLOMBIA AND THE UNITED STATES WERE STUDIED WITH THE IDEA OF MERGING THEM INTO ONE GENERAL PROPOSAL FOR ACTION BY THE ENTIRE CONFERENCE.

SHORTLY BEFORE THE END OF TODAY'S CONFERENCE, WHICH WAS HELD BEHIND CLOSED DOORS, SUMNER WELLES, UNITED STATES UNDERSECRETARY OF STATE AND HEAD OF THE AMERICAN DELEGATION, SUBMITTED FOUR TECHNICAL PROJECTS FOR THE REGULATION OF BELLIGERENT SHIPS, AIR-CRAFT AND SUBMARINES IN NEUTRAL PORTS OR ON NEUTRAL TERRITORY.

WELLES' PROPOSALS ALSO DEALT WITH KEEPING A CHECK ON SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES IN NEUTRAL AMERICAN NATIONS BY CITIZENS OF THE WARRING POWERS.

SEP 27 1939

ECONOMIC DIFFICULTIES CREATED BY THE WAR WERE TOUCHED UPON BY PERU'S FOREIGN MINISTER, ENRIQUE GOYTISOLO, WHEN HE PROPOSED TO THE CONFERENCE THAT THE MOST-INDUSTRIALIZED NATIONS OF THE AMERICAN CONTINENTS TAKE MEASURES TENDING TO STABILIZE PRICES OF MANUFACTURED ARTICLES DESTINED FOR EXPORTATION TO OTHER AMERICAN NATIONS.

HE ALSO RECOMMENDED THAT GOVERNMENTS "DICTATE IN CONFORMITY WITH THEIR OWN LAWS" MEASURES TO PREVENT STEAMSHIP COMPANIES OPERATING BETWEEN THE DIFFERENT COUNTRIES ON THE TWO CONTINENTS AND INSURANCE UNDERWRITERS IN THEIR TERRITORY FROM INCREASING RATES OR PREMIUMS "IN A PROPORTION NOT JUSTIFIED BY SPECIAL COSTS AND RISKS ARISING UNDER THE EXISTING CONDITIONS."

GOYTISOLO SAID AN EXAGGERATED INCREASE OF PRICES OF PRODUCTS WHICH AMERICAN NATIONS NOW MUST BUY FROM EACH OTHER INSTEAD OF IN EUROPE WOULD BLOCK OR RETARD THE ECONOMIC PROGRESS OF THOSE NATIONS WHICH REQUIRE SUCH MATERIALS FOR THEIR NORMAL DEVELOPMENT.

SEP 27 1939

CANTILO ALSO SAID HE WOULD WAIT FOR WORD FROM HIS REPRESENTATIVE BEFORE MAKING A STATEMENT ON THE ADDRESS OF SUMNER WELLES, UNITED STATES UNDERSECRETARY OF STATE, AT THE OPENING SESSION OF THE CONFERENCE.

THE ARGENTINE OFFICIAL SAID HE WAS IN PERMANENT CONTACT WITH THE URUGUAYAN AND BRAZILIAN GOVERNMENTS, WITH WHOM HIS GOVERNMENT IS COOPERATING IN A COASTAL PATROL.

U. S. AND BRITISH TALKS REVEALED

America's Neutral Position Being Discussed.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (A. P.).—Secretary Hull said today that casual and occasional conversations were going on with Great Britain to minimize the difficulties and inconveniences of America's neutral position.

He added immediately that at the same time and all the time this Government meant to reserve all its rights under international law, and called attention to the statement he issued two weeks ago in which he said the United States adhered to the principles of international law relating to the seas and reserved all her rights under them. He said this Government would undertake to apply these principles to specific cases, if and when they arose.

There will naturally be, he said, casual, informal and occasional conversations with belligerents intended to minimize the difficulties and inconveniences presented. Such conversations, he said, have not yet reached a point where they would afford him a tangible basis for comment as to their progress.

Fundamentally the American position is, he said, that the United States reserves all rights under international law, while hoping belligerents will minimize the difficulties and inconveniences, and that this nation will treat each case on its merits.

CANADA SEES GAIN IN CASH-CARRY LAW

Will Get War Supplies Here for Shipment Abroad.

OTTAWA, Sept. 26 (Canadian Press).—The proposed new neutrality law for the United States, authoritative sources here commented today, would give Canada a great advantage over other belligerents in the purchase of war supplies.

Movement of Canadian purchases across the border by motor transport, rail and boats through the Great Lakes would remove the danger of enemy interception, and convoys for shipment of supplies to Great Britain could be organized more easily in Canadian waters than in United States ports.

Official comment concerning the proposed change was unavailable, but private informants believe Canada and Great Britain will purchase extensively in the United States, if the change is adopted.

Britain had a special war supplies mission in Ottawa recently to survey Canadian production potentialities. Last week, Canada set up her own war supplies board under the direction of Wallace R. Campbell, president of the Ford Motor Company of Canada. The board is expected to begin purchasing war supplies soon.

The Government Transportation Department announced yesterday that United States planes flying into Canada must have special permits.

"We must have some check-up on what planes are entering the country," department officials said, "so under the war measures act a permit must be issued by the Minister of Transport."

The National Defense Department said main recruiting centers of the Royal Canadian Air Force have been so swamped with applications that a temporary halt of acceptances has been ordered.

Among the first to join the force were Con Farrell, assistant superintendent of Canadian Airways, and Stan McMillan, chief pilot of Mackenzie A.. Service. Farrell has been named commanding officer of a Calgary squadron, and McMillan is on coastal patrol.

ContrabandList Similar to That Of World War

SEP 27 1939

U. S. Planning No Protest to Rules Governing Shipments of Goods to Europe

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (AP).—After a study of the contraband lists issued by Great Britain and Germany, two conclusions have been reached in official quarters here:

1. The lists look different, but are essentially the same.

2. They correspond very closely to the American contraband list of 1917, and consequently no protest against them will be made by the United States government.

An American ship which carries contraband to a belligerent can be stopped, searched and her cargo seized. There are many precedents under international law which establish that the ship can be seized, too.

Permits Ships To Be Sunk

If the ship carrying contraband to a belligerent is stopped by a submarine which cannot escort her into port or place a prize crew aboard her, she may be sunk after careful provisions are taken for the safety of her crew and passengers. That leaves little leeway for diplomatic action on the part of this government.

The German list has thirteen categories of contraband articles, compared with the British five, but the latter include everything contained in the German divisions.

In general, virtually any article could be included under the various categories. The first embraces arms, the second means of transportation, the third means of communication, the fourth money, and the fifth food and clothing. All ingredients or materials or machinery used in their manufacture are included.

There is one important difference apparent between the British and the German lists of today and those with which the World War ended. Foodstuffs and clothing made conditional contraband, opposed to absolute contraband.

SEP 27 1939

Under international law ships may carry conditional contraband even to belligerents, unless it is proved that the materials are destined for belligerents' armed forces or government agencies.

Wheat Shipments Unsafe

It would seem, therefore, that an American ship could carry a cargo of wheat to Germany if it were not definitely known that the wheat was to be used for the Nazi army, navy or air force. But German imports and exports are controlled by the state. Her opponents, therefore, probably would allege that every shipment of wheat to Germany comes under the control of a Reich government agency. Germany probably would make the same assertion regarding Britain's war-time economy.

When the World War started, food and clothing were conditional contraband. But as the war wore on and the blockade of Germany was more strictly enforced, the difference between conditional and absolute contraband was wiped out.

The State Department has not received a French contraband list, but it is presumed to be identical with the British one.

Old Neutrality Act and New Bill

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Here is a comparison of the present Neutrality Law with the Administration bill now before the Foreign Relations Committee:

PUTTING ACT INTO EFFECT

Present—President alone decides when a foreign war exists. If, as in the Sino-Japanese conflict, he refrains from such a determination, the Neutrality Act is not invoked. If, as in the hostilities in Europe, he issues a proclamation declaring a state of war exists, the statute is brought into operation.

Proposed—Congress as well as the President could decide that a foreign war exists, thus putting the act into effect.

ARMS EXPORTS

Present—Bans shipments of arms, ammunition and implements of war (including airplanes) to belligerent nations.

Proposed — Permits shipments of arms, ammunition and implements of war to belligerents but provides that no American vessel may transport them, or carry any other goods or passengers to the warring nations.

TRANSFER OF TITLE

Present—Contains no provision requiring transfer of title to goods which may be shipped legally to the belligerent countries. Such goods include everything except arms, ammunition and implements of war.

Proposed—Requires that the title to all goods shipped to warring nations must be transferred to the purchaser before shipment is made.

COMBAT AREAS

Present—No provision.

Proposed—President would define combat areas, which American citizens and ships would be forbidden to enter.

TRAVEL ON VESSELS OF WARRING NATIONS

Present—Forbids Americans to travel on ships of belligerent countries, except in accordance with such rules as the President shall prescribe.

Proposed—Substantially the same.

FINANCIAL TRANSACTIONS

Present—Prohibits loans to belligerent governments, excepting ordinary commercial credits and short-term obligations "customarily used in normal peace-time commercial transactions."

Proposed—Prohibits loans to belligerent governments, excepting, for a period of not more than ninety days without renewals, ordinary commercial credits and short-time obligations.

SEP 27 1939

ARMING OF AMERICAN MERCHANT VESSELS

Present—Forbids arming any American vessel engaged in commerce with a warring nation.

Proposed—Forbids arming any American vessel engaged in commerce with any foreign State.

SOLICITATION OF FUNDS

Both present and proposed statutes forbid solicitation of funds for any belligerent government, but permit solicitation of funds for medical aid, food and clothing.

ARMS EXPORT LICENSING

Present—Requires licensing of arms exports by the National Munitions Control Board.

Proposed—Requires Munitions Control Board to make a full report of arms exports to Congress on Jan. 1 and July 1 of each year.

EXCEPTIONS FOR AMERICAN REPUBLICS

Both present and proposed laws exempt any American republic engaged in war against a non-American State or States.

NIGHT LEAD BRITISH (BUDGET)

BY HUGH WAGNON

LONDON, SEPT. 26-(AP)-GREAT BRITAIN'S FIRST LORD OF THE ADMIRALTY, WINSTON CHURCHILL, TODAY TOLD THE NATION THAT ENEMY SUBMARINES WERE BEING CHECKED WITH GREATER SUCCESS THAN IN THE WORLD WAR AND THAT THE EMPIRE'S MERCHANT MARINE WAS BEING ARMED FOR A FIGHT THAT "IS ONLY JUST BEGINNING."

SPEAKING IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS IMMEDIATELY AFTER PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN HAD MADE HIS FOURTH REPORT ON THE WAR'S PROGRESS, CHURCHILL STOLE THE SHOW FROM HIS CHIEF.

HE DECLARED THAT BRITAIN HAD SEIZED MORE GERMAN CARGO THAN SHE HAD LOST TO SUBMARINES. BRITISH LOSSES HAVE BEEN REDUCED FROM 65,000 TONS IN THE FIRST WEEK OF WAR TO 46,000 TONS IN THE SECOND WEEK; 21,000 IN THE THIRD AND ONLY 9,000 IN THE PAST SIX DAYS, HE SAID.

CHURCHILL COUPLED HIS COMPARISON OF BRITISH GAINS AND LOSSES AT SEA WITH A PLEDGE TO FIGHT SEA ATTACKERS WITH GUNS, CONVOYS AND OTHER MEANS.

SEP 27 1939

CHAMBERLAIN ADDED "A WORD OF WARNING AGAINST OVER-OPTIMISM" BUT EXPRESSED BELIEF BRITAIN'S SEA POWER EVENTUALLY WOULD CRIPPLE GERMAN ABILITY TO PROLONG HOSTILITIES. (EDS: PARTIAL CHURCHILL AND CHAMBERLAIN TEXTS WERE CARRIED IN THE DAY REPORT ON SOME WIRES).

THE FIRST LORD OF THE ADMIRALTY, BACK IN HIS WORLD WAR POST, ALSO ADDED THE CAUTION THAT "WE MUST NOT DWELL UPON THESE REASSURING FIGURES TOO MUCH X X X. WE MUST EXPECT FURTHER LOSSES.

"THE WHOLE VAST BUSINESS OF OUR WORLD-WIDE TRADE CONTINUES WITHOUT INTERRUPTION OR APPRECIABLE DIMINUTION. GREAT CONVOYS OF SHIPS ARE ESCORTED TO THEIR DESTINATIONS AND ENEMY SHIPS OF COMMERCE HAVE BEEN SWEPT FROM THE SEAS."

THE ADMIRALTY'S THREE-WAY REPLY TO GERMAN ATTACKS, CHURCHILL SAID, WAS THE CONVOY SYSTEM "NOW IN FULL OPERATION BOTH WAYS," THE ARMING OF MERCHANTMEN AND BRITISH COUNTER-ATTACKS, WHICH HE SAID PROBABLY HAD REMOVED ALREADY "A QUARTER, AND PERHAPS A THIRD, OF THE U-BOATS WHICH HAVE BEEN EMPLOYED ACTIVELY" BY GERMANY.

BY THE END OF OCTOBER, CHURCHILL DISCLOSED, BRITAIN HOPES TO HAVE "THREE TIMES THE HUNTING FORCE THAT WAS OPERATING AT THE OUTBREAK OF THE WAR."

BOTH CHURCHILL AND THE PRIME MINISTER STRESSED THE IMPORTANCE THEY PLACED ON SHUTTING OFF GERMANY'S ESSENTIAL SUPPLIES AS A LONG-RANGE WAR POLICY.

THE ALLIED SUPREME WAR COUNCIL WHICH MET IN ENGLAND SEPT. 22 REACHED "COMPLETE AGREEMENT" ON MUNITIONS AND SUPPLY PROBLEMS, CHAMBERLAIN SAID, AND ALSO ON "THE COURSE TO BE FOLLOWED" TO MEET DEVELOPMENTS SINCE THE FIRST COUNCIL MEETING IN FRANCE SEPT. 12. SINCE THEN RUSSIA'S MARCH INTO POLAND HAS BEEN THE MAJOR DEVELOPMENT.

THE EFFECTS OF THAT SOVIET ACTION "HAVE BECOME CLEARER," SAID THE PRIME MINISTER, NOTING THAT MORE THAN HALF OF POLAND HAD BEEN ALLOTTED RUSSIA IN AGREEMENT WITH GERMANY AND THAT POLISH OIL WELLS WERE IN RUSSIAN HANDS.

SEP 27 1939

LEAVING DETAILS OF THE WAR AT SEA TO CHURCHILL, CHAMBERLAIN REPORTED "CONTINUOUS AIR PATROLS" HAD PROVED OF UTMOST VALUE IN COMBATTING THE SUBMARINE MENACE.

MUNITIONS AND FOOD SUPPLIES ARE BEING PROVIDED BRITAIN BY HER DOMINIONS "IN EVER-INCREASING VOLUME FOR THE COMMON CAUSE," HE SAID.

THE PRIME MINISTER DEFENDED THE BRITISH BLOCKADE AS A LEGITIMATE METHOD OF WARFARE WHEN ENGLAND-BOUND SHIPPING IS BEING ATTACKED WITH "CALLOUS DISREGARD OF HUMANITY."

ON THE HOME FRONT, CHAMBERLAIN SAID "PRACTICALLY THE WHOLE FORCE OF OUR INDUSTRY" HAS TO BE CONCENTRATED ON WAR NEEDS AND PLEADED FOR THE COOPERATION OF "THE WORK PEOPLE."

"NEVER HAVE OUR PEOPLE BEEN MORE UNITED OR MORE DETERMINED X X X TO RID THEMSELVES ONCE AND FOR ALL OF THE PERPETUAL THREAT OF GERMAN AGGRESSION OF WHICH POLAND IS ONLY THE LATEST INSTANCE."

LOSS OF THE AIRCRAFT CARRIER COURAGEOUS, WHICH WAS SENT TO THE BOTTOM WITH MORE THAN 500 MEN NINE DAYS AGO, "IN NO WAY DIMINISHES OUR CONFIDENCE" SAID CHURCHILL, DECLARING IT WAS "A 100 TO ONE CHANCE" THAT ENABLED THE SUBMARINE TO ATTACK HER WHILE TWO OF HER FOUR PROTECTING DESTROYERS WERE AWAY CHASING ANOTHER SUBMARINE.

CHEERS RESOUNDED AS HE DECLARED "WE HAVE ONLY TO PERSEVERE TO CONQUER."

CLEMENT ATTLEE, LEADER OF THE LABOR OPPOSITION, EXPRESSED "COMPLETE FAITH IN OUR VICTORY" BUT CRITICIZED MOBILIZATION OF RESOURCES AND PERSONNEL AS TOO SLOW AND SAID THE INFORMATION MINISTRY WAS TENDING TO BECOME A MINISTRY TO WITHHOLD INFORMATION.

AFTER HIS COMMONS SPEECH, CHAMBERLAIN MADE A PERSONAL REPORT TO KING GEORGE.

OTHER DEVELOPMENTS ON THE HOME FRONT INCLUDED THESE:

THE TRANSPORT AND GENERAL WORKERS' UNION PROTESTED AGAINST RISING PRICES OF FOOD AND COMMODITIES.

THE POSTMASTER-GENERAL ANNOUNCED THAT MAIL SERVICE TO POLAND HAS BEEN "SUSPENDED UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE."

THE WAR OFFICE EXTENDED UNTIL DEC. 31 THE PERIOD IN WHICH VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS MAY BE LOANED TO FARMERS.

THE INFORMATION MINISTRY DISCLOSED SOME REASONS FOR THE SUCCESSFUL PROPAGANDA FLIGHTS OVER GERMANY WERE THAT THE ROYAL AIR FORCE PLANES FLEW AT GREAT HEIGHT, THE RAIDS WERE MADE AT NIGHT, AND FAST FIGHTER CONVOYS SKILLFULLY TURNED BACK ENEMY AIRCRAFT.

GASOLINE RATIONS FOR TAXICABS WERE INCREASED FROM TWO TO THREE GALLONS DAILY AFTER COMPLAINTS FROM CABBIES AND PATRONS.

CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER SIR JOHN SIMON PREPARED TO INTRODUCE A WARTIME BUDGET TOMORROW WHICH WAS EXPECTED TO PROVIDE HIGHER INCOME, SALES AND OTHER TAXES.

AN EXPLANATINN OF THE SINKING OF THE AIRCRAFT CARRIER COURAGEOUS WAS GIVEN FOR THE FIRST TIME BY CHURCHILL.

"WHEN THE COURAGEOUS TURNED INTO THE WIND AT DUSK TO ENABLE HER OWN AIRCRAFT TO LAND ON HER DECK, BY A 100 TO 1 CHANCE SHE WAS ATTACKED BY A U-BOAT ON AN UNPREDICTABLE COURSE."

THE PROGRESS OF BRITAIN'S PROPAGANDA CAMPAIGN IN GERMANY WAS DISCLOSED BY THE MINISTRY OF INFORMATION, WHICH SAID THE ROYAL AIR FORCE HAD DROPPED "18 MILLION PAMPHLETS THROUGH THE BOMB HATCHES OF PLANES."

"SINCE THE WAR BEGAN," THE MINISTRY SAID, "NIGHT FLIGHTS HAVE COVERED THOUSANDS OF MILES OVER ENEMY TERRITORY. GERMANY HAS BEEN PENETRATED TO A CONSIDERABLE DEPTH."

THE MINISTRY ADDED THE "VALUE OF THESE PAPER RAIDS HAS PROVED TO BE CONSIDERABLE.

"THE PAMPHLETS HAVE GIVEN MILLIONS OF PEOPLE IN GERMANY AN OPPORTUNITY TO RECEIVE AUTHORITATIVE PRESENTATIONS OF THE ALLIED CASE.

"THE FLIGHTS HAVE ALSO BEEN MOST USEFUL AS RECONNAISSANCE."

ON THE ECONOMIC FRONT, IT WAS DISCLOSED THE NEWLY-FORMED BRITISH MINISTRY OF ECONOMIC WARFARE AND THE BOARD OF TRADE ARE NEGOTIATING WARTIME TRADE AGREEMENTS WITH NEUTRALS IN AN EFFORT TO DIVERT THEIR TRADE WITH GERMANY TO BRITAIN AND HER ALLIES.

AN ATTEMPT TO REACH AN AGREEMENT WITH SWEDEN, FROM WHOM BRITAIN OBTAINS ABOUT 90 PER CENT OF HER WOOD PULP IMPORTS, WAS RECEIVING THE MAJOR ATTENTION OF THE ECONOMIC CHIEFS, A HIGH SOURCE SAID.

IT WAS SAID IN AUTHORITATIVE QUARTERS THAT THERE IS "EVIDENCE THAT GERMANY HAS THREATENED SOME NEUTRAL COUNTRIES WITH REPRISALS IF TRADE AGREEMENTS ARE SIGNED WITH BRITAIN."

FOR THIS REASON, IT WAS SAID, SUCH AGREEMENTS "MORE THAN LIKELY" WOULD REMAIN SECRET TREATIES IF THEY ARE CONCLUDED.

THE BRITISH MINISTER OF SUPPLY, LESLIE BURGIN, TOLD THE MUNITIONS SUPPLY COUNCIL AT ITS FIRST MEETING TODAY THAT "WE MUST AND WE WILL DELIVER THE GOODS."

HE SAID BRITAIN'S "DEFENSES HAVE BEEN PREPARED, STOCKS HAVE BEEN ACCUMULATED, ARMAMENTS HAVE BEEN MANUFACTURED AND A PROGRAM OF EXPANSION TO MEET THE NEEDS OF THE COUNTRY AT WAR IS BEING RAPIDLY UNDERTAKEN."

THE TEXT OF THE LEAFLETS, MADE PUBLIC LAST NIGHT BY THE MINISTRY OF INFORMATION, EMPHASIZED THAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE ARE COUNTING STRONGLY ON ECONOMIC WARFARE.

CONSIDERED ESPECIALLY SIGNIFICANT IN THE PAMPHLET WAS THIS DECLARATION TO THE GERMAN PEOPLE: "XXX YOU CAN NO LONGER DO AS YOU DID IN THE LAST WAR UPON NEUTRAL SUPPLIES BECAUSE YOUR GOVERNMENT CANNOT PAY FOR THEM."

THE BRITISH PRESS CHARGED THAT THE SINKING OF NEUTRAL SCANDINAVIAN SHIPS BY GERMAN U-BOATS WAS "PIRACY" DESIGNED TO PREVENT THE SMALL NORTHERN STATES FROM TRADING WITH BRITAIN. THE MINISTRY OF ECONOMIC WARFARE WAS UNDERSTOOD TO BE TAKING STEPS TO COUNTERACT THE PRESSURE GERMANY WAS SAID TO BE PUTTING ON SCANDINAVIAN COUNTRIES.

THE FACT--AS THE BRITISH EXPRESS IT--THAT NEUTRAL TRADERS PREFER BRITISH STERLING TO BLOCKED GERMAN MARKS WAS REGARDED HERE AS A POTENTIALLY DECISIVE FACTOR IN THE ECONOMIC WAR WITH GERMANY.

BRITISH NEWSPAPERS CONTENDED THE TORPEDOING OF NEUTRAL VESSELS HAD AROUSED DEEP RESENTMENT IN SCANDINAVIAN COUNTRIES, AND THAT PUBLIC OPINION WOULD NOT TOLERATE LARGE QUANTITIES OF GERMAN EXPORTS TO SCANDINAVIAN MARKETS.

MEANWHILE, BRITAIN COUPLED WITH HER ARMAMENT PROGRAM STEPS TO INCREASE INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION. THE GOVERNMENT REQUESTED COAL OPERATORS TO INCREASE THEIR OUTPUT BY OPENING NEW SEAMS. SURPLUS COAL WAS EXPECTED TO ASSIST BRITAIN IN PAYING FOR RAW MATERIALS TO BE BOUGHT IN NEUTRAL MARKETS.

ALL LINES OF EXPORT INDUSTRY WERE URGED TO INCREASE PRODUCTION.

LORD PERRY, CHAIRMAN OF THE BRITISH BRANCH OF THE FORD MOTOR COMPANY, WAS APPOINTED TO ASSIST THE MINISTRY OF FOOD TO HELP ORGANIZE FOOD DISTRIBUTION.

LONDON--SEP 26--SIR JOHN SIMON, CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER, ASSURED A QUESTIONER IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS TODAY THAT THE TRIPARTITE MONETARY AGREEMENT AMONG THE UNITED XXXE STATES, BRITAIN AND FRANCE IS STILL OPERATING.

ANOTHER QUESTIONER WAS REMINDED BY SIMON THAT THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE POUND-DOLLAR RATE IN NEW YORK AND OFFICIAL

RATE IN LONDON HAD NARROWED TO ONE PERCENT. SIMON FURTHER SUGGESTED THAT ANY ADDITIONAL "DEPRECIATION OF THE POUND STERLING WOULD INEVITABLY TEND TO INVOLVE INCREASES IN THE COST OF IMPORTED MATERIALS FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES AND A CONSEQUENT INCREASE IN THE COST OF LIVING."

STILL ANOTHER POINT STRESSED BY SIMON WAS THAT NO DELAY BE PERMITTED IN REQUIRING SURRENDER OF FOREIGN EXCHANGE BY PRIVATE INDIVIDUALS AS WELL AS FIRMS AND HOLDING COMPANIES FOR STERLING AT THE OFFICIAL RATES. -------

BRITAIN, IT WAS DISCLOSED TODAY, HAS SEIZED [redacted] AS CONTRABAND TEN HOGSHEADS OF SAUSAGE SKINS BOUND FOR GERMANY FROM CHINA.

IT WAS ESTIMATED THAT THE SEIZURE AMOUNTS TO 170 MILES OF SKINS.

LONDON, SEPT.26-(AP)-"EYEWITNESS," THE OFFICIAL CORRESPONDENT WITH THE BRITISH TROOPS, SENT A PEACEFUL ACCOUNT FROM THEIR ANTI-AIRCRAFT HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE LAST NIGHT SAYING, "SO FAR THERE HAS NOT BEEN A SINGLE ALARM."

SEP 27 1939

"THE GUNNERS," HE SAID, "HAVE HAD LITTLE TO DO BUT REMAIN CONSTANTLY ON THE WATCH AND TO ENJOY THE SEPTEMBER SUNSHINE."

THE HEADQUARTERS WERE "IN AN OLD FRENCH CHATEAU" FROM WHICH THE COMMANDING OFFICER COULD "TALK TO THE FRENCH AIR DEFENSE AUTHORITIES AND ALSO COMMUNICATE WITH HIS BATTERIES, CUNNINGLY CONCEALED IN THE SURROUNDING COUNTRYSIDE."

"EYEWITNESS" SAID THE SOLDIERS TOLD OF BEING WELCOMED BY WHOLE TOWNS THAT TURNED OUT "WITH FLOWERS AND KISSES."

"ALONG THE COUNTRY ROADS THE BIG BRITISH LORRIES HUM PAST WITH A BUNCH OF DAHLIAS TIED TO THE RADIATOR CAP, AND ANOTHER BEHIND THE DRIVER'S EAR," HE WROTE.

THE CORRESPONDENT SAID OFFICERS REPORTED THE BRITISH AND FRENCH TROOPS WERE FRATERNIZING MORE THAN IN 1914, DRINKING TOGETHER IN CAFES, SHARING CIGARETTES AND GENERALLY TRYING TO GET ACQUAINTED.

HE FOUND THE SOLDIERS BILLETED IN LITTLE VILLAGES, CASTLES AND ON FARMS, DISTRIBUTED SO EVENLY THAT HARDLY ANY CONCENTRATION OF MEN WAS APPARENT.

VATICAN CITY, SEPT 26-(AP)-L.OSSERVATORE ROMANO, VATICAN CITY NEWSPAPER, TODAY PRAISED PAN-AMERICAN IDEALS AS OUTLINED BY UNITED STATES SECRETARY OF STATE CORDELL HULL LAST FRIDAY, SAYING THEY WERE IN LINE WITH PRECEPTS ENUNCIATED BY POPE PIUS.

L'OSSERVATORE IN THE SAME ISSUE SAID SOVIET RUSSIA WAS "LOSING NO TIME" IN INTRODUCING ITS PROGRAM INTO OCCUPIED SECTIONS OF POLAND, STATING MANY CHURCHES OF THESE REGIONS HAD BEEN CLOSED.

OF HULL'S ADDRESS THE PAPER SAID:

"CORDELL HULL SUMMED UP THE BASIC PREMISES OF 'PAX AMERICANA:' EVERY COUNTRY, BIG OR LITTLE, RICH OR POOR, IS RECOGNIZED IN THE AMERICAN 'FAMILY OF NATIONS' WITH FULL EQUALITY OF RIGHTS, OF CONSIDERATIONS AND OF RELATIONS;

"THIS SHORT CODE OF CIVILIZED USAGE WHICH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT IN HIS MESSAGE TO CONGRESS ENDORSED WITH A NOBLE APPEAL TO RELIGION, THIS 'VADE MECUM' OF PACIFIC CONSORTIUM EXPRESSED IN THE PLAIN AND SIMPLE TERMS OF PRACTICAL MEN--THOSE WHO FEAR TO BE CALLED THEORISTS OR TO GIVE TO ABSTRACTIONS MORE IMPORTANCE THAN FACTS--CANNOT FAIL TO RECALL TO MIND ANOTHER WORD, SOLEMN AS BECOMES THE ETERNAL AUTHORITY WHICH DESCENDS TO REACH AND COUNSEL, THE WORD OF THE POPE."

L'OSSERVATORE THEN DREW A PARALLEL BETWEEN HULL'S REMARKS AND THE DISCOURSE OF THE POPE LAST EASTER AND OTHER PONTIFICAL DISCOURSES.

(HULL IN A PAN-AMERICAN DAY ADDRESS AT THE NEW YORK WORLD'S FAIR SAID THAT IN THE AMERICAN SYSTEM "SMALL COUNTRIES DO NOT FEEL MENACED BY THEIR POWERFUL NEIGHBORS" HE SAID "COOPERATION AND SOLIDARITY" WAS THE KEYNOTE OF PAN-AMERICANISM SYSTEM, WHICH HE CONTRASTED WITH THE SITUATION IN EUROPE.)

OF THE REPORTED CLOSING OF CHURCHES IN POLAND L'OSSERVATORE SAID:

"BEHIND THE SOVIET MILITARY VANGUARD THE BOLSHEVIST REGIME ALREADY MARCHES, INSTALLING ITSELF OVER ABOUT TWO THIRDS OF POLISH TERRITORY, THAT IS TO SAY NOT ONLY OVER THE TERRITORY OF WHITE RUSSIANS AND UKRAINIANS, BUT OVER THE TERRITORY OF POLES AS WELL."

LONDON, SEPT. 26-(AP)-FOLLOWING IS A PARTIAL TEXT OF THE STATEMENT MADE IN PARLIAMENT TODAY BY WINSTON CHURCHILL, FIRST LORD OF THE ADMIRALTY (ABOUT 1,600):

THE WAR AT SEA OPENED WITH SOME INTENSITY.

ALL OUR SHIPS WERE GOING ABOUT THE WORLD IN THE ORDINARY WAY WHEN THEY WERE SET UPON BY LURKING U-BOATS CAREFULLY POSTED BEFOREHAND.

IN THE FIRST WEEK OUR LOSSES IN TONNAGE WERE HALF THE WEEKLY LOSSES OF THE MONTH OF APRIL, 1917, WHICH WAS THE PEAK YEAR OF U-BOAT ATTACK IN THE LATE WAR. THAT WAS A VERY SERIOUS PROPORTION.

WE IMMEDIATELY REPLIED IN THREE WAYS. FIRST, WE SET IN MOTION THE CONVOY SYSTEM. THIS COULD BE VERY QUICKLY DONE FOR ALL THE OUTGOING SHIPS BUT IT TOOK A FORTNIGHT TO ORGANIZE FROM THE OTHER END THE CONVOYS OF HOMEWARD BOUND SHIPS. THIS SYSTEM IS NOW IN FULL

30.24 - 3649

30.24 3649

OPERATION BOTH WAYS X X .

OUR SECOND REPLY TO THE U-BOAT ATTACK IS TO ARM ALL OUR MERCHANT VESSELS AND FAST LINERS WITH DEFENSIVE ARMAMENT BOTH AGAINST THE U-BOAT AND THE AIRPLANE.

FOR A FORTNIGHT PAST ARMED SHIPS HAVE BEEN CONTINUALLY LEAVING THE HARBORS OF THIS ISLAND IN LARGE NUMBERS. SOME GO IN CONVOYS, SOME GO INDEPENDENTLY.

THIS APPLIES NOT ONLY TO THE UNITED KINGDOM BUT TO OUR PORTS ALL OVER THE WORLD. THUS IN A SHORT TIME THE IMMENSE MERCANTILE MARINE OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE WILL BE ARMED.

AS WE USUALLY HAVE 2,000 SHIPS ON SALT WATER EVERY DAY THIS IS A CONSIDERABLE OPERATION. HOWEVER, ALL THE GUNS AND EQUIPMENT ARE READY AT THE VARIOUS ARMING STATIONS TOGETHER WITH THE PROPORTION OF TRAINNED GUNNERS TO MAN THEM AND TO INSTRUCT THE CREW X X X.

OUR THIRD REPLY IS OF COURSE THE BRITISH ATTACK ON THE U-BOAT. THIS IS BEING DELIVERED WITH THE UTMOST VIGOR AND INTENSITY.

A VERY LARGE NUMBER OF ATTACKS HAVE BEEN MADE BY OUR FLOTILLAS AND HUNTING CRAFT X X X

IT IS NO EXAGGERATION TO SAY THAT THE ATTACKS ON THE GERMAN U-BOATS HAVE BEEN FIVE OR SIX TIMES AS NUMEROUS AS IN ANY EQUAL PERIOD IN THE LATE WAR IN WHICH, AFTER ALL, THEY DID NOT BEAT US. THE PRIME MINISTER MENTIONED LAST WEEK THE FIGURE OF SIX OR SEVEN U-BOATS DESTROYED. THAT WAS, AS HE SAID, PROBABLY AN UNDERSTATEMENT AND SINCE THEN WE HAVE HAD SOME FRUITFUL AND HOPEFUL DAYS.

BUT EVEN TAKING SIX OR SEVEN AS A SAFE FIGURE, THAT IS ONE-TENTH OF THE TOTAL ENEMY SUBMARINE FLEET AS IT EXISTED AT THE DECLARATION OF WAR, DESTROYED DURING THE FIRST FORTNIGHT OF THE WAR, AND IT IS PROBABLY A QUARTER OR PERHAPS EVEN A THIRD OF ALL THE U-BOATS WHICH HAVE BEEN EMPLOYED ACTIVELY.

BUT THE BRITISH ATTACK UPON THE U-BOATS IS ONLY JUST BEGINNING. OUR HUNTING FORCES ARE GETTING STRONGER EVERY DAY. BY THE END OF OCTOBER WE EXPECT TO HAVE THREE TIMES THE HUNTING FORCE WHICH WAS OPERATING AT THE OUTBREAK OF THE WAR, WHILE AT THE SAME TIME THE NUMBER OF TARGETS OPEN TO U-BOATS ON THE VAST EXPANSES OF THE SEAS AND OCEANS WILL BE GREATLY REDUCED BY THE USE OF CONVOYS AND AT THE SAME TIME THE U-BOATS' MEANS OF ATTACKING THEM WILL BE HEAVILY CLOGGED AND FETTERED.

UH224PED

SEP 27 1939

LONDON--FIRST ADD CHURCHILL-PARTIAL TEXT XXX CLOGGED AND FETTERED.

IN ALL THIS VERY KEEN AND STERN WARFARE THE R.A.F. AND THE FLEET AIR ARM X X X PLAYED AN IMPORTANT PART BOTH IN DIRECTING THE HUNTING DESTROYERS UPON THEIR QUARRY AND IN ACTUALLY ATTACKING IT THEMSELVES.

IT WAS TO BRIDGE THE GAP BETWEEN WHAT WE HAD READY AT THE BEGINNING AND WHAT WE HAVE READY NOW THAT THE ADMIRALTY DECIDED TO USE THE AIRCRAFT CARRIERS WITH SOME FREEDOM IN ORDER TO BRING IN UNARMED UNORGANIZED UNCONVOYED TRAFFIC THEN APPROACHING OUR SHORES IN LARGE NUMBERS.

I RISKS HAVE TO BE RUN ALL THE TIME IN NAVAL WARFARE AND SOMETIMES GRIEVOUS FORFEIT IS EXACTED. THE COURAGEOUS WAS ATTENDED BY FOUR

DESTROYERS BUT TWO HAD TO GO AND HUNT A U-BOAT ATTACKING A MERCHANT SHIP COMING TOWARDS ENGLAND AND WHEN THE COURAGEOUS TURNED INTO THE WIND AT DUSK IN ORDER TO ENABLE HER OWN AIRCRAFT TO LAND UPON HER LANDING DECK SHE HAPPENED, BY WHAT MAY HAVE BEEN A 100 TO 1 CHANCE OR MORE, TO MEET A U-BOAT IN HER UNPREDICTABLE COURSE X X X

BUT THIS HARD STROKE OF WAR IN NO WAY DIMINISHES OUR CONFIDENCE IN THE METHODS NOW AT OUR DISPOSAL. ON THE CONTRARY OUR CONFIDENCE IN THEM HAS GROWN WITH EVERY DAY THEY HAVE BEEN EMPLOYED AND I BELIEVE THAT THEIR POTENCY WILL BECOME THE MORE APPARENT IN PROPORTION AS THE GREAT NUMBERS OF NEW VESSELS COME INTO ACTION AND IN PROPORTION AS OUR HUNTING OFFICERS GET THE KNACK OF USING DEPTH CHARGES BY FREQUENT PRACTICE X X X

IN THE FIRST WEEK OUR LOSSES BY U-BOAT SINKINGS AMOUNTED TO 65,000 TONS. IN THE SECOND WEEK THEY WERE 46,000 TONS, AND IN THE THIRD WEEK THEY WERE 21,000 TONS. IN THE LAST SIX DAYS WE HAVE LOST ONLY 9,000 TONS X X X

MEANWHILE, THE WHOLE VAST BUSINESS OF OUR WORLD WIDE TRADE CONTINUES WITHOUT INTERRUPTION AND WITHOUT PROSPECT OF DIMINUTION. GREAT CONVOYS OF TROOPS ARE ESCORTED TO THEIR VARIOUS DESTINATIONS. THE ENEMY SHIPS AND COMMERCE HAVE BEEN SWEPT FROM THE SEAS. OVER TWO MILLION TONS OF GERMAN SHIPPING IS SHELTERING IN GERMAN OR INTERNED IN NEUTRAL HARBORS.

OUR SYSTEM OF CONTRABAND CONTROL X X X IS BEING PERFECTED AND SO FAR AS THE FIRST FORTNIGHT OF THE WAR IS CONCERNED X X X WE HAVE ACTUALLY ARRESTED, SEIZED AND CONVERTED TO OUR OWN USE 67,000 TONS MORE GERMAN MERCHANDISE THAN HAS BEEN SUNK IN THE SHIPS OF OUR OWN.

EVEN IN OIL, WHERE WE WERE UNLUCKY IN LOSING SOME TANKERS, WE HAD LOST 60,000 TONS IN THE FIRST FORTNIGHT AND HAVE GAINED 50,000 TONS FROM THE ENEMY, APART FROM THE ENORMOUS ADDITIONAL STORES WE HAVE BROUGHT SAFELY IN THE ORDINARY WAY X X X WE HAVE NOW GOT MORE SUPPLIES IN THIS COUNTRY THIS AFTERNOON THAN WE SHOULD HAVE HAD IF NO WAR HAD BEEN DECLARED AND IF NO U-BOATS HAD COME INTO ACTION.

I WILL NOW SPEAK A LITTLE ABOUT THE CHARACTER OF THIS WAR. FROM TIME TO TIME THE GERMAN U-BOAT COMMANDERS HAVE TRIED THEIR BEST TO BEHAVE WITH HUMANITY X X X

BUT MANY CRUEL AND RUTHLESS ACTS HAVE BEEN DONE. THERE WAS THE ATHENIA. LATER THERE WAS THE ROYAL SCEPTRE WHOSE CREW OF 32 WERE LEFT IN OPEN BOATS HUNDREDS OF MILES FROM LAND AND ARE ASSUMED TO HAVE ALL PERISHED. THERE WAS THE BAZELSIDE, THE DAY BEFORE YESTERDAY, 12 OF WHOSE SAILORS WERE KILLED BY SURPRISE GUNFIRE IN AN ORDINARY MERCHANT SHIP AND WHOSE CAPTAIN DIED IN SO GALLANT A FASHION GOING DOWN WITH HIS VESSEL.

SEP 27 1939

WE CANNOT RECOGNIZE THIS TYPE OF WARFARE X X X AS OTHER THAN ISOLATION OF THE LAWS OF WAR TO WHICH THE GERMANS THEMSELVES HAVE IN RECENT YEARS SO LUSTILY SUBSCRIBED.

BUT IT IS A MEASURE OF THE SUCCESS OF OUR ATTACK ON THE U-BOATS IN THE LAST FEW DAYS THAT THEY SEEM, AS THE PRIME MINISTER HAS TOLD US, TO PREFER NEUTRAL SHIPPING TO OUR REGULAR MERCHANT SHIPS.

FINNISH, DUTCH, SWEDISH, GREEK, NORWEGIAN AND BELGIAN SHIPS HAVE BEEN SUNK ON THE HIGH SEAS IN AN INDISCRIMINATE MANNER AND WITH LOSS OF LIFE. IN ALL THE FAR REACHING CONTROL, BECOMING INCREASINGLY MORE INTIMATE, WHICH WE OURSELVES ARE EXERCISING OVER THE MOVEMENTS OF CONTRABAND, NO NEUTRAL SHIP HAS EVER BEEN PUT IN DANGER AND NO LAW RECOGNIZED AMONG CIVILIZED NATIONS HAS EVER BEEN CONTRAVENED

30.24 -3651

LET IT BE NOTED THAT IN THE LAST WAR ONE THIRD OF THE WHOLE VAST CATALOGUE OF DAMAGE DONE TO BRITISH AND NEUTRAL COMMERCE THROUGH U-BOAT ATTACKS WAS DUE TO 25 EXPERIENCED PROFESSIONAL CAPTAINS OF THE OLD SUBMARINE SERVICE TO GERMANY.

IT WOULD SEEM FROM THIS THAT IT WILL BE MUCH EASIER FOR OUR ENEMIES WHO SEEK OUR DESTRUCTION TO BUILD MORE U-BOATS THAN TO REPLACE A LIMITED CLASS OF HIGHLY SKILLED PROFESSIONAL OFFICERS AND CREWS OF U-BOATS WHO ARE NOW BEING CAPTURED OR DESTROYED.

MOREOVER, IF WE ARE LOSING TONNAGE WE ARE ALSO TAKING STEPS TO REPLACE IT ON A FAR LARGER SCALE. OLD SHIPS WHICH WERE LAID UP ARE BEING REFITTED AND PREPARED FOR SEA.

AN ENORMOUS BUILDING PROGRAM OF NEW SHIPS OF SIMPLE CHARACTER, CAPABLE OF BEING RAPIDLY BUILT, IS ALREADY IN FULL CAREER X X X WE THEREFORE HOPE TO HAVE A MUCH LARGER MARGIN IN THE FUTURE TO MEET NEW FORMS OF ATTACK OR NEW SCALES OF ATTACK.

THE HOUSE WILL OBSERVE THAT I HAVE CONFINED MYSELF ENTIRELY TO U-BOAT WARFARE X X BUT AFTER ALL THE U-BOAT ATTACK ON BRITISH OCEANWIDE COMMERCE WAS ONE OF THE MOST HEARTSHAKING HAZARDS OF THE LAST WAR. IT SEEMED IN THE EARLY MONTHS OF 1916 THAT IT MIGHT COMPASS OUR TOTAL RUIN. ONLY THOSE WHO LIVED THROUGH IT AT THE SUMMIT KNOW WHAT IT WAS LIKE X X X

(MORE) UH249PED

WE HAVE NO REASON ON THE INFORMATION AND THE EXPERIENCE NOW TO SUPPOSE THAT SUCH A SITUATION WILL RECUR. IF THIS SURMISE, AND IT CANNOT BE MORE, SHOULD PROVE CORRECT, WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

IT MEANS THAT ONE PRIMARY DANGER IS FALLING INTO ITS PROPER

30.24 3651

CONFINES AND AMID ALL OUR ANXIETIES WE CAN FEEL A CERTAIN STEADY MEASURE OF ASSURANCE THAT SO FAR AS THE SUBMARINE IS CONCERNED, THE BRITISH EMPIRE AND ALL ITS FRIENDS IN EVERY QUARTER OF THE GLOBE, WILL BE ABLE TO DEVELOP THEIR IMMEASURABLE LATENT FORCES AND THAT THE WHOLE STRENGTH, WEALTH, RESOURCES AND MANPOWER OF THOSE MANY COMMUNITIES, CAN BE CONCENTRATED IN AN EVER GROWING INTENSITY ON THE TASK WHICH WE HAVE IN HAND, IN WHICH TASK WE HAVE ONLY TO PERSEVERE TO CONQUER.

CHICAGO,SEPT.26-(AP)-THE AMERICAN LEGION'S FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE IN A "PRONOUNCEMENT," TONIGHT DEMANDED THAT CONGRESS CONTINUE IN SESSION IN VIEW OF WAR IN EUROPE AND THAT U.S.ARMED FORCES BE "EXPANDED IMMEDIATELY TO MAINTAIN OUR NEUTRALITY."

THE EXPRESSION, ADOPTED UNANIMOUSLY BY 62 MEMBERS OF THE GROUP, DEMANDED ALSO THAT "APPROPRIATE ACTION BE TAKEN TO PRESERVE THE PEACE, SOVEREIGNTY AND DIGNITY OF THIS NATION" DURING "THE PRESENT GRAVE CRISIS."

IN ARRIVING AT ITS PRONOUNCEMENT, THE COMMITTEE AVOIDED RECOMMENDATION OF SPECIFIC LEGISLATION CONCERNING NEUTRALITY, AVOWEDLY BELIEVING THAT ANY SUCH PROPOSALS WOULD BE OF NO LASTING VALUE DUE TO THE SWIFTLY MOVING WORLD EVENTS.

RAY MURPHY OF IOWA, PAST NATIONAL COMMANDER OF THE LEGION AND CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE, SAID THE PRONOUNCEMENT PROBABLY WOULD BE INTRODUCED ON THE CONVENTION FLOOR TOMORROW. HE EMPHASIZED, HOWEVER, THAT IT WAS A "PRONOUNCEMENT" AND WOULD NOT HAVE THE FORMAL STATUS OF A RESOLUTION.

THE TEXT OF THE PRONOUNCEMENT:

"THE AMERICAN LEGION VIEWS WITH GREATEST CONCERN THE APPARENTLY WIDESPREAD BELIEF THAT THIS NATION MUST INEVITABLY BECOME INVOLVED IN THE PRESENT EUROPEAN CONFLICT.

"WE NOT ONLY BELIEVE THAT THIS NATION NEED NOT BECOME INVOLVED, BUT INSIST AND DEMAND THAT THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES AND THE CONGRESS PURSUE A POLICY THAT WHILE PRESERVING THE SOVEREIGNTY AND DIGNITY OF THIS NATION WILL PREVENT INVOLVEMENT IN THIS CONFLICT.

"THE AMERICAN LEGION IS NOT A LAW MAKING BODY. IT HAS OFTEN RECOMMENDED TO CONGRESS THE ENACTMENT OF LEGISLATION, ESTABLISHING A PERMANENT OR FIXED POLICY ON IMPORTANT NATIONAL PROBLEMS.

"THE AMERICAN LEGION HAS ALWAYS STRENUOUSLY ADVOCATED THAT THIS NATION PURSUE A POLICY OF NEUTRALITY AND PEACE. IN THE PRESENT CRISIS WORLD CONDITIONS MAY CHANGE SO RAPIDLY THAT A PRONOUNCEMENT BY THE AMERICAN LEGION AT THIS TIME ON SPECIFIC LEGISLATION MAY BE WHOLLY INADEQUATE IN THE NEAR FUTURE.

WASHINGTON,SEPT. 26-(AP)-THE DROPPING OF "PEACE" PAMPHLETS ON DOWNTOWN WASHINGTON---SOME OF WHICH FELL NEAR THE WHITE HOUSE---BROUGHT A THREAT LATE TODAY THAT AVIATRIX LAURA INGALLS WOULD LOSE HER PERMIT TO FLY.

MISS INGALLS ADMITTED AFTER THE FLIGHT THAT PAMPHLETS FROM HER PLANE HAD FALLEN ON DOWNTOWN WASHINGTON.

AS THE SURPRISE FLIGHT ENDED, THE CIVIL AERONAUTICS AUTHORITY ISSUED A "SHOW CAUSE" ORDER AGAINST MISS INGALLS, WHICH MIGHT BRING REVOCATION OF HER AVIATOR'S LICENSE.

THE GROUNDS WERE THAT SHE HAD VIOLATED A RESTRICTED AIR ZONE, COVERING THE CAPITOL, THE WHITE HOUSE, AND OTHER GOVERNMENT BUILDINGS.

MISS INGALLS DENIED THAT SHE HAD FLOWN OVER THE WHITE HOUSE.

THE PAMPHLETS CARRIED THE IMPRINT OF THE WEEK-OLD WOMEN'S NATIONAL COMMITTEE TO KEEP U.S. OUT OF WAR, WHICH OPPOSES PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S STAND FOR REPEAL OF THE ARMS EMBARGO.

THE FURTHER EUROPE PROCEEDS WITH ITS MAD-HATTER WAR, THE MORE APPARENT IT BECOMES THAT BOTH SIDES ARE DISCREETLY INCLINED TO HOPE THAT THERE MAY BE AN EASIER ROAD TO VICTORY--OR SHALL WE EMPLOY THE REVISED VERSION OF "PEACE WITH HONOR"--THAN THROUGH A BLEAK AND BLOODY HOLE TORN IN THE GERMAN WESTWALL OR THE FRENCH MAGINOT LINE.

TRUE, ARTILLERY DUELS AND COSTLY LOCAL ENGAGEMENTS ARE PROCEEDING

ON THE WESTERN FRONT. THEY DID LAST NIGHT.

A MAJOR OFFENSIVE PRESUMABLY WILL DEVELOP IN DUE COURSE. THAT'S ALMOST INEVITABLE IN ANY EVENT, FOR THE PSYCHOLOGICAL EFFECT IF NOTHING ELSE.

AN ARMY, LIKE A DICTATOR, HAS TO KEEP ITSELF IN THE LIMELIGHT IF IT IS TO HOLD ITS FOLLOWING. YOU'D BE SURPRISED TO KNOW HOW MANY TIMES BIG ATTACKS ARE MADE ON ORDERS FROM THE HOME GOVERNMENT WITH THE IDEA OF PROVIDING PROPAGANDA TO BUCK UP THE CIVILIAN MORALE, OR FOR USE ABROAD.

HOWEVER, BOTH THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES AND THE GERMANS ARE TRYING TO CRACK THE NUT WITH THEIR FINGERS, RATHER THAN USE STEEL.

THE ALLIES ARE RELYING GREATLY ON TWO EXPEDIENTS--CUTTING OFF VITAL GERMAN SUPPLIES BY NAVAL BLOCKADE, AND INSPIRING THE GERMAN PEOPLE TO REVOLT AND THROW HERR HITLER OUT. THE ENGLISH AGAIN HAVE BOMBARDED GERMANY FROM THE AIR WITH PAMPHELTS. THIS TIME THEY SAID, AMONG OTHER THINGS:

"THE BRITISH AND FRENCH FLEETS HAVE SWEPT GERMAN MERCHANT SHIPPING FROM THE OCEANS. THEREFORE YOUR SUPPLIES OF A WHOLE RANGE OF ESSENTIAL WAR MATERIALS SUCH AS PETROL, COPPER, NICKEL, RUBBER, COTTON, WOOL AND FATS ARE ALMOST GONE AND YOU CAN NO LONGER RELY AS YOU DID IN THE LAST WAR UPON NEUTRAL SUPPLIES BECAUSE YOUR GOVERNMENT CANNOT PAY FOR THEM."

THAT'S SMART PROPAGANDA TO HAND A PEOPLE WHO ONLY TWENTY-ONE YEARS AGO WAS DRIVEN INTO SUBMISSION BY THE LASH OF HUNGER. IF THE BRITISH CAN GET RESULTS THAT WAY, IT WILL BE A LOT EASIER THAN SMASHING THE WESTWALL.

THEN FROM GERMANY COMES FURTHER PEACE TALK, STILL SUPPORTED BY THE ITALIAN PRESS. A MAN CLOSE TO THE NAZI GOVERNMENT SAID: "WE ARE READY FOR PEACE, AND WE ARE READY FOR WAR, BUT THE INITIATIVE FOR WARLIKE ACTIONS MUST BE TAKEN BY GERMANY'S OPPONENTS."

MORE STRIKING WERE THE RUMORS--THOUGH THEY WERE UNCONFIRMED--IN INFORMED QUARTERS THAT THE NAZIS WERE PREPARING ANOTHER FRIENDLY GESTURE TOWARD FRANCE. IT WAS SAID GERMANY MIGHT FREE ALL FRENCH PRISONERS TAKEN THUS FAR AND SEND THEM HOME. IT IS FIGURED THAT THESE POILUS WOULD MAKE EXCELLENT ADVOCATES FOR PEACE.

MEANTIME THE BRITISH CONTINUE TO SWEEP THE SEAS, BUT WHILE THEY MAY HAVE CLEANED OFF GERMAN MERCHANT SHIPS, THE NAZIS ARE TAKING TOLL WITH THOSE TERRORS OF THE DEEP, THE U-BOATS. IN 23 DAYS OF WAR BRITAIN HAS LOST 31 SHIPS; GERMANY, 9; FRANCE, 2; NEUTRALS, 10.

WHATEVER GAME IT IS THAT RUSSIA IS PLAYING, THE LITTLE BALTIC STATES (ESPECIALLY ESTONIA) AND RUMANIA HAVE HASTILY PUT UP LIGHTENING-RODS TO WARD OFF STROKES SUCH AS HIT POLAND, AND ARE HUDDLING IN FEAR, HOPING THAT THE STORM WILL PASS.

THE MOST IMPORTANT POLITICAL DEVELOPMENT HAS BEEN THE ARRIVAL OF TURKISH FOREIGN MINISTER SARACOGLU IN MOSCOW ON A FRIENDLY MISSION FOR WHAT ARE DESCRIBED AS IMPORTANT TRADE AND DIPLOMATIC TALKS.

OBSERVERS LOOKED FOR THE SOVIET TO TRY TO SECURE AN AGREEMENT WHEREBY TURKEY WOULD CLOSE THE DARDANELLES TO SHIPS OPPOSED TO RUSSIAN INTERESTS. SUCH A PACT WOULD PLACE RUSSIA IN A POWERFUL STRATEGIC POSITION--A MATTER OF VITAL CONCERN BOTH TO GERMANY AND THE ALLIES.

BERLIN ANNOUNCES A FULL SURRENDER

Says Polish Capital Gave Unconditional Capitulation and Will Be Handed Over Probably on Friday.

BERLIN, Sept. 27 (A. P.).—The German High Command announced at 8:17 o'clock tonight that "Warsaw has capitulated unconditionally" and added that the "handing over of the city will probably occur on September 29."

The announcement came several hours after an earlier communique declaring that Warsaw's defenders, "under the thrust" of German assaults begun yesterday, had offered this morning to surrender.

Gen. Johannes von Blaskowitz had been commissioned to arrange details of the capitulation.

The German announcement came at the end of the twentieth day of Warsaw's siege.

[As late as 2:45 P. M. the Warsaw radio was heard in Budapest, the announcer declaring that the city still was holding out and would resist to the last.]

A final big-scale assault to wipe out Poland's defenses was launched yesterday.

Today's regular morning communique of the German High Command said in part: "The attack yesterday brought the first line of fortresses in the north and the second line of fortresses in the south into our possession. Under the thrust of the attacks the Polish commander offered forenoon the surrender of the city and of the military force."

Meanwhile this afternoon Reichsfuehrer Hitler established a military administration for Polish territory occupied by the German troops, and appointed Col.-Gen. Gerd von Runstedt as the head. Col.-Gen. von Rundstedt's title is Eastern Commander-in-Chief.

'We Are Holding Out.'

BUDAPEST, Sept. 27 (A. P.).—The Warsaw radio, describing a terrific German aerial and artillery assault on the beleaguered Polish capital, today, told Great Britain and France: "We are holding out."

The station broadcast a special message to the Polish ambassadors at Paris and London that after almost three weeks of siege, "we expect aid will be forthcoming from our allies."

At 2:45 P. M. (8:45 A. M. (Eastern standard time), the station announcer said the Warsaw sky was "blackened" by 200 German warplanes. He described the capital as "a destroyed inferno."

The announcer declared "more than 200 civilians" had been killed in the last twenty-four hours. The Polish troops defending the capital were said to have repulsed all German land attacks.

"Warsaw has been virtually razed," the announcer said, declaring, however, that "the morale of the population is excellent and we will never give in while one of us is still alive."

Speaking at 2:15 P. M. (8:15 A. M. New York time) he reported that German bombing planes were throwing incendiary bombs into the center of the city. Communication within the capital was described as impossible "because of the fires and universal wreckage."

Position Is Tragic.

"The food situation is tragic," said the announcer. "Our last hospital was destroyed by German shells today."

Fear of an epidemic because of the water shortage added to the horrors of the besieged capital.

Between announcements the Warsaw station played hymns.

Dead and wounded were said to be lying in the capital's streets because of the breakdown of all transportation and communication facilities. Fires were raging unchecked because the water mains were broken.

"We foresee a tragic situation soon for our capital," said the announcer calmly. "The reservoir and water pumps have been destroyed by German air attacks. The city now totally lacks water and it seems an epidemic must come."

Everything Left Is on Fire.

The destruction of the Hospital of the Child Jesus shortly before noon was said to have caused the death of seventeen nuns and three physicians.

The announcer said that Polish anti-aircraft guns had brought down eight raiding planes yesterday. More than 100 heavy German siege guns were said to be pouring shells into the center of the city, a stream uninterrupted since Saturday.

At 2:30 P. M. the broadcaster said that "several hundred more" incendiary bombs had been dumped into the capital.

"There are more than 500 fires burning now. About all that is left to burn is now blazing."

All public buildings were described as afire or already badly damaged by flames.

An Inferno on Earth.

Hundreds of horses killed each day were said by the announcer to have been butchered immediately to feed the besieged populace.

Troops defending the city were holding their positions "against savage and desperate Nazi attacks" and in some places had bettered their positions with bayonet charges said the announcer, adding that the Polish losses were "exceedingly small."

"The Nazi invaders, enraged by our resistance, are systematically burning, shelling and bombing every living human being or animal," continued the announcer, "they are making this an inferno on earth apparently intending to wipe us out to the last man, woman and child.'

And Still More to Come.

"Warsaw is one big ruin."

The announcer said that Warsaw's last twenty-four hours had been the most tragic of all "and still there seems more to come."

At 2:45 P. M. the announcer shouted: "Here come more than 200 planes, blackening the sky. They are dropping heavy bombs onto already ruined buildings in the center of the city."

"There is hardly a street in which it is possible to walk," he said, adding that food reserves were almost exhausted and "we all are tightening our belts to resist."

The messages to the London and Paris ambassadors were described as an "S O S."

"Attacks such as you outside cannot possibly imagine in your wildest thoughts are going on against us," came the message on the air.

The announcer said that "an appalling loss of civilian life" was the result, with every church and every hospital razed by shells and bomb explosions.

"Warsaw by night is a sea of flames, which illuminate the ruins of one of the most beautiful cities in Europe," said the announcer. 'The bombed and burning city lights ceaselessly on and will continue to fight, showing the entire world that Germans are unable to destroy Polish honor."

He said the Germans could not capture the city and "therefore the Nazis are systematically ruining it, one district after another, so that the Polish soldier will have nothing more to defend, no reason for wanting to live."

He asserted that the Modlin forts, eighteen miles northwest of the capital, were still holding out.

As he finished the sentence a dull booming as of heavy guns punctuated his words. Pausing as if to show that he too had heard artillery, the speaker then said: "Our troops are defending us and they will continue to protect us."

As the broadcast neared an end dull roars shook the microphone and the speaker stammered from time to time as though the radio station were being shaken violently.

The Twentieth Day.

Observers in southeastern Europe, who had been following the Polish capital battle by listening to the dramatic broadcasts, had been unable to get the station since early on Monday morning.

Sunday's broadcast described in vivid language the siege which has continued since September 8. Terrific shelling by 100 Nazi siege guns and air raids had killed more than 1,000 civilians that day, the broadcast said. Hundreds had been killed and wounded at churches and many women and children killed in a hospital bombing.

German Broadcast.

On the twentieth day of the siege a German station, using the wave length of the then silenced Warsaw radio, called upon the city's defenders today to "save the lives of your women and children" by surrendering. Conditions in Warsaw were contrasted by this announcer with conditions in the German-occupied portion of Poland.

The city is entirely cut off from the rest of the world, the broadcaster said, and "there have been many suicides" as the military "foolishly drives people to unnecessary misery, hardships and sacrifices."

"The citizens of Warsaw are living under the false belief that they are defending Poland when there is no Poland," continued Berlin.

The speaker described the section now controlled by Germany as being in complete order with restored commerce and with the currency and credit flow soon to be resumed.

"The German staff deeply regrets the needless destruction of so many people," the announcer asserted, "but it is due entirely to the obstinancy of the resistance."

The commander of the Polish capital's defense forces was condemned for "permitting the city to be destroyed and its citizens killed."

'Not an Open City.'

Armored units of the German Army reached the suburbs of Warsaw September 8, but it was not until September 13 that the city was encircled, making its defense seemingly hopeless. On September 16, the Germans proposed by radio to the Polish commander that he negotiate for the city's surrender but no intermediary appeared as instructed.

Subsequently the departure from Warsaw of more than 1,200 foreigners, including some fifty-five Americans, was effected under truce arrangements, but the Poles were apparently determined to make a desperate stand.

Because of the defense preparations made by the Polish commander, the Germans said they were no longer able to regard Warsaw as an open city. Hence the storming of the city's defenses began yesterday in an effort to force capitulation.

Warsaw last capitulated to an enemy on August 5, 1915, when the Russians left the city to the Germans without offering any stout resistance. In the previous October, the Russians had successfully defended the city.

Again in August, 1920, Warsaw was besieged, this time by a Red army in the Russo-Polish war, but in a two-day battle the Poles beat off the Russians.

Hears City Has Surrendered.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27 (A. P.).—The German Embassy said today that it had a report from the Transocean News Agency that Warsaw surrendered at 4:30 A. M., Eastern standard time.

The embassy said it regarded the report as "very reliable."

The embassy described the Trans-Ocean News Agency as a privately operated wireless service supplying news to newspapers throughout the world. It is not subsidized by the German Government, the embassy declared, and should not be confused with the official German News Agency D. N. B.

Still Fighting, Besieged Polish Capital's Radio Tells the World

By Alvin J. Steinkopf,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Sept. 27.—Besieged Warsaw, reported laid waste by bomb, shell and fire, surrendered unconditionally tonight, the Nazi high command announced.

The German communique reporting capitulation of the Polish capital after 20 days of siege shared attention tonight with the expectation in informed quarters that a far-reaching German-Russian accord would result from the flying visit of Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop to Moscow.

Warsaw's garrison will be handed over to the besieging Nazi army September 29, the high command said, and Gen. Johannes von Blaskowitz has been ordered to arrange the terms of surrender.

(The Warsaw radio, which almost throughout the siege had been on the air with exhortations to Warsaw's citizens and soldiers to resist the invaders, was heard in Budapest as late as 2:45 p. m. today—8:45 a. m., E. S. T. It's announcer insisted the city still held out and would resist to the last.)

Ends Polish War

The surrender, in the German view, marked the end of the short but furiously fought war which started 27 days ago today.

The German high command, after the first brief announcement, issued a second communique as follows:

"Warsaw has capitulated unconditionally. Formal surrender of the city to the German army command will take place September 29 (Friday).

"It is established the military garrison (Polish) occupying the city exceeds 100,000 men."

Other terms of the surrender were not made known immediately, but it was indicated the Germans had insisted upon elaborate guarantees "to protect the civilian population."

It was regarded likely, too, the Germans had exacted effective guarantees to prevent attacks by the civilian population upon the occupying force, and had a military government ready to enforce such measures, to remove prisoners, relieve distress and stamp out any incipient epidemics.

Reports reaching the German side indicated conditions approaching civil war prevailed in Warsaw during the final stages of the siege with a considerable faction within the city demanding submission to the German terms.

100,000 Men in Garrison

It was believed these terms included surrender of the Warsaw garrison of more than 100,000 men as prisoners of war.

Germans have contended it was their objective to smash the Polish army so there would be no chance of a surviving part organizing opposition to German or Russian forces of occupation.

Twenty days ago the first German motorized troops reached Warsaw and penetrated into the suburbs. But they withdrew under heavy Polish artillery fire and at a safe distance awaited the full force of the German army which soon closed in from three directions and then cut off all retreat.

By September 13 the Germans were beginning the squeeze which throttled Warsaw.

During most of this time Warsaw was under the heavy guns of German artillery and the bombs of the big German air force.

Germans contended they restrained their impatience for the city's fall, however, hoping for a surrender which would not subject the city to bombardment.

Two days ago the Germans resumed their assaults on military objectives within the capital area and tonight announced the Poles finally had been convinced of the uselessness of further resistance.

Germans said their reluctance to "wreck Warsaw" was due to the fact that this resistance was not due to responsible government and military leaders, who had fled, but to civilians who were misinformed as to their situation.

Althuogh civilians, by taking part in the defense, in the German view, had deprived the city of its standing as an unfortified town and had invited bombardment, it was said here orders to protect civilians as much as possible remained in effect.

A spokesman said Germany had refrained for a week from assaulting Warsaw and that this restraint apparently was misinterpreted as weakness by the Polish command.

So force was reapplied and after the capture of outward defenses and a thrust toward the central railway station by the Germans, a Polish offer of surrender was received this morning.

"The resistance of Warsaw was completely hopeless and had nothing to do with heroism," a spokesman said.

"Apparently the Warsaw command finally realized its responsibility in placing tens of thousands of civilians in danger without serving the slightest military purpose."

Germany's Version

Berlin, Sept. 27 (AP)—There was elation in naval circles here tonight over the report that [illegible] power diving planes had destroyed an unnamed British airplane carrier in the middle of the North Sea and had damaged a battleship.

The German high command ridiculed British statements that German aviators had missed their targets and that German planes had been shot down.

"Observation was perfect and a direct hit by a thousand-pound bomb on the carrier was beyond question," it was said.

The airplane carrier was "destroyed" but not necessarily sunk, it was stated.

Two Out Of Seven, Claim

It was stated here that England started the war with only seven plane carriers and now British aviation was crippled seriously by the loss of two.

1939

It was recalled that Winston Churchill, First Lord of the British Admiralty, once observed that the loss of one major battleship equaled the loss of one division of land troops. It was said the loss of a plane carrier must be regarded even more serious because of the limited number of carriers.

It was stated here this was the first instance in history of major action between planes and battle ships and that the planes had acquitted themselves gloriously.

The Germans denied the loss of any planes.

Another series of denials came from Government officers, including denunciation of reports of destructive enemy air raids at Kiel and Friedrichshafen.

City's Dust Shrouds Warsaw's Hero Dead

Capital a Column of Smoke by Day and A Pillar of Fire by Night, Escaped Flier Reports; Guns Boom Its Requiem

SEP 28 1939

Associated Press Staff Writer

Budapest, Sept. 27.—A Polish army flier who took off from a bomb-pitted field in the heart of Warsaw and escaped through a barrage of German shells, told a grim story today of tragic scenes in the besieged Polish capital.

He was Lieut. Col. Mateus Izycki, one of seven pilots who attempted to fly out of Warsaw at dawn last Monday. The makeshift plane he piloted made a safe landing somewhere in Hungary and today he made his way to Budapest. What became of his fellow airmen, he doesn't know.

The stocky officer, his blue eyes rimmed with lines of fatigue, told of civilians creeping from cellars between air raids and artillery bombardments to bury the dead in parks and public squares.

There was no time for religious services at the hurried burials, which, he said, were held against a backdrop of incessant rumbling from besieging guns.

The colonel related that a thick black pall, which never lifts, hangs over the city, growing blacker each day with new fires added to the flames of Warsaw.

In a voice which at times sank to a whisper, he said:

"Warsaw cannot last forever—but will for a while. When Polish honor has been satisfied, and only then, will surrender be considered. Warsaw's citizens refuse to give up."

(A German communique in Berlin today said the Polish capital had surrendered "unconditionally.")

"From the air the city is a horrible sight," he related. Hardly a building is intact.

"The city is ringed by six divisions of German soldiers whose artillery is pouring in shells unceasingly, aided by an average of 200 raiding planes a day.

"Warsaw is a city where from 40 to 60 new fires start daily from incendiary bombs. Only small fires can be handled; the big ones are left to burn

"It is a city where priests say mass in wrecked churches; a city of never-ending bedlam where heavy bombs go crashing through four or five floors and topple an entire building.

"There's a no-man's-land strewn with dead men, women and horses. Across this area, except where the Germans have reached outlying houses, our own artillery replies from behind barricades of overturned street cars, sandbags, buildings, stones and captured German tanks.

SEP 28 1939

Food Getting Scarce

"Our troops and ammunition are sufficient for some time but food is getting scarce. There's some life in the streets, for the city must live, but old people and children never leave their cellar refuges.

"No gas has been used throughout the siege, except for occasioonal tear gas charges against our artillery.

"We captured a number of German tanks by the simple expedient of using hand grenades tied to bottles of gasoline. At times there has been bitter fighting at close range."

Col. Izycki said the only time the Warsaw defenders had any rest was "when the Germans took time out for lunch.

"Otherwise," he continued, "the shelling has been steady and methodical, striking every section of the city.

"I had a room in the Bristol Hotel. One day I went there only to find my room had disappeared in a mass of ruins.

All Hospitals Destroyed

"There are freakish touches about it all. Ironically enough, the war ministry was one of the few buildings untouched when I left.

"The Germans captured our broadcasting aerials outside the city, but we kept using them from our downtown studios two days before they caught on.

"All hospitals have been hit or destroyed and practically all medical aid is administered on the spot. In many instances there was nothing to do but watch those die who were seriously wounded.

"AtA times the wounded had to be thrown from burning houses to the street below, even though they suffered additional broken bones.

"On some captured German prisoners we found pamphlets promising them that by Christmas Nazi Propaganda Minister Goebbels would speak to them from London."

The officer explained that the desperate dash of himself and his companions was to save the seven planes—all that they had left in Warsaw.

Tells of Desperate Dash

He said his own plane was one which was used for instruction in the aviation school and had to be reassembled under the continual threat of German machine guns.

The other six planes, he added, were hidden between houses near the airfield.

"One by one these planes swooped out from their hiding places, took a brief run and climbed into the air. I was the last to leave while Polish soldiers were attacking the Germans furiously to distract their attention.

"Tracer bullets whined all around me. I went to 9,000 feet with my machine guns ready and only enough gasoline for an hour and a half of flying.

"I glided long distances to save fuel. I had no maps and only knew that I was in Hungary when I came down low and saw the peasant costumes."

Shells Shake Warsaw Radio As Pole Says, 'We Fight On'

'Last Hospital Destroyed . . . Dead and Wounded in Streets . . . City Being Ruined So We'll Have Nothing to Defend or Live For'

SEP 28 1939

By the Associated Press

Budapest, Sept. 27.—Hymns were substituted for stirring military marches today as the Warsaw radio came back to life to tell with dramatic pauses the Polish story of the lingering hours of the German siege.

(An official Berlin announcement said at 8:17 (2:17 p. m., E. S. T.) that the city had surrendered unconditionally and probably would be occupied September 29.)

The station—silent since early Monday morning—returned suddenly to the air at 2:15 p. m. (8:15 a. m., E. S. T.) to describe the "destroyed inferno" as bombs, shells and fire tore and burned the once beautiful city into ruins. The broadcast lasted 30 minutes.

The announcer told a story of the deaths of more than 3,000 civilians today, the failure of the city water supply and fear of plague—and still of the resistance of the Polish troops on the twentieth day of the siege.

At that moment, he said, German bombing planes were throwing incendiary bombs into the center of the city.

Because the Germans could not capture the city, asserted the announcer, "they are systematically ruining it, one district after another, so the Polish soldier will have nothing more to defend, no reason for wanting to live."

He said the Modlin forts, 18 miles northwest of the capital, still were holding out and just then a dull booming came over the microphone.

The speaker paused as if he, too, heard the artillery, then said, "Our troops are defending us and they will continue to protect us."

Dull roars shook the microphone near the finish and the speaker stammered from time to time.

It seemed as if the studio was being shaken violently.

The announcer pleaded for aid from Poland's allies and declared the morale of defenders and civilians was excellent.

This is how the announcer described the situation in Warsaw:

"Food situation is tragic . . . Our last hospital was destroyed by German shells today . . . Dead and wounded are lying in the streets because transportation and communication facilities have broken down . . . Fires rage unchecked . . . Destruction of the Hospital of the Child Jesus shortly before noon caused the deaths of 17 nuns and three physicians . . . Polish anti-aircraft guns brought down eight raiding planes yesterday . . . About 500 fires are burning . . . About all that is left to burn is blazing . . . All public buildings are either afire or already badly damaged . . . Polish troops are holding out against savage and desperate Nazi attacks. In some places they have bettered their positions with bayonet charges . . . We expect aid from our allies . . . The city is razed but we live on."

—FINAL PARTITION—

SEP 28 1939

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 27—The question of whether Poland would survive as an independent state or disappear from the European map occupied diplomatic quarters today as Germany's Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, departed for Moscow.

Accompanied by the Russian Ambassador to Berlin, Alexander Schkvarzeff, and a group of Foreign Office experts, Von Ribbentrop took off from Tempelhof Airport at 9.15 A. M. in a four-motored plane.

Reached Decision, Is Belief

The German policy toward final partition of Poland was decided, observers believed, at a conference last night of Führer Hitler, Von Ribbentrop and Field Marshal Hermann Goering. The conference continued into the early morning.

Informed quarters said sharp differences of opinion had prevailed in Germany regarding the Polish situation. Nazis close to Goering favored complete elimination of Poland and establishment of a Russian-German frontier. A more moderate group was reported to favor creation of a Polish buffer state.

Arguments Pro And Con

Those opposing elimination of Poland as an independent state argued that millions of foreign nationals would be incorporated into Germany, which would be contrary to Hitler's often-voiced principles. These principles, it was pointed out on the other hand, were violated in the dissolution of Czecho-Slovakia.

The group favoring dissolution of the Polish state argued for unhampered communication lines with Russia and its great natural resources and held that a buffer state would be a constant hotbed of Polish agitation for revival of the republic.

Turning Attention To West

Hitler summoned Von Ribbentrop and Goering into conference immediately upon his return to Berlin last night. The Führer had been absent from the Chancellery since he joined his troops on the Eastern Front September 3, the day France and Britain declared war on Germany.

Berliners took his return as a sign the Polish situation virtually was settled and that Hitler intended to concentrate his attention on the West.

Speculations On His Trip

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin newspapers said Von Ribbenthrop's visit to Moscow was for the purpose of discussing political questions resulting from German and Soviet occupation of Poland. In Moscow, diplomatic circles suggested the possibility the visit might foreshadow a possible military pact between Russia and Germany.

Aboard Von Ribbentrop's plane were Dr. Friederich Gauss, chief legal advisor of the Foreign Office; Vice Chief of Protocol Von Halem and members of his personal staff, three legation councillors and the Soviet ambassador.

Warsaw Resistance Has Been Abandoned, Budapest Reports

SEP 28 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Sept. 27—The Polish Telegraph Agency tonight published a dispatch under a Warsaw dateline which said the Polish commander for defense of the city was "indicating that resistance had been abandoned."

The Warsaw radio station had given no hint of surrender, but had substituted hymns for stirring military marches to intersperse accounts of the lingering hours of German siege.

SOVIET SHIP SUNK BY A SUBMARINE CLOSE TO ESTONIA

Russia Says Attacker Is Unidentified; Ribbentrop Talks to Molotov.

MOSCOW, Sept. 27 (A. P.).—The Soviet Government announced tonight that the Russian steamship Metallist had been torpedoed and sunk by an unidentified submarine near Estonia.

The attack was said to have occurred near Narva Bay on the northern coast of Estonia.

Soviet patrol ships rescued nineteen members of the Metallist's crew. Five others were reported missing.

The official announcement of the sinking came as the Soviet press published sharp attacks on Estonia for her handling of the submarine problem, accusing the small Baltic nation of providing naval bases for foreign Powers.

The escape of an interned Polish submarine from Tallinn Harbor last week drew bitter criticism.

Estonia's Foreign Minister, Karl Selter, returned to Moscow for his second visit in three days accompanied by two experts on international law, Prof. Juri Uluots, president of the Chamber of Deputies, and Prof. Antonius Piip.

Diplomatic activity reached new intensity in Moscow with the arrival of Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop of Germany amid reports a German-Soviet military pact was under consideration.

Herr Von Ribbentrop and Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotov went into conference in the Kremlin at 10 P. M. tonight (2 P. M. Eastern standard time). It was not disclosed whether Joseph Stalin attended the opening meeting.

Herr von Ribbentrop was accompanied to Moscow by Albert Forster who was Adolf Hitler's leader in Danzig before the Free City was annexed by Germany.

Three planes bearing the German delegation landed at 5:45 P. M. (9:45 A. M., Eastern standard time) from Berlin to be greeted by a brass band and an honor guard, touches that were missing when Herr von Ribbentrop arrived on August 23 to sign the Soviet-German non-aggression pact.

Vladimir Potempkin, Vice-Commissar of Foreign Affairs, headed Soviet officials welcoming the Nazi party.

Herr von Ribbentrop smiled broadly as he emerged from the plane to exchange "Heil Hitler" greetings and handshakes with the staff of the German Embassy. The airport was decorated with intertwined Soviet and Nazi flags.

Greeted by Italian Envoy.

Italian Ambassador Augusto Rosso was the only foreign diplomat who appeared for the welcome.

It was learned that the Japanese Ambassador, Shigenori Togo, had conferred last night with Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotov. This lent credence to reports that Japan is playing an important part in the Moscow negotiations.

Meanwhile dispatches from the Red Army in Poland said that the advance toward the demarcation line agreed upon by Soviet and German military leaders was proceeding rapidly.

The belief was expressed in some Moscow circles that Germany and Russia might have agreed upon the division of Poland at the time their non-aggression pact was signed.

The army dispatches also reported that thirty trainloads of Polish troops, numbering about 25,000, had been seized between Brest-Litovsk and Voldava.

The coming of Germany's Foreign Minister, coupled with the presence in Moscow of the Turkish Foreign Minister, caused diplomatic circles to speculate on possible developments, rivaling in importance the Russo-German non-aggression pact.

1. The signing of a Russo-German military agreement.

2. The formation of a new Balkan bloc under the guidance of Turkey and Russia.

3. A joint Russo-German request that Turkey act as intermediary in attempts to negotiate peace in western Europe.

The purpose of the visit of Von Ribbentrop, said Tass, the official Russian news agency, was to discuss "problems connected with developments in Poland."

Moscow observers thought it significant, however, that Von Ribbentrop should time his journey to coincide with the presence of the Turkish Foreign Minister, Sukru Saracoglu.

Meanwhile today there was speculation on the possibility that Russia may have made strong demands for maritime rights upon her little Baltic neighbor, Estonia.

A Government communique issued last night accused Estonia of harboring unidentified submarines in her waters, and declared that an Estonian explanation of the escape of the interned Polish submarine Orzel from the harbor of Tallinn was "unsatisfactory."

Citing reports from Leningrad that "periscopes of unknown submarines" had been sighted near Luga Bay in the Gulf of Finland, the communique declared: "One can arrive at the conclusion that some unknown submarines have a secret base somewhere near the Estonian coast.

"In view of these circumstances, the question of insuring the security of Soviet waters against diversionist acts on the part of hiding submarines acquires great importance."

It was expected here that Karl Selter, Estonian Foreign Minister, who arrived suddenly in Moscow on Sunday and left hurriedly for Tallinn on Monday, would return to Moscow shortly to resume conversations with the Soviet authorities. Dispatches from Riga said that Selter had gone into conference with President Konstantin Paets and Gen. Johan Laidoner, the Estonian army commander-in-chief, immediately upon reaching Tallinn.

The presence in Moscow of the Turkish Foreign Minister led some quarters to believe that Russia might be seeking an important agreement concerning the Turkish-controlled Dardanelles, the entrance to the Black Sea. Passage through the Dardanelles is vital to France and Great Britain should they need to go to the assistance of Rumania.

Rumanian reports continued to deny that the Soviet-Rumanian frontier had been closed.

Saracoglu and the Turkish military attache, Col. Behcet Turkmen yesterday attended a conference at the Kremlin with the Russian Defense Commissar, Marshal Klementi E. Voroshiloff.

Nazi's Polish Policy Decided.

BERLIN, Sept. 27 (A. P.).—The question of whether any part of Poland would survive as an independent State or disappear from the map entirely occupied diplomatic quarters today as Germany's Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, departed for Moscow.

Accompanied by the Soviet Russian Ambassador to Berlin, Alexander Schkvarzev, and a group of Foreign Office experts, Von Ribbentrop took off from Tempelhof Airport at 9:15 A. M. in a four-motored plane.

The German policy toward a final partition of Poland was decided, observers believed, at a conference last night of Fuehrer Hitler, von Ribbentrop and Field Marshal Hermann Goering. No official comment was forthcoming on the conference, which continued into the early morning.

Informed persons said that sharp differences of opinion had prevailed in Germany regarding the Polish situation. A strong group of Nazis close to Goering, it was said, favored the complete elimination of Poland and the establishment of a Russo-German frontier.

Some Favor Buffer State.

A more moderate group was reported to favor the creation of a Polish buffer State between the Reich and the Soviet.

Those opposing the elimination of Poland as an independent State argued that millions of foreign nationals would be incorporated into Germany, which would be contrary to Hitler's often-voiced principles. These principles, it was pointed out on the other hand, were violated before with the creation of the Bohemian-Moravian Protectorate and the dissolution of Czecho-Slovakia.

Arguments of the group favoring dissolution of the Polish State apparently culminated in a desire to establish unhampered communication lines with Russia and its great natural resources.

Moreover, this group maintained an independent Poland, with its memories of defeat at the hands of Germany, would be a constant source of unrest and a hotbed of Polish agitation for the revival of the republic.

Hitler summoned von Ribbentrop and Goering into conference immediately upon his return to Berlin last night. The Fuehrer had been absent from the Chancellery since he joined his troops on the eastern front on September 3, the day France and Great Britain declared war on Germany.

Further Demands on Baltic State Rumored; Stalin and Ribbentrop Confer

MOSCOW, Sept. 28 (Thursday) (A. P.)—With Josef V. Stalin in attendance, German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop conferred with Premier-Foreign Minister Viacheslav M. Molotov until 2:30 a. m. (6:30 p. m., Wednesday, E. S. T.) today.

The length of the session—four and one-half hours—indicated that several problems were involved. The talks were to be resumed later today. Also present were German Ambassador Count Friedrich Werner von der Schulenburg and Alexander Shkbartzev, Soviet Ambassador to Berlin, who flew here yesterday with Ribbentrop. A communique said the conference was devoted to discussion of "questions connected with developments in Poland."

Meanwhile, the Soviet government announced tha tthe 968-ton Soviet freighter Metallist had been sunk off the coast of Estonia, Russia's little Baltic neighbor, by an unidentified submarine, and that five of her crew of twenty-four were missing. The announcement came while the Soviet press sharply attacked Estonia and accused her of harboring naval bases for foreign powers.

Unofficial reports persisted that the Soviet Union was making demands for concessions to erect fortifications in Estonian waters in the Gulf of Finland and the Baltic Sea.

The arrival of Ribbentrop coincided with that of Estonia's Foreign Minister, Karl Selter, coming for his second visit here in three days, and with talk among diplomats that a German-Soviet military pact might be in the offing.

Surprise Move Feared

The presence also of Turkish Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu in Moscow heightened the belief in diplomatic quarters that Russia might spring another surprise on war-torn Europe, following up the historic Russian-German non-aggression pact signed on Aug. 23 on a previous visit by Ribbentrop.

[In Helsingfors, Finland, sources close to Estonian officialdom said the Baltic state was submitting to Soviet demands for transit rights across Estonia and commercial and naval concessions on the Estonian coast.]

[It was announced in Tallinn, capital of Estonia, that Foreign Minister Selter had returned to Moscow, after a hurried trip to Tallinn on Sunday, "in connection with new Russian proposals." Dispatches received there from Moscow said considerable speculation prevailed in the Russian capital on the possibility that Russia had made strong demands on Estonia for maritime rights.]

Talks To Molotoff

Von Ribbentrop held the first conference of his second visit to Moscow tonight with Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff in the Kremlin.

A communique issued after the conference said that Joseph Stalin, German Ambassador Count Frederich Werner von der Schulenburg and Alexander Shkartzeff, Soviet Ambassador to Berlin, sat in on the conversations which lasted more than two hours.

The conference was devoted to discussion of "questions connected with developments in Poland," the communique said.

Accompanied By Förster

The German Foreign Minister arrived less than five hours earlier, accompanied by Albert Förster, Adolf Hitler's leader in Danzig before the Free City was annexed to Germany. Three planes bearing Ribbentrop's party were greeted by a brass band and an honor guard, and Vladimir Potemkin, Vice-Commissar of Foreign Affairs, headed the Soviet official welcoming committee. The airport was decorated with intertwined Soviet and Nazi banners.

Italian Envoy Present

Italian Ambassador Augusto Rosso was the only foreign diplomat who put in an appearance for the welcome.

Ribbentrop, smiling broadly, exchanged "Heil Hitler!" greetings and handshakes with the staff of the German Embassy as he emerged from his plane.

Ribbentrop's visit was described officially as for the purpose of discussing "problems connected with developments in Poland," but diplomats said the possibilities were threefold: the signing of a German-Soviet military agreement; formation of a new Balkan-Near Eastern bloc under the guidance of Turkey and Russia; and a joint German-Soviet request that Turkey act as intermediary in attempts to negotiate peace in western Europe.

Japanese Confer

Credence was lent to reports that Japan was playing an important part in the Moscow negotiations when it was learned that Japanese Ambassador Shigenori Togo conferred last night with Molotoff.

Russia has bitterly criticized Estonia following the escape of the interned Polish sumarine Orzel last Monday from Tallinn Harbor. The craft was interned after it sought refuge in the Estonian port.

A communique last night said Estonia's explanation of the incident had been "unsatisfactory." It went on to say that "one can arrive at the conclusion that some unknown submarines have a secret base somewhere near the Estonian coast" and added:

"In consequence of these circumstances the question of ensuring the security of Soviet waters against diversionist acts on the part of hiding submarines acquires great importance."

The government's announcement of the sinking of the Mettalist said the attack occurred near Narva

Bay, on the northern coast of Estonia. Soviet patrol ships were said to have rescued 19 of her crew of 24.

Last night's communique cited reports from Leningrad that "periscopes of unknown submarines" has been sighted near Luga, in the Gulf of Finland near where the Metallist was said to have been sunk.

Predict Soviet-Nazi Deal

Berlin, Sept. 27 (AP).—Predictions that a Russian-German deal would be brought about swiftly were made in official circles today and it was said the Germans obviously expected the Moscow negotiations to have an important bearing on the conduct of the war and the possibility of extension of German influence in southeastern Europe.

"After the lightning war in Europe follow lightning negotiations in Moscow," was the phrase used at the foreign office.

Attention also was called to the fact that Turkish and Estonian foreign ministers also are in Moscow, and one spokesman declared events have impressed on Turkey the "wisdom of perhaps revising her estimate of the value of a British guarantee."

He said an appreciable turn in the Turkish foreign policy, which he termed agreeable to Germany, already had been noted.

BERLIN CLAIMS ITS FLYERS HIT BRITISH FLEET

SEP 28 1939

Communique Contends One Carrier Was Sunk and Battleship Damaged.

CHURCHILL DENIES SUCCESS

Admiralty Head States Flying Boat Was Shot Down, Second Hit and Third Captured.

LONDON, Sept. 27 (A. P.).—Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, told the House of Commons today that a squadron of British warships was attacked in the North Sea yesterday by twenty German planes, but that none was hit.

"No British casualties were reported, but one German flying boat was shot down and another damaged," Mr. Churchill said. "Another German aircraft came down and we sent a destroyer to collect her and her crew of four, who were brought in as prisoners."

[A Berlin communique said the German air force had successfully attacked several British warships in the North Sea and that "besides one airplane carrier, which has been destroyed, several severe hits were scored on one battleship." "Our airplanes sustained no losses," the communique added.]

Report of Fleet Commander.

Mr. Churchill stated:

"Sir Charles Forbes, commander-in-chief of the Home Fleet, has wirelessed as follows:

" 'Yesterday afternoon in the middle of the North Sea a squadron of British capital ships together with an aircraft carrier, cruisers and destroyers was attacked by about twenty German aircraft. No British ship was hit and no British casualties were incurred.

" 'One German flying boat was shot down and another reported badly damaged.'

"I might add that another German aircraft came down in the North Sea," Mr. Churchill said. "We sent a destroyer to collect her and her crew of four, who have been brought in as prisoners."

A later announcement disclosed that the sea and air engagement occurred about 150 miles off the Norwegian coast.

Answers Queries In House.

Mr. Churchill's statement and an identical one issued by the Admiralty a few moments later were prompted by questions from the Labor Opposition concerning the German claims that their North Sea planes had scored direct hits on a British battleship during an engagement.

After Mr. Churchill had spoken A. V. Alexander, Laborite, told the House he hoped that "the public who listen in to broadcasts from Germany will take this as an example of their veracity."

Mr. Churchill told the members that he had received information about the engagement "about three-quarters of an hour ago."

"I thought the House would like to know," he said.

Attack Called Successful.

BERLIN, Sept. 27 (A. P.).—The Supreme Command announced today that German air force units "successfully attacked" several British warships in the North Sea yesterday.

The communique said in part: "Besides one airplane carrier which has been destroyed, several severe hits were scored on one battleship. Our airplanes sustained no losses."

The ships bombed, the communique added, included "battleships, airplane carriers, cruisers and destroyers."

SEP 28 1939

Berlin Contradicts British.

The high command later denied British assertions that the German raiders had missed their mark in attacking the British warships and that three German planes had been disabled.

The air force command said one 500-kilogram (1,102-pound) bomb, among others, had struck a British aircraft carrier squarely and that two 250-kilogram bombs had hit a battleship near her prow and amidships.

"The effect of those heavy bombs requires no further explanation," the command said, repeating that all German planes returned to their bases after the attack.

Enemy Aircraft Routed, British Say, Hold Sea Power Upheld

SEP 28 1939

By Robert Bunnelle,
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 27.—Britain tonight hailed the admiralty's claim of victory against the first mass attack of German aircraft on British warships—a claim disputed in Berlin—as a satisfactory reply to the question of whether British seapower could withstand war from the air.

(The Berlin communique asserted the Nazi air force "successfully attacked" British capital ships in the North Sea, "destroying" an aircraft carrier and scoring severe hits on a battleship.)

British tacticians called yesterday's German aerial raid on a home fleet squadron in the North Sea "a complete failure." Naval circles promptly boasted there was no fear for Britain's continued mastery of the seas in the face of this new German effort to break it.

Reports on Bremen

The British version was given to Commons by Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, who also told Commons that the $20,000,000 German liner Bremen, unreported since sailing from New York August 30, was "believed to be in a north Russian port." Earlier the Bremen had been reported to have reached Murmansk, Soviet Arctic port. There have been rumors, too, that the Bremen is in a British port.

Churchill described the sea battle after an inquiry as to the truth of a German communique claiming Nazi aircraft had destroyed a British airplane carrier, scored "several severe hits on one battleship" and escaped unscathed.

Churchill said the home fleet commander, Admiral Sir Charles Forbes, reported that approximately a score of German plane attacked a squadron of British capital ships together with an aircraft carrier, cruisers and destroyers.

"No British ship was hit and no British casualties were incurred," said Churchill. "One German flying boat was shot down and another was reported badly damaged."

German Plane Shot Down

The House cheered vociferously, and then he added that another German plane came down in the North Sea and with her crew of four was picked up by a British destroyer.

(The Germans said all their planes returned safely to their bases.)

Late tonight, the ministry of information reiterated the British version that there had been no damage to British ships. In a statement it said:

"The statement made by the first sea lord is literally and absolutely correct and there is no truth whatever in the German counter statement."

The Berlin "counter statement" said a heavy bomb had struck the British aircraft carrier and two lighter bombs had struck the battleship.

The German attack on the British fleet was the second major engagement of the war between sea and air forces. On September 5 Britain reported a flight of its planes raided German warships at Kiel, inflicting heavy damage by dive-bombing. The British confessed to casualties during the raid. Some of their fliers were taken prisoner.

British accounts of the latest attack, 150 miles off the Norwegian coast, attributed the failure of the Germans to score hits to their reluctance to dive low in the face of British anti-aircraft fire.

Naval men here asserted it is extremely difficult for aircraft to score direct hits on ships at sea. They said squadrons could easily carry out zigzag maneuvers and bring into play anti-aircraft guns of such caliber as to make low flying attacks "suicidal."

The minister of information announced that 255,000 tons of contraband, chiefly iron ore and petroleum products, had been seized since the beginning of the war, including more than 70,000 tons taken during the week ended yesterday.

France Reports Its Artillery Has Cut Hole in German Line

SEP 28 1939

Enemy Guns Return Fire as Infantry Tries to Rebuild Shattered Blockhouses—Swiss Hear of Attack by Nazis.

PARIS, Sept. 27 (A. P.).—French artillery was reported today to have blasted a hole in the Siegfried Line and to have wiped out portions of it between Merzig and Saarbruecken as the entire western front blazed with heavy cannonading.

The Merzig-Saarbruecken sector extends along a twenty-five-mile front at the northern end of the Franco-German frontier. According to French sources, there were from thirty to forty German pill-boxes to the square mile.

Nazis Answer Bombardment.

Dispatches said that the Germans had answered the bombardment with an intense counter-fire on the advance positions of the French in the Saar and Palatinate areas in order to protect Nazi troops who were working feverishly to rebuild their shattered blockhouses.

A communique issued by the General Staff this morning made no reference to this reported success, saying simply:

"Calm night. Enemy artillery fire on our rear lines in the region of Wissembourg."

Tonight's communique read:

"The day was marked by the activity of our reconnaissance detachments."

French Villages Hit.

Long-range German guns were reported to have dropped "several shells" on unidentified villages which had previously gone untouched. The artillery action, the French said, could be characterized as a "duel."

They declared they had been unable to verify reports of the bombing of the German airplane works at Friederichshafen early in the week, but revised upward their estimate of the number of German planes shot down during an air battle over the western front on Monday. New information, they said, showed "almost certainly" that four German planes were brought down. The French losses were still estimated at two planes.

Dispatches said that the entire Franco-German frontier, from Luxembourg to Switzerland, blazed with artillery fire and that the heavy German counter-fire on the advanced French positions was designed to protect the Germans in rebuilding their shattered blockhouses.

French military men were said to have long held the belief that these works had been too hurriedly constructed to stand up under a heavy bombardment.

Reports from the front also said that the French air force was proving a large factor in enabling the artillery to score direct hits on the German fortified line.

French infantry activity, these reports declared, was confined to patrol skirmishes.

German troops, meanwhile, were said to be massing behind the lines as fast as they could be transferred from the Polish front.

The French professed to see German uneasiness regarding the eastern front in reports that Fuehrer Hitler had ordered his army high command to speed their mopping-up operations in Poland. At the same time, the French apparently were still concerned lest Germany strike through neutral Belgium, the Netherlands or Switzerland.

Three Alternatives.

The French asserted the war was "robbed" of the possibility of surprise because only three courses were open to the Germans: 1—An attempted crossing of the Rhine, 2—An attack through neutral countries, and, 3—A counter-blockade effort which, the French said, would also necessitate the invasion of neutral lowland countries on the north to seize French channel ports.

The French argued the first course would be practically impossible in the face of heavy Maginot Line guns sweeping the Rhine. They said the general staff was ready to meet any threat through neutral countries with fast tanks and mobile units of combined French-British forces.

French Report Quiet

BERLIN, Sept. 27 (A. P.).—Dispatches today from the western front reported only artillery fire and minor scouting activities. There were hints from official quarters, however, that "German patience" over the situation in the west was approaching "exhaustion."

Military quarters emphasized that Germany up to now had refrained from undertaking the offensive on the western front, but observed that the situation was one which a major Power could not with dignity "tolerate" indefinitely.

1939

Germans Reported Attacking.

BASLE, Switzerland, Sept. 27 (A. P.).—German troops were reported in advices received today to have attacked on the western front directly under the big French guns at Wissembourg, near the tip of the elbow in the parallel German and French lines.

SEP 28 1939

This attack, like that in the Wissembourg sector, apparently was designed to flank French forces in the Vosges forest west of the Wissembourg fort, where the advance German forts of Fischbach and Ludwigswinkel were reported cut off from main line fortifications protecting the Pirmasens-Landau road.

Wissembourg, built in the seventh century on the site of a Benedictine abbey, was a ghost city today, bereft of civilians.

The French forces were reported to have withdrawn to the Hill of Pigeons, just west of the city, and the fort, leaving their patrols in precarious possession of St. Paul Castle at the head of the salient north of Wissembourg.

French Forced to Retire.

The Germans, said to be installed firmly in advanced fortifications hugging the border at the German side of Altenstaat, a town of double nationality which sprawls across the frontier, apparently struck through the French side between Fort Wissembourg and the town of Wissembourg.

Their attack was reported to have been covered by such heavy fire that the French withdrew to the village of Oberhoffen behind Wissembourg, where they were supported by cannonading from Fort Wissembourg.

Along the remainder of the front, the French reportedly had consolidated newly won positions, save at Zweibruecken and Pirmasens, where constant attacks and counter-attacks made Walshousen Creek positions, paralleling the two lanes, a shifting no man's land.

Just southwest of Blieskastel on the Saarbruecken - Zweibruecken road French patrols held stubbornly to advance posts recognized as almost untenable, while artillerymen dragged up guns and sappers carved trenches for newly won Fechinger Creek positions to the southeast.

The German attacks south of Zweibruecken and Pirmasens and on the extreme eastern wing were considered by military observers of a limited scope, designed only to prevent the French from completing their apparent plan of drawing a solid line against the main Siegfried forts.

Vatican for Hull Ideals.

VATICAN CITY, Sept. 27 (A. P.).—Pan American ideals as outlined by Secretary Hull had the approval today of L'Osservatore Romano, Vatican City newspaper, which said that they were in line with precepts enunciated by Pope Pius XII.

The paper said yesterday that Mr. Hull, at a Pan American day celebration at the New York World's Fair last Friday, had "summed up the basic premises of 'Pax Americana': Every country, big or little, rich or poor, is recognized in the American 'family of nations' with full equality of rights, of considerations and of relations;

"Discipline for all, individual liberty, sovereignty of State, international law, civilization based on justice, reciprocal respect, collaboration, inviolability of signed pacts and their revision and reform admitted only through peaceful agreements."

SEP 28 1939

Paris Watches Reich and Russia.

PARIS, Sept. 27 (A. P.).—On the diplomatic front, France and Great Britain kept close watch today on negotiations between Germany and Soviet Russia.

French observers characterized Germany as the "weak sister" in the present Nazi-Soviet setup because of pressure being exerted on Germany in the west by France and Great Britain.

SEP 28 1939

The French Government let it be known today that its decision to suppress communist activities had both domestic and international aspects. A statement issued through the Havas news agency said the action taken yesterday by the Daladier Cabinet, dissolving the French Communist party, came at a moment when "many countries in Europe and even in America" were showing alarm over the "rapid Sovietization" of a large part of Poland.

"German propaganda had presented France to the entire world as prey to the Red peril," the statement added. "The situation today is just reversed. The Balkan countries are beginning to exchange views. They are forgetting what divided them to find again reasons for a certain solidarity in the presence of Soviet expansion."

Deputies of the outlawed Communist party met at the Chamber of Deputies and formed their approximately seventy members into "the French Workers' and Farmers' Party." Some Deputies previously had resigned from the Communist party. The new organization announced it would work for "emancipation of the working masses."

Saarbruecken Nazis Shelled Out, Paris Says

Terrific Artillery Duel In Progress; Hitler's Peace Offer Awaited

SEP 28 1939

By Taylor Henry,

Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, Sept. 27.—Adolf Hitler was reported tonight to be speeding concentration of his troops on the Western Front to be used as a club to induce France and Britain to discuss peace terms.

Advices reaching Paris from Germany through neutral countries indicated the Fuehrer was preparing to make a formal offer of peace based on the status quo resulting from the partition of Poland between Germany and Soviet Russia.

Both France and Britain are officially and repeatedly on record with the declaration that there will be no peace until the Hitler regime has been destroyed and Poland's independence restored.

Most military as well as diplomatic signs, however, pointed to the possibility of a German peace offer—perhaps before the end of this week.

It is for this reason that Hitler was believed to have sent his foreign minister, Joachim Von Ribbentrop, to Moscow today ostensibly to put the finishing touches on the partition of Poland.

Actually Von Ribbentrop was reported in Paris to be trying to persuade Josef Stalin to sign or at least give the impression that he is willing to sign a military alliance which Germany could use as a threat against the French and British unless they were willing to call off the war on his terms.

It was for the same reason that Hitler was believed to have issued urgent orders to his high command to clean up Poland quickly so there would be no semblance of resistance left there to which France and Britain could point.

Trains were said to be moving in a steady stream across Germany, pouring more and more troops into the Siegfried fortifications. Squadron after squadron of warplanes were reported shifted to the west.

Content With Hampering French

Military advices indicated these transfers of men, guns and planes now virtually had been completed under Hitler's continuous demands for speed.

It was equally obvious the Germans on the Western Front had made no real use of the forces concentrated there.

The reason for this was considered to be that the Germans did not want large-scale operations to start against France and Britain for fear of endangering any chances for peace.

Until now the Nazis have appeared content to take the usual measures to defend their fortress line and hamper the French advance into German territory as much as possible without joining a battle which would be difficult to break off.

Operations on the Western Front tonight provided an illustration of this apparent German strategy.

German artillery was concentrating its fire on the four main salients which the French have driven into Nazi territory.

At the same time, the German tactics appeared to be to try to keep the French high command constantly aware of the immense German forces being held in leash as well as the ever-present possibility that they might be turned loose in a major offensive.

Constant German feeler attacks harried French advance positions as the Nazi artillery fire increased against the four salients, which dot the northern flank of the Western Front at almost equal intervals.

The heaviest fire from the German guns battered the area behind the Lauter River, across which the French hold a wedged salient in Bienwald Forest. This is just north of the point where the Western Front hinges and the northern flank starts.

The Germans used long-range field pieces to hurl big shells across the river into deserted towns as deep as 4 miles back in French territory.

Nazi shells ripped holes in the strategic French highway from Hagenau northwest to Wissembourg on the western edges of the Bienwald.

Artillery Duel

The Hornbach salient which the French have pointed at the important German town of Zwiebruecken was under unrelenting artillery fire. On both flanks of this sector, which lies 25 to 30 miles northwest of Wissembourg, German raiding parties conducted light operations apparently to remind the French that salients could be pinched off.

Except for intermittent shelling, the Saarbruecken sector, where the French salient lies east of the city, remained quiet. The peak of this wedge is some 15 miles west of Hornbach.

A heavier artillery duel was resumed 25 miles farther west where the French lines bend almost to the banks of the Saar River between the German cities of Merzig and Saarlouis.

A French general staff communique on today's operations said merely that "the day was marked by the activity of our reconnaissance detachments."

The first nip of cold weather hit the Western Front today. Paris hospitals and relief organizations received urgent calls for doctors, ambulances and warm clothing to be distributed to civilians still in the zone just behind the front.

A unit from the American Hospital in Paris started for the northern tip of the frontier during the afternoon after making the rounds of American homes in the city collecting clothes and supplies.

Germans Seize Rail Link Near Wissembourg

Basel Reports Capture of Vital Junction in Push Through French Lines

By The Associated Press

BASEL, Switzerland, Sept. 27.—German patrols were reported in advices reaching Basel tonight to have forced through French advance lines east of Wissembourg to gain control of an important railroad junction in that area of the western front. These reports said the junction apparently concerned was the point where three rail lines—from Lauterbourg, Landau and Hagenau—join before entering Wissembourg.

The new positions, according to these advices, also gave the Germans control over a network of highways and roads behind Wissemboug, which lies twelve miles west of the Rhine, near the eastern end of the ninety-mile front between the Rhine and Moselle Rivers, where most of the action on the western front has been confined.

[The Wednesday morning communique issued by the French high command said "enemy artillery shelled behind our lines in the region of Wissembourg," and a United Press dispatch from Paris said the shells fell three miles behind the Maginot line on towns which had been emptied several weeks ago. The dispatch added that semi-official sources described the barrage as preparation for a major German offensive.]

Military observers said the objective of the Germans might be either to reach the strategic Hochwald forest heights southwest of Wissembourg or simply to cut under the Lauterbourg defenses in the Rhine-Lauter triangle. The latter move, these observers said, would bring the war down along the Rhine where reports received here said increased military preparations were noticed on the German side.

Large bodies of troops were reported moving along this line. The elaborate German preparations were under way in full sight of Basel's suburbs. Inhabitants of the little Swiss town of Riehen reported watching a large force of German labor battalions working night and day tearing up rails in a tunnel through Tullingen Hill, just opposite Riehen.

The Swiss who watched the operations said the Germans were converting the entire rail line in that section into an auto road linked with roads leading to Baden. Military observers in Basel said such a highway would enable the Germans to rush motorized troops into Limes forts next to Basel. German sources here said the tunnel would also afford protection for motorized units in the event of bombings in that area.

Siegfried Line Appears to Be Solely for Defense.

OBSTACLES BLOCK A CHARGE

First Group of Americans Is Admitted to Fortifications.

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

WITH THE GERMAN ARMY OF THE WEST, Sept. 27 (A. P.).—Inspection of Germany's Siegfried Line leads to the belief that the fortifications are purely defensive, offering protection against approaching enemies, but also providing obstacles to charge opposing lines from the stronghold.

Seeing the inside and outside of the West Wall with the first group of Americans ever permitted within these guarded precincts has demonstrated to me that German strategy in building this fortifications zone centered on three questions:

How can bombing attacks be nullified?

How can tanks be prevented from invading this zone?

How can artillery fire be so diffused as to make big gaps in the West Wall impossible?

Differs From French.

Germany has developed a system of fortifications which differs essentially from the French Maginot Line in its depth.

The defenses go back as far as thirty-five miles from the frontier and consist of a maze of crisscrossed concrete and steel obstructions, pill boxes or bunkers camouflaged into the landscape and fortress-like battlements invisible to the eye.

Roughly speaking, the West Wall is a system of four lines of defense. The first two are for infantry and artillery. The third and fourth are for anti-aircraft defenses.

The first line is so thickly studded with concrete blocks and bunkers that in an area half a mile wide and one and a half miles long we counted seventy pill boxes, each connected underground with the others.

Each of these bunkers is so arranged that firing from one crisscrosses the fire from another. Hence, even if one were silenced, others spitting their fire simultaneously might prevent the enemy from entering the breach.

A Revelation.

Germans believe they have improved on the Maginot Line by spreading out innumerable units with each unit capable of functioning independently, yet communicating with the others for synchronized action.

The concrete and steel blocks are so irregular that it is believed no tanks could force their way across them. Moreover, the pill boxes are camouflaged so that aviators have difficulty in finding them.

Surrounding the entire fortifications are steel-plated fortresses at danger points. No American had been in one until our group was permitted to enter.

The inspection certainly was a revelation. We saw turrets seemingly calculated to spit liquid fire. We saw other turrets with heavy machine guns. We saw periscopes, electric kitchens, shower baths, radio sets, complete telephone plants, air purification machinery.

dunks for officers and men—all deep in the earth.

Each compartment of these subterranean fortifications was usually built into huge mountainsides, walled off from the next by steel doors like bulkheads of ocean ships. From each end of long corridors machine guns peered ominously at us.

SEP 28 1939

It was explained that to remote chance an enemy should come in through some door, machine guns would finish him. To make sure no enemy observer could detect the units of this diffused fortification system, gardeners' shrubs and trees were planted in such a manner that within six weeks after the planting the distant watcher could not make out the hidden defenses.

Reporter Says Allies Withhold Fire in a Deserted Saar Valley

Tour Reveals No Signs of Shelling, One Air Fight, and Desultory Exchange; Germans Say They Shoot to 'Let French Know We're Still Here'

SEP 28 1939

By Louis P. Lochner

WITH THE GERMAN ARMY ON THE WESTERN FRONT, Sept. 27 (AP).—An air skirmish 10,000 feet above the ghost city of Saarbruecken in which six German pursuit planes chased after one French plane, the dealing of random shots known tto Germans as the "vesper blessing," and artillery fire five miles from Zwiebruecken to a point one and a quarter miles outside the city—these were all that happened on the Western Front so far as I could see today.

Today's journey took me from Trier (Treves) on the Moselle River past the Reich's first line of defense, then along the Saar River and the Saar Valley to Kaiserlautern in the Palatinates—always following the Lime Line.

Germans said that "desultory" shots also had been exchanged in the early morning from the French heights opposite Saarbruecken. It was certain that neither Saarbruecken nor Zweibruecken was hit by the French during our stay, nor could I detect any signs that these principal Saar Valley centers had been hit previously Numerous German officers and privates with whom I talked said not a single German pillbox had had to return French fire. The Germans reported that the only fighting, outside of occasional exchanges in the air, is that which occurs daily near Zweibruecken. This the Germans call the "Vesper Blessing" because of its regularity about 6 p. m. At that time the sun is at the backs of the French and the German positions are best visible to them. Not much harm is done, however, on either side, the Germans said.

Saarbruecken, an industrial city of 69,000 inhabitants, with valuable steel and iron works, is dead. The population has moved out completely. Signs on many shops read "evacuation of this business has been completed." Yet the French, so far as I could observe today, make no effort either to seize it—which might cost considerable loss of life because of strong German fortifications surrounding it—or to shell it directly.

With our military escorts, I entered the dead city with two other American newsmen in full view of the French. It appeared that had they desired, the French easily could have picked us for easy marks. The German officers accompanying us made no effort to conceal their uniforms indicating their rank. Nothing happened.

We were able to press forward to a street only one mile away from the French line. We almost felt disappointed that nothing whatever was happening when we suddenly heard the roar of motors far above us. Our military guides estimated the planes to be 10,000 feet above us. German pursuit planes were chasing one French ship. Tracer bullets indicated they were hitting their mark. The next moment, with strong field glasses I distinctly saw a jet of fire issuing from the French plane. By a power dive, however, the pilot managed to choke it off. He soon disappeared from our view. Whether he landed safely behind his own lines we could not determine, but an army communique subsequently reported him "shot down."

[Frederick C. Oeschner, of the United Press, who was with the same party as Mr. Lochner, wrote of this air battle: "I watched four German pursuit planes shoot down a French reconnaissance plane in flames today. . . . Suddenly the French scouting plane streaked earthward in a breath-taking power dive, enveloped in flames. We could not be certain whether the French pilot went into the dive in an attempt to put out the flames, or whether he was plunging helplessly to death."]

The Saarbruecken industrial plants have carted away their valuable machinery as well as steel and ore reserves. Our German guide told us 200 freight cars were moving daily from Saarbruecken with materials and machinery of all sorts without the slightest interference by the French. We saw big trucks loaded to the top leaving across a bridge which the French easily might have destroyed. We also saw dozens of families arriving with vehicles of every description and taking from their homes such valuables as they failed to grab when the hurried orders to move out first came.

Similarly Zweibruecken was a dead city. Its industrial plants lay idle. Soldiers here and there and families calling for their belongings were the only evidence of life. Outside the city on heights commanding a good view of French positions five miles away, German artillery in a desultory way was firing back when the French began shooting about 6 p. m. "We must let them know we are still here," was the dry comment of one officer with us.

Not all the villages and cities of the Saar Valley were depopulated. Occasionally we passed through some where life seemed perfectly normal ecept that more soldiers than ordinarily were quartered in homes. It was explained to us the population was moved out of only those cities which lie in a direct line of French artillery.

It appeared that nothing could shake the belief of the army and air force, as well as the local population, that the French never can get beyond this fortification.

The only exceptions I was told are two strips of German land, one in the Warndt Forest projecting into French territory, the other a narrow "finger" pointing into France south of Saarbruecken. These are a sort of no-mans-land, abandoned by Germany, I was told, for strategic reasons. The French hold this as in pincers, the Germans explained, therefore it would have been difficult to defend it.

—THE BALKANS—

SEP 28 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Bucharest, Sept. 27—With eyes on Moscow for some sign of sponsorship of a strong neutrality bloc in the Balkans, Europe's southeastern capitals — especially Bucharest — worked feverishly and apprehensively today to ease all possible causes of conflict.

Diplomatic circles in this Rumanian capital reported negotiations were under way at Moscow, upon the initiative of Turkey, for Soviet Russian and Italian guarantees of the Balkan status quo.

Turkish Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu, now in the Soviet capital, was said in these quarters to be discussing final terms of the proposed pact with Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff.

Apprehension Persists

Apprehensiveness over Russia's intentions, however, persisted among Rumanians—in uneasiness fed by rumors of Soviet troops massed along the Dniester river and prepared to seize Bessarabia at the opportune moment. The foreign office sought to allay these fears with denials.

Neutral foreign sources said there were no authentic reports to indicate any significant change in the past few days along the Rumanian-Russian frontier, now greatly expanded by the Red Army's sweep into Poland.

Strength Unknown

The strength of the Soviet border forces was not known. To date, however, they were said to have made no aggressive moves.

(Bessarabia, formerly part of the Russian empire, was joined to Rumania in 1918. Its area is 17,140 square miles and its population, 2,350,000).

Observers estimated 50,000 Rumanian soldiers were in position along Bessarabia's river boundary, watchful against the moment the reported neutrality talks might fail.

Other Moves Feared

Rumanians feared any Soviet seizure of Bessarabia might be followed by Hungarian attempts to occupy Transylvania and Bulgarian attempts to occupy Dobruja, both lost to Rumania in the World War's territorial shuffle.

(Transylvania was formerly a province of Hungary. It consists of 21,000 square miles and a population of 2,678,000. Rumanian forces invaded Transylvania in 1916, immediately upon the declaration of war with Austro-Hungary.

(Dobruja, population 387,000 and area 9,000 square miles, was invaded by Bulgaria when she declared war on Rumania in 1916, but Rumanian possession of the area was confirmed in the Treaty of Neuilly.

(Doubruja and Bessarabia form Rumania's Black Sea coast, while Transylvania is land-bound.)

May Make Gesture

Rumania was reported willing to make a token rectification of the Rumanion-Bulgarian boundary to win Bulgaria's participation in the proposed neutrality plan. Hungary was understood to be willing to waive her claim to Transylvania, provided she obtained a guarantee of her present territorial integrity.

As compensation for Rumanian-Bulgarian frontier rectification Rumania was said to have requested Russia to recognize Rumanian sovereignty over Bessarabia.

Russia's interest in the proposed neutrality pact lay in her desire to insure the Balkans and eastern Mediterranean against German dominance. Such a pact, it was said, also would protect Italy in her southeastern European interests.

A survey of authorities and observers of the Balkan situation showed a clear-cut divergence of opinion as to Southeastern Europe's future, especially Rumania's, if negotiations for a Balkan security system fail.

Moscow Held Confident

One school believed that Russia, having occupied eastern and southern Poland without opposition, was prepared to take advantage of disturbed European affairs by seizing Bessarabia.

These observers supposed that Moscow was confident her armies could overcome Rumanian resistance quickly, and that other nations would refrain from action.

Another school contended the conflicting interests of Germany and Russia in the Balkans and on the Black Sea would prevent the Soviet from taking aggressive action regarding Bessarabia unless Germany's war with Great Britain and France in the west created an extremely favorable and riskless opportunity.

Back To 1599

Rumania's claim to Bessarabia goes back to 1599, when its integral part, the principality of Modlovia, was united with Walachia and Transylvania under Michel the Brave to form Rumania.

Imperial Russia annexed Bessarabia in 1812, but under terms of the Crimean War peace treaty of 1856 Bessarabia was returned to Rumania. There was another Russian annexation of the area after the Russo-Turkish War (1877-78), and Russia held it until 1917.

With the Russian revolution, Bessarabia, Poland, Finland, Lithuania and Estonia declared their independence of Moscow, and the Bessarabian National Assembly voted in April, 1918, to unite with Rumania.

Diplomats Try To Avert War In the Balkans

Southeastern Europe Awaits Outcome of Russo-Turkish Talks

SEP 28 1939

Bucharest, Sept. 27.—Spurred by fear that hostilities will spread into southeastern Europe and set off a free-for-all Balkan conflict, diplomats worked tonight to stamp out all possible war sparks.

The Balkans apprehensively awaited the outcome of negotiations in Moscow between Turkish Foreign Minister Sarocoglu and Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff.

The governments hoped for Russia and Italian guarantees of the Balkan status quo with the possible formation of a strong neutral Balkan bloc under the aegis of Russia and Italy.

Diplomats here believe the success or failure of such efforts hinges on the extent to which each nation considers the situation changed since the invasion of Poland, and their willingness to make mutual concessions toward a general peace objective.

A previous, Soviet-inspired effort to organize a somewhat similar Balkan confederation last May failed, chiefly because some nations refused to participate under the terms then proposed.

It was understood Bulgaria then declined to enter a pact unless she was guaranteed her old boundaries, including Dobroja, now part of Rumania, and an outlet to the Aegean Sea through Greece.

Greece, in addition to her apprehension concerning the expanding Soviet influence, refused to make any territorial concessions.

Diplomats consider the vital question now whether Bulgaria, Yugoslavia and others, in view of the greatly changed situation, are prepared to recede from their previous stands.

Some observers believe Yugoslavia may now be more co-operative since the proposed union would be formed under the egis of Italy as well as he Soviet Union, while Bulgaria may be induced to reduce her claims for rectification of the border.

The Rumanian government was facing serious internal problems in preparing to form a new cabinet to replace the emergency military triumvirate which assumed control after the assassination September 21 of Premier Calinescu.

The new government, which may be formed over the week-end, was expected to take measures to maintain Rumania's neutrality and protect her borders.

CHURCHILL GIVES CLEW TO BREMEN

SEP 28 1939

Says Liner Is Believed to Be in Soviet Port.

LONDON, Sept. 27 (A. P.).—Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, today asserted in the House of Commons that the mysteriously missing German liner Bremen "is believed to be in a north Russian port."

The $20,000,000 liner sailed from New York August 30 only thirty-six hours before German troops started into Poland.

Since then no definite word of her whereabouts has been received, but there have been unconfirmed reports she had reachd Murmansk, Soviet arctic port.

Mr. Churchill made his statement in response to questions on the mystery of the German liner.

He refused to reply when asked if it were possible for a vessel to change her nationality on the high seas.

Reports were published in Holland that the Bremen had become an Italian ship and was heading for an Italian port. This was denied, however, by official Italian spokesmen.

Release of Thaelmann From Nazi Jail Reported

Freeing of Communist Seen as Result of Soviet Accord

Thaelmann, twice a candidate for president of Germany, was arrested on March 3, 1933, slightly more than a month after Adolf Hitler, whom he bitterly opposed, became Chancellor. No formal charges were ever placed against him, although Nazi officials said he was being held in connection with the fire that destroyed the Reichstag.

The next year there were reports that he would be tried for treason. As the months passed without any formal accusation Dr. Hans Frank, Reichsminister and Justice Commissioner, indicated it still would be a long time before "we can have the case fully ready for court."

ITALY OPENS WAR ON FOOD HOARDERS

SEP 28 1939

Grandi Demands Severe Penalty for Guilty.

ROME, Sept. 27 (A. P.).—A rigorous drive against hoarders of foodstuffs was ordered today by Italy's Minister of Justice, Count Dino Grandi.

He telegraphed orders to prosecuting attorneys to apply severe penalties against hoarders in such a way as to "break with the greatest energy and rapidity any possible hoarding of goods which would disturb free circulation of goods throughout the country."

A number of shops in various Italian cities have been closed on charges of hoarding.

Foreign Minister Karl Selter would return to Moscow shortly with a staff of advisers to resume conversations with Soviet officials.

(Selter, who made a hurried journey to Moscow Sunday, returned to Estonia Monday.)

It was the opinion of some observers that Russia's reported demands during negotiations with Estonia regarding possible trade and non-aggression pacts were in the nature of an ultimatum.

"Pressure Tactics"

These demands, it was said, lent credence to a belief Russia had no intention of permitting Germany to control the Baltic.

The newspaper Helsingin Sanomat expressed doubt, however, the Russian demands were in the form of ultimatum, although it said there was a suspicion of pressure tactics.

The paper declared reports that Russia had demanded that Estonia dismantle her frontier fortifications were regarded in informed quarters as unfounded.

Estonian hesitancy over acceding to Russian propositions was ascribed by sources here to a fear of new inroads for Communist propaganda and an increase in Soviet political influence internally.

U-Boat Directs British Ship to Rescue Victims

Sinks Freighter, Then Sends Another to Save Crew; Survivors Reach Brazil

SEP 28 1939

BAHIA, Brazil, Sept. 27 (AP).—Capt. Walter Penson, of the British freighter Browning, which docked here yesterday with thirty-two survivors of the torpedoed Royal Sceptre's crew, said today that officers of the German submarine U-48 told him of the sinking and directed him to go to the rescue. He said Capt. Mestie, of the Royal Sceptre, also a British freighter, went down with his ship. He asserted the sinking occurred on Sept. 4 off Madeira. (Earlier accounts gave Sept. 7 as the date.)

Penson said members of the Royal Sveptres' crew told him they did not know war had been declared when the submarine ordered their ship to stop. When the order was not obeyed, he said, the submarine fired a machine gun at the vessel and ordered the crew to leave, preparatory to sinking the ship. Two lifeboats were launched, and a quarter of an hour later the ship was torpedoed.

Penson said he was off the Bay of Biscay when the submarine, showing a swastika, told him of the sinking of the Royal Sceptre thirty miles north. The commander of the submarine ,he said, ordered him not to report the torpedoing to London.

Nine of the survivors were injured in the encounter with the submarine. James Twoway, purser, was taken from the Browning on a bed, suffering severe wounds of the right leg. The other injured were able to walk. All were taken to a hospital.

Britain Finds Inquiry on Air Outrages Impracticable

LONDON, Sept. 27 (AP)—The government informed the House of Commons today that practical difficulties were too great to try Herbert Hoover's proposal for establishment of a neutral fact-finding commission to investigate air raids affecting civilian populations.

R. A. Butler, Foreign Under-Secretary, said the government had "every sympathy" with the suggestion, but "they consider the difficulties of putting such a scheme into operation almost insuperable."

Asked if a neutral commission could not investigate the bombing of the Polish town of Krzemieniec while it contained the Polish Foreign Office headquarters and numerous diplomats, Mr. Butler replied that he did not think it necessary, "as we already have ample evidence of such indiscriminate bombing on the part of the Germans."

He referred the questioner to United States Ambassador Anthony J. Drexel Biddle's report of his experiences during the raid.

SILVER AN ISSUE IN PANAMA TALK

Mexico Raises Question of United States Policy.

WANTS MARKET STABILIZED

Republics Debate Proposal for Sea Patrol of Americas.

PANAMA, Sept. 27 (A. P.).—The question of the silver-purchase policy of the United States was raised today at the neutrality conference of twenty-one American republics.

The delegation of Mexico, which has benefited from that policy, announced that it would submit to the conference's sub-committee on American economic co-operation a plan for stabilization of the silver market.

Foreign Minister Eduardo Hay, heading the Mexican group, said he would ask for a clarifying declaration on the United States silver policy, which he said "benefits the economy of several American countries." Such a declaration, he indicated, would be a factor for stabilization.

After announcing the plan he conferred for half an hour with Dr. Herbert Feis, economic adviser to the State Department in Washington, and the United States delegation here.

Sea Patrol Discussed.

Senator Hay said in a statement that to "intensify commerce among ahe silver producing countries and other republics of the continent" creditor nations should establish methods for the acceptance of silver "in the liquidation of inter-American balances."

He said the degree of acceptability of both gold and silver in international transactions depended even more than before the European conflict on acceptance by creditor nations of silver in payment of international balances.

He said that conditions in Europe would intensify the flow of gold to this continent and make even more onerous accumulations of this metal in the possession of Central American banks.

Meanwhile delegates to the conference debated details of the proposed sea patrol, on which they apparently were unanimously agreed in principle.

Cuba Sponsored the Plan.

Some delegates said there was a difference of opinion as to whether the patrol should be regional or general. The regional proposal drew a complaint from some that it would destroy the effect of the unanimity of the American nations.

Cuba sponsored the proposal jointly with the United States, Argentina, Uruguay and Brazil, which already have an agreement to guard the eastern coast of South America, were expected to lend aid.

The suggestion tentatively called for protection of waters around the United States and South America. It included outlying islands as far north as Passamaquoddy Bay, Maine, eastward and south in the Atlantic to the Straits of Magellan, thence northward past Guadaloupe off Southern California to a point off the Pacific boundary between the United States and Canada.

Six Main Points.

Its six principal points are:

1. A merchant shipping safety zone with the United States bearing the chief patrol burden. An attempt would be made to prevent searches, seizures, commerce raiding and other belligerent action in this area.

2. A ban on belligerent submarines in American republic ports.

3. A joint representation to belligerents stating neutrality declarations of the Americas.

4. A study by an advisory committee to stabilize monetary and commercial relationships between the American republics.

5. Preservation of Western Hemisphere liberal trade policies.

6. Suppression o fsubversive activities and neutrality violations.

PLAN WOULD LIMIT CONTRABAND LISTS

SEP 28 1939

Uruguay Proposes No Items for Use of Civil Populace Be Barred From Trade

PATROL PROPOSALS BARED

U. S. Suggests Naval Cordon Around Hemisphere South of Canadian Border

PANAMA, Sept. 27 (AP)—A proposal to eliminate from contraband lists all articles destined for the civil population of warring nations was submitted to the inter-American neutrality conference here today by the delegation from Uruguay.

The proposal, which got immediate widespread attention and was expected to become one of the more controversial issues of the conference, called for a joint declaration along the following line:

"That it is inadmissable that war contraband lists include, either con or articles destined for the alimentation and subsistence of civil populations and raw materials and machinery used for peaceful industry."

The Uruguayan delegate who presented the proposal, Pedro Manini Rios, admitted there existed the possibility that these goods also might be used for the armed forces, but he said that "the elemental duties of humanity oblige us not to admit them as war contraband."

Señor Manini Rios said complications of the European war affected commerce and communications of all nations having no part in the conflict. He charged that the contraband lists were one of the principal obstacles.

Many Items Not for War Use

He said many items on these lists apparently were not for war uses, "but, on the contrary, are indispensable for the subsistence of populations and the normal developments of pacific activities, such as foodstuffs and wearing apparel and raw materials and machinery not dedicated to the manufacture of instruments of war."

This was one of the scores of resolutions offered at sessions of all three of the conference's sub-committees—those of neutrality, economic cooperation and preservation of peace.

The delegates arranged to push their deliberations in an effort to conclude the conference Saturday night or Sunday. More than a dozen measures already are under consideration for economic cooperation alone, and others are expected to be submitted before tomorrow's 4 P. M. deadline.

Most delegates agreed that there was unusual unanimity on the major issues already raised, although they expected lively discussion regarding the Uruguayan proposal and probably on details of the proposal for a cooperative naval neutrality patrol for American waters.

Other resolutions offered today provide for:

Creation of a commission of experts from all American governments to stimulate immediate construction of the Pan-American Highway (by Mexico).

The use of silver as an instrument of international payments (by Mexico).

Checking increases in freight rates and insurance rates (by Peru).

Economic and commercial cooperation among American republics (by Brazil and Colombia).

Tariff Truce Proposed

An inter-American tariff truce to increase trade, and cooperation of American merchant lines to provide transportation for increased cargoes between American ports (by Brazil).

An "inter-American financial institute" to coordinate activities of all central banks of the American republics (by Mexico).

Tomorrow the President of Panama, Juan Demostenes Arosemena, will receive all the delegates at the Presidential Palace.

The proposal for a patrol of American waters, in which the United States Navy presumably would play the chief role, was the main subject before the neutrality subcommittee. Proposals for a coastal partol of the entire Western Hemisphere to see that European belligerents refrain from activities in waters near the American Continents have been submitted by both the United States and Cuba.

Argentina, Uruguay and Brazil, who already have their own agreement to guard the eastern coast of South America, were expected to lend support to the plan. This belief was strengthened by a statement by Dr. Leopoldo Melo, head of the Argentine delegation, upon his arrival in Panama. He said Argentina had not brought specific proposals but would study those submitted by other countries in a spirit of solidarity and cordiality.

The Cuban proposal, for creation of an American "safety zone" within which inter-American commerce could flow freely, left the boundaries of the zone elastic.

U. S. Patrol Plan Given

The United States's plan, one of ten proposals submitted yesterday by Under-Secretary of State Sumner Welles, envisaged a cordon surrounding the United States and South America and including outlying islands as far north as Eastport, Maine, at the boundary of Canada, eastward and south in the Atlantic to the Strait of Magellan in Southern Chile and Argentina, and thence northward in the Pacific outside the Galapagos Islands, off Ecuador, and Guadelupe, off Southern California, to the San Juan de Fuque Straits, the Pacific boundary between the United States and Canada.

Canal Zone residents and citizens of the Republic of Panama, keenly aware of the importance of the canal, pointed out that the suggested United States patrol zone enclosed the entire Caribbean Sea and both Atlantic and Pacific approaches to the canal.

The Brazilian plan for a tariff truce, submitted to the economic subcommittee, called for a period of six months during which no American nation would increase its tariffs; study of the possibility of lowering tariffs on goods from other American countries, and a study of the removal of import quotas and licenses on typical American products from other countries. The plan also embraced liberal trade policies as sponsored by United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

Urges Navigation Accords

Brazil further urged bi-lateral or multi-lateral accords among American nations for the linking of all regular navigation lines in an "uninterrupted chain among all American nations" to facilitate passenger and freight traffic.

Foreign Minister Eduardo Hay of Mexico, who proposed the use of silver in international payments, said that creditor nations should establish methods for the acceptance of silver "in the liquidation of inter-American balances" in order to "intensify commerce among the silver-producing countries and other republics of the continent."

He said the acceptability of both gold and silver in international transactions depended now more than ever on acceptance of silver by creditors. He said conditions in Europe would increase the flow of gold to this continent and make more "onerous" accumulations of gold in American central banks.

General Hay said his delegation would submit to the economic subcommittee a plan for stabilization of the silver market. In this connection he said he would ask for a clarifying declaration on the silver policy of the United States.

One member of the Mexican delegation said of the proposed "inter-American financial institute" that it would be similar to the Bank for International Settlements at Basle, Switzerland.

DAVIS AND STAFF ARRIVE IN BERLIN

SEP 28 1939

Consul-General Fled From Besieged Warsaw.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27 (A. P.).—"Consul-General Davis and staff arrived in Berlin."

This telegram to the State Department from Alexander C. Kirk, American Charge d'Affaires in Berlin, wrote the last word to another capter in the story of the American foreign service's devotion to duty.

For Consul-General John Kerr Davis, stationed in besieged Warsaw until a few days ago, it means the end of his second beleaguerment. The first was at Nanking, China, a dozen years ago.

For more than two weeks Mr. Davis and his staff of a half-dozen American Consuls and Vice-Consuls, were under fire in Warsaw. Aerial bombs rained about them. They saw the bombing of an adjacent building from which fifty dead were carried out.

The Polish Government had left, and the American Embassy with it, but the consulate men had remained behind. They abandoned their own building and took over the America nEmbassy, which had a more secure cellar as a refuge during air raids.

After nearly twenty days of siege, by arrangement with the Germans, the foreigners in Warsaw were permitted to leave in a special train and by automobile. Mr. Davis got out in a car.

Into his long career record will go the telegram which Secretary Hull sent him yesterday:

"The courageous performance of duty by yourself and by all the foreign service oficers and clerks of your staff is in the best tradition of the service. I thank you most sincerely."

Among the foreign service officers on Mr. Davis's staff thus commended was Douglas Jenkins Jr., for whom this was also a second experience under fire. The first, like Mr. Davis's, was at Nanking. Mr. Jenkins was there when the Japanese attacked and captured the capital.

Again an Issue; How Far at Sea Does U. S. Run?

Authorities Say Territory Extends 3 Miles but It Hasn't Always Been So

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27 (AP).—The war has brought up an old question which had not been discussed much since the days of prohibition and rum-running: how far out to sea do a nation's territorial waters extend?

President Roosevelt said recently that they reach as far as American interests require. It is believed, however, that he was not speaking in a strict legal sense.

Outstanding authorities on the subject, such as Professor Phillip Jessup, of Columbia University, say that three marine miles is still the limit. They agree that one nation, by its own action, cannot change this limit unless, through negotiations, it induces the other maritime natios to consent to it.

The three-mile limit was first proclaimed officially by Thomas Jefferson in 1793 when, as Secretary of State, he addressed notes to the British and French Ministers saying:

"The greatest distance to which any responsible assent among nations has been at any time given has been the extent of the human sight, estimated at upward of twenty miles, and the smallest distance, I believe, claimed by any nation whatever is the utmost range of a cannon ball, usually stated at one sea league" (three marine miles). The three-mile limit was thereupon adopted by the United States.

But only six years later the three-mile limit, for some purposes, was extended to the twelve-mile limit through an act of Congress authorizing the exercise of certain customs control and jurisdiction within that zone.

Nevertheless, for nearly a century and a half three miles has remained the limit of the territorial waters of the United States. In the twelve-mile limit nations generally have exercised in recent times only very limited control and jurisdiction.

American destroyers are now patrolling an area 200 miles out to sea to guard the rights of the United States as a neutral. What are they going to do if they sight a vessel which they have reason to suspect is violating neutrality? Are they going to stop it, search it and perhaps seize it and its cargo? Some officials who follow international law closely do not believe this can be done legally.

The United States and other republics represented at the conference of American nations at Panama are considering how to keep belligerent activities a certain distance from American shores.

The argument may be advanced that since the three-mile limit apparently was established because it was the range of a cannon, that limit should now be extended because our sixteen-inch coast defense batteries can fire twenty-five miles or more out to sea.

Convention Votes Program of Preparedness.

BOSTON GETS 1940 MEETING

Congress Is Asked to Stay in Session Through War.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27 (A. P.).—The American Legion demanded today that the Government adopt immediately a program to provide raw materials sufficient to maintain an army and navy of 1,000,000 men for at least a year.

The report of the national defense committee, adopted by the twenty-first annual convention asked:

A navy second to none.

That the Panama Canal and its approaches be made impregnable.

A modified voluntary program of military training for CCC enrollers.

Increase of the regular army to 280,000 and of the National Guard to 486,000, their peacetime strengths, and subsequent removal of the numerical restrictions.

Formation of a National Guard in Alaska and prompt strengthening of all defenses in the northern territory.

Continued development of a vigorous aeronautical program; a ban on the export of helium gas to any country for any purpose and that none but American citizens be employed in factories making airplane parts, as a precaution against sabotage.

Robert J. Shaw of Iowa, chairman of the national defense committee, declared that the nation's preparedness "must be strong enough to meet any intended invader before an invasion begins."

The 1940 convention was awarded to Boston today by unanimous vote.

LONDON, Sept. 27 (A. P.).—Britain today levied on her citizens the heaviest taxes they ever have known to meet an estimated £2,000,000,000 ($7,920,000,000) outlay in the current financial year, greatly swelled by the costs of war against Germany.

Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, presenting his first war budget in the House of Commons, announced that the standard income tax rate for the rest of the fiscal year—ending March 31—would be 35 per cent and for the 1940-41 year 37.5 per cent.

The rates are to be seven shillings in the pound ($1.37 in $3.96) until March 31 and seven shillings sixpence ($1.48) thereafter.

Hitherto the rate has been 5 shillings 6 pence, or 27.5 per cent.

The House, without record vote, quickly adopted essential portions of the budget, putting them into effect immediately. These included the increases in the income tax and the taxes on tobacco, sugar, beer, wines and spirits.

Sir John also announced heavier burdens on persons at both ends of the tax-paying scale, lowering the exemptions at which taxation begins and raising the surtax, which is levied on incomes of more than £2,000 ($7,920).

Under the 1940-1941 surtax schedule a man with an income of more than £30,000 ($118,800) must pay 82.5 per cent on income above that figure.

The lowered exemptions mean that single persons pay tax on income above £100 ($396); married persons without children on income above £170 ($694). The allowance for each child was decreased from £60 ($238) to £50 ($198).

Only Tea Escapes Tax Rise.

At the same time Sir John levied drastic direct tax increases—as he put it, "all down the line"—on beer, whisky, tobacco, sugar, wines, death duties, income surtaxes and excess profits. The tea tax was untouched, however.

"These severe sacrifices—the heaviest which a direct taxpayer in this country has ever had to bear"—were declared by Sir John to be vital in the scheme which called for contribution to war expenses "from citizens of every kind and fortune."

But he argued:

"However serious our financial problems may be, the financial problems which confront Germany are infinitely greater."

He said the increased income taxes would produce £107,000,000 ($423,720,000) this year and £226,500,000 ($896,940,000) in the full fiscal year.

One of the most drastic levies was 60 per cent on excess profits. Applying to the whole field of trade and industry, the tax will be levied on excess profits since last March 31 over profits of the pre-war standard period.

Sir John said a capital levy was being studied but that it did not seem practicable to apply one during the war.

Rate Exceeds World War High.

The new income tax rates compare with the top at the close of the world war of six shillings in the pound, or 30 per cent. At the start of the world war David Lloyd George, then Chancellor of the Exchequer, doubled the income tax to make it two shillings six pence, or 12.5 per cent.

The seven shilling, or 35 per cent, rate for the remainder of this year will apply on income tax due by direct payment next January 1.

Sir John recalled that the total expenditure for the current year was estimated in August at £1,453,000,000 ($5,753,880,000) of which £502,000,000 ($1,987,920,000) was to be borrowed. This included defense costs of £73,000,000 ($2,890,000,000).

On the outbreak of war, he went on, the Commons voted £500,000,000 $1,980,000,000) additional credits.

"I cannot guarantee," he said, "that this first vote of credit will be sufficient to carry all our requirements as to March 31 next."

"Even if it is," he continued, "need of a further budget as promptly as possible is self evident since we shall be facing in this financial year a total outlay of nearly two billions ($7,920,000,000) and on the other hand the original estimate of revenue from existing taxes was 942 million ($3,730,320,000)."

Large Defense Loans Planned.

"This great war sets for us a special economic problem of special urgency and gravity," Sir John said.

"Nothing can prevent modern war from being a most potent instrument for the destruction of human life and wealth. Finance is sometimes said to be the fourth line of defense. If finance failed, then the prop that sustained the whole war would collapse."

He said that it was obviously impossible to pay for the war entirely out of direct taxation and that it would be necessary to make national defense loans on a large scale.

Unless funds come from taxes or from genuine savings of the people, he declared, they must come from inflation "and that is a course we must strive by all means in our power to avoid." The time has not quite come for a new national loan, he said, however.

Sir John declared that he had drawn the budget on a broad scale because "if we are prepared to face the possibility of a three-year war in other ways, we must make our plans in the fiscal sphere also."

Nowadays it costs twice as much to equip and maintain an army division in the field as it did in 1917, he said.

The Price of Liberty.

Sir John ended his budget speech with:

"If the price of victory be high, it is a price worth paying, for it is the price of liberty and all that makes life worth living for Europe and the rest of the world."

There would, Sir John said earlier, be special provisions to "mitigate the severity of the increase where individuals this year experience a substantial drop of earned income."

Where a man earned £1,000 ($3,960) last year and would normally be assessed on that figure this year, but only received £700 ($2,772) this year, Sir John explained, he will be assessed on the latter figure.

All taxes on alcoholic liquor were increased, effective tomorrow. Beer will go up a penny (about 2 cents) a pint, as it did in 1914.

The tax on spirits was increased ten shillings ($1.98) per proof gallon.

The tobacco tax went up two shillings (39 cents) per pound.

Death duties were increased by 10 per cent on estates of from £10,000 to £50,000 and by 20 per cent in larger estates.

New Surtax Rates.

New rates for the surtax, levied in an ascending scale on incomes of more than £2,000 ($7,920), will range from one shilling three pence (about 25 cents) on the first £500 above £2,000 to nine shillings six pence (about $1.88) in the pound on the portion of an income exceeding £30,000 ($118,000).

These rates are in addition to the basic seven shillings. It means that income over £30,000 will pay 82.5 per cent.

Sir John estimated that the new beer taxes would produce £11,000,000 ($43,560,000) this year and £27,000,000 ($106,920,000) in the next full year.

The new surtax, he estimated, would produce £5,000,000 ($19,800,000) this year and £8,000,000 ($31,680,000) in the full 1940-41 year.

Sugar taxes were increased a penny a pound on fully refined products.

Taxes on imported light wines will go up two shillings (about 39 cents) a gallon and on heavy wines four shillings (about 79 cents).

Other estimates of increased revenue included:

Tobacco, £8,000,000 ($31,680,000) this year and £16,000,000 ($63,360,000) in a full year.

Spirits, £2,000,000 ($7,920,000) this year and £3,500,000 ($11,880,000) in a full year.

Wines, £1,000,000 ($3,960,000) this year and £2,000,000 ($7,920,000) in a full year.

THE AVERAGE BRITON GASPED AT UNEXPECTEDLY DRASTIC INCREASES ON INCOME, BEER, SUGAR, WINE, TOBACCO, WHISKY, ESTATES, SURTAXES AND EXCESS PROFITS, BUT THE NEWS SHARED PROUD FRONT-PAGE HEADLINES ASSERTING THE HOME FLEET HAD SCORED AGAINST GERMAN WARPLANES IN A SEA ENGAGEMENT.

SEP 28 1939

"IF THE PRICE OF VICTORY BE HIGH, IT IS A PRICE WORTH PAYING," SIR JOHN SIMON, TALL, GAUNT CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER, TOLD A CHEERING HOUSE OF COMMONS AS HE PRESENTED THE WAR BUDGET.

"IT IS THE PRICE OF OUR LIBERTY AND ALL THAT MAKES LIFE WORTH LIVING IN EUROPE AND FOR OURSELVES."

DESCRIBING FINANCE AS "THE FOURTH ARM OF DEFENSE," THE CHANCELLOR SAID IT WAS THE PROP THAT SUSTAINS "THE WHOLE OF OUR WAR EFFORT."

1939

THE BURDEN ON THE POOR WAS INCREASED BY LOWERING THE EXEMPTION MARKS AT WHICH TAXATION BEGINS.

FOREIGNERS RESIDENT IN BRITAIN MUST PAY AT THE SAME RATE AS BRITISH SUBJECTS.

(MORE) WM319PES

THE ENGAGEMENT OCCURRED ABOUT 150 MILES OFF THE NORWEGIAN COAST.

ESSENTIAL PORTIONS OF THE BUDGET BECAME EFFECTIVE IMMEDIATELY WHEN THE HOUSE ADOPTED THEM WITHOUT A RECORD VOTE.

THE BUDGET PROPOSES TO RAISE ABOUT 51 PER CENT OF THE WAR EXPENDITURE BY TAXATION. THE PROPORTION WAS 22 PER CENT IN 1915-16.

ANOTHER WORLD WAR FIGURE FOR COMPARISON WAS THE 30 PER CENT STANDARD TAX ON INCOME.

SEP 28 1939

OTHER TAX INCREASES INCLUDED: A PENNY (2 CENTS) ON A PINT OF BEER, TWO SHILLINGS (40 CENTS) TO FOUR SHILLINGS A GALLON ON WINE, A PENNY A POUND ON SUGAR, A PENNY AND A HALF AN OUNCE ON TOBACCO, TAXES ON ESTATES AND EXCESS PROFITS UP TO 60 PER CENT.

SIR JOHN ESTIMATED THE NEW TAXES WOULD PRODUCE £107,000,000 ($428,000,000) DURING THE CURRENT FISCAL YEAR AND £226,500,000 ($906,000,000) IN THE NEXT FULL YEAR.

HIS INCOME TAX AIM, HE SAID, "WAS TO MAKE THE ACTUAL RATE MOUNT IN A STEADILY ASCENDING CURVE STARTING FROM ZERO AT THE BOTTOM AND REACHING REALLY DIZZY ALTITUDES AT THE TOP."

SPECIFICALLY, THE RATES ARE TO BE SEVEN SHILLINGS IN THE POUND ($1.40 IN $4) UNTILIMARCH 31 AND SEVEN SHILLINGS SIXPENCE ($1.50) THEREAFTER. THE RATE HITHERTO WAS FIVE SHILLINGS SIXPENCE ($1.10).

SIR JOHN ALSO SLICED THE EXISTING INCOME TAX ALLOWANCES. THE DEDUCTION FOR EARNED INCOME WAS MADE ONE-SIXTH INSTEAD OF ONE-FIFTH, WITH A MAXIMUM OF £250 ($1,000) INSTEAD OF £300 ($1,200).

ALLOWANCE FOR MARRIED TAXPAYERS WAS CUT FROM £180 ($720) TO £170 ($680). DEDUCTION FOR EACH CHILD WAS REDUCED FROM £60 ($240) TO £50 ($200).

THIS MEANT THAT UNMARRIED PERSONS MAKING OVER £100 ($400) AND MARRIED PERSONS WITHOUT CHILDREN MAKING OVER £170 ($680) NOW WERE SUBJECT TO INCOME TAX.

SEP 28 1939

THE WAR, SAID SIR JOHN, "INCREASES THE SCALE IN WHICH THE NATIONAL EFFORT AND NATIONAL SACRIFICE MUST BE MEASURED," ADDING THAT "NOTHING CAN PREVENT THE MODERN WAR FROM BEING THE MOST POTENT INSTRUMENT FOR THE DESTRUCTION OF HUMAN WEALTH--AND LIFE."

"HOWEVER SERIOUS OUR PROBLEM MAY BE," HE ADDED, "THE FINANCIAL PROBLEM THAT CONFRONTS GERMANY IS INFINITELY GREATER."

THE POUND STERLING, HE DECLARED, REMAINS AN ACCEPTED MEDIUM OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE WHILE "EVEN BEFORE THE WAR" THERE WERE "OVER 50 DIFFERENT KINDS OF MARKS, EACH SHOWING THE DIFFERENT DEGREE OF DEPRECIATION."

"AT PRESENT," HE WENT ON, "THE GERMAN MARK HAS NO POSITION AS AN INTERNATIONAL CURRENCY AND IS LIKELY TO LOSE RAPIDLY ITS VALUE AS AN INTERNAL CURRENCY."

EVEN SIR JOHN'S ROSIEST HOPES OF TAX REALIZATION WILL LEAVE A GAP OF PERHAPS MORE THAN £750,000,000 ($3,000,000,000) BETWEEN THIS YEAR'S REVENUE AND EXPENDITURES WHICH MUST BE PROVIDED BY BORROWING. BEYOND SAYING THAT HUGE PUBLIC LOANS WOULD BE FLOATED AND INFLATION

HE EMPHASIZED THE NEED FOR PRIVATE ECONOMY AND PROMISED EVERY EFFORT TO ASSURE THE NATION OF "FULL VALUE FOR WHAT IS SPENT."

HOW WAR COSTS HAVE RISEN WAS GRAPHICALLY DISCLOSED, HE SAID, BY THE FACT THAT WARPLANES NOW COST THREE TO SEVEN TIMES THE 1918 OUTLAY AND AN ARMY DIVISION IN THE FIELD "COSTS NEARLY TWICE AS MUCH." #

LONDON, SEPT 27-(AP)-THE MINISTRY OF INFORMATION ANNOUNCED TODAY MORE THAN 70,000 TONS OF CONTRABAND GOODS HAD BEEN SEIZED DURING THE WEEK ENDED YESTERDAY.

BRITISH (PMS BUDGET)

SEP 28 1939

BY DWIGHT L.PITKIN

LONDON,SEPT.27-(AP)-WAR AS A POUND-AND-SHILLING PROPOSITION WAS BROUGHT HOME TO THE BRITISH TAXPAYER TODAY AS PARLIAMENT GATHERED TO RECEIVE THE FIRST WAR BUDGET.

IN THIS BUDGET, TO BE SUBMITTED TO THE HOUSE OF COMMONS AT 3:45 P.M. (9:45 A.M., EST), THE CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER, SIR JOHN SIMON, WAS EXPECTED TO ASK THAT THE PRESENT TAX OF FIVE SHILLINGS AND SIX PENCE (ABOUT $1.05) ON EACH POUND STERLING ($3.96) OF INCOME BE INCREASED BY AT LEAST ANOTHER SIX PENCE (ABOUT 10 CENTS).

IT WAS BELIEVED THE LANKY SIR JOHN WOULD PUT OFF DRASTIC DIRECT TAXATION UNTIL THE NORMAL BUDGET TIME NEXT YEAR. HIS BUDGET MESSAGE TODAY, IT WAS BELIEVED, WOULD CALL FOR SPECIAL TAXES ON LUXURIES AND HEAVIER LEVIES ON TOBACCO, TEA AND SUGAR.

FIRST LORD OF THE ADMIRALTY WINSTON CHURCHILL'S MESSAGE TO THE HOUSE OF COMMONS YESTERDAY THAT THE U-BOAT MENACE TO BRITISH SHIPPING WAS DIMINISHING STEADILY CHEERED THE NATION, WHICH HAD BEGUN TO SHOW SOME SIGNS OF DEPRESSION AS THE RESULT OF STRINGENT NIGHTLY BLACKOUTS AND THE LACK OF ANY SPECTACULAR DEVELOPMENTS IN THE WAR.

CHURCHILL SAID LOSSES FROM SUBMARINE ATTACKS THE FIRST WEEK OF THE WAR AMOUNTED TO 65,000 TONS; THE SECOND WEEK, 46,000 TONS; THIRD WEEK, 21,000 TONS, AND IN THE NEXT SIX DAYS, ONLY 9,000 TONS.

THE NAVY, HE SAID, SEIZED 67,000 TONS MORE OF GERMAN MERCHANDISE THAN WERE SUNK IN BRITISH SHIPS.

OTHER HEARTENING POINTS IN CHURCHILL'S MESSAGE:

BRITAIN HAS MORE SUPPLIES THAN SHE WOULD HAVE IF NO WAR HAD BEEN DECLARED.

BERNE, SWITZERLAND, SEPT 27-(AP)-THE SWISS, ALMOST SURROUNDED BY WARRING NATIONS, ARE FINDING TIME TO WAGE A POLITICAL FIGHT AMONG THEMSELVES ON THE QUESTION OF GOVERNMENTAL INTERFERENCE WITH STATE AND INDIVIDUAL RIGHTS.

UNPRECEDENTED AUTHORITY GRANTED THE ARMY TO ROOT OUT ESPIONAGE AND PROPAGANDA IN SWITZERLAND HAS PRECIPITATED A FURIOUS DISCUSSION AS TO WHETHER THE GOVERNMENT OVERSTEPPED ITS AUTHORITY.

THE BATTLE HAS RAGED IN THE PRESS UNDER THE BENEVOLENT EYE OF CENSORS WHO, INTERESTED ONLY IN PREVENTING FOREIGN PROPAGANDA FROM INTERFERING WITH THE COUNTRY'S NEUTRALITY, HAVE DONE NOTHING TO MAKE THE WRITERS PULL THEIR PUNCHES.

SUCH IMPORTANT POLITICAL BODIES AS THE BASEL CANTONAL COUNCIL, WHICH EXERCISES ABOUT THE SAME AUTHORITY AS THE GOVERNOR OF AN AMERICAN STATE, ALSO HAVE PROTESTED.

THE COUNCIL SAID THAT THE LAW PERMITTING ARMY SEARCH OF HOMES, OFFICES, OR PERSONS, THE OPENING OF MAIL AND TAPPING OF TELEPHONE WIRES ON MERE SUSPICION OF ESPIONAGE, VIOLATES SWISS CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS.

SEP 28 1939

30.24-3673

AS A RESULT OF THE PROTESTS, THE GOVERNMENT INSTRUCTED MILITARY AUTHORITIES YESTERDAY TO BE CAREFUL NOT TO INTERFERE WITH CANTONAL POLICE AUTHORITY.

UZSOK, (ON POLISH-HUNGARIAN FRONTIER), SEPT 27-(AP)-SNOW IN THE CARPATHIAN MOUNTAINS WAS REPORTED TODAY TO HAVE DELAYED SOVIET RUSSIAN TROOPS MOVING THROUGH POLAND TOWARD THE HUNGARIAN FRONTIER.

UZSOK, POLISH-HUNGARIAN BORDER (SOVIET OCCUPATION ZONE) SEPT 27-(AP)-STORIES OF BITTER HARDSHIP WERE TOLD TODAY BY THOUSANDS OF POLISH REFUGEES, THE LAST REMANANTS OF THE TENS OF THOUSANDS OF REFUGEES WHO ALREADY HAD REACHED SAFETY IN HUNGARY.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN ARRIVED TODAY IN SMALL GROUPS. THEY HAD PLODDED OVER UNTRODDEN SECRET MOUNTAIN PASSES THROUGH 20 INCHES OF SNOW.

ONLY A FEW HUNDRED MANAGED TO GET RIDES IN PEASANT CARTS USING THE REGULAR MOUNTAIN PASSES.

SEP 28 1939

MOST OF THE REFUGEES WERE STATE EMPLOYES WHO SAID THEY WERE ON GERMAN AND RUSSIAN BLACKLISTS--THEREFORE THEY FLED TO AVOID ARREST BY THE INVADERS.

HUNGARIAN AUTHORITIES GAVE THE REFUGEES WARM CLOTHING, FOOD AND LODGING. HUNDREDS WERE TREATED IN HOSPITALS FOR EXPOSURE.

SOME OF THEM TOLD OF WITNESSING THE ENTRY OF RUSSIANS INTO CERTAIN TOWNSHIPS WHERE THEY ASSERTED THE OGPU, SOVIET SECRET POLICE,

1939

PROCEEDED TO ARREST PROMINENT BLACKLISTED POLISH OFFICIALS.

MANY SUCH INDIVIDUALS, THEY SAID, ALREADY HAD BEEN SENT AWAY IN SPECIAL TRAINS, POSSIBLY TO SIBERIA. A FEW ARE TO BE TRIED LATER IN SOVIET COURTS.

CATHOLIC PRIESTS, THE REFUGEES ALLEGED, SUFFERED MOST.

THEY ASSERTED CHURCHES WERE CLOSED IMMEDIATELY BY SOVIET AUTHORITIES PRELIMINARY TO BEING TURNED INTO MOVING PICTURE THEATERS OR SOVIET HEADQUARTERS.

SEP 28 1939

FASHIONABLE HOUSES AND APARTMENTS, THEY SAID, WERE TURNED OVER TO PROLETARIATS, AND ESTATES WERE SPLIT LOCALLY AMONG THE PEASANTRY.

FEW FACTORIES WERE WORKING, THEY RELATED, BECAUSE MOST OF THE MACHINERY WAS WRECKED AND BECAUSE EXPERT LABOR WAS LACKING.

THE COMMON BORDER BETWEEN HUNGARY AND THE SOVIETS NOW IS PATROLLED BY THE RUSSIANS EXCEPT HERE WHERE THE GERMANS ARE ABOUT TO LEAVE.

THE RUSSIANS ARE EXPECTED TO TAKE OVER AT DAWN TOMORROW.

BUCHAREST, SEPT 27-(AP)-THE SOVIET RUSSIAN MILITARY AND CIVIL OCCUPATION OF EASTERN POLAND WAS REPORTED HERE TONIGHT TO BE PROGRESSING STEADILY AND SYSTEMATICALLY WITH LITTLE OPPOSITION FROM THE UKRAINIAN AND POLISH POPULATION. SEP 28 1939

ACCOUNTS OF CONDITIONS IN THE RUSSIAN-OCCUPIED ZONE WHICH BORDERS RUMANIA GAVE THIS PICTURE, INCOMPLETE BECAUSE OF THE CLOSE WATCH KEPT ON THE BORDER BY BOTH RUSSIAN AND RUMANIAN MILITARY FORCES:

POLITICAL COMMISSARS FROM MOSCOW QUIETLY FOLLOWED THE SOVIET MILITARY INTO POLAND AND ARE REPORTED TO HAVE BEGUN IMMEDIATE ORGANIZATION OF LOCAL SOVIETS TO ASSUME CHARGE OF LOCAL GOVERNMENTS UNDER MOSCOW'S INSTRUCTION AND SUPERVISION.

IN A GESTURE FOR SUPPORT FROM POLISH AND UKRAINIAN PEASANTS, SOVIET AUTHORITIES WERE REPORTED TO HAVE CONFISCATED THE ESTATES OF ALL LARGE POLISH LANDOWNERS AS WELL AS INDUSTRIAL ENTERPRISES AND TO BE PLANNING THEIR CONTINUANCE ON THE SOVIET MODEL.

SOVIET MILITARY FORCES SEIZED ALL OIL WELLS AND REFINERIES IN SOUTHEASTERN POLAND CENTERING AROUND BORYSLAW, DROHOBYCZ AND BIELSKO FOR THE IMMEDIATE USE OF THE RED ARMY.

REPORTS FROM FOREIGN SOURCES SAID THE VACUUM OIL COMPANY'S REFINERY AND WELLS NEAR BIELSKO---THE MAJOR AMERICAN OWNED PROPERTY--WERE NOT DAMAGED.

THE POLISH GOVERNMENT-OWNED REFINERY NEAR DROHOBYCZ WAS REPORTED BOMBED AND DESTROYED, BUT BETWEEN 15 AND 20 OTHER REFINERIES WERE SAID TO BE UNDAMAGED.

POLISH OIL WELLS HAVE PRODUCED BETWEEN 500,000 AND 600,000 TONS OF OIL ANNUALLY.

SWABS WERE DROPPED IN SOME WELLS AND PUMPS DISCONNECTED BEFORE THE POLISH EMPLOYES FLED. SOME OIL WELLS WERE KNOWN TO HAVE BEEN MINED, BUT IT WAS REPORTED THAT THE POLISH GENERAL STAFF ORDERED NO SABOTAGE WHEN IT WAS LEARNED THE RUSSIANS WERE TO OCCUPY THE OIL FIELDS.

ADVICES REACHING HERE SAID SOVIET OFFICIALS WERE MAKING A SHARP DISTINCTION BETWEEN THE POLISH AND UKRAINIAN POPULATIONS, ADDING WEIGHT TO THE GENERAL BELIEF THAT THE RUSSIANS PLAN TO MAINTAIN CONTROL IN THE SOUTH BY UTILIZING UKRAINIANS.

A STRONG UKRAINIAN NATIONALIST MOVEMENT HAS EXISTED THROUGHOUT THE AREA SINCE THE RUSSIAN REVOLUTION.

AN ATTEMPT TO CREATE A UKRAINIAN STATE BROUGHT A BOLSHEVIK INVASION OF POLAND IN 1920 WHICH ENDED WHEN MARSHAL JOZEF PILSUDSKI DEFEATED THE RED ARMY JUST OUTSIDE OF WARSAW AND DROVE THEM BACK ACROSS THE FRONTIER. SEP 28 1939

POLISH SOURCES REPORTED THE RUMANIAN GOVERNMENT HAD SEIZED AND AT LEAST TEMPORARILY SEQUESTERED 14 TRUCKS AND MOTOR CARS CARRYING APPROXIMATELY HALF OF THE REFUGEE POLISH GOVERNMENT'S GOLD RESERVE, REPUTEDLY TOTALING $100,000,000.

POLISH POLITICAL LEADERS CONTINUED NEGOTIATIONS TO RECONSTRUCT THE POLISH GOVERNMENT. ONE REPORTED PLAN WAS FOR PRESIDENT IGNACE MOSCICKI TO RESIGN AND DELEGATE HIS POWERS TO A NEW FIVE-MAN GOVERNMENT TO BE SET UP IN PARIS.

DASH MATTER FOLLOW BERLIN, WARSAW FALLS.

FOR NEARLY 21 YEARS WARSAW WAS THE CAPITAL OF THE POLISH REPUBLIC WHICH AROSE FROM THE ASHES OF THE WORLD WAR.

IN NOVEMBER, 1918, WITH THE GERMAN EMPIRE COLLAPSING BEFORE THE ALLIES ON THE WESTERN FRONT, THE GERMAN ARMIES WITHDREW FROM THE CITY THEY HAD OCCUPIED SINCE AUG. 6, 1915.

MARSHAL PILSUDSKI, THE POLISH PATRIOT, WAS RELEASED FROM A GERMAN PRISON AND WENT BACK TO WARSAW TO SET UP HIS NEW GOVERNMENT.

THE CHANGE OF GOVERNMENT THEN WAS BUT ONE IN A LONG SERIES IN THE CITY'S COLORFUL AND OFTEN BLOODY HISTORY--A HISTORY THAT GOES BACK TO AT LEAST THE NINTH CENTURY.

SEP 28 1939

KING CHARLES GUSTAVUS OF SWEDEN CAPTURED IT IN 1665 AFTER IT HAD BECOME THE CAPITAL OF A POWERFUL POLISH KINGDOM.

RECAPTURED BY THE POLES THE FOLLOWING YEAR IT AGAIN WAS INVADED IN 1702 BY KING CHARLES XII OF SWEDEN. THE POLES GOT THE CITY BACK THE NEXT YEAR.

THE CITY CHANGED HANDS NUMEROUS TIMES DURING THE PERIOD OF THE THREE PARTITIONS NEAR THE END OF THE 18TH CENTURY, FINALLY FALLING TO THE RULE OF CZARIST RUSSIA IN 1795.

EXCEPT FOR SHORT PERIODS WHEN THE CITY WAS UNDER THE PROTECTION OF NAPOLEON AND THEN THE AUSTRIANS, AND IN SPITE OF OCCASIONAL BLOODY INSURRECTIONS, WARSAW REMAINED RUSSIAN UNTIL THE WORLD WAR.

FOUR SEPARATE GERMAN OFFENSIVES WERE UNDERTAKEN BY GERMANY TO REDUCE RUSSIA'S POLISH SALIENT, OF WHICH WARSAW WAS THE CENTER,--FROM THE NORTH, WEST AND SOUTH--BEFORE THE GRAY-CLAD GERMAN TROOPS FINALLY MARCHED IN ON AUG.6, 1915.

WHEN THE WAR OF 1939 BEGAN, ON SEPT.1 WARSAW WAS ONE OF THE FIRST TARGETS OF NAZI BOMBING MACHINES.

AIR RAIDS ON THE SUBURBS OF THE CITY WERE REPORTED THAT DAY.

AS THE GERMAN PINCERS CLOSED IN ON LARGE SECTIONS OF THE POLISH ARMY TO THE WEST, THE POSITION OF WARSAW BECAME DANGEROUS.

BY SEPT.6, THE GOVERNMENT QUIT THE CITY. TWO DAYS LATER A MOTORIZED GERMAN COLUMN ANNOUNCED IT HAD REACHED THE OUTSKIRTS OF THE CAPITAL. THIS COLUMN SOON WAS FORCED TO RETIRE, BUT BY SEPT.13 THE CITY WAS PRACTICALLY ENCIRCLED.

THE GARRISON STOOD FIRM, HOWEVER, AND FOUGHT OFF THE FOE.

IN THIS PERIOD THE SERIES OF DRAMATIC RADIO PRONOUNCEMENTS FROM THE CITY'S VALIANT DEFENDERS BEGAN.

THE INVADERS WERE "HALTED DEAD IN THEIR TRACKS," THE RADIO DECLARED.

SEP 28 1939

VIVID DESCRIPTIONS OF SHELLS AND BOMBS FALLING IN THE CROWDED CITY, WHICH HAD A POPULATION OF MORE THAN 1,000,000, OF CITIZENS SWEEPING UP BROKEN GLASS AND DEBRIS, OF WOMEN AND CHILDREN JOINING IN THROWING UP BARRIACDES IN THE STREETS, OF PRIESTS, NURSES AND VOLUNTEERS ENDEAVORING TO CARE FOR THE WOUNDED, WERE BROADCAST.

"WE WILL FIGHT TO THE LAST DROP," THE RADIO REPLIED TO A GERMAN ULTIMATUM OF SEPT.16 CALLING UPON WARSAW CITY TO SURRENDER.

THE CITIZENS WERE ADVISED BY RADIO ANNOUNCEMENT TO COME TO GET TTEIR RATIONS OF HORSE MEAT.

DESPITE THE FACT IT WAS THE TARGET OF GERMAN SHELLS AND BOMBS THE RADIO CONTINUED ON THE AIR, WITH SLIGHT INTERRUPTIONS UNTIL MONDAY NIGHT AT 11 P.M.

THE SUNDAY BROADCAST TOLD THAT 1,000 PERSONS HAD BEEN KILLED IN THE CITY THAT DAY BY SHELLS AND BOMBS, AND THAT FLAMES WERE RAGING THROUGH THE CITY.

YESTERDAY, FROM BERLIN, IT WAS ANNOUNCED THE ORDER HAD BEEN GIVEN TO STORM THE CITY.

DOWN THROUGH THE CENTURIES WARSAW HAS FELT THE HEAVY HAND OF NUMEROUS CONQUERORS BUT HAS ALWAYS RISEN FROM THE RUINS.

BUT IN ALL THE YEARS OF ITS TURBULENT EXISTENCE IT IS DOUBTFUL IF THE ANCIENT CITY EVER MADE A MORE GALLANT STAND AGAINST INVADERS THAN DURING THE TERRIFIC SIEGE IT HAS UNDERGONE SINCE GERMAN AIRPLANES FIRST DROPPED THEIR BOMBS ON SEPT. 1 OF THIS YEAR.

THE CITY, WITH A POPULATION OF 1,178,000 AT THE OUTBREAK OF THE GERMAN INVASION, IS ONE OF THE TEN LARGEST CITIES ON THE EUROPEAN MAINLAND. THE PRECISE DATE OF ITS FOUNDATION IS NOT KNOWN, BUT ITS BEGINNING GOES BACK TO THE NINTH CENTURY.

IN 1550 IT FIRST BECAME THE CAPITAL OF THE THEN POWERFUL POLISH KINGDOM. KING CHARLES GUSTAVUS OF SWEDEN CAPTURED IT IN 1665 AND KEPT IT FOR A YEAR WHEN THE POLES RECAPTURED IT. THE CITY SUFFERED DAMAGE WHEN KING CHARLES XII OF SWEDEN TOOK IT IN 1702, BUT IT BECAME FREE AGAIN WHEN PEACE WAS DECLARED THE FOLLOWING YEAR.

IN 1764 THE RUSSIANS TOOK POSSESSION. IN 1773 OCCURRED THE FIRST PARTITION OF POLAND. THE RUSSIANS TOOK WARSAW AGAIN IN 1794 AFTER A BLOODY ASSAULT. THERE WAS ANOTHER PARTITION OF THE COUNTRY THE NEXT YEAR AND THE CITY WAS GIVEN TO PRUSSIA.

THEN, IN 1806, WARSAW WAS OCCUPIED BY THE TROOPS OF NAPOLEON. THE AUSTRIANS SEIZED IT IN 1809 BUT AFTER A FEW MONTHS IT ONCE MORE BECAME INDEPENDENT. IN 1813 THE RUSSIANS AGAIN CAPTURED IT. THERE WAS AN UNSUCCESSFUL INSURRECTION IN 1830 AND THE CITY WAS CAPTURED, AFTER GREAT BLOODSHED, THE FOLLOWING YEAR BY THE RUSSIANS.

UNTIL 1856 THE CITY REMAINED UNDER SEVERE MILITARY RULE. IN 1863, THE RUSSIANS PUT DOWN ANOTHER INSURRECTION, MARKED BY WHOLESALE EXECUTIONS, BANISHMENT OF THE NOBILITY AND CONFISCATION OF RICH ESTATES. THE RUSSIAN LANGUAGE WAS MADE OBLIGATORY AND EVEN THE NAME "POLAND" WAS EXPUNGED FROM OFFICIAL WRITINGS.

RIOTING AND MORE BLOODSHED OCCURRED IN 1905 AND 1906. IN 1914, DURING THE WORLD WAR, WARSAW BECAME A GREAT BASE FOR THE SUPPLY OF RUSSIAN ARMIES. IN 1915 THE GERMANS CAPTURED IT AND MADE IT THE CAPITAL OF THE POLISH STATE WITH NO REAL POWER. WITH THE DISINTEGRATION OF THE GERMAN ARMY IN 1918 THE POLES SET UP THEIR OWN GOVERNMENT AND FOR THE THIRD TIME IN FIVE CENTURIES WARSAW BECAME THE CAPITAL OF AN INDEPENDENT POLAND.

FREQUENTLY IN THE FOLLOWING DAYS AND BY SEPT. 6 THE POLISH GOVERNMENT EVACUATED THE CITY. MEANWHILE FOREIGN AMBASSADORS AND MANY CIVILIANS LEFT.

BUT THE GARRISON STOOD FIRM. THE WARSAW RADIO APPEALED TO ALL CITIZENS TO DIG TRENCHES AROUND THE CITY ON SEPT. 9. THE CITY BY THAT TIME HAD BEEN BLASTED BY HEAVY ARTILLERY FIRE, AND THE MAIN BODY OF THE GERMAN ARMY WAS ONLY 20 MILES AWAY. "WE WILL NOT YIELD" SAID THE ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE CITY'S RADIO STATION.

ON SEPT. 10 THE CITY WAS SUBJECTED TO ANOTHER SEVERE BOMBING. BUT THE RADIO STATION ANNOUNCED THE NEXT DAY THAT WARSAW WAS PREPARED FOR A LONG SIEGE. THE FOLLOWING DAY THE RADIO CLAIMED THE INVADERS HAD BEEN "HALTED DEAD IN THEIR TRACKS," AND THE MAYOR SAID GERMAN BOMBS "HAVE NO EFFECT ON US."

MEANWHILE, GERMAN PLANES CONTINUALLY BOMBED THE CITY AND EXPLOSIVES FELL ON CROWDED PILSUDSKI SQUARE. THE GERMANS, ON SEPT. 11 ANNOUNCED THAT THE GREAT BATTLE WAS NEARING A CLIMAX. ON SEPT. 13, THE CITY WAS PRACTICALLY ENCIRCLED. BUT, WITH HALF OF WARSAW RAZED, THE RADIO STILL ANNOUNCED REFUSAL TO YIELD.

ON SEPT. 16, GERMANY SENT AN ULTIMATUM THAT WARSAW FACED RUIN IF THE CITY STILL REFUSED TO GIVE UP. THE NEXT DAY, BERLIN CONFIDENTLY ANNOUNCED THAT WARSAW'S SURRENDER WAS EXPECTED "IN A FEW HOURS."

SEP 28 1939

ON SEPT. 19 THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND ANNOUNCED THE FIGHTING WOULD BE RESUMED BECAUSE AN EMISSARY FAILED TO APPEAR TO NEGOTIATE ON THE SURRENDER OF THE CITY WHICH HAD BEEN DEMANDED. "THE CITY IS BEING DEFENDED WITHOUT REGARD FOR HER POPULATION," SAID THE ANNOUNCEMENT.

BUT THE RADIO AT WARSAW CAME BACK WITH THE ANNOUNCEMENT "WE WILL FIGHT TO THE LAST DROP." FOOD WAS GROWING SCARCE AND THE CITY PRESENTED A PITIFUL SIGHT.

FOUR TIMES THE CITY WAS BOMBED ON SEPT. 20. THE RADIO ASKED WHEN HELP WOULD BE FORTHCOMING FROM BRITAIN AND FRANCE. HAND-TO-HAND FIGHTING WAS REPORTED AND THE POLES CLAIMED THEY PUSHED THE INVADERS BACK.

ON SEPT. 21, THE WARSAW RADIO WENT OFF THE AIR. THE STUDIO, LOCATED IN THE CENTER OF THE CITY, A TARGET FOR GERMAN AIR ATTACKS, HAD BEEN ON THE AIR CONSTANTLY SINCE THE SIEGE FIRST STARTED. BUT THE RADIO SOON CAME BACK AND LISTENERS LEARNED THAT FOREIGN CONSULS HAD LEFT THE BELEAGUERED CITY UNDER AN AGREEMENT REACHED WITH THE GERMANS.

SEP 28 1939

THE NEXT DAY THE RADIO ANNOUNCER RALLIED THE CITY TO ITS THIRD WEEK OF THE SIEGE. "THE WAR IS NOT SETTLED BY QUICK VICTORIES" SAID THE ANNOUNCER, AFTER ANOTHER DAY OF CONSTANT SHELLING. BERLIN, AT THE SAME TIME, ANNOUNCED THAT 178 MEMBERS OF THE DIPLOMATIC CORPS AND 1,200 FOREIGNERS WERE TAKEN FROM WARSAW TO EAST PRUSSIA.

ON SEPT. 24 THE WARSAW BROADCAST SAID GERMAN SHELLS HAD SET THE CITY ABLAZE AND 1,000 CIVILIANS HAD BEEN KILLED BY SHELLS. THE STATION ASSERTED 100 HEAVY GERMAN GUNS HAD BEEN POUNDING THE CITY CEASELESSLY FOR HOURS BUT "WE WILL NEVER GIVE IN."

THE FOLLOWING DAY, THE ANNOUNCER CALMLY AND UNHURRIEDLY GAVE DETAILS OF LIFE IN THE SHELL-TORN CITY. "THERE IS PLENTY OF HORSE MEAT TO EAT" HE SAID.

ON SEPT. 25, GERMAN SHELLS CONTINUED TO HARASS THE STRICKEN CITY. THE GERMAN ARMY COMMUNIQUE, ON SEPT. 26, REPORTED THAT ITS FORCES HAD STARTED TO STORM THE DEFENSES AFTER ALL EFFORTS HAD FAILED TO CONVINCE THE POLISH COMMANDER OF "THE GRUESOMENESS AND USELESSNESS OF RESISTANCE." THE FINAL DRIVE TO CRUSH WARSAW HAD BEEN MADE IN A SURPRISE ATTACK SOME TIME BEFORE.

SEPT. 27 PROVED TO BE ANOTHER FATEFUL DAY IN WARSAW'S HISTORY FOR THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND AT BERLIN ANNOUNCED THAT IT HAD "CAPITULATED UNCONDITIONALLY." THIS ANNOUNCEMENT CAME SEVERAL HOURS AFTER AN EARLIER COMMUNIQUE WHICH DECLARED THE DEFENDERS HAD OFFERED TO SURRENDER.

SEP 28 1939

THUS ENDED STUBBORN RESISTANCE TO TWENTY DAYS OF ALMOST CONSTANT BOMBARDMENT, WITH GREAT DESTRUCTION OF PROPERTY, HEAVY LOSS OF LIFE AND SUFFERING ON THE PART OF THE POPULACE.

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

SEP 28 1939

WE MAY KNOW A GOOD DEAL MORE WITHIN A FEW HOURS ABOUT THE TREND OF THE EUROPEAN WAR, AS THE RESULT OF THE PROJECTED RUSSO-GERMAN-TURKISH PARLEY AT MOSCOW.

THIS MEETING IS POTENTIALLY THE MOST IMPORTANT POLITICAL DEVELOPMENT SINCE THE SIGNING OF THE RUSSO-GERMAN ANTI-AGGRESSION PACT WHICH WAS DRUM-MAJOR FOR USHERING IN THE CONFLICT.

WE MAY GET A BETTER LINE ON WHETHER OIL AND WATER FINALLY HAVE BEEN MADE TO MIX, THAT IS, ON THE DEPTH OF THE NEW-BORN COMMUNIST-NAZI BROTHERHOOD (IF ANY).

SOME OBSERVERS BELIEVE THAT THE QUESTION OF A MILITARY ALLIANCE BETWEEN GERMANY AND RUSSIA MAY EVEN ARISE--AN EVENTUALITY WHICH WOULD HAVE A MOMENTOUS EFFECT ON THE SITUATION AND NATURALLY WOULD BE A BLOW TO THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES.

STRANGELY ENOUGH, FRENCH PREMIER DALADIER CHOSE THE EVE OF THIS CONFERENCE TO CHALLENGE THE MUSCOVITES BY TAKING THE EXTREME STEP OF DECREEING DISSOLUTION OF FRANCE'S BIG COMMUNIST PARTY AND OUTLAWING COMMUNIST PROPAGANDA. THIS MOVE IS SAID TO REPRESENT HIS REACTION TO THE RUSSO-GERMAN ANTI-AGGRESSION PACT AND THE SOVIET OCCUPATION OF EASTERN POLAND.

SEP 28 1939

THERE IS A CONSIDERABLE LIST OF VITAL PROBLEMS WHICH DIPLOMATS IN MOSCOW AND OTHER CAPITALS FIGURE WILL BE LIKELY TO COME UP FOR IRONING OUT AT THE THREE-CORNERED CONVERSATIONS. THESE INCLUDE:

1. WHETHER THERE SHALL BE A SMALL "BUFFER" STATE BETWEEN NAZI POLAND AND SOVIET POLAND, THIS BUFFER PRESUMABLY REPRESENTING ALL THAT REMAINS OF THE POLISH NATION OF A MONTH AGO.

ONE CANNOT PASS THIS POINT WITHOUT NOTING THE SURRENDER OF WARSAW TODAY-BLACK-OUT OF A SPLENDID OLD CITY AFTER ONE OF THE MOST GALLANT AND DRAMATIC DEFENSES IN HISTORY.

MAYHAP THE RUSSIANS AND GERMANS MAY SEE FIT TO RESTORE WARSAW TO ITS POSITION AS POLISH CAPITAL--IF THERE IS TO BE ANY POLAND.

2. POSSIBLE SIGNING OF A RUSSO-GERMAN MILITARY ALLIANCE, TO BRING THE SOVIET'S GREAT ARMY AND TREMENDOUS RESOURCES INTO THE CONFLICT AGAINST THE ALLIES. HERE IT SHOULD BE NOTED THAT MOSCOW HAS ANNOUNCED ITS NEUTRALITY.

3. FORMATION OF A NEUTRAL BALKAN BLOC UNDER RUSSIAN INFLUENCE AND LED BY TURKEY, WHICH HAS DEVELOPED INTO A SORT OF BELL-WETHER FOR THE UNEASY BALKANS.

1939

30.24-3681

30.24-3681

4. MAKING OF A PACT BETWEEN RUSSIA AND TURKEY UNDER WHICH THE LATTER WOULD FORBID PASSAGE OF THE DARDANELLES (GATEWAY TO THE BLACK SEA) TO ANY NATION HOSTILE TO THE SOVIET.

OBSERVERS HAVE NOTED THAT THIS MIGHT CUT BRITAIN AND FRANCE OFF FROM CARRYING AID TO RUMANIA, WHICH LIES ON THIS INLAND SEA.

WHATEVER MAY COME OF THIS CONFERENCE, THE GENERAL SET-UP AND PROBLEMS ON HAND, ONLY SERVE TO EMPHASIZE THE DOMINANT POSITION WHICH RUSSIA HAS ACQUIRED ALMOST OVERNIGHT IN EASTERN EUROPE AND THE BALKANS.

SEP 28 1939

THE RUSSIAN OCCUPATION OF EASTERN POLAND RAISES A PRETTY PROBLEM FOR THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES. UNDER THE ANGLO-POLISH MUTUAL ASSISTANCE PACT, TO WHICH FRANCE ALSO SUBSCRIBED, THE ALLIES ARE BOUND TO DO THEIR UTMOST TO RESTORE POLAND TO ITS FORMER STATE OF SOVEREIGNTY.

THIS MEANS THAT THE ALLIED OBJECTIVE MUST BE TO EJECT NOT ONLY GERMANY BUT, UNLESS THE SOVIET UNION SHOULD VOLUNTARILY WITHDRAW, TO COMPEL IT TO DO SO.

THE ALLIES HAVEN'T CHOSEN TO MAKE AN OFFICIAL ISSUE OF THE RUSSIAN OCCUPATION AS YET, SINCE THAT WOULD BE CHALLENGING THE SOVIET TO WAR, AND THEY HAVE AS MUCH WAR AS THEY NEED ALREADY. HOWEVER, IF AND WHEN THEY HAVE DEFEATED NAZIDOM THEY ARE PLEDGED TO HAVE A GO AT RUSSIA, SHOULD THAT COUNTRY PERSIST IN ITS OCCUPATION OF POLISH TERRITORY.

MEANTIME, HOWEVER, THE THREE-FIFTHS OF POLAND OCCUPIED BY SOVIET TROOPS IS REPORTEDLY BEING RAPIDLY SOVIETIZED. THE "WORKERS AND PEASANTS" ARE BUSY DISPOSING OF CAPITALISTS AND LANDED PROPRIETORS, AND ARE DIVIDING UP THE BIG ESTATES. (COMMUNISM APPEARS TO BE SWEEPING THIS PART OF POLAND.

SO ACTUALLY THE ALLIES NEVER WILL BE ABLE TO RESTORE POLAND TO ITS ORIGINAL CONDITION, EVEN IF THEY GET THE TERRITORY BACK. A POLISH HOUSE DIVIDED AGAINST ITSELF--LARGELY COMMUNIST AND PARTLY OLD REGIME--MUST FALL.

BUT IF THE RUSSIAN OCCUPATION PRESENTS A PROBLEM TO THE ALLIES, IT IS EQUALLY A MATTER OF ANXIETY FOR HERR HITLER. UNLESS THE RUSSO-GERMAN NEGOTIATIONS IN MOSCOW RESULT IN THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A BUFFER POLISH STATE, THE NAZI CHIEFTAIN WILL HAVE RIGHT UP AGAINST HIS BORDERS THE COMMUNISM WHICH HE HAS DAMNED AND FOUGHT THROUGHOUT HIS CAREER. IF HERR HITLER WAS RIGHT IN SAYING COMMUNISM WAS A DANGER TO GERMANY BEFORE, IT IS TEN FOLD SO NOW.

RED FLEET BEING MASSED

Action Is Taken as Submarine Forces Second Russian Vessel Onto Rocks.

RIGA, Latvia, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—It was reported unofficially tonight that a pact between Estonia and Russia had been signed today in Moscow, giving Russia air and naval bases on Saare Maa, an island at the entrance of the Gulf of Riga. This would give Russia control of the whole northern Baltic.

These reports added that areas also were accorded Russia sufficient for garrisoning 25,000 soldiers.

[Saare Maa has an area of 1,010 square miles and, like the mainland of Estonia, was a part of Czarist Russia for nearly 200 years before the Bolshevist revolution.]

The island dominates not only the Gulf of Riga, but also the entrances to the Gulf of Finland and the Gulf of Bothnia, between Sweden and Finland.

Earlier reports to Riga had said that Russia was demanding naval base rights on Saare Maa and Hiiu Maa, which lies to the north of Saare Maa.

Defense Council for Latvia.

Earlier today the Latvian Government created a council for defense of the State, charged with correlating military, economic, financial and administrative activities.

President Ulmanis heads the council. The other members include the Ministers of War, Foreign Affairs, Finance, Communications and the Interior, the commander-in-chief of the army and the chief of the general staff.

Soviet Vessel Attacked

MOSCOW, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—Tass, the official Soviet agency, reported today the second attack in two days by an unidentified submarine on Russian shipping near Estonia.

The agency said that the captain of the 967-ton Soviet steamship Pioneer radioed that an unidentified submarine had forced him to run onto the rocks of Vigrund bank, while trying to enter Narva Bay, on Estonia's northern coast.

1939

A salvage expedition was dispatched to aid the Pioneer, whose crew was reported in no danger.

Russia said yesterday that a mysterious submarine had sunk the Soviet steamship Metallist in the same general region. The announcement coincided with Soviet press attacks on Estonia, accusing her of harboring foreign warships.

Soviet Fleet off Esthonia.

HELSINKI, Finland, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—Several Russian warships were sighted today making what appeared to be a search of the Esthonian coast. Russian sources here said that the Soviet fleet was ready for battle.

In other quarters the belief was expressed that the ships might be searching for an unidentified submarine which Moscow accused yesterday of torpedoing the Russian freighter Metallist near Narva Bay, on the northern coast of Estonia.

[Estonia's explanation of the escape from Tallinn, Estonia, of an interned Polish submarine was described in a Russian communique yesterday as "unsatisfactory." The communique said: "One can arrive at the conclusion that some unknown submarines have a secret base somewhere near the Estonian coast."]

It was apparent from this city, overlooking the narrow neck of the Gulf of Finland, that the activity of Russia's Baltic fleet had been increased. Linked with this was the fact that Russian planes were sighted over Estonia yesterday.

In some quarters, the increased Russian activity was regarded as a sign of Soviet alertness, at least, and possibly as pressure on Estonia because of the sinking of the Metallist.

Pact Increases Anxiety Among Baltic Countries

Riga, Latvia, Friday, Sept. 29 (AP)—Anxiety increased in the Baltic countries today with the signing of the Soviet Russian-Estonian mutual assistance and trade agreement which was reported here to have given Russia air and naval bases on Saare Maa (Oesel), an island commanding the Gulf of Riga.

The countries fringing the eastern Baltic have been tense since the reported sinking yesterday of a Soviet freighter by submarine off the Estonian coast. This concern grew today when another Russian ship commander reported a submarine attack.

Control Of Northeast Baltic

Under the reported pact, Russia would gain control of the northeastern Baltic as well as areas sufficient to garrison 25,000 soldiers.

If Russia has, in fact, acquired Saare Maa Island as a part of a general Soviet-German settlement, it could mean, some observers said, that Germany was getting compensation elsewhere for this huge concession.

Was Part Of Czarist Russia

A part of Czarist Russia for nearly 200 years before the Bolshevist revolution, Saare Maa has an area of 1,010 square miles. It controls the entrances to the Gulf of Finland and the Gulf of Riga, Latvia's ports, and is near the Gulf of Bothnia as well. The latter is vital to Swedish and Finnish commerce.

Diplomatic sources said the pact might mean that Adolf Hitler was so sure that with Russia's help he eventually will gain control of the North Sea that he could afford to turn the northern Baltic over to Stalin.

Russia is reliably reported to have at least seventy-two submarines available for service in the Baltic and northern waters and a greater number in the Far East. Recently it was asserted officially in Moscow that the Soviet Union's submarine fleet was "the biggest in the world."

As evidence of the beginning of Russian-German naval cooperation, the reported presence of the German liner Bremen at Murmansk was regarded significant.

Russ Plane Over Estonia

Concern in Estonia was aggravated by the repeated appearance of a Soviet warplane over Estonian territory—yesterday Russian planes flew low over the housetops of Tallinn, the capital—and by the activity of Soviet warships searching Estonian territorial waters for an escaped Polish submarine.

The escape of this submarine, the Orzel, last week from Tallinn started a controversy with Moscow. The Soviet called Estonian explanations unsatisfactory, and charged "unknown submarines" had a secret base in Estonian waters.

Second Ship Attacked

Today Tass, official Soviet news agency, said a second Soviet steamer, the Pioneer, had been attacked by a submarine and "forced on the rocks" in Narva Bay, just at the dividing line between Estonian and Soviet waters.

Observers who noted Soviet warplanes over Estonia and warships searching the Estonian coastline were inclined to doubt that Estonia could escape more serious sacrifices by granting Soviet Russia an air and naval base on Saare Maa.

Latvia, meantime, prepared for an emergency by creating a council of state for defense. The council was charged with correlating military, economic, financial and administrative activities.

HELSINKI--FIRST ADD RUSSIAN X X Y ESTONIAN COAST.")

IN OTHER QUARTERS THERE WERE REPORTS THAT RUSSIAN DEMANDS UPON ESTONIA HAD BEEN INCREASED TO INCLUDE THE RIGHT TO ESTABLISH A NAVAL BASE NOT ONLY ON SAARE MAA, ISLAND AT THE ENTRANCE TO THE GULF OF RIGA, BUT ON HIIU MAA, TO THE NORTH.

THESE SOURCES SAID THE ESTONIANS PROBABLY WOULD SUBMIT TO SOVIET RUSSIAN INSISTANCE THAT THE NEW EUROPEAN SITUATION REQUIRED THAT THE RUSSIAN FLEET BE A MAJOR FORCE IN THE BALTIC, ON A PAR WITH OTHER FLEETS, AND THEREFORE NEW PORTS WERE NEEDED.

(RIGA, LATVIA, ALSO HEARD THAT RUSSIA WAS DEMANDING NAVAL BASE RIGHTS ON SAARE MAA AND HIIU MAA.

(IT WAS STATED, HOWEVER, THAT THOUGH THE FEELING PREVAILED THAT THE RUSSIAN DEMANDS MIGHT LEAD TO A LOCAL SETTLEMENT, POLITICAL CIRCLES IN RIGA ADMITTED THE POSSIBILITY OF ECONOMIC DEMANDS FROM MOSCOW TO OBTAIN FAR-REACHING TRANSIT TRADE PRIVILEGES NOT ONLY FROM ESTONIA BUT ALSO FROM LATVIA.)

Moscow Gets Baltic Naval And Air Bases

Mutual Assistance and Trade Treaties Signed by Russia and Estonia

Ribbentrop Feted, Leaving for Berlin

What Understanding He Has Reached Is Likely to Affect War's Future

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW, Sept. 29, (Friday).—Soviet Russia announced today the conclusion of a mutual assistance and trade agreement with her little Baltic neighbor, Esthonia.

Tass, official Soviet news agency, said the pact was signed Thursday after four days of negotiations beginning Sunday.

Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Foreign Minister, was expected to depart from Moscow today or tomorrow with some form of agreement bringing the warring Reich into even closer understanding with Soviet Russia.

Whether the agreement would take the form of a military pact with Red Russia, formation of some new Balkan accord regulating influence in that part of Europe, or merely an extensive agreement on Polish and trade questions puzzled well-informed diplomats.

Neutrals Kept Out

The matter was terrible at sea concerning these momentous, many-sided negotiations that have been going on for more than twenty-four hours than at any time since the creation of the Communist state in Russia twenty-two years ago.

The outcome of these negotiations was seen as likely to answer the question of what course Russia would play in Europe at war.

Diplomatic quarters heard without surprise from Riga, Latvia, before the announcement here, that Russia and Estonia had signed a ten-year mutual-assistance pact giving Russia the right to air and naval bases on the strategic island of Saare Maa at the entrance to the Baltic. Foreign quarters were confident the Soviets were pursuing some such aim.

Soviet reports of a second attack on Russian merchant ships off Estonia had sharpened the belief in diplomatic quarters that Moscow was putting the pressure on the little Baltic state to capitulate to military and naval demands.

With the foreign ministers of three governments—Germany, Estonia and Turkey—here, the Soviet capital was the vital center of diplomatic activity.

Ten-Year Pact Reported

[The unofficial reports at Riga said a ten-year mutual assistance pact was signed in Moscow giving Russia naval and air bases on Saare Maa, island at the entrance of the Gulf of Riga, and according her areas sufficient for garrisoning 25,000 soldiers. The naval and air bases would give Russia control of the whole northern Baltic.

[At Helsingfors, Finland, several Russian warships were sighted making what appeared to be a search of the Estonian coast, and Russian sources here said the Soviet fleet was ready for battle. Russian planes were seen over Estonia Wednesday.]

Meanwhile, increasing indications of extremely close Russian-German relations, signifying a possible important move by the non-aggression pact partners, were seen in the elaborate attention showered on German Foreign Minister Ribbentrop. He conferred again at the Kremlin following Wednesday night's prolonged conversations with Foreign Commissar Viacheslav Molotov and Joseph V. Stalin. He was feted at a banquet last night by Soviet officials.

The reception accorded Ribbentrop contrasted sharply with that of the Estonian Foreign Minister, Karl Selter, who apepared virtually to be unnoticed. Selter was in Moscow on a second visit after a hasty flight home Sunday.

Turkish Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu, originally scheduled to return home last night, prolonged his stay. This, coupled with the fact that Russia appointed new ministers to Bulgaria and Iran (Persia), increased talk of the possible formation of a new Balkan-Near Eastern bloc. A Bulgarian air official already was in Moscow to negotiate an accord for a Bulgarian-Soviet air line.

Tass, Soviet official news agency, reported the 967-ton Russian steamer Pioner was attacked by an unidentified submarine and forced onto the rocks of Vigrund bank while trying to enter Narva Bay, on Estonia's northern coast. It was in this same general region that the Soviet government Wednesday announced a mysterious submarine had sunpk the Soviet steamer Mettalist. A salvage expedition was sent to the aid of the Pioner, whose crew was said to be in no danger.

The announcement of the attacks on the two ships came as the Soviet press attacked Estonia, charging her with harboring foreign submarines. Previously the Soviet government had made similar accusations following the escape of the interned Polish submarine Orzel from the harbor at Tallinn, Estonian capital.

Besides attending the banquet at which he was lavishly entertained Ribbentrop last night was present during part of the presentation of the ballet "Swan Lake." He occupied the one-time imperial box with German Ambassador Count Friedrich Werner von der Schulenburg and several Soviet officials. Neither Stalin nor Molotov was present.

Albert Forster, Nazi leader in Danzig before the Free City was annexed to Germany, also attended the performance. He accompanied Ribbentrop when he arrived Wednesday with a large party of Nazi aides in three airplanes.

Seated elsewhere in the theater were Alexander Troyanovsky, former Ambassador at Washington, and his successor-designate, Constantine A. Oumansky, heretofore Charge d'Affaires in Washington.

Soviet Announces Pacts

MOSCOW, Friday, Sept. 29 (AP)—The Soviet Government early today announced the conclusion of a ten-year mutual assistance pact with Estonia giving Russia the right to fortify two strategic Estonian islands and an Estonian port in the North Baltic Sea.

The pact provides for Russia to render Estonia "every assistance, including military, in the event of direct aggression or menace of aggression arising on the part of any great European power against the sea frontiers" of Estonia.

The Soviet Government announced simultaneously a trade agreement between Russia and Estonia providing for trade relations between the two nations four and a half times as great as at present, and giving Russia greatly enlarged transit privileges for her goods to Estonian ports.

The two agreements gave Russia a firm military and economic hold over the North Baltic, particularly increasing her influence over the Gulf of Riga, where Latvia's port is situated; the Gulf of Finland, in which Finland is interested, and the Gulfo of Bothnia, which is vital to the commerce of Sweden and Finland.

The mutual assistance pact signed yesterday after negotiations for which Estonian Foreign Minister Karl Selter came here, grants Russia the right to "maintain naval bases and several airdromes for aviation on lease terms at a reasonable price on the Estonian islands of Oesel and Dagoe and in the town of Baltic Port [Paldiski]."

Baltic Port is a mainland port to the north near the entrance to the Gulf of Finland.

The pact puts Russian armed formes roughly 250 miles west of where they must remain now at the head of the Gulf of Finland.

Bars Hostile Alliances

The mutual assistance pact stipulates that both parties "undertake not to conclude any alliances nor participate in any coalitions" directed against the other. Soviet fortification of her new bases on Estonian territory is not to affect the "sovereign rights" of Estonia and "in particular" not her economic system or State organization.

The pact was concluded, it was stated, "for the purpose of development of friendly relations established" by the peace treaty of Feb. 2, 1920—the Treaty of Tartu, by which Russia recognized the independence of Estonia. Estonia is former territory of Czarst Russia.

This treaty and a non-aggression pact signed May 4, 1932, "still form a firm basis" of the "mutual relations and undertakings" of Russia and her little Baltic neighbor, the pact text stated.

The mutual assistance pact is to remain in effect for ten years, with automatic renewal for another five unless it is denounced one year prior to its expiration.

The trade agreement gives Estonia the right to transport goods over Soviet railways and waterways to Arctic and Black Sea ports, and fixes the amount of trade turnover between the two countries at 39,000,000 Estonian krones.

Announcement of the two agreements came amid feverish diplomatic activities here involving countries all the way from the Balkans to the Baltic.

[Estonia, a small country of only 18,353 square miles, belonged to Czarist Russia for nearly 200 years, and Tallinn is the former Reval, in Czarist days a Russian sea base.

[At one time Estonia belonged to Sweden, but was ceded to Russia in 1721. A strong autonomy movement developed in 1905, but Estonia did not gain independence until after the Bolshevist revolution. Her independence was declared Feb. 24, 1918, and she won Russian recognition on Feb. 2, 1920, after fighting off a Bolshevist invasion.]

Number of Troops Not Set

HELSINKI, Finland, Sept. 29 (Friday) (AP).—Soviet Russia endeavored to obtain Estonia's consent to a Russian garrison of 25,000 troops in the mutual assistance pact signed yesterday, the National Coalition newspaper "Uusi Suomi" reported today.

The newspaper said the Soviets wanted the troops scattered at several points throughout the country, but when the Estonian Foreign Minister, Karl Selter, balked, Russia agreed to confine her troops to the new bases for the duration of European hostilities.

The number of troops will be set at a conference to be arranged after the pact is ratified, it was reported. The time limit for ratification is six days.

Reports of the pact here emphasized the transit privileges to Estonian ports for the Soviet Union which the agreement conferred, and its far-reaching military and economic aspects.

Von Ribbentrop Sees Stalin; Discusses Balance of Power

Foreign Ministers of Turkey and Estonia Also in Moscow as German Envoy Pays Second Visit in Month.

MOSCOW, Sept. 29, (A. P.).—In the presence of Joseph Stalin, the German Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, consulted with Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotov today, and diplomats wondered about the possibility of another quick move to shift Europe's balance of power.

With two other Foreign Ministers in Moscow—those of Turkey and Estonia—the Soviet capital was the proud center of intense diplomatic activity.

For von Ribbentrop this was the second visit to Moscow in little more than a month. On August 23 Russia and Germany confounded the rest of Europe when they negotiated a non-aggression pact.

Only a few hours after his plane landed, the German entered the Kremlin last night for his initial conference with Molotov. With Stalin sitting in, the meeting lasted until 2:30 A. M. today.

Four and a Half Hours.

The length of the first talk—four and a half hours—indicated that several problems were involved and the announcement that the conversations would continue today, after the principals had slept, indicated that decisions were still to be arrived at.

In addition to questions rising from the Russo-German partionment of Poland, most observers believed that other major issues confronted the conferees. They speculated on the possibility of some form of military pact to broaden present non-aggression ties and also on the chance of a new Balkan bloc, with Turkey participating.

Von Ribbentrop slept until nearly noon today, and had only a short time for consultation with his aids before the resumption of talks with the Russians this afternoon. Stalin planned again to participate, it was understood.

It was reported that a third Russo-German conference would come late tonight after Von Ribbentrop has attended a performance of the Ballet.

Turks May Linger in City.

Viewed as significant was Von Ribbentrop's arrival while the Turkish Foreign Minister, Sukru Saracoglu, and his aids were here for a three-day visit. Unofficially it was reported that the Turkish delegation might prolong its stay, which was to have ended today.

While Von Ribbentrop was being received with a guard of honor yesterday, Estonia's Foreign Minister, Karl Selter, came back to Moscow for the second time in three days. He received no such welcome as Von Ribbentrop's. Ostensibly he was here for the negotiation of a trade pact. However, unofficial reports persisted that Russia was making demands upon Estonia for fortification concessions in Estonian waters on the Gulf of Finland and the Baltic Sea.

Relations with Estonia were emphasized last night by a broadcast reporting the sinking of the Russian steel Metallist near Narva Bay, off coast of Estonia. The ment said that the was sunk by an unidentifi rine. Nineteen of her cre wenty-four were reported rescued.

The Soviet press attacked the once Russian-ruled Estonia, declaring that she harbored naval bases for foreign Powers. The dispute with Estonia went back to the escape of the Polish submarine Orzel from Tallinn harbor last week. The Orzel had been interned.

Estonians Called In.

It was learned that Estonian representatives were summoned to talks at the Kremlin some time in the night, but whether the conversation took place before or after Von Ribbentrop's call there it was not disclosed.

Among the persistent unofficial reports of Soviet demands on Estonia was one which said that Russia sought certain privileges in Estonia herself, possibly the establishment of a naval base at Tallinn.

The newspapers ignored the return to Moscow of the Estonian Foreign Minister, but printed front page pictures of Von Ribbentrop's arrival and also reported on the activities of the Turkish delegation.

A Bulgarian air official, Col. Baidev, also came to Moscow and some quarters connected his coming with the unconfirmed reports of the formation of a new Balkan bloc.

Two More Bases Demanded.

HELSINKI, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—There were reports here today that Russian demands on Estonia had been increased to include the right to establish a naval base not only on Saare Maa, an island at the entrance to the Gulf of Riga, but on Hiiu Maa, to the north.

These sources said that the Estonians probably would submit to Russian insistence that the new European situation required that the Russian fleet be a major force in the Baltic, on a par with other fleets, and therefore that new ports were needed.

Defense Council for Latvia.

RIGA, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—The Latvian Government created today a council for defense of the State, charged with correlating military, economic, financial and administrative activities.

President Ulmanis heads the council. The other members include the Ministers of War, Foreign Affairs, Finance, Communications and the Interior, the commander-in-chief of the army and the chief of the general staff.

British Declare U-Boats Are All Driven From Traffic Lanes About the Isles.

BERLIN, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—Supreme German Command announced today that "a heavy British cruiser was successfully attacked by one air force fighting unit," off the Isle of May, at the entrance of the Firth of Forth, off the eastern coast of Scotland.

[A spokesman for the Admiralty at London declared that this report was "all poppycock."]

The German communique said that a 550-pound bomb hit the prow of the British ship, which was not identified beyond the statement that it was a heavy cruiser.

There was no indication in the communique that the raid had met with any British reaction.

Where Is the Ark Royal?

Dealing with an attack yesterday on British naval units in the North Sea, the communique said that an airplane carrier was struck by one 100-pound bomb and a battleship was hit at the prow and amidships by two 550-pounders.

[Concerning this report the British Admiralty announced yesterday that twenty German planes attacked a squadron of British ships without scoring any hits, and that one German plane was shot down, one badly damaged and the crew of a third captured on alighting on the water.]

German radio stations broadcast a suggestion today that Britain's newest aircraft carrier, the Ark Royal, was the vessel "destroyed" on Tuesday.

"An airplane carrier of the most modern construction sustained a square hit of the heaviest caliber," the broadcasts declared. "A tremendous explosion was the result. Where is the Ark Royal?"

The 22-000-ton Ark Royal, which carries a normal complement of sixty planes, was completed on November 16, 1938, at a cost of about $12,000,000.

Hitler Offers Congratulations.

WILHELMSHAVEN, Germany, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—Adolf Hitler visited this North Sea naval base today to congratulate submarine crews returning from cruises in "enemy waters."

Announcement of the Fuehrer's visit said he came to laud the submarine flotilla for "successful trips" abroad.

Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, Commander in Chief of the German Navy, accompanied Hitler, who thanked officers and men personally and later at an informal gathering had members of submarine crews tell him of their experiences.

1939

'It's All Poppycock.'

LONDON, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—The report from Berlin that a British cruiser had been "successfully attacked" by German aircraft near the Isle of May brought this response today from the British Admiralty: "It's all poppycock."

The Press Association added that it "understands there is no truth whatever" to the report.

"The story issued today by the German radio is a repetition of a false claim made yesterday in connection with the North Sea episode," the Association said.

Nazi submarines were said in an authoritative statement today to "have now been driven from thickly dotted shipping routes" around the British coast.

"In less than a month," the statement declared, "they have found the pace too hot for them, and have retreated from much-used shipping channels and are now forced to operate much farther out in the open sea where the 'catch' is bound to be a much smaller one."

The Ministry of Information announced today that further German prisoners arrived at an internment camp in a northern industrial area. The captives were described as U-boat prisoners."

[Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons on September 15 that prisoners had been taken in British actions against German submarines; and Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, said on Tuesday that additional German submarine men had been captured.]

"Most of them wore civilian dress," the Ministry said, "although a few had retained their naval trousers and boots.

"They looked fit, but a trifle haggard. The average age was about 23 and they carried oddments of personal belongings in cardboard boxes, and when questioned by officers stood smartly to attention."

Shielding a Submarine.

An authoritative British account of the North Sea battle on Tuesday between twenty German warplanes and ships of the British home fleet disclosed today that the warships were attacked while shielding a damaged British submarine.

"Enemy bombers were able to take advantage of low-lying clouds to dive over the battleships," the account set forth. "Other airplanes flew at a height of about 12,000 feet to take advantage of a break in the clouds to deliver an attack on our cruisers.

"So effective, however, was the defense put up by the British squadron, that the German planes found it impossible to find a target."

The first attack, this account said, was a dive-bombing aimed at a British aircraft carrier, one of the vessels escorting the crippled submarine home.

When the low-flying planes first dived through the clouds toward the aircraft carrier, the account said, they were driven off by anti-aircraft fire. Then the planes from 12,000 feet altitude attacked the cruisers.

The account continued:

"British high-angle guns forced them to abandon the attack after shooting down two of their planes and damaging another badly.

"The admiral in charge regarded the attack as 'nothing very much' and did not bother to report the action until after a German radio communique claimed a British aircraft carrier had been destroyed and several hits had been scored on one battleship.

The account said that the weather "was fine with some clouds" and that "in these conditions, the bombing from high altitude was conducted from what really was too great a height for efficacy."

Test Is Yet to Come.

The British press hailed the outcome of the battle as a crushing blow to Nazi hopes of crippling the British fleet from the air. Some naval experts pointed out, however, that maneuvering battleships had yet to face a test under the attack of successive waves of large bombing squadrons.

British sources, commenting on the contention that German submarines had been driven out to sea, said: "The position now is similar to the one that existed at the end of the last war, when the U-boat menace was practically defeated."

The same sources reiterated that the German merchant flag had been driven from the seas and that German ships had been forced into refuge in neutral ports all over the world where international law forbids warring [illegible] munique's announcement that the main body of German troops in the east now was behind the demarcation line agreed upon by Germany and Russia.

The southern wing of the German Army, the communique said, in withdrawing toward the demarcation line yesterday captured 500 officers and 6,000 Polish soldiers in the region east of the San River and high Polish Army leaders, commanders and their staffs.

Goering Praises Air Force.

Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, in an order of the day to the German air force, praised the effectiveness of Germany's flyers for preventing Polish war planes from flying over German soil.

The order was headed, "Goering, Field Marshal, Headquarters of the Air Force, the Day of the Capitulation of Warsaw, September 27, 1939."

The belief was prevalent among Nazis today that Germany's war would end tomorrow with the formal surrender of Warsaw by her 100,000 defenders. But Germany further strengthened her western defenses and informed persons said that if Great Britain still wanted to fight it was up to her.

Germany was also strengthening herself politically in the east. Indications increased that the mission to Moscow of her Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, might result in closer political cooperation between Nazi Germany and her new friend, Soviet Russia.

As a prelude to a more violent struggle in the west—which could happen, German informants said, only if the Allies launched a large-scale offensive — greatest importance was attached to Von Ribbentrop's visit to Moscow.

Chamberlain on His Knees.

of Nazi politics, published a cartoon showing the British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain kneeling on the British Isles in prayer, umbrella in hand. Surrounding him were three huge military figures labeled Japan, U. S. S. R. and Greater Germany.

"The Encirclement," said the caption, "a Masterpiece of English Diplomacy."

Headlines told Berlin that "Warsaw has capitulated" and Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter said that the surrender was the "crowning" of a campaign which "will be entered in German history."

Meanwhile the mopping up of scattered remnants of the Polish Army was reported progressing satisfactorily. The number of Polish prisoners taken in the twenty-eight-day campaign was said to have increased to about 600,000.

The press proudly recorded the delivery to Rumania of eleven Heinkel pursuit planes of the latest type, calling it a sign that the German aviation industry was so efficient that it could supply not only the war-time needs of this nation but also fill foreign orders promptly.

An unofficial but trustworthy person said last night that Ernst Thaelmann, former Communist chieftain in Germany, and others associated with him had been released from prisons and concentration camps as a result of the new Russo-German co-operation. Placards and books attacking Communism have been removed from public view.

No Collective Farms Yet.

MOSCOW, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—Reports today from the White Russian and Ukrainian districts in Poland occupied by the Red army indicated that the collective farm system would not be started there immediately.

Instead, plots of twelve to twenty acres each were being handed over to individual peasants, with the cattle and agricultural implements of the landlords divided among them.

Peasants and workers were encouraged by a Soviet White Russian newspaper published at Minsk to "eliminate the Polish landowner, capitalist and officer class."

The newspaper urged increased "vigilance" against these people, declaring:

"The liberated people will find a way to put an end to the plots of the hostile Polish landowners and manufacturers."

The article praised an aged peasant who was said to have reported to the Red army the presence of a "nest of Polish officers on his land." The report, the newspaper said, resulted in "extermination" of the group.

Berlin Claims New Surrender

Says Modlin Fortress Offers Capitulation—Nazis Expect Peace Now.

BERLIN, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—The German High Command announced today that the commander of Modlin Fortress, about fifteen miles northwest of Warsaw, had offered this morning to surrender to the besieging German forces.

Modlin was cut off from Warsaw last week and the offer to surrender marked the end of a formidable nest of resistance.

That the German Army's Polish campaign was approaching an end was further indicated in the com-

LONDON LOOKS FOR NEW NAZI PEACE DRIVE

Paris Also Hears Hitler Will Call for End of War Presently.

ON BASIS OF POLISH CONQUEST

Meanwhile Bank of England Cuts Rediscount Rate From 4 to 3 Per Cent.

LONDON, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—A conviction that Adolf Hitler is working toward a spectacular "end the war" move designed to force British and French acceptance of the "liquidation" of Poland grew in diplomatic circles here today. The British Government maintained a guarded silence on the Russo-German negotiations at Moscow but many informed observers here expressed the belief that Hitler would make the talks a springboard for a "peace offensive."

[Dispatches from Paris said that the belief was expressed in well-informed quarters there that Hitler was preparing to advance peace proposals, backed by threat of a Russo-German military alliance and new Nazi troop concentrations in the west; and that it would be no surprise if Hitler made representations to France and Great Britain before the week end, asking the allies to recognize the Russo-German partitionment of Poland and bringing up the question of Germany's colonial demands.

[A refusal to consider peace on this basis, observers declared, might be taken by Hitler to justify before the world a "complete war" upon France and Great Britain—even to the extent, they said, of a dash through neutral countries in an effort to combat the British blockade.

[It was generally believed in Paris that the German Foreign Minister's trip to Moscow yesterday was planned by Hitler to create the impression that a Russo-German military alliance was imminent.]

Both France and Great Britain have issued repeated official statements that there would be no peace until the Hitler regime was destroyed and Polish independence restored.

Halifax Sees Maisky.

The British Foreign Secretary, Lord Halifax, had another interview yesterday with the Russian Ambassador, Ivan Maisky, apparently seeking light on enigmatic Russian policy.

Talking with Maisky last Saturday night, Lord Halifax requested the Russian Government to provide information on its future aims in eastern Europe. How Maisky replied was not officially disclosed. It was understood in diplomatic quarters, however, that the Russian view was that a definite statement of policy could not be expected at this stage.

Rediscount Rate Reduced.

Meanwhile, today Great Britain went grimly ahead wth preparations for a war to any length to "crush Hitlerism"—Prime Minister Chamberlain's own description of the British objective.

Unflinchingly the nation adopted financial sacrifices called for yesterday in a £2,000,000,000 (approximately $8,000,000,000) war budget submitted to Parliament by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir John Simon.

Today the Bank of England reduced the rediscount rate from 4 to 3 per cent. The reduction, after five weeks of the 4 per cent rate, was regarded as a vital step toward adjusting Great Britain's war economy.

The new rate was expected to help the Government in the heavy borrowing it must undertake to meet war expenses.

One effect, financial experts predicted, would be to enable the Government to borrow soon on bills at between 3 and 4 per cent and lay the groundwork for cheap Government borrowing generally.

There has been agitation in many quarters for low interest rates in the belief that they were too high in the world war and inordinately increased the hardship of footing the bill for that conflict.

Some experts said that the bank rate reduction would be accompanied by a Government "suggestion" tantamount to an order to commercial banks not to lend money to individuals or business organizations for non-essential purposes. This, they said, would be another precaution to assure the Government of aid in borrowing at low rates to the fullest possible extent.

Income Taxes.

Sharp declines in tobacco and industrial stocks were interpreted in financial quarters as reflecting a shock in the stock market at the burden of taxation proposed in the first war budget, submitted to Parliament yesterday. Newspaper commentators cited the budget message as a warning to Germany of Great Britain's determination.

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express said that Sir John Simon was "going to work with a meat ax" and suggested that "he would have done better to take a slice now and another later on."

The London Times commented that the effect of the increased taxes was "to reduce and even destroy many incomes altogether."

35 P. C. Income Tax.

The budget called for a standard tax of 35 per cent on income until March 31 next, end of the fiscal year, and of 37.5 per cent in the next year. The rate has been 27.5 per cent.

The new income tax set a high for peace or war. Also increased were levies on alcoholic drink, tobacco and sugar. The House of Commons cheered Sir John's assertion that "if the price of victory be high, it is a 'price' worth paying."

Loans of nearly £1,000,000,000 (approximately $4,000,000,000) are in prospect to finance the war this year. The indicated minimum budget requirement of £2,000,000,000 will be met roughly, half by borrowing and half by taxation.

Alert for Air Attack.

Some observers declared Hitler's immediate goal was to have Great Britain and France recognize a "fait accompli" in Poland and conclude hostilities with a promise of colonial concessions to Germany, or else launch a fierce aerial warfare against the British and French with the aim of destroying civilian morale.

Alert against this possibility, the Government warned that the 1,500,000 women and children now distributed through the English countryside should not return to their homes in congested cities. Stringent nightly blackouts were kept in force, pending experience in actual air raids.

Strategists who looked for Germany to follow up her submarine warfare with mass air attacks on Great Britain and France argued that Germany had not amassed her huge bombing fleet for a war of attrition—a slow wearing down of her western enemies.

The American Ambassador, Joseph P. Kennedy, again advised Americans in Great Britain to go home. It was estimated that there were still some 4,000 of them in the United Kingdom, and of this number 2,500 were said to have no urgent reasons for staying.

The Ministry of Information announced that during yesterday and last night Royal Air Force aircraft carried out further reconnaissance over Germany and the western front.

"In spite of opposition," the announcement said, "valuable information was obtained. All aircraft returned safely."

SOVIET IS WILLING TO DISCUSS TRADE PACT WITH BRITAIN

Meanwhile Von Ribbentrop Meets Stalin in Long Moscow Talks.

LONDON, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—An authoritative source said tonight that Ivan Maisky, Soviet Ambassador to London, had assured the British Government that Russia was willing to start negotiations for a war trade agreement.

This was learned while the German Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, was in Moscow, engaged in conversations which have excited a wide range of speculation.

Considerable significance was attached to the indication the Soviet is willing to negotiate with Great Britain over contraband and war trade in general, even though at the time she is conducting talks with Germany.

In authoritative quarters it was said that although Great Britain expects some "peace move" by Germany soon, no approach yet has been made either directly or through any neutral agent, such as Italy.

Blow to Allies Is Seen.

BERLIN, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—The news service Dienst aus Deutschland indicated today that the results of current German-Russian negotiations in Moscow would strengthen Germany's hand immensely in dealing with Great Britain or France hereafter in war or in peace.

The service, which has close connections with the Government, hinted strongly at a common plan of action to meet every future eventuality in Europe.

Pointing to what have been hailed here as successful German air attacks on British naval units in the last two days—although the British Government has flatly denied German claims of such successes—Dienst aus Deutschland observed:

"The military risk of the war already has been emphatically demonstrated to the English. The political risk embodies itself in the Foreign Minister's second visit to Moscow.

Prepared for Either Choice.

"Several conversations already have taken place between Von Ribbentrop and Molotov which it is said fully support the satisfactory atmosphere of the first visit and permit the weight of German-Russian agreement to be put to account in coming developments in the most far-reaching form.

"The German strength, which becomes visible through these events, allows the Reich to put the alternative of peace or war to the Western Powers once more without danger of suspicion or weakness.

"Germany is prepared for either choice."

Bulgaria Premier To Go To Moscow For Commercial Accord

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 28—An authoritative source said tonight Ivan Maisky, Soviet Ambassador to London, had assured the British Government that Russia was willing to start negotiations for a war-trade agreement.

Considerable significance was attached to the indication the Soviet is willing to negotiate with Britain over contraband and war trade in general, even though at the time she is conducting talks with Germany.

Authoritative quarters said that although Britain expects some peace move by Germany in the immediate future, no approach yet has been made either directly or through any neutral agent, such as Italy.

Bulgarian Premier To Go To Moscow For Parleys

Sofia, Sept. 28 (AP)—Premier George Kiosseivanoff will lead a Bulgarian trade delegation to Moscow Saturday, it was reported reliably today.

Political circles said the negotiations might be stretched to include political implications. The delegation will include Finance Minister Dobri Bojiloff.

Kiosseivanoff's trip will come at a time when the German Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, and the Turkish Foreign Minister, Sukru Sarajoglu, are engaged in conversations with Soviet officials believed in diplomatic circles to be highly important to the future of southeastern Europe.

Discuss Black Sea Pact

Well-informed sources here understood the Turkish and Russian officials were discussing a Black Sea pact under Soviet leadership. Such a pact, signed by Russia, Rumania, Bulgaria and Turkey, they professed to believe, would bar "foreign influences" from the Black Sea area.

Such "foreign influences," it was said, would include Germany.

Diplomats here asserted von Ribbentrop flew hurriedly to Moscow in connection with a Black Sea pact after he learned of Russian-Turkish negotiations in Moscow.

Reentry As Active Factor

They believed that such an agreement would mark Russia's reentry as an active factor in southeastern Europe after a quarter of a century.

Kiosseivanoff represents a nation which, in addition to being on the Black Sea, always has been close to Russia through racial and cultural ties.

Germany has had about two-thirds of Bulgaria's trade, with accompanying political influence. A new Russian-Bulgarian trade treaty might be expected to help break the Nazi hold.

Soviet Sends Young Diplomat to Bulgaria

SOFIA, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—Arkadi Yossicovich Lovrentiev, one of Soviet Russia's youngest diplomats, has been appointed Minister to Bulgaria, it was learned today.

The new minister, 35 years old and an electrical engineer by profession, had served since last June as acting chief of the Department of Eastern European Affairs in the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

He is a former teacher in the Moscow technical university.

OFFICIAL WORD DENIES SERIOUS PLANT DAMAGE

Announcement Disputes Germans Made Attack On Cruiser

Admitted Plane Made Thrust At Destroyer Near Scot Coast

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 28—The death of fifteen persons and injury of four others in a munitions plant explosion this afternoon in the north of Britain were announced officially tonight.

The Government tempered disclosure of the disaster with the assertion that "the material damage will not seriously interfere with production."

In other announcements it told of the arrival of "a considerable number of new German U-boat prisoners" in England; asserted it had "practically defeated" the submarine menace; and denied a German announcement that a British cruiser had been bombed off the Isle of May, in the mouth of the Firth of Forth.

Attack On Cruiser Denied

The British Admiralty denied the report of the German high command that a British heavy cruiser had been "successfully attacked" by German aircraft off the Scottish coast, but acknowledged that an attack on a British destroyer had been made in that region.

The Admiralty answered the German report first by saying "It's all poppycock." The British Press Association added that it "understands there is no truth whatever" to the report.

Tonight, however, the Admiralty issued a statement acknowledging an earlier attempt, allegedly unsuccessful, to bomb a destroyer.

Attack On Destroyer

The statement read:

"In view of the continued and reiterated misstatement of the German broadcast to the effect that units of the British fleet in the North Sea have been damaged by German aircraft, the Admiralty reaffirms that in the actions referred to no British ship has been damaged nor any casualties incurred from German aircraft.

"The report of a bomb hitting a British heavy cruiser off May Island semes to refer to the fact that German aircraft attempted to bomb a destroyer in that area at 11.30 A. M. September 27, but failed to obtain a hit or do any damage.

"No British cruiser was attacked in that locality."

The announcement of the explosion in a munitions factory gave no location of the plant except the fact that it was in the north.

An authoritative statement declared "German submarines have been driven from the thickly dotted shipping routes around our coast."

"In less than a month," it said, "they have found the pace too hot for them . . . and are now forced to operate much farther out in the open sea where the 'catch' is bound to be a much smaller one."

The communique announcing additional German submarine prisoners had arrived at an internment camp said they were confined to a converted five-story cotton mill in northern England.

They were described as averaging twenty-three years of age and "looked fit but a trifle haggard."

Internment Announced

Earlier announcements of the internment of German submarine prisoners had been made by Prime Minister Chamberlain on September 15 and by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, last Tuesday.

The Air Ministry stated that the Royal Air Force yesterday and last night carried out "further reconnaissances into Germany and on the Western front. In spite of opposition valuable information was obtained. All aircraft returned safely."

Accounts of Royal Air Force activities published today estimated the Germans were "losing on the average of three machines a day on the Western front."

GERMANY PUTS EMPHASIS ON AIR STRENGTH

Nazis Hope Thus To Be Able To Challenge English Sea Power

Also Push Campaign To Checkmate Great Britain's Diplomacy

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 28—Germany concentrated attention tonight on her air challenge to British sea power and her campaign to checkmate British diplomacy.

Adolf Hitler, in a visit to the Wilhelmshaven naval base, gave his personal attention to the submarine and air forces which Germany asserts have been successful in damaging the powerful British fleet.

The diplomatic offensive against Britain was being carried on by Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop in Moscow under conditions which his understudies at the Berlin Foreign Office said were highly favorable.

Expect To Freeze Out Britain

Informed quarters intimated von Ribbentrop would come home with an accord not only freezing England out of eastern Europe but affecting English interest in far-flung quarters of the world.

The supreme army command, announcing for the second day a success for its air force, said a "heavy British cruiser was successfully attacked off the Isle of May" at the mouth of the Firth of Forth.

With Grand Admiral Erich Raeder at his side, Hitler met and congratulated the crews of submarines which had returned from "successful expeditions."

Later the Führer gathered the officers and men around him to hear a recital of their adventures.

Planes Vs. Warships

The offensive against England is raising the question of how effective planes can be against heavily armored surface vessels, and German aviators and submarine commanders have been vying to prove the effectiveness of their weapons.

Hitler was described as intensely interested in the matter while German opinion on the whole was moving, on the basis of official German reports of sea successes, toward the belief that Germany has the means of challenging Britain's sea premacy.

German naval circles studied the official report that a British aircraft carrier was hit by a 1,100-pound bomb Tuesday in the North Sea. Official quarters asked whether the vessel was the Ark Royal, Britain's newest aircraft carrier.

14 Planes Made Attack

German naval sources declared fourteen German planes made the attack and all returned to their bases.

Von Ribbentrop's Moscow visit was reported in Germany to be proceeding "speedily and effectively."

"I would not be surprised if negotiations were concluded as early as tomorrow," an associate of the Foreign Minister said.

With Hitler away, no one in Berlin seemed to be informed of details of the negotiations but the expectation grew that a formal accord, probably with military features, would be the result.

Questions as to whether Poland would be wiped out completely by partition and what attitude Germany and Soviet Russia would take toward the Balkans remained without authoritative answers.

Germans were saying, however, that both Rumania and Turkey had been drawn from the British sphere of influence. They said satisfaction with the course of the Bucharest Government was indicated by the fact the German Heinkel works had delivered eleven warplanes to Rumania.

Moscow-Berlin-Tokio Alliance Seen by Nazis

'Das Schwarze Korps' Pictures 'Encirclement' of Britain

BERLIN, Sept. 28 (AP).—Today's issue of "Das Schwarze Korps," organ of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's Schutz Staffel (Elite Guard), indicated the possibility of a military alliance among Germany, Russia and later, Japan.

The newspaper, closely connected with the highest Nazi quarters and frequently regarded as a prophet of Nazi politics, published a cartoon showing Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain kneeling on the British Isles in prayer, umbrella in hand.

Surrounding him were three huge military figures labeled Japan, U. S. S. R. and Greater Germany.

"The encirclement," said the caption, "a masterpiece of English diplomacy."

In this connection, some German sources saw as "highly significant" the visit to the Western Front of the former Japanese War Minister, Gen. Count Juichi Terauchi, and a group of high Japanese staff officers.

Terauchi, who was shown through the Western fortifications, previously had conferred with Hitler while Der Fuehrer was with the German forces in Poland and saw the Nazi armies in action in the East.

French Advance Near Moselle

High Command Reports Prisoners Taken—German Attack Is Repulsed.

PARIS, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—The French High Command announced tonight that "a local attack by our troops in the region just to the east of the Moselle was carried out favorably."

"We took some prisoners," the communique added.

The morning communique read: "Calm night along the entire front. An enemy attack west of Saarbruecken failed.

"On the sea commercial navigation resumed its regular rhythm, thanks to the organization of convoys and aerial and naval patrols.

"During the afternoon of September 27 our aviation and British aviation, operating together, shot down several German fighting planes.

"Our scouting aviation was active during the night."

Although the exact location of the repulsed German attack was not specified, it was believed here that the communique referred to the region near Forbach, where the Maginot and Siegfried lines dip toward the southwest.

Military dispatches reported that French scouting planes had carried out successful reconnaissance flights far into the interior of Germany. The French airmen went "as far as possible" eastward, flying over railroads and highways to observe German troop movements behind the western front, these dispatches said.

Heavy Artillery Fire.

To strengthen his hand, Hitler was reported here to be speeding the concentration of troops from the Polish campaign on the western front. Advices here said that hundreds of German pilots who saw active service in Spain and Poland were being rushed to the Siegfried Line to augment thousands of infantrymen already withdrawn from the east.

French infantry was said to have done little during the past few days except take cover from heavy artillery fire.

Dispatches said that the French bombardment had definitely broken the Siegfried Line in some advanced positions, and that three straight underground Maginot defenses were said to have been removed by early advances into German territory.

While the war in the west is not yet a month old, reports published here said that the French and British were satisfied that their armaments were superior to Germany's.

Nazi Air Force.

The Nazi air force, it was said, had not lived up to expectations in battles over the Rhine and the northern end of the front, where Allied planes at times fought against odds. These reports acknowledged, however, that the allied pilots have yet to face the full strength of Germany's seasoned airmen, such as the Spanish Condor Legion and the Polish campaign veterans.

German communiques on Anglo-French air force losses were termed exaggerated. The French said that their own losses as well as victories had been closely investigated, and that the General Staff had been careful not to place itself in the position of "boasting."

Presumably the French were using some of their American-built planes on the western front, but no details concerning their performance were available.

French reports said that their anti-tank guns in the Saar region had proved effective against German equipment. The success of German mechanized units in Poland was attributed to the Poles' lack of defensive equipment and their inexperience in defending a long frontier.

French tanks were described as more heavily armored, better equipped offensively and as much as 30 per cent faster than the Germans'.

Eyes On Washington.

While concern centered chiefly on the Russo-German talks in Moscow, Paris also manifested considerable interest in the current debate on neutrality legislation in the United States. One French writer in Le Petit Parisien referred to the debate as a "pacifist marathon". He pointed to the "strange phenomenon" of opposing congressional leaders urging that the country stay out of war, but accusing each other of trying to drag it in.

"One would say," the commentator declared, "that these leaders wish to hypnotize themselves on the idea of peace and cry it to the winds in order to give themselves courage to defend it against their own convictions.

"One is tempted to conclude that American opinion, in seeking to array itself against the blinding light of realities, feels—and apprehends—that this war could one day impose itself on America as an unavoidable necessity commanded by the need of self-preservation."

Berlin's Statement.

BERLIN, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—The German High Command said today that on the western front "there were no noteworthy fighting activities," but it did announce that "one enemy plane" had been brought down in an air fight over Saarbruecken.

Counter-Attacks Broken.

BASLE, Switzerland, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—French counter-attacks during the night were reported today to have driven back the Germans who yesterday advanced east of Wissembourg in a thrust aimed at an important railroad junction. Attacked on three sides, the Germans were said to have suffered heavy losses as they fell back to the French frontier village of Altenstatt, near the Lauter River.

The Nazi advance, these reports said, carried to the slopes of Geisberg Hill, where a French army was defeated by the Germans in 1870. There the Germans attempted to dig in, but were caught between attacks from Fort Wissembourg on the east, Geisberg Hill on the south and Wissembourg itself on the west.

Although the number of troops actually engaged in the action was said to be small, observers here believed it represented an important German setback. The junction which they had apparently sought to capture is the point at which three railroad lines—from Lauterbourg, Landau and Hagenau—converge before entering Wissembourg.

Tried French Tactics.

The scene of the fighting was the triangle formed by the junction of the Rhine and Lauter rivers, near the center of the western front. Between the lines stands a high monument, topped with a cross, erected by the Germans during their occupation of Alsace in 1870 in memory of their Third Army Corps.

The Germans apparently employed in this sector the tactics the French had used in the Blies and Mandel Creek thrusts—but with less success. These tactics called for reliance on small, compact patrols—the only course open to the Germans, it was said, in a region marked by numerous French machine-gun emplacements and pill boxes.

Despite the reported French successes during the night, German pressure in the Wissembourg area was by no means ended, dispatches indicated. Within the last two days the Nazis were reported to have recaptured positions along the Fischbach-Bundenthal Road, west of Wissembourg, restoring contact between the outer Siegfried Line defenses at Fischbach and Ludwigs-Winkel with the upper Mundat Forest. The latter is east and northeast of Wissembourg.

Studded With Night Fights.

The Germans were also reported to have stormed and captured a high hill straddling the frontier still near Wissembourg on the northeast. The hill commands the French forest village of Neudoerfel.

The western front from the Moselle River east of the Vosges foothills was reported studded with night patrol actions. In the Nied Creek area, which had been quiet since the French gained portions of a high plateau between the Nied and the Saar, the Germans were said to have launched an attack, but the outcome was in doubt.

Increasing German aggressiveness indicated to observers here that the Nazis had available considerably more than the thirty original divisions (300,000 to 360,000 men) which guarded the western front during the first two days of the war.

Despite casualties of the Polish campaign, it was reported that the Germans had twenty or twenty-five divisions in the east which could eventually be thrown into action against the French and British. Hundreds of German tanks no longer needed in Poland were reported to have arrived recently by train at Landau, behind the center of the western front. Prisoners captured in Poland were said to have been organized into labor battalions and put to work on fortifications near Oldeburg in the southeast and along the Moselle River in the northeast.

FRENCH REPORT NEW FOOTHOLD NEAR MOSELLE

Communique Tells Of Advance In North—Day's Only Fighting

Pigs Pictured In Dual Military Role Of Mine Rooters And Barbecue

[By The Associated Press]

Paris, Sept. 28—The French general staff tonight reported a successful attack near the Moselle against German forces.

A general staff communique said an undisclosed number of prisoners were taken in the attack which inched into the German-held area along the eastern bank of the Moselle river, near the French and Luxembourg borders at the extreme northern end of the Western front.

On the sea, the high command's communique said, commercial navigation had "resumed its regular rhythm, thanks to the organization of convoys and aerial and naval patrols."

Slowed To A Standstill

The French advance in the Moselle sector was the only fighting which today broke the ground troops' calm on the Western Front where movements generally have slowed to a standstill.

The French communique announcing the poilus' attack was carried out "favorably" apparently meant they had passed the German frontier post of Perl, which they have been holding for more than a week.

From there it was believed by observers they had advanced along the tracks of the main-line railroad paralleling the Moselle river to Besch. Besch is three miles beyond Perl, and just across the Moselle from Luxembourg. High ground starts rising east of the outskirts of the little town.

Hampered By Cold Wind

Approximately a battalion—some 400 or 500 men—launched the attack from lines which the French had captured two weeks ago.

A heavy artillery barrage preceded the attack and rolled forward as French pressure made itself felt.

While part of the battalion made its way along the railroad toward Besch, one company struck east up the highway which runs to Borg.

A cold win blowing around makeshift barbed wire made the task of the advance line units no easier.

They hugged the trees for shelter from the wind and burrowed among leaves for a warm nest in which to place their machine guns.

Early winter weather was falling on the troops in the open country.

Pigs Used To Root Up Mines

The French tonight were reported to be using pigs to explode land mines left in their bath by the Germans.

A dispatch in the newspaper Paris Soir, said the soldiers rounded up pigs from neighboring farms, and drove them in front of the advance guards. The shoats, nosing through the underbrush and forest-covered slopes, rooted up the mines and cleared the way for the troops.

What was left of the pigs was passed back to the company chefs.

One Nocturnal German Attack

Except for one German attack reported in today's morning communique against a French advance post to the west of Saarbrücken, quiet was said to have prevailed last night.

Advices from the front said in this encounter a German patrol numbering about fifty men attempted to capture a small hilltop from which the French were reported to command the western quarters of Saarbrücken.

The French said the Germans, attacking through a wood which borders the German village of Gersweiler, were "nailed down" by short-range fire from 75-millimeter (3-inch) guns and machine-gun nests. They said the attackers were forced to crawl back to their blockhouses, leaving many wounded.

SAAR DEFENSES CAMOUFLAGED

What Looks Like Gas Station Is a Machine Gun Nest.

FORTIFICATIONS EVERYWHERE

Germans Convinced the French Cannot Break Their Wall.

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

WITH THE GERMAN ARMY ON THE WESTERN FRONT, Sept. 27 (Delayed).—Camouflaging has become a fine art in the Saar sector of Germany's powerful west wall.

You approach a bridge, for instance, and see a gasoline filling station with all normal equipment just before you.

But before you go onto the bridge you see it isn't a filling station at all. If you look closely enough, you see machine-guns pointing ominously at you from behind a facade that hides a pill box.

You see a group of trim little houses built in native Saarland style near an industrial plant.

You take it for granted they are intended for company employees. Then you come closer and see that windows and curtains simply have been painted against armor plate.

Your eye travels up the beautiful slope of a valley and you see a green and white peasant's home.

But strong field glasses show guns of various caliber protruding from the windows.

Tavern Hides Guns.

You notice a neat little tavern with a blackboard outside advertising your favorite wine.

On closer investigation, it isn't a tavern at all—it's a miniature fort.

You go into the beautiful forests in which the Saar region abounds. Logs on a slope seem to lie ready for hauling.

As a matter of fact, they are connected by barbed wire entanglements and make a formidable construction.

You penetrate further into the interior of the forest and see heaps of dried twigs and branches piled up by a forester.

Beneath them you discover huge boxes of ammunition.

Less than a mile from the French at Saarbruecken, several hundred camouflaged bunkers and other defense stands have been built. Their steel plating is about six inches thick and their concrete walls six to twelve feet thick.

To the layman, the word of Fuehrer Hitler that "the west wall is unconquerable" assumes a new meaning as he inspects the defenses against possible French attack.

Fortifications Everywhere.

They are infinitely more numerous than those against Belgium and Luxembourg. One finds them everywhere, even on the square opposite the village church. The banks of the Saar River are profusely studded with them.

Building and strengthening of fortifications continues all the time.

Pioneers (engineer corps) and civil labor service work together and openly, even though they are within sight of the French, for nothing seems to happen to disturb them.

They have ceased to worry about the French. They say they are convinced that no enemy can penetrate their wall.

With similar unconcern, families go back to abandoned towns and villages to fetch their belongings while factories and plants send big trucks every day to cart away stocks and machinery.

were stretching themselves out lazily in the warm, autumnal sunshine.

They and other men on duty certainly must have seen the general, his adjutant, several colonels, lieutenant colonels, captains and lieutenants guiding our party of six journalists.

Yet they made no attempt to shoot. In fact, the general said on the previous day he stood atop his bunker in full uniform and for five minutes watched the enemy across the river with field glasses but nothing happened.

Camaraderie Along Rhine

Two German soldiers on duty told me one of their comrades had received a ham from home and that he waved it at the French.

They said the poilus called out: "Wish we had something like that."

The soldiers said the French then knocked some pears and apples off trees on their side and made a gesture that they were willing to swap some fruit for a piece of the ham.

Sometimes, these German soldiers said, the Frenchmen gave the Hitler salute in fun, at other times clenching their fists in the Communist greeting.

Horseplay And Jokes

One stock phrase of theirs is niz la guerre (no war) and another is nous voulons la paix (we want peace).

On the other side of the French bunker opposite us I read in big white letters in German: "It is forbidden to paste advertisements here." Underneath was a cartoon of Hitler.

The German soldiers said that one day the poilus called across to them: "Has your Hermann Goering (Field Marshal and Air Minister) become any thinner?"

Such is the war in this sector of the West Wall.

The commanding general told us the French fired a few desultory shots from machine guns about once a week but at no time in these twenty-eight days have the Germans under his command returned a single shot.

No artillery has been used by either side in this Rhine sector.

Plenty Of Artillery

That the Germans have plenty of artillery available was shown us today. We inspected one artillery position after another beginning with "heavy guns" then increasing in size the farther we came away from the frontier until the climax was reached twenty miles from the border.

There we saw gigantic cannon capable, we were told, of catapulting deadly loads for incredible distances.

If it was true that we saw at least twice as many fortifications, pillboxes, concrete and steeel obstructions, barbed-wire entinglements and mines in the Saar region than on the German-Belgian and German-Luxembourg frontiers, it equally is true that the Rhine valley again is doubly fortified compared with the Saar valley.

Bunkers Every 50 Feet

Here along the Rhine one encounters bunkers every fifty feet. Also, we saw many devices in this section of the West Wall that we had not observed anywhere else.

For instance, there are deep canals artificially constructed so as to drown any tank or armored car that might break through the Nazi obstructions and bunker turrets.

At a certain point three-inch-wide steel contraptions, looking like the ribs of an ocean liner, had been planted into the scenery in such a way that tanks and armored cars must run into them and turn a complete somersault.

Hidden Defenses Everywhere

They were hidden so that an approaching enemy could not notice them until it was too late.

The German army considers the Rhine valley to be the most important strategically of all sections of Germany. Hence the fortifications here not only stud the banks of the Rhine but extend far backward.

There isn't a farm in the whole Rhine valley that hasn't some hidden bunker, observation stand or anti-aircraft stand.

Lochner Assured Nazis' Superguns Won't Bark Unless French Or British Bombard German Towns

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

Associated Press Correspondent

With the German Army on the Western Front, Sept. 28—This afternoon I stood only 50 yards away from a French bunker, yet no French soldier made the slightest move to shoot at me.

What is more, no French soldier shot at the generals with broad red coat lapels and red trouser stripes standing next to me.

The Rhine river separated us as I, standing next to a German bunker, calmly observed life on the French side.

A few hours later I stood beside a cannon of "greatest caliber" which, I was told, can fire at an object farther than anything hitherto known to artillery.

To Be Used Only In Case—

But again I was assured, as so often in the past three days during this tour of German Siegfried fortifications, that the giant would be put into action only in case the French or English bombarded German towns.

Standing on the right bank of the upper Rhine I saw one French soldier leisurely fishing, another riding away from his bunker on a bicycle to some point farther inland. Two other poilus

Warsaw Now City of Tragedy; Radio Wave Length Is Silent

Escaped Flyer Says Capital Is Horrible Sight With Hardly a Building Intact and Dead Buried in Parks.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—Except for strange, sputtered signals, the wave length of the Warsaw radio was silent today. Apparently the station's epic tale was told, ended on the same defiant note it struck during the twenty days it told the outside world of German siege.

Its last message, broadcast at 3 P. M. (10 A. M., Eastern daylight time) yesterday, was a new challenge to the Nazi besiegers:

"We will never give in while one of us is alive."

But last night the Polish Telegraph Agency carried a dispatch dated Warsaw, which indicated that defense of the Polish capital had been abandoned.

German announcements said the city had capitulated unconditionally and would surrender formally tomorrow.

From the picture painted by the radio announcers and by a Polish Army flyer who escaped through a barrage of German shells, Warsaw gave up only after it had become a city of ruin and tragedy.

The flyer, Lieut.-Col. Mateus Izycki, who flew out of Poland last Monday, told of an ever-deepening black pall of smoke over Warsaw.

Bury Dead in Parks.

In a husky voice that dropped to a whisper, he told of starvation, of incessant rumblings of siege guns, of civilians creeping from cellars during lulls in artillery fire and between air raids to bury their dead in parks and public places.

"From the air the city is a horrible sight," he said. "Hardly a building is intact.

"The city is ringed by six divisions of German soldiers whose artillery is pouring in shells unceasingly, aided by an average of 200 raiding planes a day.

"Warsaw is a city where from forty to sixty new fires start daily from incendiary bombs. Only small fires can be handled; the big ones are left to burn.

"It is a city where priests say mass in wrecked churches; a city of never-ending bedlam where heavy bombs go crashing through four or five floors and topple an entire building.

Some Life in Street.

"There's a no-man's-land strewn with dead men, women and horses. There's some life in the streets, for the city must live, but old people and children never leave their cellar refuges."

Col. Izycki said Warsaw's defenders could rest when the Germans took time out for lunch, but otherwise the bombardment was steady and methodical, striking every section of the city.

"I had room in the Bristol Hotel," he related. "One day I went there to find my room had disappeared in a mass of ruins.

"All hospitals have been hit or destroyed and practically all medical aid is administered on the spot. In many instances there was nothing to do but watch those die who were seriously wounded.

"At times the wounded had to be thrown from burning houses to the street below, even though they suffered additional broken bones."

Col. Izycki said the Poles found pamphlets on some captured Germans "promising them that by Christmas, Nazi Propaganda Minister Goebbels would speak to them from London."

Says Comrades Take Air.

He said he and six other Polish aviators made a dash from Warsaw to save the last seven planes left in the city. He told of watching the others roar out from hiding places between houses near the airfield and climb into the air.

That was the last he saw of his comrades.

While Polish soldiers attacked the Germans to distract their attention, Col. Izycki said he took off in an instruction plane which had been reassembled under a constant threat from German machine guns.

"Tracer bullets whined all around me," he said. "I went to 9,000 feet with my machine guns ready and only gasoline for an hour and a half of flying.

"I glided long distances to save fuel. I had no maps and only knew that I was in Hungary when I came down low and saw the peasant costumes."

CHRONOLOGY OF SIEGE

By Associated Press

A new chapter in the turbulent history of Warsaw, which twenty-one years ago became for the third time in two centuries the capital of an independent Poland, has ended with German announcement of the city's unconditional capitulation to German siege.

The following is a day-by-day chronology of the siege:

Sept. 8.—Swift motorized German units enter suburban Praga; Warsaw radio, beginning series of dramatic broadcasts, tells of hand-to-hand fighting and calls upon populace to resist "to last man."

Sept. 9.—City reported completely surrounded; radio tells of constant bombing, but says "we will not yield."

Sept. 10—Day-long series of air raids blasts city; German tanks, attacking "in droves," are said to have been driven back.

Sept. 11—Radio declares attackers "halted dead in tracks." Motorized German column reported forced to withdraw from suburbs.

Announce Fall Imminent.

Sept. 12—Germans announce city's fall is imminent.

Sept. 13—Warsaw radio reports Germans again hurled back; lull in air raids noted, with half of city said to be in ruins.

Sept. 14 — First autumn rains cause rejoicing as defenders believe German attack may bog down; Mayor Starzynski, in daily broadcast, says morale is still "excellent."

Sept. 15—German air raids continue despite bad weather; Nazi troops again reported converging on Praga from three sides.

Sept. 16—German High Command issues ultimatum demanding surrender of Warsaw and giving civilian population twelve hours to flee.

Sept. 17.—Warsaw ignores German ultimatum; defenders reinforced by 40,000 to 50,000 troops under Gen. Bartnowski, fighting way into city from east.

Sept. 18.—Attack resumed; Germans predict fall within a few hours; Warsaw radio goes off air suddenly while broadcasting defiance.

Sept. 19.—Radio returns to air with assertion "we will fight to last drop of blood"; food supplies reported growing scarce.

Report Nazis Driven Back.

Sept. 20.—Germans are reported driven back by cavalry counter-attack; broadcasters say wounded horses are butchered to feed population.

September 21—Warsaw radio again off air after broadcasting grim story of bombing and shelling exceeding everything that has gone before.

September 22—Seventy German planes are reported to have taken part in raids on city; radio, resuming broadcasts through interference from Nazi station, says German armored car attack repulsed.

September 23—Col.-Gen. Baron Werner von Fritsch, former commander-in-chief of German Army, is reported killed in action before Warsaw.

September 24—Radio reports capital ablaze under continuous shelling with 1,000 civilians killed in past twenty-four hours.

September 25—Artillery again hammers city; situation is becoming critical, but Warsaw radio, still defiant, says, "plenty of horse meat left to eat."

Sept. 26—German communique says efforts failed to convince Poles of "uselessness of resistance" and announces final assault on defenses.

Sept. 27—German high command announce city has capitulated unconditionally, formal surrender set for Sept. 29; Warsaw radio declares "we will never give in while one of us is alive;" Polish telegraph agency carries Warsaw dispatch saying defense command indicated "resistance had been abandoned."

Sept. 28—Warsaw radio is silent.

Measure Amended To Let U. S. Planes Land on British Soil

Washington, Sept. 28 (AP)—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved today the Administration neutrality bill to permit the sale of American armaments to belligerent nations.

Senate debate on the measure is scheduled to start Monday.

The bill was approved after a three-hour session. It would repeal the existing embargo on arms to belligerent countries.

Belligerents would be required to take title to all armaments and all other goods purchased in this country before they were shipped, however, and would have to carry the purchases home in their own vessels.

Sponsors of the measure claim these provisions would serve to put all sales to warring countries on a virtual "cash-and-carry" basis.

The committee's final action on the measure came after development of a contoversy which threatened for a time to delay approval until tomorrow.

PASSED BY 16 TO 7 VOTE

Senator Borah of Idaho, ranking Republican member of the committee, announced the vote as 16 to 7. He said several of those voting for the measure did so to get it to the Senate floor for debate. They reserved the right to oppose it later.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley of Kentcky said the committee had agreed to an amendment to permit American planes to land and refuel at their bases in the Western Hemisphere, even if the bases were situated on belligerent territory. This would apply to commercial airlines to Canada, Bermuda and the West Indies, all British colonies.

RESTRICTIONS ON USE OF AMERICAN PORTS.

Section 10. (A) Whenever, during any war in which the United States is neutral, the President, or any person thereunto authorized by him, shall have cause to believe that any vessel, domestic or foreign, whether requiring clearance or not, is about to carry out of a port of the United States, fuel, men, arms, ammunition, implements of war, or other supplies to any warship, tender, or supply ship of a belligerent State, but the evidence is not deemed sufficient to justify forbidding the departure of the vessel as provided for by Section 1, title V, chapter 30, of the act approved June 15, 1917 (40 stat. 217, 221; U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 18, section 31), and if, in the President's judgment, such action will serve to maintain peace between the United States and foreign States, or to protect the commercial interests of the United States and its citizens, or to promote the security or neutrality of the United States, he shall have the power and it shall be his duty to require the owner, master, or person in command thereof, before departing from a port of the United States, to give a bond to the United States, with sufficient sureties, in such amount as he shall deem proper, conditioned that the vessel will not deliver the men, or any part of the cargo, to any warship, tender, or supply ship of a belligerent State.

(B) If the President, or any person thereunto authorized by him, shall find that a vessel, domestic or foreign, in a port of the United States, has previously cleared from a port of the United States during such war and delivered its cargo or any part thereof to a warship, tender, or supply ship of a belligerent State, he may prohibit the departure of such vessel during the duration of the war.

SUBMARINES AND ARMED MERCHANT VESSELS.

Sec. 11. Whenever, during any war in which the United States is neutral, the President shall find that special restrictions placed on the use of the ports and territorial waters of the United States by the submarines or armed merchant vessels of a foreign State, will serve to maintain peace between the United States and foreign States, or to protect the commercial interests of the United States and its citizens, or to promote the security of the United States, and shall make proclamation thereof, it shall thereafter be unlawful for any such submarine or armed vessel to enter a port or the territorial waters of the United States or to depart therefrom, except under such conditions and subject to such limitations as the President may prescribe. Whenever, in his judgment, the conditions which have caused him to issue his proclamation have ceased to exist, he shall revoke his proclamation and the provisions of this section shall thereupon cease to apply.

NATIONAL MUNITIONS CONTROL BOARD.

(C) Every person required to register under this section shall notify the Secretary of State of any change in the arms, ammunition, or implements of war which he exports, imports, or manufactures; and upon such notification the Secretary of State shall issue to such person an amended certificate of registration, free of charge, which shall remain valid until the date of expiration of the original certificate. Every person required to register under the provisions of this section shall pay a registration fee of $100. Upon receipt of the required registration fee, the Secretary of State shall issue a registration certificate valid for five years, which shall be renewable for further periods of five years upon the payment for each renewal of a fee of $100.

(D) It shall be unlawful for any person to export, or attempt to export, from the United States to any other State, any of the arms, ammunition, or implements of war referred to in this section, or to import, or attempt to import, to the United States from any other State, any of the arms, ammunition, or implements of war referred to in this section, without first having submitted to the board the name of the purchaser and the terms of sale and having obtained a license therefor.

(E) All persons required to register under this section shall maintain, subject to the inspection of the Secretary of State, or any person or persons designated by him, such permanent records of manufacture for export, importation and exportation of arms, ammunition and implements of war as the Secretary of State shall prescribe.

(F) Licenses shall be issued to persons who have registered as herein provided for, except in cases of export or import licenses where the export of arms, ammunition, or implements of war would be in violation of this joint resolution or any other law of the United States, or of a treaty to which the United States is a party, in which cases such licenses shall not be issued.

(G) No purchase of arms, ammunition, or implements of war shall be made on behalf of the United States by any officer, executive department, or independent establishment of the Government from any person who shall have failed to register under the provisions of this joint resolution.

(H) The board shall make a report to Congress on January 1 and July 1 of each year, copies of which shall be distributed as are other reports transmitted to Congress. Such reports shall contain such information and data collected by the board as may be considered of value in the determination of questions connected with the control of trade in arms, ammunition and implements of war, including the name of the purchaser and the terms of sale made under such license. The board shall include in such reports a list of all persons required to register under the provisions of this joint resolution and full information concerning the licenses issued hereunder, including the name of the purchaser and the terms of sale made under such license.

(I) The President is hereby authorized to proclaim upon recommendation of the board from time to time a list of articles which shall be considered arms, ammunition and implements of war for the purposes of this section.

Orizaba sailed from England with 352 passengers, although she could have carried 450, and the Shawnee sailed from France wtih 454, although she could have carried 675.

Five Special Ships

The Government chartered five special ships, but indications are they will make only one trip, and then the regular line sailings will be expected to handle the traffic.

war's effects by navies of the Western Hemisphere received their first formal discussion by the neutrality conference of twenty-one American republics today.

The drawing of a line around the Americas from which belligerent activities would be excluded apparently had the support of a large majority. Both Cuba and the United States submitted plans for a naval patrol and the definition of the area.

—ALIENS OR AMERICANS?—

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 28—Thousands of persons claiming to be Americans are trying to get to the United States from war-torn Europe as the rush of westbound traffic is subsiding.

This was disclosed in official quarters today, along with the fact the claimants are being turned down unless they have definite proof establishing that they are now American citizens.

The claimants are made up almost entirely of persons who were naturalized in the United States and then during the depression years gave up their residence and went back to the lands of their birth.

Hundreds Of Thousands

They generally took with them their American savings and thus avoided paying further American income taxes. Immigration and emigration figures show that in the depression years some hundreds of thousands of persons left the United States.

After two years, according to law, unless they returned to the United States, they lost thtir American citizenship.

Now many of them are appealing to American consulates to be "repatriated" to the United States. Their number is indicoted in the fact that in three Scandinavian ports alone there are 900 such persons. The claims of 400 have already been disallowed and 500 are classified as doubtful. The number of Americans to be repatriated from the same ports is 1,300.

Official Viewpoint

Some officials feel that since the claimants voluntarily left the United States, they should not be given another chance unless there are mitigating circumstances of family or business.

That the peak of the rush of Americans back home has been passed is indicated by two recent sailings of ships chartered by the Government to evacuate United States citizens. The

It is estimated that about 25,000 Americans have been evacuated from Europe since the rush started. Attention has been concentrated mostly on belligerent countries, in the belief Americans in neutral nations are not at present in any danger.

There are at least 30,000 Americans still in Europe, held there by business or family reasons or just curiosity. They show no inclination at present to return to the United States, and officials have no power to force them to do so.

Those In Poland

No information is yet available as to the fate of 2,569 American citizens who were listed by the State Department as being permanent or semi-permanent residents of Poland on January 1.

Now that Poland has fallen into the hands of Germany and Russia, it is believed a large percentage of them have come under the jurisdiction of those two nations.

FAVOR WESTERN SAFETY ZONES

Majority of Republicans for Welles Proposal.

LINE PROTECTS AMERICAS

Delegates Urged to Talk to the Belligerents Separately.

PANAMA, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—Plans to create an "American safety zone" to be kept free of Boundaries of Area.

The area proposed by Under-Secretary of State Sumner Welles, head of the United States delegation, was bounded by a line extending from Passamaquody Bay on the Canadian-Maine border, inclosing the Caribbean Sea, and running around the east coast of South America, through the Straits of Magellan on the southern tip. The line then would go north through the Pacific, inclosing the strategic Galapagos Islands off Ecuador, to the San Juan de Fuca Straits on the United States-Canadian Pacific boundary.

Delegates from Brazil and Uruguay, which already maintain coastal patrols, indicated their willingness to extend these.

Mr. Welles urged the republics, delegates said, to make separate representations to belligerents to obtain their acceptance of the neutral zone.

Mexico Looks to U. S.

Mexican envoys said that inasmuch as Mexico has no fleet, she would look to the United States to patrol her coasts without violating her sovereignty.

The republics were called upon by the Mexican delegation also to guarantee the "free political destiny" of possessions of non-American States should they be endangered by cataclysmic changes arising from the European war.

The proposal urged an immediate conference when areas of this hemisphere "cannot continue existing under the same political dependence" as at present. Britain, France and the Netherlands are the only non-American countries with possessions in the Americas.

TARIFF TRUCE TO BE DEBATED

Inter - American Leaders Would Study Plan.

MAY DELAY ADJOURNMENT

U. S. Deluged With Inquiries on Trade From Latin Cities.

PANAMA, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—Debate on controversial issues, among them a proposed tariff truce to increase trade, promised today to prolong sessions of the inter-American neutrality conference far beyond the scheduled Saturday adjournment date.

The tariff proposal, advanced by the Brazilian delegation, suggested a six-month truce during which none of the twenty-one participating nations would increase duties and a study would be made of the entire trade structure in the Americas.

Experts said that to give detailed consideration to this and other economic measures already referred to committee the conference would have to remain in session a month or more.

Among the measures expected to provoke debate was a Uruguayan proposal to eliminate from contraband lists all articles destined for civil populations of warring nations.

Prepare Similar Measures.

Argentina and Chile prepared to submit measures similar to the Uruguayan proposal, which would call for a joint declaration along these lines:

"That it is inadmissable that war contraband lists include, either conditionally or absolutely, products or articles destined for the alimentation and subsistence of civil populations, and raw materials and machinery for peaceful industry."

The United States introduced a plan for creation of a permanent committee of experts as an advisory council on monetary and exchange matters.

This was complemented by Mexico's request for a program to stabilize silver as a medium of international exchange and a proposal to establish an inter-American financial institute to co-ordinate activities of all central banks in American republics.

There seemed little prospect of controversy on the major neutrality measures before the conference, although some discussion was expected on details of the proposal for a co-operative naval patrol of American waters.

Three to Give Support.

Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay, who already have their own agreement to guard the eastern coast of South America, were expected to lend strong support to this plan.

Other items under consideration included proposals for:

Creation of a commission of experts to stimulate immediate construction of the Pan-American highway.

Checking increases in freight and insurance rates.

Economic and commercial cooperation among American republics.

Experts Have Big Task.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—A new crew of Department of Commerce business experts is sifting millions of dollars' worth of trade inquiries from Latin America as a result of the European war.

The exact amount involved, the number of inquiries which will turn into actual orders, and the items concerned have not been disclosed.

But now that the war has virtually cut Germany off from some good South American customers and has occupied the industry of England and France with military orders, Government experts argue that the United States is the natural place for Latin America to go shopping.

To handle this flood of inquiries, an official said, many of the Commerce Department's new experts have been drafted to analyze and expedite results. It is the biggest job that has yet come their way since Secretary Hopkins organized a division of industrial economics under Richard V. Gilbert a few months ago.

The main load of the Latin American trade situation has fallen on Dudley P. K. Wood, who formerly handled the foreign business of a machine and foundry company.

CONFERENCE FOR GENERAL NEUTRALITY

Inter-American Delegates Approve Declaration Of Policy

Group Also Appeals To European Belligerents To Humanize War

[By the Associated Press]

Panama, Panama, Sept. 28—The neutrality subcommittee of the Inter-American Conference tonight approved proposals for a general neutrality declaration and an appeal to European belligerents for humanization of war.

The subcommittee's action left the questions of the forms of neutrality and belligerents' war contraband lists yet to be disposed of before putting its report into final shape for submission to a plenary session of the conference.

Important Proposals

One of the most important sets of proposals before the sub-committee were three presented by the Argentine Delegation—for coordination of police and judicial measures in connection with maintenance of neutrality, and rules for maintaining liberty of commerce with belligerents.

The sub-committee for the preservation f peace spent the afternoon debating the boundaries for neutral zones in American waters, which, under United States and Cuban proposals, would be patrolled by naval forces.

In Complete Accord

Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles told the delegates that the United States and Cuban delegations "completely coincide on the basis of the projects we offer." Only technical differences were noted in the two proposals.

Welles suggested that a subcommittee made up of himself and Cuban Secretary of State Miguel Angel Campa be appointed to work out the differences. Campa said he believed the task would be relatively easy.

Discussing neutral zones in American waters, Welles presented a map outlining the zones to be declared with the area of primary defense of the Western Hemisphere.

Sessions Postponed

Plenary sessions were postponed today "until further notice" to give the subcommittees time to deliberate on the more than thirty projects submitted by the various American republics.

The permanent president of the conference, Foreign Minister Narciso Garay of Panama, in announcing suspension of plenary sessions said he hoped the conference would be brought to a close Sunday night.

Argentina and the United States stood together today in proposing study by both the neutrality and economic subcommittees of Uruguayan, Argentine and Chilean projects to remove foodstuffs and clothing for civil populations from the contraband lists of belligerents.

Prolonged Discussion

The Uruguayans and Chileans had sought to place the problem before the neutrality committee alone, thereby giving rise to the first prolonged discussion during the conference.

The issue finally was settled by a vote of 18 to 3 in favor of the Argentine and United States viewpoint. The Brazilian and Cuban delegations supported.

The United States had first questioned whether the problem, laid before the neutrality committee, should not go before the economic committee as well.

Three Groups Oppose

The three opposing this were Uruguay, Chile and Costa Rica, the Chileans holding that the issue was "purely a matter of procedure."

Here the Argentine delegate, Leopoldo Melo, declared that "matters relative to war contraband have two aspects, economic and political," and he proposed that the matter go before both committees.

Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles, head of the United States delegation, affirmed this view, whereupon the vote was taken.

Information Ministry Already Under Inquiry, Faces Cabinet Action

London, Sept. 28 (AP)—The British Press Association said tonight that "drastic reorganization" of the much-criticized Ministry of Information may be considered by the Cabinet at its next meeting.

Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told the House of Commons today an investigation of the Ministry already was under way to determine if its organization was efficient and not overstaffed.

The House will discuss the work of the Ministry next Tuesday after Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain delivers his weekly report on the war.

reconstitution of Poland on a reduced scale, but autonomous and independent and capable of fulfilling its historic role of a Catholic bulwark.

Diplomats discounted such reports, pointing out that while they were in line with Italian appeals to Britain and France to settle the conflict, the Vatican thus far had shown no indications of its peace efforts were along this line.

lines than his car. His brother, now King George VI, also had a close call. He was a gun turret officer on the battleship Collingwood in the battle of Jutland, when Britain lost 14 ships and nearly 7,000 men, and the Germans 11 ships and nearly 3,000 men.

Middle age, marriage and a major general's duties will restrain the Duke of Windsor from pleading again for a chance to "go over the top.

—WINDSOR IN WAR—

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Sept. 28—The Duke of Windsor, who is "somewhere in France" today with the British Expeditionary Force, is going to be less of a headache to his Government and superior officers than he was twenty-five years ago.

Still A Fly In Ointment

But on the other hand, the British Government is less concerned, politically and practically, over his fate than when he was Prince of Wales.

The Government has accepted his services, as it did in the last war, because the sight of him at the front will hearten the rank and file of Tommies. But he is still is fly in the ointment in the plan to make George VI the idol of his subjects—still an embarressing reminder of a King who placed a personal love affair above an Englishmans conception of duty.

In 1914, when he was the Prince of Wales and a 20-year-old lieutenant in the Grenadier Guards, he wanted to lead his men "over the top."

Stopped By Kitchener

He argued that he had three brothers and the empire would not lack an heir to the throne. He finally broke down resistance from his family as well as the high command.

Then opposition came from an unexpected source. The Prince on furlough in London, was summoned by Lord Kitchener, the War Minister.

"Get killed if you will," he is reported to have told the Prince, "but none of you has consideerd what might hapepn if you were taken prisoner."

Bitter Setback To Edward

It must have been a bitter anti-climax to Edward, who throughout his life fought against the restrictions imposed upon him because he was of royal blood. It was obvious that if the heir to the throne were a prisoner it would offer tremendous opportunities for the Germans to propose "a deal" and ultimately would greaatly influenec the terms of peace.

But within two years, Kitchener himself took a similar risk. On a mission to Russia aboard the warship Hampshire, he drowned when the vessel was sunk by mine or torpedo.

Had Narrow Escape

Before the war was over the Prince of Wales had a narrow escape. His automobile was wrecked by a German shell. He was even nearer the front

Looting by Ukrainians Told by Polish Officers

Killings by Roving Bands Reported in Southeast

SIANKI, Poland (in the Russian zone of occupation), Sept. 28 (AP).—Four bearded and footsore Polish Army officers, disguised in peasant costumes, today brought accounts of robbings and killings by Ukrainian bands in a no man's land in southeastern Poland.

The officers, arriving at this border point en route to Hungary, said that there still were small sections of Poland, about fifteen miles from the frontier, not yet occupied by Soviet troops, where the Ukrainians were operating freely.

One of the quartet, Capt. Stanislaw Borecki, told of attempting to return to the interior of Poland with seven men only to be ambushed by the Ukrainians a few miles from here. He said five of his group were killed.

This deserted village, where a month ago hundreds of vacationers enjoyed the mountain air, shows its own evidences of the activities of the roving Ukrainian bands. Almost every house here has been looted. Furniture, even doors and window frames, have been removed and hauled away.

U. S. Woman On Dutch Plane Nazis Attacked

Tells of Hearing Rattling Noise Twice; Didn't Know What It Was Till Landing

LONDON, Sept. 28 (AP)—An American woman who was aboard a Dutch airliner on Tuesday when a German flyer's machine-gun bullets killed a Swedish passenger, said tonight that two attacks were made.

Miss Florence Jennison, of Chicago, gave this eyewitness account of the incident off Helgoland as she stopped in London en route to the United States:

"We were flying over the sea when there was a banging and crackling sound from the antennae as if something had been dropped on the plane. The noise came from above, irregularly, and was not at all like a machine gun sounds.

"I had seen the aerial above us in Copenhagen, and thought it had given away. The water below was like a desert—not a boat or a plane was in sight.

"The stewardess ran forward and returned with an officer. He went to the control room without commenting on the noise.

"Then the rattling started again and the plane seemed to slow down as it proceeded on its course. The noise lasted so long that it began to get annoying.

"The weather had been cloudy, but then the sun came out and the mist began to clear.

"The plane wabbled along a little bumpy. I was tired and hungry, but I decided not to order food because the stewardess seemed so busy. It was 2:15 and I knew we would be in Amsterdam in little more than an hour.

"When the plane landed there was a bump—sound like a tire had gone down, yet when I left the ship I noticed both tires were up, but gasoline was pouring from the right wing and blew into my face.

"There was a commotion about the ship, but none of the passengers knew what had happened.

"At the pier at Rotterdam we were asked if there had been any trouble on our plane. It was there that we were told of the death of the Swedish engineer, Gustaf Robert Lamm.

"Capt. Moll, the Dutch pilot, was responsible for saving the lives of the passengers by flying a damaged plane on to its destination.

"Concealment of the danger was due to the quick thinking of the stewardess.

"Why should a neutral ship be fired upon?"

INTERNED BRITISH AIR CREW ESCAPES

War Plane Flees Iceland—London Gets Protest.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—A British war plane with its crew of nine, which made a forced landing at Raufarhoefn in northern Iceland, escaped today, the newspaper Berlingske Aftenavis said in a dispatch from Reykjavik, Iceland.

The dispatch said the plane and crew had been interned after being forced down yesterday.

Count Eduard V. S. C. Reventlow, Danish Minister to London, protested on behalf of the Iceland Government against the escape.

A Danish radio report said that the British plane had been serviced in preparation for a flight, under the escort of an Icelandic plane, from Raufarhoefn to Reykjavik. When the Icelandic plane, sent out from Reykjavik, landed at Raufarhoefn, it found the Britons had taken off, presumably for England this report said.

Germans Demanding Market Increase In Yugoslavia's Exports

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Sept. 28 (AP)—A German economic delegation which was received by Alexander Cincar-Markovic, Foreign Minister, was reported reliably today to be demanding a marked increase in the Reich's share of Yugoslavia's exports of meat, fats and grain.

Diplomats noted that the German delegation came here within a few days after announcement was made that Yugoslavia plans to resume diplomatic relations with Russia after a twenty-year lapse.

It was believed the German delegation especially was anxious to assure the Reich of the lion's share of Yugoslavia's exports before the Belgrade Government could begin commercial talks with Moscow, which are expected to follow reestablishment of diplomatic relations.

"Four curling pins may be bought at the stores and the beard tightly rolled up in these and tucked under the chin. The gas mask is then drawn over the face, beard and all, and is perfectly air-tight.

Air Raid Styles Allow for Quick Flight in Paris

Women Take to Garments Speedily Put on When Sirens Sound in Night

PARIS, Sept. 28 (AP).—What the well dressed woman in Paris wears now includes clothes for an air raid. She is prepared for the sirens' wail and sudden darkness. She can duck into a shelter as well accoutered for this occasion as for her last ball.

With most noted fashion houses closed, specialty shops and department stores are catering to women air raid customers. Midnight alarms develop a technique of rapid dressing. Among hasty get-ups which are liked are ski clothes. Air raid-minded ladies are finding tight ankled ski trousers and windbreaker jackets with tight wrists the last word in chic coverage and quick getaway.

Some prefer shooting suits with four pocket coats of corduroy or leather. Gas masks are shouldered with these instead of guns and flashlights. The big pockets are handy for ammunition like handkerchiefs, gloves, sandwiches and playing cards.

Warm sweaters, scarves and heavy soled boots easy to get into are useful accessories. Among practical head coverings are hoods, convenient for tousled hair. A smart hooded garment specially designed for air raid sorties is made of thick soft wool in midnight blue. It is long sleeved, snug, belted and buttons all the way from neck to ankle. It goes on in record time.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 28 (A. P.).—Thirty-seve Americans, fleeing the war in Europe, arrived here toda on the American freighter Collingsworth with first-har accounts of the sinking of the British airplane carri Courageous ten minutes after she had been torpedoed by a German submarine.

The freighter was about five miles from the Courageous whe she sank on September 18 with loss of 579 lives. Fourteen of th carrier's survivors were take aboard the Collingsworth and fiv hours later transferred to a Bri ish destroyer.

AT THE SAME TIME THE COMMAND FORESHADOWED THE END OF THE CAMPAIGN IN POLAND WITH THE NEWS THAT THE FORTRESS OF MODLIN, 15 MILES NORTHWEST OF WARSAW, HAD OFFERED TO SURRENDER FOLLOWING THE RECAPITULATION OF THE POLISH CAPITAL.

IN DESCRIBING AERIAL ACTIVITY YESTERDAY, THE COMMAND'S COMMUNIQUE SAID:

SEP 29 1939

"A HEAVY BRITISH CRUISER WAS SUCCESSFULLY ATTACKED OFF THE ISLE OF MAY (AT THE MOUTH OF THE FIRTH OF FORTH) BY ONE AIR FORCE FIGHTING UNIT. ONE 250-KILO (550-POUND) BOMB HIT THE PROW."

THE ANNOUNCEMENT FAILED TO ASSESS THE DAMAGE, BUT ADDED:

"OF THE HEAVY BRITISH NAVAL FORCES WHICH WERE ATTACKED THE DAY BEFORE (TUESDAY), ONE AIRPLANE CARRIER WAS HIT BY ONE 500-KILO (1,100-POUND) BOMB AND ONE BATTLESHIP WAS HIT AT THE PROW AND AMIDSHIPS BY TWO 250-KILO BOMBS."

(WINSTON CHURCHILL, FIRST LORD OF THE ADMIRALTY, ANNOUNCED YESTERDAY IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS THAT 20 GERMAN PLANES HAD ATTACKED A SQUADRON OF BRITISH SHIPS, BUT WITHOUT SCORING ANY HITS. HE SAI ONE AIRPLANE WAS SHOT DOWN, ONE WAS BADLY DAMAGED AND THE CREW OF THE THIRD WAS CAPTURED ON ALIGHTING ON THE WATER.)

THE FORTRESS OF MODLIN, STRONGHOLD OF POLISH FORCES AT THE JUNCTION OF THE VISTULA AND BUG RIVERS WAVED THE WHITE FLAG OF SURRENDER 24 HOURS AFTER THE POLISH CAPITAL GAVE UP RESISTANCE.

MODLIN WAS CUT OFF FROM WARSAW LAST WEEK AND THE OFFER TO SURRENDER MARKED THE END OF A FORMIDABLE NEST OF RESISTANCE.

THAT THE GERMAN ARMIES' POLISH CAMPAIGN WAS APPROACHING AN END FURTHER WAS INDICATED IN THE COMMUNIQUE'S ANNOUNCEMENT THAT THE MAIN BODY OF GERMAN TROOPS IN THE EAST NOW WAS BEHIND THE DEMARCATION LINE AGREED UPON BY GERMANY AND SOVIET RUSSIA.

THE MOPPING UP PROCESS, HOWEVER, CONTINUED WITH OCCASIONAL FIGHTS WITH REMNANTS OF THE POLISH ARMY.

THE SOUTHERN WING OF THE GERMAN ARMY, THE COMMUNIQUE SAID, IN WITHDRAWING TOWARD THE DEMARCATION LINE YESTERDAY CAPTURED 500 OFFICERS AND 6,000 POLISH SOLDIERS IN THE REGION EAST OF THE SAN RIVER AND HIGH POLISH ARMY LEADERS, COMMANDERS AND THEIR STAFFS.

THERE WAS NO INDIGATION IN THE COMMUNIQUE WHETHER THE RAID OFF THE ISLE OF MAY HAD MET WITH BRITISH REACTION.

ON THE WESTERN FRONT THE HIGH COMMAND SAID "THERE WERE NO NOTEWORTHY FIGHTING ACTIVITIES," BUT IT DID ANNOUNCE THAT "ONE ENEMY PLANE" HAD BEEN BROUGHT DOWN IN AN AIR FIGHT OVER SAARBRUECKEN.

FRENCH (PMS BUDGET)

BY JOHN H.MARTIN

PARIS, SEPT.28-(AP)-INFORMED FRENCH QUARTERS EXPRESSED BELIEF TODAY THAT FUEHRER HITLER WAS PREPARING TO ADVANCE PEACE PROPOSALS, BACKED BY THE THREAT OF A POSSIBLE GERMAN-SOVIET RUSSIAN MILITARY ALLIANCE AND NEW NAZI TROOP CONCENTRATIONS IN THE WEST.

THESE SOURCES SAID THEY WOULD NOT BE SURPRISED IF HITLER MADE REPRESENTATIONS TO FRANCE AND BRITAIN BEFORE THE WEEKEND.

SUCH REPRESENTATIONS, IT WAS EXPECTED, WOULD ASK THE ALLIES TO RECOGNIZE THE GERMAN-SOVIET PARTITION OF POLAND AND RAISE CONSIDERATION OF GERMANY'S COLONIAL DEMANDS.

REFUSAL TO CONSIDER PEACE ON THIS BASIS, OBSERVERS DECLARED, MIGHT BE TAKEN BY HITLER AS JUSTIFYING BEFORE THE WORLD A "COMPLETE WAR" UPON FRANCE AND BRITAIN--EVEN TO THE EXTENT, THEY SAID, OF A DASH THROUGH NEUTRAL COUNTRIES IN AN EFFORT TO COMBAT THE BRITISH BLOCKADE. (BERLIN OFFICIALLY HAS DISAVOWED ANY SUCH PLAN OF ATTACK.)

SEP 29 1939

BOTH FRANCE AND BRITAIN HAVE ISSUED REPEATED OFFICIAL STATEMENTS THAT THERE WOULD BE NO PEACE UNTIL THE HITLER REGIME WAS DESTROYED AND POLISH INDEPENDENCE RESTORED.

IT WAS GENERALLY BELIEVED IN PARIS THAT GERMAN FOREIGN MINISTER JOACHIM VON RIBBENTROP'S TRIP TO MOSCOW YESTERDAY WAS PLANNED BY HITLER TO CREATE THE IMPRESSION THAT A GERMAN-SOVIET MILITARY ALLIANCE IS IMMINENT.

A COMMUNIQUE ISSUED THIS MORNING BY THE GENERAL STAFF SAID THE NIGHT WAS "CALM", BUT ADDED THAT "AN ENEMY ATTACK WEST OF SAARBRUECK-EN FAILED." FRENCH SCOUTING PLANES WERE REPORTED ACTIVE DURING THE NIGHT.

ALTHOUGH THE EXACT LOCATION OF THE ATTACK WAS NOT SPECIFIED, IT WAS BELIEVED THE COMMUNIQUE REFERRED TO THE REGION NEAR FORBACH, WHERE THE MAGINOT AND SIEGFRIED LINES DIP TOWARD THE SOUTHWEST.

YESTERDAY, THE COMMUNIQUE SAID, FRENCH AND BRITISH AIRMEN, OPERATING TOGETHER, SHOT DOWN "SEVERAL" GERMAN PLANES IN A BATTLE OVER THE LINES.

SEP 29 1939

COMMERCIAL SHIPPING WAS SAID TO HAVE RESUMED ITS "REGULAR RHYTHM" UNDER NAVAL CONVOYS AND AERIAL PATROLS.

IN TWO DAYS THE FRENCH WERE REPORTED IN DISPATCHES REACHING PARIS TO HAVE SHOT DOWN EIGHT GERMAN MESSERSCHMIDT FIGHTERS AGAINST THE LOSS OF FOUR OF THEIR OWN.

PARIS-SEPT-28

IN A DOGFIGHT LAST MONDAY, THESE ADVICES SAID, THREE AMERICAN-BUILT CURTISS PLANES MET FIVE MESSERSCHMIDTS OVER THE GERMAN LINES AND SHOT DOWN THREE OF THE ENEMY CRAFT. ONE CURTISS WAS SAID TO HAVE BEEN DOWNED ALONG WITH ONE OF THE OBSERVATION PLANES THEY WERE ESCORTING.

SEP 29 1939

FRENCH MILITARY SOURCES SAID THEIR PLANES SEEMED TO BE CARRYING OUT THEIR NIGHT RAIDS OVER GERMANY WITH BUT LITTLE OPPOSITION.

THIS WAS PARTLY DUE, THEY ASSERTED, TO GERMAN AIR LOSSES IN FIGHTING AGAINST POLAND AND ALSO TO THE NECESSITY OF SENDING TO REPAI SHOPS FOR OVERHAULING THOSE PLANES WHICH WERE IN THE AIR FOR LONG PERIODS DURING THE THREE-WEEK POLISH CONQUEST.

THESE SOURCES SAID THE FRENCH WERE TAKING ADVANTAGE OF THIS SITUATION BY SENDING COMBINED FRENCH AND BRITISH SQUADRONS INTO THE AIR. THE FLIGHTS WERE REPORTED TO RANGE ALL ACROSS SOUTHERN GERMANY ALMOST TO THE BORDERS OF SILESIA.

THE FRENCH HAVE REFRAINED FROM ANY CLAIMS OF "MASTERY OF THE AIR" ON THE WESTERN FRONT, BUT HAVE INSISTED THEY WERE ABLE WITH BRITISH ASSISTANCE TO FIGHT FOR THE PRESENT AT LEAST ON AN EQUAL FOOTING WITH THE NAZIS.

NIGHT LEAD SWISS

BY-CHARLES S.FOLTZ, JR.

BASEL, SWITZERLAND, SEPT. 28-(AP)-REPORTS REACHING BASEL INDICATED THAT IF THE FRENCH AND BRITISH PLAN TO STRIKE THE SIEGFRIED LINE BEFORE GERMAN EASTERN FORCES ARE ESTABLISHED THERE IT MUST BE WITHIN THE NEXT FEW DAYS.

MOVEMENT OF GERMAN TROOPS AND MATERIAL FROM POLAND TO THE WESTERN FRONT NOW APPEARS TO OBSERVERS HERE TO BE AT ITS HEIGHT. THE MOVEMENT BEGAN A WEEK AGO.

IT WAS NOTED HERE THAT FRENCN COMMUNIQUES THEMSELVES REPORTED ALLIED AVIATION INCREASED ITS OBSERVATION FLIGHTS DEEP INTO GERMANY OVER VARIOUS LINES OF COMMUNICATION.

REPORTS REACHING HERE SAID TRAINS LOADED WITH TROOPS AND WAR SUPPLIES MOVED ALL DAY AND ALL NIGHT THROUGH BADEN, CENTRAL GERMANY, FROM THE POLISH FRONT.

SEP 29 1939

MOST OF THE TROOPS WHICH FOUGHT ACTIVELY ON THE POLISH FRONT WERE GIVEN A REST BY RELIEVING GARRISONS OUTSIDE THE WESTERN FRONT WAR ZONE WHICH IN TURN, WERE SENT INTO THE SIEGFRIED FORTIFICATIONS.

SOME UNITS PARTICIPATING IN THE FIGHTING IN POLISH SECTORS WHERE RESISTANCE WAS WEAK WERE SENT DIRECTLY INTO THE SIEGFRIED LINE. THEIR STORIES OF THE POLISH CAMPAIGN WERE EXPECTED TO RAISE THE MORALE OF THE GERMANS ON THE WESTERN FRONT ALTHOUGH IT ALREADY IS HIGH BECAUSE OF THE SPEED OF THE POLISH CAMPAIGN.

FRENCH TROOPS, SAVE FOR SMALL PATROLS WEST OF THE SAAR RIVER IN THE NIED VALLEY AND IN THE MANDEL AND BLIES CREEK SECTORS AND

PARTS OF THE WISSEMBOURG FRONT IN THE VOSGES MOUNTAINS, LEFT MOST OF THE FIGHTING TODAY TO ARTILLERY AND PLANES ESCORTING OBSERVERS.

MILITARY OBSERVERS IN SWITZERLAND SAID THE PART TANKS HAVE PLAYED SO FAR IN THE THREE WEEKS OF THE WAR REPEATS THE EXPERIENCE OF THAT MILITARY ARM IN 1917.

THESE OBSERVERS EXPECT THE BRITISH AND FRENCH TO USE LARGE FLEETS OF TANKS FOR A DRIVE ON A VERY NARROW FRONT.

IN THE EARLY FALL OF 1917, THESE OBSERVERS SAID, THE BRITISH TRIED A FEW TANKS IN SMALL ATTACKS WITH ONLY MEDIOCRE SUCCESS.

THEN ON NOV. 11, 1917 TANKS MASSED BEFORE A HEAVY ATTACK IN THE CAMBRAI SECTOR COVERED ONLY BY FIELD ARTILLERY ON A FRONT OF 10 KILOMETERS. THIS DRIVE BROKE THROUGH GERMAN FORTIFICATIONS.

DURING THE FIRST THREE WEEKS OF THE PRESENT WAR BOTH THE FRENCH AND GERMANS TRIED SMALL NUMBERS OF TANKS PROTECTING SMALL ATTACKING FORCES. THERE, TOO, THEY ACCOMPLISHED ONLY MEDIOCRE SUCCESSES.

OBSERVERS HERE BELIEVE THE LITTLE "TANK TEST" BATTLES SHOWED DEFINITELY, HOWEVER, THE DAY OF THE TANKS IS FAR FROM DONE DESPITE THE EXISTENCE OF HIGH-POWERED METAL-PIERCING ANTITANK GUNS.

BEFORE THE EUROPEAN WAR THE USE OF SUCH GERMAN GUNS IN SPAIN WAS REPORTED TO HAVE SCORED SO HEAVILY AGAINST THE LOYALIST GOVERNMENT'S RUSSIAN TYPE TANKS THAT IT WAS BELIEVED THE SIEGFRIED LINE, FITTED WITH SUCH GUNS THROUGHOUT, WOULD PROVE IMMUNE TO TANKS.

NEW FRENCH TANKS, HOWEVER, MUCH MORE HEAVILY ARMORED AND DESIGNED WITH CURVING SURFACES THROUGHOUT, ARE REPORTED TO HAVE STOOD UP MUCH BETTER AGAINST ANTITANK GUNS.

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE MOSCOW CONFERENCE BETWEEN RUSSIA AND GERMANY, WITH TURKEY SITTING IN, CONTINUES TO BE THE SWITCHBOARD OF THE EUROPEAN WAR.

WE SHALL KNOW HOW THE CONFLICT IS HEADING WHEN THE NEW CARTOGRAPHIC FIRM OF STALIN AND HITLER CUTS US IN SO WE CAN LEARN HOW THE MAP-MAKING AND POLITICAL READJUSTMENTS OF THE CONTINENT ARE GOING.

AT THE MOMENT THE PROCEEDINGS REMAIN AS MYSTERIOUS AS A DOG BURYING A BONE, THOUGH THERE ARE PLENTY OF REPORTS GOING ABOUT.

BRITISH FOREIGN MINISTER LORD HALIFAX YESTERDAY CALLED IN SOVIET AMBASSADOR MAISKY AND MADE ANOTHER EFFORT TO SOLVE THE RIDDLE OF RUSSIA'S POLICY, WHICH MAY BE THE KEY TO THE OUTCOME OF THE WAR.

NEITHER HALIFAX NOR MAISKY HAS DISCLOSED WHAT PASSED BETWEEN THEM, BUT IT'S A FAIR GUESS THAT MAISKY TROD VERY CLOSELY IN THE FOOTSTEPS OF HIS ORDINARILY UNCOMMUNICATIVE CHIEF, STALIN. DIPLOMATIC QUARTERS IN LONDON EXPRESSED THE BELIEF THAT A DEFINITE STATEMENT OF SOVIET POLICY COULD NOT BE LOOKED FOR AT THIS TIME.

THE MOST IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENT IN CONNECTION WITH THIS HUSH-HUSH PARLEY IS THE PERSISTENT REPORT THAT THE COMMUNISTS AND NAZIS MAY ENLARGE THEIR COOPERATION BY ENTERING A MILITARY ALLIANCE, WHICH PRESUMABLY WOULD BRING THE SOVIET INTO THE WAR ON GERMANY'S SIDE.

SOVIET PREMIER MOLOTOFF HAS ANNOUNCED THAT RUSSIA WILL REMAIN NEUTRAL, AND APART FROM THAT OBSERVERS GENERALLY BELIEVE THAT AN ALLIANCE WOULD NOT SUIT STALIN'S POLICY--BUT DESPITE THIS THE REPORT STILL REMAINS IMPORTANT.

IT HAS KEPT ECHOING BACK AND FORTH BETWEEN BERLIN AND MOSCOW UNTIL IT IS DIFFICULT TO GUESS THE ORIGIN OF THE SHOUT WHICH PRODUCED IT. THE VOICE, HOWEVER, SEEMS TO HAVE A GERMAN ACCENT. THE PAPER DAS SCHWARZE KORPS, ORGAN OF HITLER'S ELITE GUARD, TODAY INDICATES THE POSSIBILITY OF A RUSSO-GERMAN ALLIANCE, WITH JAPAN JOINING LATER.

THE POINT OF ALL THIS IS THAT THERE IS A WIDE-SPREAD BELIEF IN EUROPE THAT GERMANY IS GETTING READY TO MAKE ANOTHER PEACE OFFER, AND IS HOLDING THE THREAT OF A RUSSO-GERMAN ALLIANCE OVER THE HEADS OF ENGLAND AND FRANCE.

BOTH LONDON AND PARIS EXPECT THAT HITLER WILL MOVE WITHIN A FEW DAYS TO TRY TO PERSUADE THEM TO ACCEPT THE POLISH CONQUEST AND DISMEMBERMENT AS AN IRREVOCABLE ACCOMPLISHMENT WHICH A CONTINUATION OF WAR CAN IN NO WAY REMEDY.

SEP 9 1939

THERE IS NO INDICATION THAT THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES HAVE RECEDED AN INCH FROM THEIR FIRM DECLARATION THAT THEY INTEND TO PURSUE THE WAR UNTIL, AS BRITISH PREMIER CHAMBERLAIN PUT IT, THEY "CRUSH HITLERISM."

IT IS DOUBTFUL WHETHER THE NAZI FUEHRER HIMSELF BELIEVES THERE IS MUCH CHANCE OF PERSUADING THE ALLIES TO MAKE PEACE ON HIS TERMS. HOWEVER, OBSERVERS IN PARIS INCLINE TO THE OPINION THAT HE MAY BE BUILDING UP HIS CASE SO THAT WHEN THE ALLIES REFUSE HIS PEACE OFFER HE WILL BE IN THE POSITION OF CLAIMING THAT HE IS JUSTIFIED IN MAKING A "COMPLETE WAR" AGAINST THEM.

A "COMPLETE WAR" WOULD, OF COURSE, INVOLVE THE EMPLOYMENT OF ALL WEAPONS AT THE COMMAND OF GERMANY. WERE IT CARRIED OUT TO THE EXTENT -- THE DEFINITION OF "COMPLETE" IT WOULD BE A VERY TERRIBLE THING.

IT WOULD PRODUCE SUCH HORRORS AS EXIST IN SHATTERED WARSAW WHOSE STREETS ARE STREWN WITH THE TORN BODIES OF CIVILIANS.

WHILE THESE REPORTS ARE SPEEDING THE ROUNDS, THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND IS RUSHING TROOPS FROM POLAND AND CONCENTRATING THEM ON THE WESTERN FRONT. LARGE NUMBERS OF WARPLANES ALSO ARE SAID TO HAVE BEEN BROUGHT FROM THE EASTERN THEATER TO THE WEST.

THE ALLIED ANSWER TO ALL THIS HAS BEEN TO RUSH PREPARATIONS FOR A THREE-YEAR WAR AS A MINIMUM. AN EVIDENCE OF STERN DETERMINATION IS SEEN IN THE UNPRECEDENTED INCOME TAX WHICH THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT HAS BROUGHT FORWARD. THIS CALLS FOR A STANDARD TAX OF 35 PERCENT UNTIL NEXT MARCH, AND FOR 37 1/2 PERCENT IN THE FOLLOWING YEAR.

AND THAT IS FOR THE LITTLE MAN. THE BIG FELLOW HAS TO PAY A REAL TAX.

ONE OTHER IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENT RELATES TO THE PRECARIOUS POSITION OF LITTLE ESTONIA, FORMER RUSSIAN TERRITORY LYING ON THE GULF OF FINLAND NEXT THE SOVIET UNION. UNOFFICIAL REPORTS PERSIST IN MOSCOW THAT RUSSIA IS DEMANDING FORTIFICATION CONCESSIONS IN ESTONIAN WATERS, AND THAT THE SMALLER COUNTRY IS HARD-PRESSED TO YIELD.

WHATEVER MAY BE THE OUTCOME OF THIS, THERE APPEARS TO BE SMALL DOUBT THAT RUSSIA INTENDS TO CONTROL THE BALTIC, WHICH MUST BE IN THE WAY OF A HARD BLOW TO GERMANY.

PARIS ANNOUNCES —NEW PACT—

SEP 30 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Sept. 29—Having split Poland between them, Germany and Russia threatened today to "consult each other as to necessary measures" unless Great Britain and France accept peace.

A new, three-sided treaty cementing further the Nazi-Communist partnership was reported by DNB, the official German news agency, to have been signed in Moscow today.

What The Treaty Does

The treaty, according to DNB's text:

1. Put Germany and Russia side by side in urging France and Britain to end the war and, if they refuse, in cooperating to restore peace.

2. Establish a mutual German-Russian frontier in conquered Poland, wiping that country off Europe's map.

3. Pledged Germany and Russia to work out an economic program so that "the volume of the German-Soviet exchange of goods will again attain a high peak."

SEP 30 1939

Peace Plan Undisclosed

Informed sources in Berlin said it was too early to say how Germany and Russia might try to reestablish peace. Whether the new treaty forecasts proposal of a peace conference to which such neutrals as Italy and the United States might be invited was not yet known, these sources said:

The peace overture to Britain and France was issued as a joint declaration of the German and Russian governments, as more than 1,000,000 Polish civilians and 120,000 disarmed defenders of Warsaw helplessly awaited the triumphant entry of the Nazi army into non-existent Poland's surrendered capital.

The Call For Peace

"After the German Reich's Government and the Government of the U. S. S. R. will consult each other as to necessary measures."

The second part of the accord was called "the German-Soviet Russian border and friendship treaty." It delineated a "mutual frontier" which, DNB said, was amplified in an attached map and a supplementary protocol.

"The German Reich's Government and the Government of the U. S. S. R., after the disintegration of the former Polish state," said the foreword to this section, "regard it as their task to restore peace and order in these territories in order to secure for nationalities living there peaceful existence according to their national individuality."

This part of the treaty was divided into five articles. They announced agreement on a border, rejected any interference by third powers in the settlement, apportioned the territories west of the line to the German sphere and the territories east of it to the Russian and agreed that the pact—called "a secure foundation for a progressive development of friendly relations" between the German and Russian peoples—would be ratified as soon as possible at Berlin.

The Trade Agreement

The third phase of the treaty, labelled "Great German-Soviet Russian Economic Planning," was in the form of a letter from Russian Foreign Commissar olotoff to German Foreign inister Von Ribbentrop.

DNB quoted it as confirming "that the Government of the U. S. S. R., on the basis and in the spirit of the general political understanding reached between us, is willing to develop all economic relations and the exchange of goods between Germany and the U. S. S. R."

"Both Governments, therefore, will concentrate their effort, if necessary in cooperation with other friendly powers, toward reaching this goal.

The Threat Of Joint Action

...ining the details of the formal ...nder of Warsaw occupied two ...ys and was not concluded until late last night. Military quarters said many things had to be arranged—for exaxmple, measures for the safety of the German Army of Occupation, roads on which the Germans would enter the city, and the exit of the Poles.

The understanding was said to have specified depots where the Poles must surrender their arms, and to have taken into account German requests for special precautions against sabotage at important concentration points in the city.

Warsaw leaders were said to have been told they would be held responsible for any sniping.

The Germans also provided for the feeding of Polish prisoners of war by requesting that Polish field kitchens and all military provisions be prepared to accompany the troops to prison camps and feed them en route.

DUCE REPORTED CAST FOR ROLE OF PEACEMAKER

Choice Follows New Pact Between Soviet Union and Germany.

BERLIN, Sept. 29 (A. P.).—The division of Poland between Germany and Russia completed, the two Powers today confronted Great Britain and France with peace overtures backed by a threat they would "consult each other as to necessary measures" unless the Western Powers agreed to end hostilities.

Adolf Hitler's axis partner, Premier Mussolini, appeared chosen for the role of "peacemaker," in the opinion of informed quarters. These sources pointed out that Italy ranks first among the "friendly powers" mentioned in the German-Russian accord, which was signed in Moscow today.

The accord, which partitions Poland for the fourth time, dividing the conquered land almost equally between the two powers, pledges them to seek together peace on their own terms and provides for closer economic ties, was signed in Moscow last night. The new German-Russian border gives Germany more territory than the recent line of military occupation, making the River Bug the chief element of the boundary.

Follows Munich by a Year.

Announcement of the accord partitioning Poland came exactly a year after the fateful agreement of Munich, which began the partitioning of another eastern European State born of the world war, Czecho-Slovakia. Italy, Great Britain and France were Germany's co-signatories at Munich; Russia was excluded.

Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, who negotiated the Moscow accord for Germany, returned to Berlin at 5:45 P. M. aboard his special plane.

He smiled broadly as he stepped from the machine and was greeted by officials of the Foreign Office and members of the Russian embassy staff.

Immediately after reaching the capital he visited Hitler to report on his mission.

Mopping Up Nearly Over.

The military mopping up in Poland was nearly completed, but the German High Command announced that the actual entry of Nazi troops into Warsaw would not begin until October 2.

The Polish garrison of some 120,000 men started marching out of Warsaw tonight, according to reports reaching Berlin from the eastern front.

The Poles were marching into captivity and Germans estimated that it would take two or three days before the capital would be emptied of its surrendered defenders.

Small groups of Poles still were offering resistance to the German forces, including about 2,000 on the Hela Peninsula.

The way for Premier Mussolini's entrance into the situation has been prepared steadily since Il Duce's speech last week end, through inspired Nazi press comment from official quarters.

At the same time, Government sources declined to venture into discussion of what was hailed here as a "world historic agreement with the Soviet Union."

They said the negotiations between von Ribbentrop, on one hand and Joseph Stalin and Premier Molotov on the other have proceeded with such speed and burst upon the world so suddenly that it was foolhardy to discuss methods by which the far-reaching Russo-German accord would be carried out.

"Let the communique speak for itself," they said, "and await developments."

What Accord Accomplished.

The treaty according to the agency's text:

1. Puts Germany and Russia side by side in urging France and Britain to end the war and, if they refuse, in co-operating to restore peace.

2. Established a mutual German-Russian frontier in conquered Poland, wiping that country from Europe's map.

3. Pledged Germany and Russia to work out an economic program so that "the volume of the German-Soviet exchange of goods will again attain a high peak."

Some foreign observers believed that Japan might play a role in the effort to bring peace, pointing out that the Japanese Ambassador in Moscow, Shigenori Togo, had wasted no time today in conferring with Soviet authorities.

One important condition for peace was laid down—recognition of the partition of Poland and the new status in eastern Europe.

The German-Russian boundary in Poland, it was pointed out, followed as nearly as possible ethnological lines instead of an arbitrary splitting of territory, such as a military demarcation. Informed sources said that this would enable the Nazis—if they desired—to organize a Polish area as a protectorate along the lines of Bohemia and Moravia.

Sections which belonged to Germany before the world war and which are considered purely German—Upper Silesia, Posen, West Prussia and Pommern—would be incorporated integrally within the old Reich.

Official sources declined to comment on this matter.

The desire was expressed here to get economic negotiations under way at once for an extensive exchange of Russia's vast raw materials for Germany's finished goods—barter which apparently will go far beyond the recently concluded economic treaty. This appeared to be the first of "necessary measures" jointly to meet hostilities between Germany and the Western Powers.

Delegation Going to Moscow.

A German delegation was reported heading for Moscow next week to begin negotiations for an extensive importation of feed for cattle to stave off any chance of a repetition of the world war experience when 16,000,000 pigs were slaughtered at the start of the conflict for lack of feed.

The peace overture to the Western Powers was issued as a joint declaration of the two Governments and came as more than 1,000,000 civilians and 120,000 disarmed defenders of Warsaw helplessly awaited the triumphant entry of the German Army.

"After the German Reich's Government and the Government of the U. S. S. R., through a treaty signed today, definitely solved questions resulting from the disintegration of the Polish State and thereby established a secure foundation for permanent peace in eastern Europe," DNB quoted the treaty, "they unanimously voice their opinion that it would be in the interest of all nations to bring to an end the state of war presently existing between Germany on one side and England and France on the other,

"Both governments, therefore, will concentrate their effort, if necessary in co-operation with other friendly Powers, toward reaching this goal.

Put Issue Up to Allies.

The se[illegible] was called "the German-Soviet Russian Border and Friendship Treaty." It delineated a "Mutual Frontier" which, DNB said, was amplified in an attached map and a detailed, supplementary protocol.

It was divided into five articles. They announced agreement on a border, rejected any interference by third Powers in the settlement, apportioned the territories west of the line to the German sphere and the territories east of it to the Russian, and agreed that the pact—called "A secure foundation for a progressive development of friendly relations" between the German and Russian peoples—would be ratified as soon as possible at Berlin.

In Form of Letter.

The third phase of the treaty, labeled "Great German-Soviet Russian Economic Planning," was in the form of a letter from Premier Molotov to Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop.

The DNB text cited it as confirming "that the Government of the U. S. S. R. on the basis and in the spirit of the general political understanding reached between us is willing to develop all economic relations and the exchange of goods between Germany and the U. S. S. R."

It continued:

"For this purpose an economic program will be drawn up by both sides by which the Soviet Union will deliver raw materials to Germany, which Germany on her part will compensate with industrial products to be delivered over an extended period. Both partners will give effect to this economic program in such a way that the volume of the German-Soviet exchange of goods will again attain a high peak."

Nazis See Bright Future

BERLIN, Sept. 29 (AP)—Germany in effect told the world tonight she wanted peace, but only on the condition that the German-Russian fiat on the fate of Poland be accepted.

"Hands off the Balkans" and "let us deal in our own way with the Baltic States" were secondary pronouncements that exuded from government quarters.

No one made any effort tonight to conceal the Nazi jubilation over the events in Moscow.

The future looked bright to Nazi chieftains. The open road to the East, it was said, nullifies completely the British sea blockade and the trade agreement with Russia meets completely German needs for materials.

There was a [illegible] atmosphere in Berlin. Even the lights in the Wilhelmplatz were turned on dimly in a partial lifting of the blackout.

With her aims in Eastern Europe achieved, Germany hopes for speedy re-establishment of peace, it was said in informed quarters.

"Germany, at a moment when inspired by the Polish military victory, which now is crowned with a great diplomatic success, does not press on to exploit all the possibilities of her advantageous position," declared a Nazi spokesman. "Germany does not insist that England and France capitulate."

It was indicated that no formal peace proposal on the part of Germany was called for or necessary but that the plain facts of the situation "must impress on England and France the futility of further hostilities."

"Only One Front"

A decision to reconsider the whole matter and to decide anew whether Europe should have war or peace should be possible for the western foe without loss of dignity or honor, the Nazi spokesman said.

"With such a vastly changed situation suddenly imposed on international affairs no country could be blamed for going to its people and saying let's think this over and turn back before we are irrevocably committed," he continued.

"But should the decision be to continue this purposeless war Germany will know that its very existence is at stake and will know how to defend itself."

The suggestion that Germany would smash hard if the war continues was backed up by the observation that "there will be only one front: in the east, now, our back is not only covered, but strengthened."

At the Foreign and Propaganda Ministries it was regarded unlikely that Germany would take any initiative to inform Britain and France officially of the accord with Russia or point out its implications.

"Both England and France have embassies in Moscow which probably are informed and moreover, the press tells the story to the people of the world who, after all, count most," one official observed.

Asked whether the question of colonies could create difficulty in a settlement with Britain, the spokesman said there was no change in this issue that Britain has informed Germany she proposed to adjust by negotiation.

REICH BALKAN AIM STATED

Goering's Paper Says It Is for Neutral, Stable Region

BERLIN, Sept. 29 (AP)—D. N. B., the German official news agency, quoted the Essener National Zeitung today as saying Germany's aim in the Balkans was the maintenance of that region's neutrality and an insured, stable economic basis. The newspaper belongs to Field Marshal Hermann Goering.

Soviet Russia, the newspaper said, clearly had indicated the same desire for neutralization of the Balkans.

"Thus the nightmare of German-Russian enmity, from which England sought to profit, has been banished for those (Balkan) peoples," it said.

"The common Balkan policy established by Germany, Russia and Italy as natural partners in the Balkan area leaves no room for outside interests."

The Essener Zeitung then discussed the neutrality of Belgium and the Netherlands, respect for which by Germany and France it said "has become the historic prerequisite for neighborly existence of Germany and France.

"Destruction of this 'no man's land' would reopen the whole problem of French-German neighborly existence in all its historic and psychological gravity.

"Germany knows that England France should bear it in mind. Germany respects the French as well as the English principle that Belgium and Netherlands must not fall into other hands."

As for the Scandinavian countries, Marshal Goering's newspaper said they had "historic and geographic reasons enough to maintain with utmost strictness the policy of neutrality they have already proclaimed."

NAZIS SAY TRADE PACT PERMITS A LONG WAR

Soviet Commerce Is Expected to Offset Effects of Blockade

BERLIN, Sept. 29 (AP)—The new German-Soviet trade pact places Germany in a position to wage a war of" optionallength," the semi-official commentary Dienst aus Deutschland said tonight.

Besides opening anew source for raw materials, the commentary said, the pact now makes it possible for part of Germany's Far Eastern business to be handled over Russian railways.

Authoritative sources estimated Russian-German business would reach the annual total of 1,100,000,000 marks under the agreement. This would nearly equal the 1931 figure, the best trade year for the two countries since the World War. The sources indicated the extent to which they expected the bartering system to increase trade by pointing out that last year's business between the powers totelad 80,000,000 marks. (ℳ 32,000,000)

The treaty gives a new status to Germany's foreign trade, Nazi sources commented, in as much as it means "absolute maintenance" for 65 to 70 per cent of Germany's imports and 75 to 80 per cent of her export business. They said this figure was estimated on the assumption that Great Britain's blockade of the seas would be 100 per cent effective.

The pact would account for approximately [illegible] per cent of Germany's total trade and 9.5 per cent of her export business.

—TEXT OF PACT

Berlin, Sept. 29.—The text of the communique by DNB, official German news agency, on the new Soviet Russian-German accord, concluded at Moscow last night, follows:

Discussions between Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop and Soviet Russian statesmen, the chief of the Government and Foreign Commissar Molotoff and Herr Stalin were concluded in the course of the night in the presence of von der Schulenburg (German Ambassador to Moscow).

As a result of these negotiations the following agreements have been signed:

1. A declaration of the German Reich's Government and the Government of the U. S. S. R. of September 28, 1939:

After the German Reich's Government and the Government of the U.S.S.R. through a treaty signed today definitely solved questions resulting from the disintegration of the Polish state and thereby established a secure foundation for permanent peace in Eastern Europe, they unanimously voice their opinion that it would be in the interest of all nations to bring to an end the state of war presently ex[illegible] isting between Germany on one side and England and France on the other.

Will Cooperate If Necessary

Both governments therefore will concentrate their efforts if necessary in cooperation with the other friendly powers toward reaching this goal. Should, however, the effort of both governments remain unsuccessful, the fact would thereby be established that England and France are responsible for a continuation of the war, in which case the governments of Germany and the U. S. S. R. will consult each other as to necessary measures.

2. The German Soviet - Russian border and friendship treaty:

The German Reich's Government and the Government of the U. S. S. R., after disintegration of the former Polish state, regard it as their task to restore peace and order in these territories in order to secure for nationalities living there peaceful existence according to their national individuality.

Lists Points Agreed Upon

For this purpose the two governments have agreed to the following:

ARTICLE ONE

The German Reich's Government and the Government of the U. S. S. R. define as their mutual frontier in the territory of the former Polish state a line which is marked on the accompanying map and which will be more closely described in the supplementary protocol.

ARTICLE TWO

Both parties recognize the borderline fixed in Article One as final and will reject any interference in this settlement by third powers.

ARTICLE THREE

The necessary public reorganization in territories west of the line described in Article One will be carried out by the German Government; in territories east of the line by the Government of the U. S. S. R.

ARTICLE FOUR

The German Reich's Government and the Government of the U. S. S. R. regard the preceding regulation as a secure foundation for a progressive development of friendly relations between their peoples.

(At this point, DNB said the map mentioned in the treaty would be published later.)

ARTICLE FIVE

This treaty will be ratified and the ratification documents exchanged at Berlin as soon as possible. The treaty becomes valid after the signatures are affixed.

3. Great German - Soviet Russian economic planning:

The chairman of the Council of Peoples Commissars and Foreign Commissar Molotoff addressed the following letter to the Reich's Foreign Minister:

"Herr Reich's Minister:

"With reference to our conversations I have the honor to confirm herewith that the Government of the U. S. S. R., on the basis and in the spirit of the general political understanding reached between us, is willing to develop with all means economic relations and the exchange of goods between Germany and the U. S. S. R.

Economic Program To Be Drawn Up

"For this purpose an economic program will be drawn up by both sides by which the Soviet Union will deliver raw materials to Germany, which Germany on her part will compensate with industrial products to be delivered over an extended period. Both partners will give effect to this economic program in such a way that the volume of the German-Soviet exchange of goods will again attain a high peak.

"Both governments in execution of the aforementioned measures will immediately make the necessary arrangements and take care that negotiations will be brought under way and concluded as fast as possible.

"Permit me, Herr Reich's Minister, to assure you again of my highest esteem. "(Signed) MOLOTOFF."

Von Ribbentrop Acknowledges It

The Reich's Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop on his part addressed a letter to the Soviet Russian Chief of Government and Foreign Commissar, wherein he acknowledged receipt of the above letter.

The reply of the Foreign Minister repeats details of Molotoff's letter addressed to him and concludes with the words: "In the name and by order of the German Reich's Government, I approve of this communication and would like to inform you that the German Reich's Government also on her part will do everything necessary to conform to this spirit.

Description Of New Border In Poland

Annex to Document No. 2 (German-Soviet border and friendship treaty):

Description of the drawing of the border: The border line begins at the Southern tip of Lithuania and from there runs in a general Western direction north of Augustow to the German Reich's border and follows this Reich's border to the Pisia river and thence as far as Ostrolenka. From there it runs in a Southeastern direction until it meets the Bug river at Nur. It continues farther along the Bug river to Krystnopol and then bends west, running north of Rawa Ruska and Jaroczow to the San river. From there it follows the San river to its source.

ENGLAND ADMITS LOSSES

French Report Troops Have Made New Advances Along the Western Front.

BERLIN, Sept. 29 (A. P.).—The High Command announced today that five of six British warplanes attempting to attack a German naval unit off Helgoland had been shot down by German naval pursuit planes.

The announcement said the British attack was fruitless. Helgoland is Germany's island naval base in the North Sea.

The communique said that when the six British planes, after assailing the warships without success, flew away to the west German fighters attacked them.

"In a brief battle five of the British planes were shot down and plunged into the sea," the high command declared.

The battle, it said, occurred this morning.

SUBMARINE SAILOR DESCRIBES ESCAPE

Says Bombs Shook U-Boat After Courageous Sank.

BERLIN, Sept. 29 (A. P.).—An interview ascribed to a member of the crew of the submarine which sank the British aircraft carrier Courageous and describing the submersible's escape from depth bombs was published today by the Berliner Zeitung am Mittag.

The German High Command insists that the submarine returned safely to its base with only slight damage, although a British statement soon after the sinking of the Courageous on September 17 said that it was believed British destroyers had sunk the German vessel.

The helmsman of the submarine, quoted in the interview, said that the Courageous was hit by several torpedoes, after which the submarine submerged to greater depths in anticipation of a counter attack by the destroyers.

The submarine "shortly thereafter was showered with a series of depth bombs by a considerable number of English destroyers which were to provide safe conduct for the Courageous," the helmsman was quoted as saying.

The terrific vibrations of the depth charges broke gauge glases, panes on clocks and pressure indicators, he said. None, however, hit the submarine, which was traveling deep at slow speed and which finally managed to escape.

Small Groups Still Resist

BERLIN, Sept. 29 (AP).—As the Polish garrison of 120,000 men started today to leave Warsaw, which capitulated on Wednesday after twenty days of siege, small groups of Poles elsewhere were still offering resistance to German forces, including about 2,000 men on the Hel Peninsula, near Danzig.

The German supreme army command issued the following communique:

"In the course of a planned withdrawal across the demarcation line, Przemysl-south (southern part of the city) on Sept. 28 was solemnly handed over to Russian troops by the German commander.

"Evacuation of the disarmed Warsaw garrison begins this evening, and will require two to three days. Therefore, occupation by German troops has been planned for Oct. 2. Relief measures for the provisioning and sanitary care of the civil population are under way.

"The fortress of Modlin capitulated unconditionally under the impression of German attacks and as a result of crushing artillery fire and bomb attacks.

"Details of the surrender are being worked out by the corps command stationed near Modlin, according to instructions from the northern army group. There are about 200 officers and 30,000 men and 4,000 wounded in the fortress.

"In the west there was ground activity as before. In an air fight at Weissenburg (Wissembourg), one French plane was shot down. At Osnabrueck one British plane was shot down."

Observers Find Nazis Adding to Westwall Daily

Germans Confident Line Is Adequate, but Build New Forts; Troops Play Games

WITH GERMAN ARMY ON THE WEST FRONT, Sept. 29 (AP).—Traveling for three days along 600 miles of Germany's Westwall has given a group of foreign observers an indication as to why the western front is so quiet.

The group of six was confronted with much evidence in support of the German conviction that a tremendous sacrifice of men and material would be the price of a foreign army's attempt to force its way through the maze of mines, barbed-wire entanglements, steel and concrete obstructions and criss-crossing bunkers in fortresses erected by the Germans.

In the party was a former chief of the general staff of the Finnish Army, now representing a large Finnish newspaper. He expressed the opinion that it would be costly for any force to attempt to break through the Westwall, but conceded that, theoretically, nothing was impregnable.

German officers showed the fortifications and answered questions freely, explaining, though, that certain figures, locations and other military information were not to be used in dispatches.

They said the apparent calmness of the German troops was caused by their faith in the strength of the fortifications. Some of the soldiers were helping farmers harvest their crops. Others were helping residents of some towns abandon their homes. Many were seen playing cards and other games.

Officers said the bunkers in the front line defense could hold out for eighteen days, as far as food was concerned, if they should be cut off from the rear.

Despite their feeling the present fortifications are adequate, the Germans are continuing to erect additional units.

"The Westwall will never be finished, just as a forest never ceases to grow," one commanding general remarked.

German officers asserted that every day some additional bunker was being added or some new fort built. The general staff was represented as considering the present fortifications "quite adequate," but their expansion goes on.

The visitors were told that daily more anti-aircraft guns, more artillery, more experienced troops were arriving from Poland. A stock comment by the German officers was: "We are getting stronger every day, now that Poland is finished."

Hitler Back in Berlin From Wilhelmshaven

BERLIN, Sept. 29 (A. P.).—Adolf Hitler returned here today after a visit to Wilhelmshaven, where he inspected U-boat crews.

IN MOSCOW

Moscow, Sept. 29—In a new treaty of friendship with Germany, signed early today, Russia promised economic support in war and committed herself to consult on joint "measures" with Germany unless Great Britain and France agree to peace.

Observers took the reference to "measures" as an implied threat of possible military aid to Germany.

German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop and Russian Foreign Commissar Molotoff signed their agreement, in the presence of Joseph Stalin, thirty-six days after they first startled the rest of Europe by making a non-aggression pact.

Von Ribbentrop planned to fly back to Germany shortly after noon.

Highlights Of Treaty

Highlights of the agreement, as announced here, were:

1. Establishment of a mutual frontier through Poland. It was reported that allowance still existed for creation of a small Polish protectorate state.

2. A warning to third powers not to interfere with the new boundaries.

3. An agreement to strive for peace. This was coupled with a declaration that if Russian-German peace efforts failed, Britain and France "will bear the responsibility for continuation of the war, and Russia and Germany will then consult on necessary further measures."

4. An agreement fully to develop economic relations. Russia promised to supply Germany with raw materials in exchange for industrial goods over a long period of time. This was an expansion of the trade pact which briefly preceded the August 23 non-aggression pact.

Russia's promise of raw materials to Germany might prove a tremendous factor in war. Wheat, timber, manganese and cotton were regarded as the principal commodities involved, possibly with some petroleum and coal.

Shortly before the Russian-German treaty was signed, Russia announced sweeping military and trade agreements with her next Baltic neighbor Estonia, once part of the Russian Empire.

Thus Russia gained a firm military and economic hold on the north Baltic and greatly increased her influence in the Gulf of Riga, where Latvia's port is situated, and also in the Gulf of Finland and the Gulf of Bothnia, vital commercially to Sweden and Finland.

Russia won the right to fortify two strategic Estonian islands—Saare Maa (Oesel) and Hiiuma (Dagoe)—and the mainland port of Paldiski as naval air bases.

The pacts with Estonia also gave Russia the right to maintain a "limited number" of troops on Estonian territory, and economic privileges which, it was estimated, would increase Russian-Estonian trade by four and one-half times.

(It was reported in Riga, Latvia, that Russia will be allowed to garrison 25,000 soldiers on Estonian soil.)

Under this bargain, Estonia and Russia pledged mutual aid in case of "direct aggression or menace of aggression arising on the part of any great European power" against the frontiers of Estonia, or through Latvia. The pact will run ten years.

Dardanelles Reported Next Goal Of Russia

Moscow, Sept. 29 (AP)—Soviet Russia concluded agreements today with Germany and Estonia by which she gains about half of Poland, an outlet for much of her raw materials and greater power in the northern Baltic.

In three agreements with Germany she joined the Nazis to try to compel Britain and France to make peace on German terms, partitioned Poland with a warning to the rest of the world to keep hands off, and projected an economic program to furnish the Nazis with Russian raw materials.

1939

Virtually Protectorate

A ten-year mutual assistance pact with Estonia made the little republic, formerly Russian territory, virtually a protectorate of the Soviet Union, which was given the right to establish naval and air bases and army garrisons on Estonian soil. This pact was accompanied by a trade agreement.

With these historic diplomatic moves disposed of, Soviet officials turned to talks with a Turkish delegation amid unofficial reports that Russia would demand partial control of the Dardanelles, vital gateway to the Black Sea now controlled by Turkey.

Foreign quarters termed as "possibly premature" reports abroad that Russia had demanded return by Rumania of Bessarabia, which was Russian territory prior to the World War.

Lithuania Next?

Possible Soviet demands were forecast upon the little Baltic state of Lithuania, a neighbor to Russia, now that Poland has disappeared. Lithuania is strategically located on the Baltic and is separated from Estonia by Latvia.

The "German-Soviet Russian border and friendship treaty" divided Poland into two parts about equal in size and rejected "any interference in this settlement by third powers." The partition—the fourth in Poland's history—centered roughly on the Bug and the San rivers and gave Germany Warsaw, the important Vistula river and all of Lublin province.

The partition provided that there be no buffer state, that Germany and the U. S. S. R. would have a common frontier.

that Great Britain and France also jointly went over what they called Russia's veiled threat to enter the European war unless the peace proposal was agreed to.

Declaring that they viewed the move as a supreme effort to frighten Great Britain and France into a quick peace, informed sources said that the desired result would not be produced—that Great Britain still was determined to "end Hitlerism."

Chamberlain to Reply.

Prime Minister Chamberlain, it was announced, would make Britain's official reply on Monday in the House of Commons.

Meanwhile the Polish Ambassador, Count Edward Raczynski, called on Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax today and recorded a formal protest against the German-Russian agreement for division of Poland. The Polish Embassy, in announcing the protest, said that "the Polish nation regard this act of brutal violence as null and void."

A diplomatic correspondent of Reuters, the British news agency, said that he learned from authoritative Russian circles that Ivan Maisky, Soviet Ambassador to London, had told Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax only two days ago that:

"1. The Soviet Government intended to maintain its policy of neutrality in the war between Germany, Britain and France, and

"2. The Soviet Government was prepared to accept British proposals to open trade negotiations envisaged when Hudson (Robert Spear Hudson, British Secretary of Overseas Trade) visited Moscow (last winter)."

The correspondent listed four points which he said were made in well-informed quarters as a reply to the new peace gesture:

"1. That Chamberlain in a recent statement said Russia's action would not influence the determination of Britain and France to prosecute the war until their aims are realized.

"2. That while suggesting consultations among friendly Powers for settlement of the state of war, the Russian-German pact excludes any interference in the Polish settlement.

"3. That although the pact envisages a continuation of war, it only provides for consultations between Germany and Russia; in other words, Germany would have to pay for Russia's eventual military help by further concessions.

"4. That although it is obvious whom the Germans and the Russians have in mind by the expression 'friendly Powers,' it would not be easy to get many neutrals to take the proposed initiative, as it would amount to indorsing or at least condoning the rape of Poland."

Sugar Tax Is Raised.

Meanwhile, the House of Commons confirmed, by a vote of 113 to 79, the budget resolution raising the sugar tax a penny a pound after Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, had asserted that the increase was adopted to spread the tax burden to all classes.

The finance bill embodying the budget increases was read for the first time after the House agreed to other changes without a vote.

Of the new trade pact between Russia and Germany the British Government was said in informed quarters to believe that Russia would not be able to export any large amounts of supplies because of her home needs.

Russia already had a trade agreement with Germany and the British argued the new measure could not go much beyond that in increasing the two nation's commerce.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, ($8,000,000,000) budget.

The British Press Association said the next Cabinet meeting might consider "drastic reorganization" of the much-criticized Ministry of Information.

Rationing to Be Started.

Food Minister W. S. Morrison said in a broadcast speech tonight that rationing would be started in a few weeks, but "we shall have nothing to complain of in the state of our larder; the outlook is very different in Germany."

He said there would be "no uncertainty, no waiting in queues," and told the people to quit trying to stock up for the future.

He said "difficulties had been aggravated" by unusual demands for sugar, meat, bacon and tea.

"Where a commodity like bacon or butter much of which comes from abroad, is not so plentiful as before the war, we must good humoredly turn to something else," he said.

many and Russia, informed sources said recent diplomatic reports had forecast such a development.

The reported new Berlin-Moscow accord came shortly after an authoritative announcement last night that Ivan Maisky, Soviet Ambassador to London, had assured the British Government Russia was willing to start negotiations for a war trade agreement.

Sources close to the Government, recalling Prime inister Chamberlain's statement that Britain would continue the war until "the evil of German aggression in Europe was removed," saw little chance that any peace offer by Germany and Russia would be accepted.

They argued Britain's long-term war plans showed this country was determined to end Hitlerism, and that it could not consider peace proposals at least until the former status of Poland was restored.

Of the new trade pact between Russia and Germany, the British Government was said in informed quarters to believe that Russia would not be able to export any large amounts of supplies because of her home needs.

The Reaction

London Thinks British Will Be Cool To Peace Ultimatum

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sept. 29—Great Britain and France consulted today on the German-Soviet Russian peace overture and the British Cabinet examined it.

Informed sources, however, said Britain's determination to continue the war against Germany was in no way altered by the new declaration.

These sources represented the Government as viewing the move as a final supreme effort to "frighten" Britain and France into a quick peace.

Reply Due Monday

But, they said, the desired result will not be produced.

It was announced Prime Minister Chamberlain would make Britain's official reply Monday in the House of Commons.

Informed sources said the Government had no information as to whether Germany and Russia had included a military alliance in their Moscow talks.

The clause in the Berlin communique announcing the new agreement in which "joint consultations" on "necessary measures" if the war continues was interpreted in some quarters here as a possible threat, however.

No Comment

Although there was no official comment on the announcement of an agreement in Moscow between Ger-

The British press retorted to German insistence that the destroyed aircraft carrier was the Ark Royal by denouncing this as a ruse to get the Admiralty to disclose the warship's whereabouts in a denial.

The Ark Royal, an official statement said, "is safe and sound at her allotted station."

HOW POLAND IS CUT INTO TWO SECTIONS

Fourth Partitioning Wipes Nation Off Map.

SEP 30 1939

By United Press

The new Soviet-Nazi pact of Moscow partitions Poland for the fourth time, Germany and Russia sharing her territory almost equally. Poland is wiped off the map; there is to be no Polish buffer State.

It gives Germany more than the earlier military occupation line, which gave Russia about three-fifths of Poland's area.

Germany gets all of Warsaw city, most of Warsaw province, the entire course of the Vistula river and the province of Lublin.

Of the six largest cities, Russia gets only two—Lwow and Wilno. Germany gets Warsaw, Lodz, Poznan and Krakow.

As described by the German communique, the boundary line begins in northern Poland at the southern tip of Lithuania and runs west north of Augustow to the East Prussian border, which it follows to the Pisa river.

It runs along the river about forty miles south to Ostroleka, thence southeast forty miles, meeting the Bug river at Nur, sixty miles northeast of Warsaw.

It follows the Bug along the eastern edge of Lublin province to Krystnopol, forty miles north of Lwow, and then bends southwest about eighty miles to the San river.

It follows the San to its source at the Slovak border.

Poland was first partitioned between Prussia and Russia in 1772, a second time by the two Powers in 1793, a third time by these two and Austria in 1795.

BRITAIN RELIES ON YOUTH IN AIR

Boys at Ground School Are Told of Empire.

SEP 30 1939

DISCIPLINE IS EMPHASIZED

Best Men in Top Shape Needed to Fly 350 Miles an Hour.

Middleton

LONDON, Sept. 29 (A. P.).—Part of the very raw material which Britain hopes will produce 3,000 airmen a month to cope with highly trained German flyers, is being put in shape at Royal Air Force ground schools.

The 1,000 boys in one camp have been there nine days, coming from all over the Empire. Among them are English, Irish, Scots, Canadians, Australians and New Zealanders. The average age is between 21 and 22 but they look much younger.

"The Royal Air Force is getting the cream of the crop just as the navy did in the old days," one officer said. "As soon as we can teach them technic and break them of their movie ideas about the air force we will have the finest pilots, gunners and ground men in the world."

Discipline Emphasized.

They emphasize discipline at this school and for a very good reason.

"The movies have fed these kids on a 'Dawn Patrol' idea of the air force," said the officer. "It was like that in the world war—single combat and trips to Paris, drinking bouts all night and a dawn flight bombing enemy troops and ammunition dumps.

"That day is done. It's going to be formation flying and heaven help the man who gets lost. They will be flying the best planes we can make and the men will have to be as good as the planes."

The boys get the discipline. They tramp up and down to the orders of an old-line sergeant. They march to games, soccer, Rugby and baseball. They march unendingly—to bed, to breakfast, to classes.

There is a tremendous emphasis on physical condition.

"It takes a perfectly conditioned man to fly a pursuit plane at 350 miles an hour or read a bomb gauge while anti-aircraft guns spatter the sky," said an officer.

Too Smart at Football.

Swimming in the pool, the youths looked small. There was no comparison between them and the average college freshman class in the United States. It would be difficult to get a football team out of the entire class.

"They'll know a lot more about aerial warfare when they leave here than some of the top pilots did in the old war," said a sergeant. "But it will be theory. They will get a further test at flying school. Then, maybe in a year, maybe less, they will be ready for it."

Perhaps 40 per cent of the 1,000 will become gunners, pilots, aerial photographers and bombers. The other 60 per cent will go into the less dashing work on the ground."

The boys get everything from psychoanalysis to mild lessons in the conduct expected of an officer and a gentleman.

Through all their training, at this school and the flying school, runs the advice:

"You're not going on a picnic or a modernized version of the 'Three Musketeers.' You are going to a job that has to be done by highly trained, physically perfect young men."

Caledonia Catches Fire; British Training Ship

Report Denies 'Enemy Action' Damaged Former Majestic

LONDON, Sept. 29 (AP).—The British Press Association said tonight that there had been "an outbreak of fire" on the British training ship Caledonia. The association said the fire "was in no way due to enemy action."

The Caledonia, which formerly was the Cunard White Star liner Majestic, was taken out of commission following the outbreak of war and docked for extensive alterations.

The association did not say when the fire broke out. It asserted, however, that it was subdued the same afternoon it was discovered. "A red glow was seen below deck and a pall of smoke hung over the ship," it added.

Was to Have Been Scrapped

The 56,000-ton Majestic, which until the advent of the French liner Normandie was the largest merchantman in the world, was sold by the Cunard White Star Line on May 16, 1936. It was planned then to scrap the liner, a veteran of the trans-Atlantic service, but the British Navy decided to convert it into a training ship. The job was completed early in 1938 at an estimated cost of $2,340,000.

Britain Expects Entire Revision Of Censorship

Chamberlain May Announce New Set-Up Monday for Ministry of Information

SEP 30 1939

LONDON, Sept. 29 (AP).—Informed quarters said tonight that on Monday Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain would announce a complete reorganization of Britain's much criticized Ministry of Information.

It was said that he proposed to re-establish the peace-time system of direct communication between government departments and the press.

The new plan of the Prime Minister was reported to provide a smaller organization than the present Ministry of Information, whose 999 employees now handle censorship.

Opposition to decentralization of the news department at the Information Ministry was voiced in a letter to Chamberlain from a group of journalists, both foreign and British, assigned to the agency. The letter urged that instead of breaking down the present system it would be an improvement to have a "greater concentration of responsible government officials" at the ministry.

Additional trained journalists were needed, it said, to assist the press in the task of providing the nation and the world with the vital news of Great Britain's part in the war.

British Flyer Recounts How He Sank Submarine

Says Oil Gushed to Surface Twice After Bombs

SEP 30 1939

LONDON, Sept. 29 (AP).—How a Royal Air Force pilot credited himself with destruction of a submarine was described today in extracts from the log of a reconnaissance plane on the Atlantic patrol.

The log, quoted by the Information Ministry, said:

"A fine trail of oil was observed coming to the surface in a series of bubbly patches. Sea markers were dropped. The oil was seen to be moving ahead at this point at two knots.

"After fifteen minutes of careful observation, bombs were dropped ahead of and across the foremost oil patch. In the center, while circles were made by bombs, a great quantity of oil suddenly gushed to the surface, a much wider trail of oil began to move slowly forward about one knot.

"A second attack was made along the oil trail slightly ahead of it. Oil again gushed up for thirty minutes. No further movement of any sort was seen."

London 'Times' Spurns Peace

LONDON, Sept. 29 (AP).—"The Times" replied to the German-Soviet peace gesture tonight with the blunt declaration that "there can be no peace with Hitlerism." As to the Russians, "The Times" said, "relations with Stalin will be decided by events as and when they disclose his intentions, still far from clear."

Lull in U-Boat Activity Noted

LONDON, Sept. 29 (AP).—The British Press Association reported there had been a "marked lull in enemy submarine activity during the last week." It added the reason for the lull was "obscure" and asserted the "respite has given an opportunity of completing plans for protecting British shipping on the high seas, for bringing the convoy system into full operation and for arming merchant ships."

Canadians Train in England

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Sept. 29 (CP).—A group of Canadian youngsters who paid their own passage to England are almost ready to help fight the empire's air battles. In a great flying school set in the heart of rural England, one-sixth of the students in the advanced course are Canadians. Drawn from graduates of the Volunteer Air Reserve, the Civil Air Guard and similar bodies, they get intermediate and advanced training at this and other schools like it scattered throughout the country.

ALLIES CLAIM TO HAVE SUNK 12 SUBMARINES

France Reports on Action of Fleet During the First Month of War.

BOMBING PLANES ARE ACTIVE

Officials Announce That Advance Guards Are Only Active Units on Western Front

SEP 30 1939

PARIS, Sept. 29 (A. P.).—An official report that twelve German submarines had been sunk by the British and the French fleets in less than a month was disclosed today.

The president of the Chamber of Deputies Naval Commission, Jean-Michel Renaitour, told the Chamber last night that British units had sunk ten U-boats and the French had sunk two.

Military observers said the rate of destruction was in excess of the rapidity with which Germany could replace submarines and train new personnel.

The official disclosure coincided with military reports that French bombing planes were carrying out missions of capital importance nightly against German military objectives.

The General Staff reported today the night had been "calm" along the entire western front, but that French advance guards were active in the sector west of Saarbrucken—apparently in the same zone where a small German attack was reported yesterday to have failed.

Pact May Decide Strategy.

The German-Soviet Russian agreement on partition of Poland and the possibility of greater co-operation between Moscow and Berlin may decide the Allies' future strategy.

Indications that the French were expecting the war to take a bolder turn was seen in repeated warnings through the press that all who were able should leave Paris. Thousands of Parisians who left during the first war scare returned to the capital last week.

Capital defenses now include a balloon barrage. The newspaper, Le Matin, said the sausage-shaped, captive balloons could ride out a 50-mile-an-hour gale at an altitude of more than 30,000 feet. It declared the cables could withstand a 2,640-pound pull each and meant certain death for colliding air attackers.

Air Minister Guy La Chambre flew to the western front today and inspected air squadrons which have been fighting the Germans. He was accompanied by Gen. Joseph Vuillemin, commander-in-chief of the French air force.

French Advance Reported.

PARIS, Sept. 29 (A. P.).—French advices from the front today reported a French advance down the eastern bank of the Moselle River which carried French lines forward about 1,500 yards to the outskirts of the German villages of Besch and Borg.

The dispatches said the advance was made with little fighting and accomplished a rectification of the French front.

A German counter attack about half a mile east of this sector was reported repulsed.

The French High Command at 8:38 P. M. tonight (2:38 P. M. New York time), issued the following communique:

"Enemy artillery fire in the region east of the Saar (river) notably to the south of Deux Ponts (Zweibruecken) and of Pirmasens.

"Activity by observation and reconnaissance aviation of both sides."

IN PARIS

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, Sept. 29—The German-Soviet Russian agreement on partition of Poland and the possibility of greater cooperation between Moscow and Berlin may decide the Allies' future strategy.

Informed French circles said they expected a German "peace ultimatum" as the result of the agreement, behind which lags the shadow of the Russian military machine. The same circles made it clear they believed France and Britain would refuse any such offer.

Half of the Russian fleet is thought to be based in the Far East, but the new agreement between the Soviet and Estonia gave Russia the right to move her ships farther west to Baltic Sea bases to match strides taken by the Red Army.

BULLITT RUSHED TO RAID SHELTER

Ambassador Halted During False Alarm in Paris.

SEP 30 1939

PARIS, Sept. 29 (A. P.).—Police stopped Ambassador William C. Bullitt's car today when an air raid alarm sounded and made the American envoy take shelter in a nearby refuge like other motorists caught on the road.

Mr. Bullitt was motoring in from his country residence at Chantilly when the alarm sounded at 11:22 A. M. (5:22 A. M. Eastern standard time). Parisians ducked into air raid shelters, too, but learned the warning had been caused by one of their own planes, flying high. The all clear signal was given at 11:55 A. M. It was the first alarm since September 11.

At the American embassy, visitors and staff alike dropped whatever they were doing, grabbed gas masks and descended to the vaults.

It was an old story for Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, United States Ambassador to Poland, who was in the embassy when the alarm sounded.

He was escorted to an underground office Bullitt fitted up among some packing cases so he can continue work uninterrupted.

The people took the alarm calmly, generally moving without panic to designated shelters. Police and special air raid officials helped clear the streets.

Some Parisians, however, spent the time between signals in small groups in the shelter of doorways.

A few French scouting planes circled high over the capital, but no anti-aircraft gunfire was heard. Ten seconds after the all clear signal, the streets were jammed again with pedestrians.

The embassy, on the Place de la Concorde, is a steel, reinforced building of recent construction, and has the reputation of being one of the "safest buildings" in town. The fireproof vaults, which have been converted into refuges, are said to be capable of being hermetically sealed against gas.

French Make Stand Clear Before Receiving Offer

By TAYLOR HENRY
Associated Press Correspondent

Paris, Sept. 29—The French Government gave official indications tonight it would reject any Soviet Russian and German proposals for peace made on the basis of the partition of Poland.

The Government's position was made plain even before a peace offer had been formally made.

In a broadcast, Jean Giraudoux, Commissioner General of Information, called the German-Russian move for peace "blackmail" and added that Britain and France were fighting against "the barbarism of one of the most modern and well-organized nations of Europe."

Lebrun Visits Front

At the same time foreign observers here said they considered the visit of French President Albert Lebrun to the front lines as a further indication that France was making no plans to accept any peace proposals which result from Russia and Germany splitting up Poland, France's eastern ally.

Giraudoux said Hitler and Stalin were trying to force an "eastern peace" on Europe.

Such a peace he described as regimentation of other nations to conform to Hitler's and Stalin's ideas of government.

In a previous speech Premier Daladier declared flatly France is fighting to prevent her own "enslavement" by Germany.

Munich Anniversary

Giraudoux recalled that just a year ago today at Munich Hitler promised a new peace which "would help carry Europe ahead into a future of labor, health and honor."

He declared in his broadcast that Hitler counted on soon making peace in the west on the model of that in the east.

"Perhaps Hitler will propose it to us," he asserted, "on the condition that we deny not only our treaties and our tastes, our convictions, our religions and our liberties. He will give us what he calls peace—that is a short delay which permits Germany to digest its prey and to forge arms to snare its next prey."

Seek To Reestablish Poland

Informed sources close to the Government left no doubt the French and British war aims included the reestablishment of Poland as an independent state.

That, French diplomats pointed out, automatically eliminated any chance of a German-Russian dictated peace on the basis of the partition of Poland.

"How can it be maintained," a semi-official French analysis of the new situation asked, "that this destruction of Poland can eliminate all cause for conflict in the East? What future would this permit for other nations?"

Seek To Shift Flame, Charge

Another officially approved statement said France greeted the Russian-German "peace offensive" as merely "an effort by aggressor states to put the blame for the war on victims of the aggression."

Havas, news agency with close Government connections, summed up the French reaction with the statement:

"France and Britain entered the war to halt the realization of German hegemony. They are fighting for their security and for the security of all civilized states which Germany wishes to dominate and menaces."

Fighting In Moselle Valley

The heaviest fighting of the last twenty-four hours was down the Moselle river valley, where military advices said the French advanced 1,500 yards to the outskirts of the German villages of Besch and Borg.

A light German counter-attack half a mile to the east was said to have been repulsed.

Heavy French artillery fire, the dispatches said, drove the Germans out of the woods bordering the highroad leading to Borg. Then the infantry, preceded by tanks, dug in to hold it. The first infantry patrols were said to have found wounded Germans left in the woods.

Artillery Active

The evening communique reported enemy artillery fire east of the Saar river, especially south of Zweibrücken and Pirmasens, and activity of "observation and reconnaissance aviation of both sides."

Give and take advance guard action centered between Saarbrücken and the Moselle river valley.

The French were more interested in long-distance observation raids over Germany. Pilots reported that, simultaneous with German-Russian peace moves, there was accelerated movement of German troops from Poland to the west.

This bore out, French commentators said, the previously expressed belief that a Hitler peace effort would be backed by the threat of an extended offensive.

Threat Of Participation

The Moscow declaration clause providing "further consultation" in the event the French and British refused to make peace was considered by these observers to hold a threat of active Russian participation.

The French let it be known, however, through semi-official statements, that they did not take this too seriously.

The declaration that Germany and Russia woud consult, these statements said, was "the least two states associated for common political action could do."

The fact that the German-Russian treaty specifically mentioned possible continuation of the war between Germany and France and Britain, it was pointed out by French statements, seemed to indicate Russia had not decided to abandon formal neutrality.

The Polish Ambassador, Julius Lukasiewicz, handed the French Foreign Ministry a declaration that his government never would accept the German-Russian proposals. The fact that the French gave wide publicity to the Polish declaration, which said the Poles counted on France and Britain to carry on the war until final victory, was considered by foreign diplomatic observers as an indication that any formal proposals from Berlin and Moscow would be turned down promptly if and when made.

Polish Envoys Protest Terms of Proposed Peace

London and Paris Are Urged to Reject Plan

PARIS, Sept. 29 (AP).—Jules Lukasiewicz, Polish Ambassador at Paris, appealed to France today to reject the German-Russian bid for peace on the basis of partition of Poland.

He called at the Foreign Ministry with a note declaring his government never would accept the terms of the German-Russian accord reached in Moscow.

The Ambassador said his government counted on France and Great Britain to prosecute the war against Germany until victory would bring the reconstitution of Poland.

Sinking Of Three More Ships Of Neutrals Laid To U-Boats

Fourth Is Mine Victim—North Sea Crossing Without Convoy Declared Impossible

[By the Associated Press]

Copenhagen, Sept. 29—Three neutral ships sunk in Scandinavian waters during the thirty-six hours ending tonight were declared by survivors to have been victims of submarine attacks. A fourth went down after striking a mine. No lives were lost.

In all, nine ships have been sunk in northern waters since September 22, when the Akenside, 4,000-ton British freighter loaded with coal, was torpedoed off Hisoi Island on Norway's southeastern coast.

The recent sinkings emphasized the statement of Captain Gebrielsen, of the 875-ton Norwegian freighter Jern, sunk yesterday off Kristiansand, that it was "impossible now to get across the North Sea except by convoy." He said a submarine sank his ship.

Barrier Of Submarines

"Germany has a barrier of submarines cooperating with airplanes," he declared.

The crew of the Jern—believed the first Norwegian ship to be torpedoed during the war—reached Kristiansand today, bringing first word of the ship's sinking.

Before this news was received that the Takstaas, 1,830-ton Norwegian freighter, had been torpedoed early today in Korsfjord, one of the steamer entrances to Bergen on the west Norwegian coast.

Shortly afterward came information that the 2,000-ton Norwegian Salaas struck a mine and sank in the North Sea off the Danish coast.

The third ship reported torpedoed in the thirty-six-hour period was the 3,378-ton Swedish cargo vessel, Nyland, loaded with iron bound for Antwerp. She was sunk early yesterday off Feisten Lighthouse in the vicinity of Stavanger, Norway. The boat had been taken captive the night before.

The Swedish Minister in Berlin protested the sinking of the Nyland, emphasizing that the cargo was exclusively intended for Belgium and thus was excluded from the contraband list. Demanding compensation, he said the sinking was contrary to international rights.

Nine Sunk To Date

Casualties in Scandinavian waters now include three Norwegian ships, three Swedish, two Finnish, among the neutrals, and the British Akenside. Total tonnage was 20,885.

Six of the ships carried wood pulp—which is on Germany's contraband list. Five of them were bound for England, one for Antwerp.

Denmark is the only Scandinavian country whose vessels have not been attacked.

PINCH OF WAR

[By the Associated Press]

Vaduz, Liechtenstein, Sept. 29—Liechtenstein, Europe's "postage stamp" principality, felt the pinch of war today.

While most of western Europe took military precautions when war began, Liechtenstein, her sixty-five square miles sandwiched between Switzerland and Germany, did little more than thank her stars that she was linked closely with Switzerland after Austria became part of Germany.

Armed Swiss customs guards patrolled Liechtenstein's mountainous frontier today. Liechtenstein has no army.

Germans Tighten Border

Germans, tightening their border control, last night forced those of the principality's 10,000 inhabitants who have been accustomed to graze their cattle in German fields to remain in their own meadows.

War has hit the principality's two main sources of income—the sale of postage stamps and taxes from great holding companies drawn to Liechtenstein by liberal corporation laws.

In 1914, linked with the Austro-Hungarian customs system, Liechtenstein was hit by the same blockade which struck the Central Powers. Since January, 1924, Liechtenstein has been included in the Swiss customs union.

Liechtenstein has watched with greatest interest Switzerland's effort to preserve neutrality and retain economic independence, for as Switzerland goes so goes Liechtenstein.

HUNGARIAN NAZIS QUIT PARLIAMENT

50 Green Shirts Stalk Out After Angry Scene.

BUDAREST, Sept. 29 (A. P.).—Fifty green-shirted Nazi deputies stalked out of Parliament today, threatening resistance to the Government after an angry scene in which the speaker of the lower House refused to alter the rules to suit them.

Headed by their "Little Fuehrer," Kalman Hubay, the deputies had demanded the right to speak for the release of their "Big Fuehrer," Major Ferenc Szalasi, from the concentration camp where he has been interned for more than a year.

The speaker reminded them that Hubay was not inscribed on the day's list of speakers and, therefore, was barred from taking the floor under House rules.

Mongols on Hungarian Border

VERECZKE, Hungary (on the Hungarian-Russian Border), Sept. 29 (AP).—Tall Mongolian cavalrymen, members of a Caucasian Tartar regiment, took over this snowbound frontier post today for Soviet Russia. They came to "bring peace to the Poles," a sergeant said.

King Boris Wraps Gift For Soviet Dignitaries

Twenty Pounds Of Bulgaria's Choicest Cigarettes Addressed By Monarch Himself

Sofia, Sept. 29 (AP)—Cigarettes wrapped by King Boris himself were reported today to have been dispatched to Moscow as a royal gift to Soviet Union dignitaries.

It as said twenty pounds of Bulgaria's choicest cigarettes were carried to the Russian capital by Col. Vasil Boydeff, chief of the Bulgarian air force.

The cigarettes bore Boris' insignia and were addressed by the King in separate packages to Joseph Stalin, secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist party; Vyacheslaff Molotoff, Premier-Foreign Commissar, and Marshal Klementi E. Voroshiloff, War Commissar.

RUMANIA IN NEW PACT WITH REICH

Trade Agreement Reached in Bucharest Talks.

BUCHAREST, Sept. 29 (A. P.).—A new Rumanian-German trade agreement was concluded tonight after more than a week of negotiation.

The chief point of discussion had been settlement of Rumania's indebtedness under the barter agreement already in force, amounting to 50,000,000 marks (about $20,000,000).

German firms involved had delivered armaments, especially airplanes, machines and other merchandise. Rumanian exports to Germany, however, had fallen off sharply during the last six weeks owing to the shortage of freight cars caused by mobilization.

Rumania strengthened her Bessarabian border defenses today by replacing the Fifth Army Corps with the more highly mechanized and mobile Second Corps.

Bessarabia, an area of 17,146 miles, was gained by Rumania from Russia at the end of the world war, and the Russians steadfastly have considered it "occupied territory."

SEP 30 1939

Rumanian Army Enlarged

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Sept. 29 (AP)—Rumania shifted her armed forces today for protection against powerful neighbors peering over her borders at rich areas they lost to her in the World War settlement.

Her army, the largest in the Balkans, was steadily being strengthened, in case all peace plans for Southeastern Europe failed.

The most important move was strengthening the Bessarabian border defense, facing Soviet Russia, by replacing the Fifth Army Corps with the more highly mechanized and mobile Second Corps.

Rumanian interest in diplomatic discussions at Moscow involving the Soviet, German and Turkish Foreign Ministers, which may have a tremendous effect on Rumania's future, grew even more intense because of the expected early departure for Moscow of the Bulgarian Prime Minister, George Kiosseivanoff.

Bulgaria is one of three powers which has demanded return of territory now Rumanian. Russia and Hungary are the others.

The transfer of government records from Bessarabian cities was started, but the government insisted the action had no connection with the present situation and was merely a continuance of a policy of centralizing the archives.

These moves followed the appointment as Premier of Constantine Argetoianu, who played an important role in drawing Rumania to the side of the Allies in the World War.

The winding Dniester River, which marks the boundary between Rumania and the Russian-occupied section of Poland and Rumania's Bessarabian provinces and Russia, is spanned by only two bridges.

Red armies now hold the Polish end of the bridge at Zalescycki, which connects with the highway to Cernauti. The bridge was mined by Rumanian troops, but Soviet forces were reported to have removed the explosive charge.

Soviet forces also are in positions at the Russian end of the steel 500-yard, two-deck bridge over the lower Dniester connecting Tiraspol with Tighina on the Rumanian side.

On the diplomatic front, a German-Rumanian trade agreement was successfully concluded after more than a week of negotiations, renewing and broadening previous agreements.

The chief point of discussion was settlement of Rumania's 50,000,000 marks (about $20,000,000) indebtedness under the barter agreement already in force.

The German envoys sought unsuccessfully to increase the mark exchange rate from 40.50 to 45 lei.

Rumania was successful in stepping up her import contingents of coke from 22,000 to 70,000 tons and of pig iron from 45,000 to 54,000 tons. The oil quota for Germany remained unchanged, namely, one-fourth of the total value of Rumania's exports to Germany.

Armaments, especially airplanes, machines and other merchandise had been delivered by German firms involved, although Rumanian exports to Germany had fallen off during the last six weeks due to the shortage of freight cars caused by mobilization.

FIRE ON PREMIER'S ESTATE

Rumanian Blaze That Swept Several Buildings Is Studied

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Sept. 29 (AP)—Rumanian secret police today investigated a mysterious fire on the estate of Constantine Argetoianu, who became Rumania's Premier last night. A mill and several other buildings on the estate were destroyed.

Officials said that the outlawed Iron Guard, members of which were held responsible for the recent death of Premier Armand Calinescu, had been active in the region where the estate is located.

NAZIS SAID TO SEEK YUGOSLAV FOOD

Berlin Believed Demanding $5,000,000 Payment.

BELGRADE, Sept. 29 (A. P.).—The German Economic Mission received yesterday by Foreign Minister Alexander Cincarmarkovic was reported unofficially today to be demanding immediate delivery by Yugoslavia of $5,000,000 worth of meat, grain and fats.

Yugoslavia owes Germany more than $13,000,000 for long-term credit purchases of machinery, due in six to eight years. Germany was reported to be asking that more than one-third be paid immediately in goods.

The German delegation was believed anxious to assure the Reich of the lion's share of Yugoslavia's exports before the Belgrade Government could begin commercial talks with Moscow.

Diplomats noted that the German Mission arrived within a few days after the recent announcement that resumption of relations with the Soviet, after a twenty-year lapse, was contemplated.

THREE NORWEGIAN FREIGHTERS SUNK, TWO BY TORPEDOES

One of Ships Is Victim of Mine—All of Crews Are Rescued.

SEP 30 1939

OSLO, Norway, Sept. 29 (A. P.).—Three Norwegian freighters were sunk today and yesterday in the North Sea, but no lives were lost.

Survivors of two sinkings said their ships were torpedoed—the first losses of Norwegian shipping ascribed to submarines since the war began.

The third ship was said to have struck a mine, as had the Norwegian motorship Ronda on September 13. Seventeen lives were lost in the Ronda disaster.

The latest ships sunk were:

The Takstaas, 1,830 tons, reported torpedoed early today off Marstein on the Norwegian coast. The crew took to their lifeboats and rowed to shore.

The Jern, 875 tons, sunk yesterday afternoon off Kristiansand. Members of the crew of fifteen said the commander of a submarine gave them fifteen minutes to get into their lifeboat before their ship was torpedoed. They were picked up by the Swedish steamship Caledonia, later transferred to a Norwegian coast patrol boat which put them ashore at Kristiansand.

The Salaas, 2,000 tons, struck a mine in the North Sea. The crew escaped before she went down.

Both the Takstaas and the Jern were loaded with woodpulp. The German legation announced that all sorts of wood now are considered by Germany to be contraband. The cargo of the Salaas was not disclosed.

Capt. Gebrielsen of the Jern said it was "impossible now to get across the North Sea except by convoys."

"Germany has a barrier of submarines co-operating with airplanes," he declared.

Rome Hopes for Peace.

ROME, Sept. 29 (A. P.).—Italian officials said today that they hoped that the German-Soviet Russian accord just announced in Moscow would lead Britain and France to settle their war with Germany.

They said that the announcement that Germany and Russia would seek a settlement was in line with the already expressed Italian desire for such a termination of the conflict.

They regarded Italy as among the "friendly powers" which the German-Russian declaration said might aid in bringing about a settlement, but expressed doubt that Italy would take any formal initiative unless requested.

Official sources said that Germany had supplied Italy with an official report on the new Moscow accord.

Air Offensive Expected.

An Italian report from Berlin that Germany would refrain from starting an offensive on the western front, but probably would try to break the British blockade with air attacks, was widely published in the Fascist press.

Stefani, the Italian news agency, said that leaving the "honors and risks" of a land offensive to the British and French, Germany intends to rely mainly on her air force, which is developing new types of planes and bombs from war experience.

The agency said that there was a "conviction widespread among the German people that at a given moment a counter-offensive to the English blockade will be started by German aviation and that the German command is getting its effectives ready."

JAPANESE DEFEAT

SEP 30 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Shanghai, Sept. 29—Chinese reports said today Japanese troops driving toward Changsha, capital of Hunan province, had fallen back before a counter-offensive by thousands of fresh Chinese fighters. The Japanese continued to report advances within twenty miles of the city.

(At Hongkong, Chinese sources denied earlier Japanese reports that Changsha was in flames and her defenders fleeing. They told of advices that the city was quiet and her defenders were "steadily resisting Japanese attacks." Chungking spokesmen asserted the week-old Japanese offensive had cost the attackers 70,000 men and 60 craft used in landing troops from Tungting lake.)

In Kiangsi province the Chinese were said to have defeated the Japanese, virtually halting a Japanese drive near Kaoan.

Chungking, Sept. 29 (AP)—Suburban areas of Chungking, where the city's air fields and industrial enterprises are situated, were heavily bombed last night by Japanese warplanes.

Authorities declined to discuss results of the raid. The city proper was untouched.

Japanese bombers also attacked Chinese centers from 100 to 200 miles down the Yangtze river from Chungking after bombing suburban areas here.

—'BOSS OF BALTIC'—

SEP 30 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Helsinki, Finland, Sept. 29—Soviet Russia's shove into the German sea "domain" through a mutual-assistance pact with Estonia today sent a shiver of apprehenion throughout the Baltic states.

The ten-year pact permitting Russia to establish naval bases and airdromes on the Estonian islands of Saare Maa (Oesel) and Hiiuma (Dagoe) and in the port town of Paldiski (Baltiskii) put Russia into a position to become boss of the Baltic.

Taking Precautions

Latvia already has created a council of state for defense, and other northern states appeared likely to take precautionary action.

Reports here that Joseph Stalin himself conferred with the Estonian delegation, and that the delegation later met with a German group now in Moscow, only added to the nervousness of observers in Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia, who have been watching with alarm as Red warships maneuver off the Estonian coast and warplanes skim over Estonian housetops.

For 1914 Boundaries

The Russians, it was reported, wanted to deploy 25,000 soldiers over Estonia, but finally agreed to keep them at the naval bases.

The Finnish press asserted Chancellor Hitler planned to ask Stalin's participation in a peace ultimatum to England and France. If the ultimatum should be refused, the newspapers said, Hitler was prepared to give Russia, all of Poland, except pre-World War German areas, in return for military assistance.

NEUTRAL POLICY BEING DRAFTED

Declaration Designed to Keep Peace in Americas.

CONTRABAND LISTS STUDIED

SEP 30 1939

Conference at Panama Plans Plea to Humanize War.

PANAMA, Sept. 29 (A. P.).—A general neutrality declaration designed to keep peace in the Western Hemisphere and to cushion its nations against the shock of Europe's war was being drafted today by the Inter-American Conference neutrality sub-committee.

An appeal to belligerents to humanize war was also being formulated.

Meanwhile other delegates studied belligerent contraband lists, plans for inter-American police and methods for suppression of subversive activities which might endanger American neutrality.

Argentina was said to favor strongly the clamping down on activities of citizens of belligerents living in neutral States, prohibition of flights of belligerent aircraft over neutral territory and radio broadcasts regarded as harmful to neutrality.

Chance for Submarines.

Departing from a program submitted by the United States, Argentina urged that belligerent submarines be permitted to use neutral ports provided they entered afloat and flying their flag.

The Argentine plan also would allow three large belligerent war vessels or twelve smaller ships in a port simultaneously, but not for more than twenty-four hours. Submarines would be permitted to refuel sufficiently to reach the next port.

Argentina would bar blacklists (lists of firms believed to have connections with belligerent nations). This was regarded as a serious problem since many South American firms are foreign owned. It was recalled that during the world war the United States published a particularly broad blacklist.

Another Argentine proposal would allow neutral vessels to take essential supplies for neutral countries from the territories of either belligerent or neutral nations.

This plan, Argentine representatives said, was based on the argument that warring nations were not entitled to hinder the commerce of neutrals in articles not destined for military usage and "it's impossible to make exports if they are uncompensated at least partially by imports."

Chile Opposes New 300-mile Line.

Authoritative sources said that Chile was inclined to disapprove of a proposal that the conference extend territorial waters to a 300-mile line around the Americas.

These sources said that Chile preferred to contract rather than expand the territorial waters because of difficulties in patrolling such great areas.

The United States had offered to bear the brunt of such a patrol.

United States Under-Secretary of State Sumner Welles told the conference yesterday that the United States and Cuba "completely coincide on the basis of the project" and offered a map showing the proposed patrol zones.

The plenary sessions of the conference were postponed yesterday "until further notice" to allow the sub-committee to complete their work.

SEP 30 1939

Foreign Minister Narciso Garay of Panama, permanent president of the conference, said he hoped the meeting would be closed Monday night.

PERMANENT SURVEY GROUP IS PROPOSED

Committee Would Include 5 Monetary Experts As Advisers

SEP 30 1939

Would Try To Avert Excessive Exchange Fluctuations

1939

[By the Associated Press]

Panama, Panama, Sept. 29—Delegates to the Inter-American Neutrality Conference today took steps to step up trade between the Americas as a defense against a prolonged European war.

A special subcommittee proposed the creation of a permanent group with headquarters in Washington to study problems of commerce and finances between North and South America. The committee would include a group of five monetary experts in an advisory capacity on monetary and exchange problems.

The proposal was added to the already crowded calendar which was expected to delay the scheduled closing of the sessions tomorrow.

Would Avert Fluctuations

Delegates said the monetary council would attempt to avoid excessive exchange fluctuations brought on by war times. Many questions already submitted to the conference, including Brazil's proposal to study tariff discriminations and a possible customs truce, were incorporated in the project.

Work was speeded to crystallize various projects into a coordinated plan to preserve American interests.

Diplomats agreed on the need for a cooperative safety patrol of the seas with the understanding the United States would take the major part of the job of policing.

"Going Along Well"

Miguel Angel Campa, Cuban Secretary of State, said the safety zone would be "one of the most concrete" results of the sessions and that discussions of the proposed zone were "going along well."

Campa conferred with Sumner Welles, Under Secretary of State, and head of the United States delegation, in an attempt to agree on differences between the Cuban and United States proposals for the safety area.

Campa said the talks were proceeding "satisfactorily" as both plans "are the same in principle with only geographic differences."

Legislation Urged

The navigation subcommittee recommended that the republics enact legislation to prevent increased freight and insurance rates on merchant ships as "unjustified by the special costs and risks resulting from the present state."

Another resolution recommended bilateral agreements to maintain connecting maritime communications to safeguard passenger and freight traffic; study of the possibilities of lowering consular fees to a minimum to increase the speed of delivery of small cargoes, and lowering of port fees and other charges affecting merchant marine.

Uruguay's delegate, Pedro Manini Rios, declared the conference approved in principle a declaration against contraband lists, but the form of the statement had not been completed. Argentina took a stand against blacklists (lists of firms believed to have connections with belligerent nations), but this was considered a serious problem as many South American firms are foreign-owned.

Argentina Gives $500,000 Job To U. S. When Reich Defaults

By The Associated Press

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 29—The Argentine State Railways tonight announced the purchase of nearly $500,000 in railway tank cars from a United States company, in what informed circles interpreted to be an indication the United States may be asked to furnish equipment because of Germany's failure to fulfill a huge barter deal.

The state railways said 200 tank cars and parts, plus some steel parts of locomotives, were bought from the American Car and Foundry Company.

Several months ago Argentina contracted with Germany to exchange wheat and meat for 900 flatcars and parts, thirty sleepers and sixty-four Diesel light switching locomotives. However, officials said, Germany failed to deliver any of the equipment. They said only one shipload of wheat had been sent to Germany, and added they believed that was intercepted on the high seas and sunk by British blockaders. Germany was said to have posted a guaranty which was more than sufficient to cover the cost of the wheat.

CANADA ORGANIZES OVERSEAS FORCE

All Parts of Dominion to Be Represented.

OTTAWA, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press).—Canada's first expeditionary force—to be sent overseas when required—will be a division composed of complete units chosen from all parts of the Dominion and based as far as possible on population.

The units will come from the non-permanent active militia, the list to be published later, Defense Minister Norman Rogers announced today.

"The Canadian active force which is now under arms includes a reserve force of two divisions with a quota of ancillary troops," said Mr. Rogers. "From this force one division will be sent overseas when required and a second division will be kept under arms as a further measure of preparedness."

He gave no details of the organization of the division. In the world war a Canadian division consisted of about 16,000 men.

Mr. Rogers said arrangements were being made to send abroad certain technical units from the auxiliary troops which have been mobilized. They eventually will form part of the overseas forces.

Main recruiting centers of the Royal Canadian Air Force have been so swamped with applications that a temporary halt in these centers has been called.

So many young Canadians are eager to be war flyers that the air force was said to have had no time to take stock of the total number recruited.

The Defense Ministry said great care had been taken in the mobilization of the Canadian active force to insure equitable distribution throughout the domain "so as to give reasonably equal representation to every part of Canada on a basis of population."

"Thus," the Defense Minister said, "the desires and aspirations of each province have not been overlooked."

New Canadian Uniforms Resemble Ski Costumes

Loose Khaki Outfits Have No Puttees to Roll

OTTAWA, Sept. 29 (CP).—Loose uniforms that somewhat resembles skiing costumes will be the new khaki garb of the Canadian active service force.

There will be no buttons to shine and no puttees to roll.

The new uniform, to be issued as soon as factories can turn them out, consists of a roomy, wide-sleeved blouse, something halfway between the old-fashioned tunic and a civilian wind breaker, and loose trousers with a high waist and plenty of room around the hips.

At the ankles, the trousers have cloth tabs so they may be buttoned tight. On active duty the trousers will be buttoned andn inclosed beneath canvas gaiters about six inches high. Off duty, the trousers will look like ordinary slacks. Headgear is a wedge-shaped cap.

Australia Calls Up 20,000

MELBOURNE, Australia, Sept. 29 (AP).—Premier Robert Gordon Menzies announced today that Maj. Gen. Sir Thomas Albert Blamey would command a new force of 20,000 men being mobilized for service in Australia or overseas. He said also that the Australian War Cabinet would extend the naval program by building or purchasing an undisclosed number of small craft.

-NEUTRALITY-

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 29—Criticism of the Administration neutrality bill came unexpectedly today from new Senators who have approved the basic principle—repeal of the arms embargo.

Sponsors of the measure were confident, however, that a majority of the Senate favored it. They predicted that it would be passed within thee weeks after debate starts Monday.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved it 16 to 7 yesterday, but arranged another meeting today to act finally on the wording of various amendments.

The Bill's Provisions

Besides carrying out President Roosevelt's recommendation that belligerents be permitted to buy arms and munitions in the United States, the bill would:

1. Limit credit to belligerent Governments on all purchases in this country to ninety days. There would be no restriction on credits allowed to private citizens and companies of belligerent nations, but the Munitions Control Board would inform Congress every six months regarding the nature and extent of these, and Congress could restrict them if it deemed advisable.

2. Require belligerents to take title in this country to all goods purchased and carry them home in their own or non-American ships.

3. Permit the President to designate "combat areas" in which American citizens and ships could not travel.

Wants All Credit Restricted

Senator Robert A. Taft (Rep., Ohio), a supporter of embargo repeal, told reporters that the credit restrictions should apply to individuals living in belligerent countries as well as to belligerent Governments.

"Under this bill," he said, "there would be no reason why a privately owned munitions company could not buy all the goods it wanted on whatever terms it could get."

Would Change Ship Rules

Taft also criticized provisions which would prevent American ships from carrying cargoes or passengers to such territories of belligerents as New Zealand and Australia.

"I think the law should declare a general war zone around Europe," he said, "and should permit free operation of American shipping in other areas."

Colorado's two Democratic Senators—Alva B. Adams and Edwin C. Johnson—voiced disapproval of some of the bill's provisions. Both have supported the principle of arms-embargo repeal.

"Outrageous," Says Adams

Adams called the measure "outrageous" and told reporters he would offer an amendment to eliminate every provision except that repealing the arms embargo. He said the bill would surrender the traditional American policy of freedom of the seas, and he complained particularly of a provision imposing jail sentences on Americans who traveled in forbidden combat areas.

"For years," he said, "we've been fighting to preserve the rights of our citizens and now we propose to make felons out of them when they try to exercise their rights."

Johnson's Criticisms

Johnson criticized the credit provisions, saying:

"There is nothing to keep an individual in a belligerent country from buying in large quantities and turning the goods over to the Government."

He said also that war zones should be designated by the belligerents instead of by the President.

"I can't support the bill as it stands now," he declared.

Murray Wary On Credit

Senator James E. Murray (Dem., Mont.), who voted in the Foreign Relations Committee yesterday to send the bill to the Senate floor, also asserted that credit restrictions might well be strengthened.

The committee has revamped the shipping section to let American vessels and planes carry passengers to British and French ports in the Caribbean and South America, refuel in those ports and transport goods—such as airplane parts—which might be necessary for repair work. Neither armaments nor other cargoes could be unloaded at belligerent ports.

Capper Defends Arms Ban

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29—Senator Capper, Republican of Kansas, speaking tonight at a mass meeting sponsored by several peace organizations, said:

"I am opposed to the United States taking part in this European war," he said. "It is not our war.

"Repeal of the arms embargo, in my judgment, is a definite and certain step toward war."

By radio, Senator Schwellenbach said the United States must and would stay out of the war. And the best way for accomplishing that purpose, he added, was the passage of the Administration neutrality legislation, including the repeal of the embargo.

Earlier in the day Senator Schwellenbach visited President Roosevelt and told him that the Administration bill would win sixty-three of the Senate's ninety-six votes.

Senator Walsh sent a message to the anti-war mass meeting in which he expressed the opinion that repeal of the arms embargo would "in all probability result in our involvement in the European war."

Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, said that repeal of the embargo "would be a declaration of economic war against one side" in the European struggle.

Senator Herring, Democrat, of Iowa, asserted in a radio address that he was supporting the Administration's neutrality stand "without reservation."

"It is urged," said Herring, "that to repeal the present embargo upon the limited list of war materials would be an act of unneutrality because it would definitely favor one group of belligerents. If this be admitted, then it must be equally true that the embargo is now aiding another group of belligerents."

CHANGES MADE IN BILL

Revisions Designed to Clarify It Are Made Known

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29 (AP)—Changes in the Neutrality Bill, designed to clarify, were made known today.

The following is substituted for Section 2F, beginning "the provisions" and ending "Western Hemisphere":

"(f) The provisions of subsection (a) of this section shall not apply to transportation by American vessels on or over lakes, rivers and inland waters bordering on the United States, or to transportation by aircraft on or over lands bordering on the United States; and the provisions of subsection (c) of this section shall not apply to such transportation of mail, personal effects of any individual on any such vessel, and necessary supplies for any such vessel.

PRESIDENT MUM ON WAR PLANS

Says We're Not Going Into the Conflict.

SO WHY TALK ABOUT THEM?

Also Declines to Comment on Neutrality Bill.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt told a press conference today that since the United States was not in the war and was not going into it, he saw no public interest at this time in war and industrial mobilization plans being considered by various government and private boards.

Frequent attempts by reporters to get him to talk about these war policy and industrial preparedness plans evoked reiteration that such reports were brought up to date from time to time and since this country was not a party and did not intend to become a party to the present conflict there was no reason to make public the reports.

The President said that army and navy boards prepare defense plans every year.

Nothing Controversial.

From time to time, he added, special boards, such as the present War Resources Board, take up other phases that fit in with defense plans.

There was no controversy involved in any of them, he said.

Asked what the resources board would report on, he said that the members had been studying the possibility of industrial expansion, location and stepping up of industry, relationship of transportation to industry, added power facilities, various forms of administrative handling, and the relationship of agriculture to industry.

Prices also had been investigated, he added, with the idea that cost of living was not to be increased and that prices were not going through the roof. Again and again he asserted such reports were based on the thought of the United States entering the war, but he emphasized that this Government had no such thought.

The President said several days ago that the Resources Board, headed by Edward R. Stettinius Jr., chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, would make its report soon and then would be disbanded.

Asked today whether the board would be recalled in event of an emergency, the Chief Executive said that he did not expect an emergency.

Responding to further questions, Mr. Roosevelt said that war mobilization plans had been changed from time to time since 1921 and that the last he had seen was the 1936 plan.

No Embargo Comment.

Several times Mr. Roosevelt declined to comment on the neutrality bill reported out by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday, indicating he wanted to keep hands off and let Congress work out the problem.

He said that there had been a number of reports recently of the presence of submarines of unknown nationality near American shores, but that none had been verified.

Asked whether any tankers that might be supplying belligerent submarines had been noticed, he said that he had no reports of tankers except one sighted by the American patrol off Cuba several days ago. This tanker was painted a war gray, flew no flag, and had her name painted out, but after investigation was reported to be on a legitimate and peaceful voyage.

Questions about the proposed 300-mile naval patrol zone for the Americas discussed at the Pan-American Conference brought no comment or response from the President.

—FLEET VS. PLANES—

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 29.—The disputed raid of German bombers on a British sea force inclined military experts here today to the view that the Nazis may weaken but will not break the British naval blockade with warplanes.

Until the final reports are in, these experts are accepting Winston Churchill's statement that the North Sea attack by a score or so aircraft was beaten off without damage.

Would Upset U. S. Strategy

If German claims should be borne out that a British aircraft carrier was sunk and a battleship crippled, a lot of American as well as British experts will be confounded and there may have to be a searching revision of American defense strategy.

Congress voted a billion-dollar expansion of the fleet last year largely on the strength of official assurances that a bomber can sink a battleship, but probably will not and that a navy still rules at sea.

Spectacular Raids Likely

Germany, by all indications, intends to employ her aerial might to the full. Far more spectacular raids may thus be expected than Tuesday's North Sea attack, the onslaught on a British cruiser off the Scottish coast reported yesterday, and the British aid raid on German naval bases when the war started.

Bombing of merchant ship convoys is in prospect also. The huge German air force—some reports say it is double that of the British and French combined—and the relatively short distances of the war area in North Sea and English Channel all favor such attacks.

Expect Blockade To Continue

Nevertheless, there appears to be strong American naval opinion that the blockade of the German fleet and of German sea traffic will be maintained as one of the decisive weapons of the war.

The British have been preparing for years to meet air assaults as well as for another U-boat campaign. Parliament was told less than three years ago, after an exhaustive official inquiry, that air warfare at sea "undoubtedly will increase," but will not "assume paramount importance."

Cruisers Converted

Two British cruisers were converted into anti-aircraft batteries, each armed with ten 4-inch and fourteen smaller weapons to reinforce the air-raid guns of more conventional warships. On the eve of the war, it was understood that three other cruisers were to be similarly converted.

Work has been rushed on five new aircraft carriers to reinforce the six remaining after the Courageous was sunk.

Former Warsaw Attache Will Go To Netherlands

War Department Announces Transfer Of Major W. H. Colbern, Forced Out Of Poland

Washington, Sept. 29 (AP)—Major William H. Colbern, former American military attache at Warsaw, who was forced out of Poland by advancing Nazi troops, was ordered transferred to the Netherlands today by the War Department.

In another move evidencing official efforts to assure full military information from the European war front, Lieut. Col. Barnwell R. Legge has been shifted from Paris to Bern, Switzerland, near the southern terminus of the Western front.

Major Colbern, 44-year-old Missourian, is now at Bucharest, Rumania. He will relieve Lieut. Col. Robert D. Brown, attache at Brussels, who has been reporting on Netherlands developments.

Held in Navy Yard Spy Scare

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 29 (AP).—The Navy Yard had its first spy scare since the outbreak of the European war today when a man described by police as a "suspicious character" was captured by Marines as he attempted to climb a fence near the yard's entrance. The man told police he served with the German air force in the World War. He was held for questioning.

DEFENSE PROGRAM FOR PEACE CITED

Woodring Declares U. S. Will Be Enabled To Speak With Authority

Benefits Of Army To Nation Stressed On 150th Birthday Anniversary

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Sept. 29—Harry H. Woodring, Secretary of War, said today on the army's one hundred and fiftieth birthday that the national defenses were being reinforced to enable the United States to speak "with authority" for peace.

The Administration, he said in a broadcast address, "has determined that in so far as lies within its power, the mailed fist of Mars shall not extend across the oceans to pound upon the Americas."

"Hence," he added, "the current precautionary program for strengthening the armaments of our protective forces; hence the recently directed movements of reinforcing units to the Isthmus of Panama and the island of Puerto Rico; hence the President's executive order authorizing modest increases in the enlisted strengths of the regular army and National Guard."

Day Passes Quietly

The War Secretary's address represented the principal observance of an anniversary virtually unmarked by flag waving or martial music. "The army is too busy for celebration," it was announced in advance.

Throughout his address Woodring stressed the army's constructive role in peace since it was created as a permanent Federal establishment on September 29, 1789.

Army men were pathfinders of the West, built historic roads and canals, surveyed the Great Lakes, international and State boundaries, constructed lighthouses, public buildings and the Panama Canal, conquered tropical diseases, and now have charge of navigation and flood-control improvements, he noted.

Heritage Of Army

"Those soldiers of the past have bequeathed to the soldiers of the present a heritage of loyalty and devotion to duty, continuously manifested throughout the army's history," he continued.

"Americans may be assured that their land defenders of the present day will assume the responsibilties of the national defense with all the stanchness of purpose—in peace, and, if it is ever fated to come, in war—that characterized the services of their gallant predecessors."

INCREASE IN ARMY TO BE ASKED SOON

May Has Conference With Roosevelt on Size.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29 (A. P.).—Representative May, Democrat, of Kentucky, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, said after a White House conference today that a further increase in the enlisted strength of the army probably would be sought at the session of Congress beginning in January.

Mr. May did not mention any figure, but noted that the President already has ordered the army increased to 227,000. The full peacetime authorized strength is 280,000.

Describing his conference with President Roosevelt as preliminary to further defense plans, Mr. May said as to the army:

"There will be some expansion of course."

He added that the administration would move with caution until developments abroad were understood more thoroughly. He said the question also arose as to the excessive cost of maintaining a larger establishment year after year.

Already nearly 350 times its original size, the United States Army reached its 150th birthday anniversary today, but was too busy expanding to celebrate.

Increasing its might faster than in any other time of peace, the army is creating a $300,000,000 fleet of 5,500 warplanes and acquiring new guns and other munitions. President Roosevelt recently directed that 17,000 additional men be recruited promptly.

The regular army came into being on September 29, 1789, when Congress formally recognized an existing force of State militia "to be the establishment for the troops in the service of the United States." Official records list just 595 officers and men—an "army" about a third the size of a modern regiment at peace strength.

This Federal force succeeded the motley army of about 20,000 State militiamen assembled at Cambridge, Mass., in 1776, to fight the British, with Gen. George Washington as commander-in-chief.

The Federal Army in 1789 was made up of four companies of infantry, comprising a regiment and a battalion of artillery.

The regular army now numbers about 205,000 officers and men. The National Guard counts some 200,000.

AS THE FIRST CONTINGENTS OF AN ESTIMATED 120,000 DISARMED POLES WERE REPORTED TO HAVE BEGUN MARCHING INTO GERMAN CAPTIVITY, IT WAS BELIEVED TWO OR THREE DAYS WOULD BE NEEDED FOR THE LAST OF THE DEFEATED DEFENSE FORCE TO MARCH OUT.

THE HIGH COMMAND ANNOUNCED FIVE OF SIX BRITISH WARPLANES HAD BEEN SHOT DOWN BY GERMAN PURSUIT PLANES AFTER A FRUITLESS ATTACK ON GERMAN NAVAL UNITS AT HELGOLAND, GERMAN NAVAL BASE IN THE NORTH SEA.

(A LONDON OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT REPORTING THE RAID SAID THAT "IN SPITE OF FORMIDABLE ANTIAIRCRAFT FIRE THE ATTACKS WERE PRESSED HOME AT A LOW ALTITUDE. SOME OF OUR AIRCRAFT HAVE NOT YET RETURNED.")

IN COMMENTING ON THE GERMAN-RUSSIAN AGREEMENTS REACHED IN MOSCOW BY FOREIGN MINISTER VON RIBBENTROP, GOVERNMENT QUARTERS EMPHASIZED THE GERMAN DESIRE FOR WHAT GERMANY CONCEIVES AS "A CONSTRUCTIVE PEACE."

BUT JUST AS EMPHATIC, THEY SAID, WAS THE CONDITION THAT EASTERN EUROPE MUST BE ACKNOWLEDGED TO BE A GERMAN SPHERE OF INTEREST.

SEP 30 1939

AUTHORITATIVE COMMENTATORS HESITATED TO CALL A "PEACE OFFER" THE RUSSIA-GERMAN DECLARATION WHICH PLEDGED THE TWO NATIONS TO CONCENTRATE THEIR EFFORTS "IF NECESSARY IN COOPERATION WITH THE OTHER FRIENDLY POWERS" TO END THE WAR BETWEEN GERMANY AND THE BRITISH AND FRENCH AND TO "CONSULT EACH OTHER AS TO NECESSARY MEASURES" IF BRITAIN AND FRANCE REBUFFED THEM.

SEP 30 1939

(BOTH BRITISH AND FRENCH INFORMED QUARTERS DECLARED THE RUSSIAN-GERMAN ACTION HAD LEFT UNCHANGED THEIR DECISION TO CARRY ON THE WAR AGAINST GERMANY.)

THEY PREFERRED INSTEAD TO DESCRIBE IT AS "AN EXPOSITION OF THE TERMS ON THE BASIS OF WHICH ENGLAND AND FRANCE MIGHT GIVE UP A HOPELESS AND PURPOSELESS WAR."

NOTHING APPEARED OFFICIALLY KNOWN OF ANY PEACE MEDIATION FROM ANY OUTSIDE QUARTER.

QUESTIONS REGARDING WHAT GERMANY WOULD DO WITH THE POLISH TERRITORY SHE WILL GET UNDER THE RUSSIAN-GERMAN AGREEMENT APPEARED TO BE UP TO HITLER HIMSELF FOR DECISION.

THERE WAS SOME SPECULATION THAT BOHEMIA-MORAVIA, WHERE A PROTECTORATE GIVES A MEASURE OF LOCAL AUTONOMY, MIGHT SERVE AS A PATTERN FOR A NEW ORDER IN THE GERMAN-OCCUPIED PART OF POLAND.

A GOVERNMENT SPOKESMAN SAID, HOWEVER, SUCH A SUGGESTION WOULD DEPEND IN LARGE MEASURE ON WHETHER ADEQUATE LEADERSHIP COULD BE FOUND IN POLAND TO EXERCISE AUTONOMY UNDER GERMAN CONDITIONS.

GERMANS SAID THEY REGARDED WITH FRIENDLY INTEREST THE MUTUAL ASSISTANCE PACT BETWEEN RUSSIA AND ESTONIA AND RAISED NO OBJECTION TO THE MILITARY PRIVILEGES RUSSIA WON.

INSPIRED EDITORIAL COMMENT AT THE SAME TIME INDICATED GERMANY NOW WAS IN A POSITION TO UNDERTAKE "NATURAL RELATIONS" WITH THE BALKANS.

IN POLAND THERE STILL WERE SOME SMALL GROUPS OF POLES OFFERING RESISTANCE IN SCATTERED SPOTS.

IT WAS ESTIMATED THERE WERE ABOUT 2,000 STILL HOLDING OUT ON THE HELA PENINSULA, SLENDER FINGER OF LAND AT THE ENTRANCE OF THE BAY OF DANZIG.

WHATSPER

SEP 30 1939

NOR DOES GERMANY WANT TO DICTATE HUMILATING TERMS TO ENGLAND AND FRANCE, IT WAS EMPHASIZED.

THIS STATEMENT, MADE AFTER BEAMING VON RIBBENTROP REPORTED TO HIS EQUALLY ENTHUSIASTIC FUEHRER, WAS DESCRIBED AS A "PEACE GESTURE BROUGHT ABOUT BY EVENTS THEMSELVES."

AMONG THE "NEW FACTS" WHICH WERE SAID TO STRENGTHEN THE GERMAN HAND WAS THE PLAIN INTIMATION THAT UNDER CERTAIN CIRCUMSTANCES MILITARY COOPERATION BETWEEN RUSSIA AND GERMANY WAS POSSIBLE.

IT WAS POINTED OUT IN NAZI QUARTERS, FOR INSTANCE, THAT IF ANY POWER ON EARTH NOW SOUGHT TO RE-ESTABLISH THE REPUBLIC OF POLAND, IT WOULD BE OPPOSING NOT ONLY GERMANY, BUT ALSO RUSSIA.

SEP 30 1939

ALSO, IT WAS SAID, AS FAR AS GERMANY IS CONCERNED THERE IS NO CHANGE IN ATTITUDE TOWARD THE BALTIC STATES.

IT WAS HINTED THERE MIGHT BE MORE DIPLOMATIC SURPRISES "FROM WHICH ENGLAND WILL DERIVE NO HAPPINESS" WHEN THE RESULTS OF TURKISH-RUSSIAN NEGOTIATIONS BECOME KNOWN.

BY FRED VANDERSCHMIDT

SEP 30 1939

LONDON, SEPT. 30--(AP)--BRITAIN TONIGHT PRESENTED A FRONT OF STEELY RESISTANCE TO THE MOSCOW PEACE GESTURE WHICH GERMANY AND RUSSIA BACKED BY AN IMPLIED THREAT OF JOINT ACTION IF THE WESTERN ALLIES DO NOT ACCEPT THEIR TERMS.

THE SOVIET-GERMAN MOVE, WHICH INCLUDED THE PARTITIONING OF POLAND, BRITAIN'S ALLY, WAS SEEN IN AUTHORITATIVE QUARTERS AS AN EFFORT TO "FRIGHTEN" FRANCE AND ENGLAND INTO ENDING HOSTILITIES.

NEWSPAPER PLACARDS FLAPPING FROM BACKDROPS OF SANDBAGS ON THE STRAND AND PICADILLY SCREAMED "PEACE THREAT."

PENDING A FORMAL STATEMENT WHICH PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN WILL MAKE TO THE HOUSE OF COMMONS MONDAY, REACTION TO THE SOVIET-GERMAN AGREEMENT AND PEACE GESTURE DID NOT CARRY OFFICIAL STAMP, BUT AUTHORITATIVE PERSONS IN POSITION TO PRESENT THE GOVERNMENT'S OPINIONS MADE THESE POINTS:

FIRST, IT IS A SUPREME "BOGEY MAN" EFFORT TO FRIGHTEN BRITAIN AND FRANCE INTO PEACE, BUT IT WILL NOT ALTER IN ANY WAY BRITAIN'S DETERMINATION TO CONTINUE THE WAR UNTIL "HITLERISM" IS OBLITERATED.

SECOND, BRITAIN AND FRANCE WENT TO WAR WITH FULL KNOWLEDGE OF THE GERMAN-SOVIET NONAGGRESSION PACT AND WITH THEIR EYES OPEN TO ITS POSSIBLE EFFECT.

THIRD, NEITHER CHAMBERLAIN NOR "OUR FRENCH ALLIES" WILL GO BACK ON THE PLEDGE TO "REDEEM EUROPE FROM THE PERPETUAL AND RECURRING FEAR OF GERMAN AGGRESSION AND TO ENABLE THE PEOPLES OF EUROPE TO PRESERVE THEIR INDEPENDENCE AND THEIR LIBERTIES."

"GERMANY IS NOT LIKELY TO GET ANY MORE RAW MATERIALS FROM RUSSIA

1939

THAN SHE WOULD HAVE BEEN ABLE TO GET UNDER THE ORIGINAL NONAGGRESSION PACT, NOR IS IT LIKELY THAT RUSSIA WILL GIVE GERMANY ANY MORE ASSISTANCE THAN SHE WOULD HAVE DONE UNDER THE ORIGINAL PACT."

THE PRESS MIRRORED THESE VIEWS IN A TORRENT OF SPECULATION WHILE THE WAR CABINET IN COLLABORATION WITH THE FRENCH STUDIED THE SOVIET-GERMAN AGREEMENT.

LORD BEAVERBROOK'S EVENING STANDARD SAID EDITORIALLY:

"HITLER DOES NOT WISH TO ENGAGE HIMSELF IN A SINGLEHANDED WAR WITH THE WEST, YET IT IS TO STALIN'S INTEREST THAT HE SHOULD DO SO. HITLER WANTS A TRIUMPHANT GERMANY; STALIN MUST DENY ALL HISTORY IF HE CONNIVES AT SUCH RESULT."

DISCLOSURE OF THE DECISIONS MADE IN MOSCOW COMPLETELY OVER-SHADOWED THE MEAGRE MILITARY NEWS AVAILABLE HERE. BRITAIN'S MILLIONS HOWEVER WERE KEPT WELL AWARE OF WAR ON HOME FRONT.

PARIS,SEPT 29-(AP)-FRENCH SPOKESMEN TODAY REAFFIRMED THE DETERMINATION OF FRANCE AND BRITAIN TO CONTINUE THEIR WAR ON THE NAZI REGIME DESPITE THE IMPLIED THREAT OF THE MOSCOW ACCORD OF JOINT GERMAN-RUSSIAN ACTION TO MAKE THEM SUE FOR PEACE.

MENT PARTITIONING POLAND, DECLARING FOR AN END OF WAR ON GERMAN-RUSSIAN TERMS, PLEDGING RUSSIAN-GERMAN ECONOMIC COOPERATION.

A STATEMENT BY HAVAS, NEWS AGENCY WITH CLOSE GOVERNMENT CONNECTIONS, KEYNOTED THE FRENCH REACTION:

"FRANCE AND BRITAIN ENTERED THE WAR TO HALT THE REALIZATION OF GERMAN HEGOMONY. THEY ARE FIGHTING FOR THEIR SECURITY AND FOR THE SECURITY OF ALL CIVILIZED STATES WHICH GERMANY WISHES TO DOMINATE AND MENACES."

PREMIER DALADIER SUMMONED HIS ADVISERS FOR A CONFERENCE ON THE GERMAN-SOVIET PACT, INCLUDING GENERAL MAURICE GAMELIN, COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE ALLIED FORCES.

NEW DIPLOMATIC DEVELOPMENTS WERE EXPECTED IN INFORMED SOURCES WITHIN 48 HOURS. DIPLOMATIC ACTIVITY FOLLOWING THE ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE GERMAN-SOVIET ACCORD OVERSHADOWED MILITARY ACTION FOR THE MOMENT.

THE GENERAL STAFF REPORTED A CALM NIGHT ALONG THE ENTIRE WESTERN FRONT WITH SOME ACTIVITY BY ADVANCE FRENCH GUARDS, PARTICULARLY WEST OF SAARBRUECKEN, GERMAN INDUSTRIAL CITY.

MILITARY DISPATCHES REPORTED FRENCH AND BRITISH AVIATION UNITS WERE CONTINUING RECONNAISSANCE FLIGHTS DEEP INTO GERMAN TERRITORY. IN PREPARATION FOR POSSIBLE GERMAN AIR ATTACKS PARIS UNDERWENT A DAYLIGHT AIR RAID ALARM FOR MORE THAN A HALF HOUR, THE FIRST SINCE SEPT. 11.

JEAN-NICHEL RENAITOUR, PRESIDENT OF THE CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES NAVAL COMMISSION, TOLD THE CHAMBER LAST NIGHT THE BRITISH NAVY HAD SUNK 10 GERMAN SUBMARINES AND THE FRENCH TWO. MILITARY OBSERVERS SAID THE RATE OF DESTRUCTION WAS FASTER THAN GERMANY COULD REPLACE THE UNDERSEA CRAFT AND TRAIN NEW PERSONNEL.

THE HAVAS STATEMENT ON THE MOSCOW ACCORD QUOTED INFORMED QUARTERS AS EMPHASIZING THAT "AFTER HAVING PROTESTED WITH SO MUCH VIOLENCE AGAINST THE VERSAILLES TREATY AND AGAINST PRETENDED VIOLATIONS OF THE RIGHTS OF PEOPLES, GERMANY NOW CONSIDERS AS THE BASIS FOR A LASTING PEACE THE DESTRUCTION OF THE POLISH NATION.

"HOW CAN IT BE MAINTAINED THAT THIS DESTRUCTION OF POLAND CAN ELIMINATE ALL CAUSES FOR CONFLICT IN THE EAST? WHAT FUTURE WOULD THIS PERMIT FOR OTHER NATIONS?"

THE FUNDAMENTAL CAUSE OF THE PRESENT CONFLICT, THESE SOURCES SAID, "IS THE MARCH OF GERMANY TOWARD THE DOMINATION OF EUROPE."

"AFTER THE ANNEXATION OF AUSTRIA AND CZECHO-SLOVAKIA, AGAINST WHICH RUSSIA PROTESTED SO VIOLENTLY, COMES THE PARTITION OF POLAND BETWEEN RUSSIA AND GERMANY.

"HOW COULD SUCH VIOLENCES FAIL TO MAKE FEARED NEW ONES AGAINST OTHER NATIONS?"

THE FRENCH PRESS EXPRESSED BELIEF THAT HOSTILITIES WERE ABOUT TO ASSUME A LARGER SCALE NO MATTER WHAT THE GERMANS AND RUSSIANS

MOSCOW, SEPT. 29-(AP)-SOVIET RUSSIA AND GERMANY IN A SERIES OF THREE AGREEMENTS TEAMED UP TODAY TO TRY TO COMPEL BRITAIN AND FRANCE TO MAKE PEACE ON GERMAN TERMS, PARTITIONED POLAND WITH A HANDS-OFF WARNING TO THE REST OF THE WORLD AND PROJECTED AN ECONOMIC PROGRAM BY WHICH THE NAZIS WOULD GET RUSSIAN RAW MATERIALS.

SOVIET RUSSIA AT ALMOST THE SAME TIME ANNOUNCED A 10-YEAR MUTUAL ASSISTANCE PACT WITH ESTONIA, MAKING THE LITTLE REPUBLIC IN EFFECT A PROTECTORATE OF HER LARGE NEIGHBOR BY GIVING RUSSIA THE RIGHT TO ESTABLISH NAVAL AND AIR BASES AND SOVIET GARRISONS ON ESTONIAN SOIL.

THE ACCORD THUS GREATLY EXTENDED RUSSIAN POWER IN THE NORTH BALTIC. A TRADE AGREEMENT WITH ESTONIA ALSO WAS REACHED.

THE NAZI-COMMUNIST AGREEMENTS, CONCLUDED BY GERMAN FOREIGN MINISTER JOACHIM VON RIBBENTROP AND PREMIER-FOREIGN COMMISSAR VYACHESLAFF MOLOTOFF AND JOSEPH STALIN, INCLUDED WHAT WAS INTERPRETED AS AN IMPLIED THREAT OF POSSIBLE RUSSIAN MILITARY AID FOR GERMANY UNLESS BRITAIN AND FRANCE AGREED TO PEACE.

RUSSIA AND GERMANY DECLARED IN ONE AGREEMENT THEY WOULD "CONCENTRATE THEIR EFFORTS IF NECESSARY IN COOPERATION WITH THE OTHER FRIENDLY POWERS" TOWARD ENDING THE WAR BETWEEN GERMANY AND THE ALLIED BRITISH AND FRENCH.

SEP 30 1939

"SHOULD, HOWEVER, THE EFFORT OF BOTH GOVERNMENTS REMAIN UNSUCCESSFUL," THE DECLARATION ADDED, "THE FACT WOULD THEREBY BE ESTABLISHED THAT ENGLAND AND FRANCE ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR A CONTINUATION OF THE WAR, IN WHICH CASE THE GOVERNMENTS OF GERMANY AND THE U.S.S.R. WILL CONSULT EACH OTHER AS TO NECESSARY MEASURES."

THE SECOND AGREEMENT, CALLED "THE GERMAN-SOVIET RUSSIAN BORDER AND FRIENDSHIP TREATY," DIVIDED POLAND INTO TWO APPROXIMATELY EQUAL

1939

PARTS BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES AND PROCLAIMED THEY WOULD "REJECT ANY INTERFERENCE IN THIS SETTLEMENT BY THIRD POWERS."

THIS BORDERLINE, UNDERLINED AS "FINAL," WAS SHOWN IN MAPS ISSUED LATER TO REQUIRE RUSSIAN TROOPS TO GIVE UP SOME TERRITORY THEY ALREADY HAD OCCUPIED UNDER A PREVIOUS DEMARCATION AGREEMENT.

WHEREAS THE RUSSIANS PREVIOUSLY WERE SUPPOSED TO OCCUPY THE SUBURBS OF WARSAW EAST OF THE VISTULA RIVER, THEY NOW ARE MOVED SOME 30 MILES EAST OF WARSAW.

RUSSIA'S SOUTHERN FRONTIERS WITH RUMANIA AND BULGARIA WERE NOT AFFECTED.

SEP 30 1939

UNDER THE THIRD AGREEMENT, RUSSIA ANNOUNCED AN ECONOMIC PROGRAM WOULD BE DRAWN UP UNDER WHICH SHE WOULD DELIVER RAW MATERIALS TO GERMANY WHICH GERMANY WOULD PAY FOR THROUGH INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTS "TO BE DELIVERED OVER AN EXTENDED PERIOD."

THE SWEEPING PACTS WITH ESTONIA, FORMERLY RUSSIAN TERRITORY, WERE ANNOUNCED SHORTLY BEFORE THE GERMAN-RUSSIAN AGREEMENTS.

A22 - Moscow - Sept. 29 [illegible]

IN THE GERMAN-RUSSIAN AGREEMENTS FOREIGN OBSERVERS SAW AN IMPLIED THREAT OF POSSIBLE SOVIET MILITARY AID FOR GERMANY UNLESS FRANCE AND BRITAIN AGREED TO PEACE.

THE TWO POWERS SAID THEY WOULD "CONCENTRATE THEIR EFFORTS IF NECESSARY IN COOPERATION WITH THE OTHER FRIENDLY POWERS" TOWARD ENDING THE WAR. SHOULD SUCH PEACE EFFORTS FAIL, THE DECLARATION WENT ON, "THE FACT WOULD THEREBY BE ESTABLISHED THAT ENGLAND AND FRANCE ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR A CONTINUATION OF THE WAR, IN WHICH CASE THE GOVERNMENTS OF GERMANY AND THE U.S.S.R. WILL CONSULT EACH OTHER AS TO NECESSARY MEASURES."

THE SECOND AGREEMENT, WHICH, LIKE THE OTHERS, WAS CONCLUDED BY GERMAN FOREIGN MINISTER JOACHIM VON RIBBENTROP, JOSEPH STALIN AND PREMIER-FOREIGN COMMISSAR VYACHESLAFF MOLOTOFF, WAS CALLED THE "GERMAN-SOVIET RUSSIAN BORDER AND FRIENDSHIP TREATY."

IT DIVIDED POLAND INTO TWO PARTS ABOUT EQUAL IN SIZE AND REJECTED "ANY INTERFERENCE IN THIS SETTLEMENT BY THIRD POWERS." THE PARTITION--THE FOURTH IN POLAND'S HISTORY--CENTERED ROUGHLY ON THE BUG AND THE SAN RIVERS AND GAVE GERMANY WARSAW, THE IMPORTANT VISTULA RIVER AND ALL OF LUBLIN PROVINCE.

THE PARTITION PROVIDED THAT THERE BE NO BUFFER STATE, THAT GERMANY AND THE U.S.S.R. WOULD HAVE A COMOON FRONTIER.

THE TREATIES PROVIDED THAT RUSSIA COULD MAINTAIN A "LIMITED NUMBER" OF TROOPS ON ESTONIAN TERRITORY, AND INCLUDED ECONOMIC PRIVILEGES ESTIMATED TO INCREASE RUSSIAN-ESTONIAN TRADE BY 4 1/2 TIMES.

MUTUAL AID WAS PLEDGED IN THE EVENT OF "DIRECT AGGRESSION OR MENACE OF AGGRESSION" BY A EUROPEAN POWER AGAINST THE SEA FRONTIERS OF ESTONIA OR THROUGH LATVIA.

TIMBER AND WHEAT ARE EXPECTED TO BE THE PRINCIPAL RAW MATERIALS WITH WHICH RUSSIA WILL AID GERMANY.

THE MEASURE, FINALLY APPROVED BY THE SENATE FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE DURING THE DAY, WOULD PERMIT BELLIGERENTS TO BUY ARMS OR OTHER MATERIALS HERE ON 90 DAYS NON-RENEWABLE CREDIT, SUBJECT TO THE APPROVAL OF THE PRESIDENT.

ALREADY CHAFING AT THIS PROVISION OF THE LEGISLATION, THE OPPOSITION CONSIDERED IT A CHALLENGE WHEN CHAIRMAN PITTMAN (D-NEV) OF THE SENATE COMMITTEE SAID TODAY THAT TO THE EXTENT OF THE 90-DAY CREDITS THE BILL WOULD AMEND THE JOHNSON ACT. THAT LAW IS A STATUTE DEAR TO THE HEARTS OF SENATORS WHO HAVE TRADITIONALLY COUNSELLED AMERICAN ALOOFNESS FROM THE AFFAIRS OF EUROPE. MOST OF THEM ARE ALLIED WITH THE OPPOSITION TO THE NEUTRALITY BILL.

THE JOHNSON ACT WAS PASSED IN APRIL 1934, SOON AFTER AN INVESTIGATION OF THE DEFAULTS OF SEVERAL SOUTH AMERICAN COUNTRIES ON BOND ISSUES FLOATED HERE, AND WITHIN A YEAR AFTER MOST EUROPEAN NATIONS HAD STOPPED MAKING PAYMENTS ON THEIR WORLD WAR DEBTS.

THE LAW FORBIDS ANY AMERICAN BANK, OR INDIVIDUAL TO MAKE A LOAN TO ANY GOVERNMENT WHICH IS IN DEFAULT ON ITS OBLIGATIONS TO THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT. AS APPLIED TO THE PRESENT WAR SITUATION, IT WOULD MEAN THAT GREAT BRITAIN, FRANCE AND POLAND COULD NOT OBTAIN CREDIT HERE. GERMANY, NOT HAVING HAD ANY WAR LOAN HERE, WOULD BE FREE TO DO SO, IF SHE COULD FIND LENDERS.

SO, IN PERMITTING 90 DAY CREDITS TO THE THREE ALLIES, THE

30.24-3737

PENDING LEGISLATION, PITTMAN SAID, WOULD AMEND THE JOHNSON ACT. SENATOR JOHNSON (R-CALIF), THE AUTHOR OF THAT LAW, AND A PROMINENT MEMBER OF THE OPPOSITION, WAS QUICK TO REPLY. HE AGREED WITH PITTMAN.

IT WOULD NOT ONLY AMEND, BUT "NULLIFY," HIS ACT, HE SAID, AND HE WAS DETERMINED TO SEE THAT THE LEGISLATION WAS CHANGED IN THAT PARTICULAR. HE HAD NOT, HE ADDED, DECIDED JUST WHAT COURSE HE WOULD FOLLOW.

SEP

A1OWX

"BUT I SHALL INTRODUCE AN AMENDMENT AND INSIST UPON ITS ADOPTION," HE SAID.

WHILE THIS ISSUE WAS DEVELOPING, THE COMMITTEE APPROVED NEW LANGUAGE FOR THE BILL TO MAKE IT CLEAR THAT THE 90-DAY CREDITS COULD NOT BE RENEWED, AND THAT UNLESS PAID ON TIME, THE GOVERNMENT RESPONSIBLE COULD OBTAIN NO FURTHER EXTENSION OF CREDIT UNTIL THE DEFAULT WAS MADE GOOD. IT ALSO APPROVED LANGUAGE TO CLARIFY THE EFFECT OF THE BILL ON AMERICAN SHIPPING TO PORTS TO THE SOUTH OF THE UNITED STATES, AND ON AIRPLANE LINES TO SOUTH AMERICA AND TO THE ORIENT.

THE COMMITTEE DECIDED THAT SEA BORNE COMMERCE TO CANADA COULD NOT BE PERMITTED, BUT WROTE INTO THE BILL A PROVISION PERMITTING AMERICAN SHIPS AND AIRPLANES TO LEAVE MAIL AND PASSENGERS AT THE CARIBBEAN POSSESSIONS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE LYING TO THE SOUTH OF THE 30TH PARALLEL OF NORTH LATITUDE.

SEP 301939

THIS LINE RUNS THROUGH NEW ORLEANS AND ITS APPLICATION TO THE PRESENT SITUATION WOULD PROHIBIT SEA AND AIR COMMERCE NOT ONLY TO CANADA BUT TO THE ISLAND OF BERMUDA AS WELL. HOWEVER, IT WILL PERMIT AIRLINES TO SOUTH AMERICA TO MAKE STOPS AT TRINIDAD AND MARTINIQUE, BOTH BRITISH PORTS. LANGUAGE TO KEEP THE PACIFIC ROUTE OF PANAMERICAN AIRWAYS FUNCTIONING ALSO WAS ADOPTED. IT PERMITS A STOP AT BRITISH HONGKONG.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S REGULAR FRIDAY PRESS CONFERENCE BROUGHT INQUIRIES AS TO WHAT WAS CONTAINED IN THE REPORT OF THE WAR RESOURCES BOARD AND A REPLY FROM MR.ROOSEVELT THAT SINCE THE UNITED STATES WAS NOT IN THE WAR AND DID NOT INTEND TO ENTER THE WAR, HE SAW NO PUBLIC INTEREST IN THE PLANS THAT HAVE BEEN DRAWN UP.

THE ARMY AND NAVY HE SAID, MAINTAIN AND BY REVISION, KEEP CONSTANTLY CURRENT PLANS FOR THE DEFENSE OF THE UNITED STATES AGAINST POSSIBLE ENEMIES. FROM TIME TO TIME, HE SAID, SPECIAL BOARDS SUCH AS THE WAR RESOURCES BOARD CONTRIBUTE TO THESE PREPARATIONS. THE BOARD, HE SAID, HAD BEEN STUDYING THE POSSIBILITY OF INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION, LOCATION OF INDUSTRY, AND MEANS OF INCREASING ITS OUTPUT, ADDING POWER FACILITIES AND VARIOUS ADMINISTRATIVE PROBLEMS INVOLVED IN GEARING AMERICAN INDUSTRY TO A WAR BASIS.

THE BOARD HEADED BY EDWARD R.STETTINIUS, JR., CHAIRMAN OF U.S.STEEL, IS TO MAKE ITS REPORT SOON AND THEN BE DISBANDED. WHEN THE PRESIDENT WAS ASKED IF IT WOULD BE RECONVENED IN CASE OF AN EMERGENCY, HE SAID ONLY THAT HE DID NOT EXPECT AN EMERGENCY TO ARISE.

(WX)-INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS (BUDGET)

BY KIRKE L.SIMPSON

ASSOCIATED PRESS STAFF WRITER

THE DAY OF THE WAR OF NERVES MAY BE AT AN END; THE DAY OF TERRIBLE ACTION IN WESTERN EUROPE DAWNING.

THE PEACE ULTIMATUM PRESENTED TO THE ALLIES BY THE PARTNERS IN THAT NEW AND STRANGE AXIS WHICH RUNS FROM NAZI BERLIN TO COMMUNIST MOSCOW MAY TURN OUT TO BE THE LAST MOVE OF THE PSYCHOLOGICAL STRUGGLE THAT HAS USHERED IN THIS UNORTHODOX WAR.

THE ULTIMATUM IS A DEMAND FOR UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER BY BRITAIN AND FRANCE OF THE ATTITUDE THEY TOOK WHEN THEY DECLARED WAR AGAINST GERMANY LESS THAN A MONTH AGO. IT IS BACKED BY A PISTOL-AT-YOUR HEAD IMPLICATION THAT THE RED ARMY LEGIONS OF RUSSIA WILL MARCH WITH THE NAZIS IF THE MOSCOW-BERLIN FORMULA IS REJECTED.

SEP 30 1939

WORD FROM LONDON IS THAT PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN PLANS A REPLY WHEN HE APPEARS BEFORE PARLIAMENT NEXT WEEK. CHAMBERLAIN'S WORDS MIGHT BE THE SPARK TO TOUCH OFF THE "COMPLETE WAR" IN THE WEST WHICH GERMANY HAS SO CONSTANTLY THREATENED.

MUCH DEPENDS ON THAT VAGUE PHRASEOLOGY IN THE PACT OF MOSCOW WHICH SAYS THAT IF THE PEACE OFFER IS SPURNED (AS AUTHORITATIVE VOICES IN LONDON AND PARIS SAY IT WILL BE) RUSSIA AND GERMANY WILL HOLD FURTHER CONSULTATION ON "NECESSARY MEASURES."

THE PISTOL IS HELD TO THE HEADS OF THE ALLIES, BUT NONE EXCEPT JOSEF STALIN CAN SAY FOR CERTAIN WHETHER IT IS ACTUALLY LOADED, OR IF SO, WITH WHAT.

IT IS NOT BEYOND THE BOUNDS OF IMAGINATION, HOWEVER, THAT THE PACT COVERS A COMMITMENT IN MOSCOW TO HURL THE FULL STRENGTH OF RUSSIA'S VAUNTED AIR FORCE UPON THE ALLIES, IN COOPERATION WITH GERMANY'S AIR ARMADA.

THERE ARE THOSE WHO BELIEVE THAT IT WAS THIS POSSIBILITY WHICH LED THE FRENCH AND BRITISH TO ACCEPT RUSSIAN NEUTRALITY AT ITS FACE VALUE, DESPITE THE FACT THAT THAT NEUTRALITY WAS FRINGED WITH BAYONETS IN SHATTERED POLAND. IT WAS HOPE, PERHAPS, OF STAVING OFF RUSSO-GERMAN COOPERATION IN THE WEST THAT PROMPTED LONDON AND PARIS TO AIM NO WAR DECLARATIONS AT THE SOVIETS. THEY CONTENTED THEMSELVES WITH HARSH WORDS ABOUT RUSSIA'S ENTRY INTO POLAND, ALTHOUGH THEIR COMMITMENTS TO THAT ILL-STARRED COUNTRY WERE NOT AGAINST GERMAN AGGRESSION ALONE.

COMPARED TO THE VEILED THREAT OF RUSSO-GERMAN MILITARY COOPERATION IN THE WEST, THE PACT OF MOSCOW'S PROVISIONS FOR WIDENING TRADE TRANSACTIONS BETWEEN THE PARTNERS ACROSS PROSTRATE POLAND CAN BE OF LITTLE IMMEDIATE CONSEQUENCE.

UNDER THE PREVIOUS RUSSO-GERMAN NON-AGGRESSION PACT, THE ECONOMIC DOOR TO RUSSIAN RAW MATERIALS HAD ALREADY BEEN SWUNG OPEN FOR GERMANY. BUT MUCH OF THIS WEALTH OF MATERIALS IS UNDEVELOPED, AND SUFFICIENT MEANS OF TRANSPORTATION ARE LACKING. THE NEW PACT MAY CALL FOR AN ACCELERATION OF THE FLOW OF MATERIALS TO GERMANY, TO OFFSET THE SLOW ECONOMIC STRANGULATION OF ANOTHER BRITISH BLOCKADE, BUT IT COULD NOT INCREASE THAT FLOW GREATLY, EXCEPT WITH THE LAPSE OF TIME.

NOVA

WAR MATERIALS (PMS BUDGET-NEW)

BY ANDRUE BERDING

WASHINGTON, SEPT. 29-(AP)-WITH AMERICA ABOUT READY TO SHIP COTTON TO ENGLAND IN EXCHANGE FOR RUBBER UNDER THE TERMS OF A BARTER AGREEMENT, OFFICIALS HAVE CONCLUDED THAT THE UNITED STATES WILL SUFFER FEWER INTERNATIONAL COMPLICATIONS OVER STRATEGIC WAR MATERIALS THAN OCCURRED IN THE WORLD WAR.

IN THE FIRST YEAR OF THE WORLD WAR, BRITAIN PLACED AN EMBARGO ON THE EXPORT TO THE UNITED STATES OF SUCH THINGS AS RUBBER, HIDES, JUTE, MANGANESE, TUNGSTEN ORE AND OTHER INGREDIENTS OF STEEL. THIS WAS REMOVED ONLY AFTER THE STATE DEPARTMENT NEGOTIATED A "WORKING AGREEMENT" WITH LONDON, OFFERING TO TAKE STEPS TO INSURE THE CORRECTNESS OF MANIFESTS OF OUTGOING CARGOES.

BRITAIN AT THAT TIME OBJECTED TO THE USE OF SUCH MATERIALS IN THE UNITED STATES FOR THE MANUFACTURE OF EQUIPMENT THAT MIGHT BE SENT ELSEWHERE, PERHAPS INDIRECTLY TO BRITAIN'S ENEMIES. PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ADVISED AMERICANS AT A PRESS CONFERENCE TUESDAY AGAINST SELLING SUCH MATERIALS ABROAD, SAYING THAT A WORD TO THE WISE WAS SUFFICIENT.

SEP 30 1939

THE WORD TO THE WISE WAS INTERPRETED BY MANY TO MEAN THAT IF BRITAIN SAW SUCH MATERIALS BEING RESOLD BY AMERICAN HOLDERS TO OTHER NATIONS, SHE WOULD NOT FEEL INCLINED TO PERMIT SHIPMENTS TO THIS COUNTRY TO CONTINUE.

THE 600,000 BALES OF COTTON WHICH THE UNITED STATES IS SENDING BRITAIN IN EXCHANGE FOR 175,000,000 POUNDS OF RUBBER WILL BEGIN TO MOVE OUT OF AMERICAN PORTS NEXT MONTH.

THE RUBBER WILL COMMENCE COMING TO THE UNITED STATES SOMETIME THEREAFTER. THE AGREEMENT STATED THAT THE PRODUCTS WOULD BE DIVIDED EQUALLY AMONG THE SHIPS OF BOTH COUNTRIES, BUT THIS MIGHT NOT BE POSSIBLE IF CONGRESS CHANGES THE NEUTRALITY ACT AND FORBIDS AMERICAN SHIPS TO CARRY GOODS TO BELLIGERENTS.

OFFICIALS ARE ENCOURAGED BY THE INCREASE IN THE MAXIMUM QUOTAS OF PRODUCTION OF RUBBER PERMITTED BY THE INTERNATIONAL RUBBER PRODUCERS' COMMITTEE. THE QUOTA HAS BEEN LIFTED SUCCESSIVELY THIS YEAR FROM 50 TO 70 PER CENT OF CAPACITY AND IS TO BE RAISED VERY SHORTLY TO 75 PER CENT.

A7WX

THE MAXIMUM QUOTA ON TIN HAS BEEN RAISED IN ABOUT THE SAME TIME FROM 45 TO 60 PER CENT, AND FOR THE NEXT QUARTER TO 100 PER CENT.

SEP 30 1939

THE INCREASE IS MADE ALL THE MORE NOTICEABLE IN ITS EFFECTS BY THE FACT THAT THE GERMAN IMPORTING MARKET IS NOW ENTIRELY CUT OFF, SO THAT THERE WILL BE MORE TO GO AROUND AMONG THE OTHER NATIONS.

THE PRICE DISLOCATION CAUSED BY THE WAR WILL NOT AFFECT THE AMOUNT OF COTTON TO BE EXCHANGED FOR RUBBER, WHICH IS SET ON THE RATIO OF THE AVERAGE PRICES FOR BOTH PRODUCTS OVER THE SIX MONTHS ENDING JUNE 23.

IT IS NOT BELIEVED THAT EITHER COUNTRY WILL MAKE IMMEDIATE USE OF THE TRADED PRODUCTS, ALTHOUGH THE AGREEMENT SAYS THEY MAY BE USED IN THE EVENT OF A "MAJOR WAR EMERGENCY." IT IS PRESUMED THAT THE COTTON AND RUBBER ARE TO BE STORED BY THE RESPECTIVE RECIPIENTS, REGARDLESS OF THE WAR, UNTIL SUCH TIME AS THEY ARE DRASTICALLY NEEDED, AND MEANTIME BUYING IN THE REGULAR MARKET

WILL CONTINUE.

THE NEGOTIATIONS FOR EXCHANGE OF STRATEGIC MATERIALS WITH THE NETHERLANDS AND BELGIUM HAVE ARRIVED AT NOTHING, OFFICIALS SAID.

THE NEW ACCORD OF MOSCOW PARTITIONS POLAND FOR THE FOURTH TIME, GERMANY AND SOVIET RUSSIA SHARING HER TERRITORY ALMOST EQUALLY. POLAND IS WIPED OFF THE MAP; THERE IS TO BE NO POLISH BUFFER STATE.

IT GIVES GERMANY MORE THAN THE EARLIER MILITARY OCCUPATION LINE, WHICH GAVE RUSSIA ABOUT THREE-FIFTHS OF POLAND'S AREA.

GERMANY GETS ALL OF WARSAW CITY, MOST OF WARSAW PROVINCE, THE ENTIRE COURSE OF THE VISTULA RIVER, THE PROVINCE OF LUBLIN.

OF THE SIX LARGEST CITIES, RUSSIA GETS ONLY TWO--LWOW AND WILNO. GERMANY GETS WARSAW, LODZ, POZNAN AND KRAKOW.

AS DESCRIBED BY THE GERMAN COMMUNIQUE, THE BOUNDARY LINE BEGINS IN NORTHERN POLAND AT THE SOUTHERN TIP OF LITHUANIA AND RUNS WEST NORTH OF AUGUSTOW TO THE EAST PRUSSIAN BORDER, WHICH IT FOLLOWS TO THE PISA RIVER.

SEP 30 1939

IT RUNS ALONG THE RIVER ABOUT 40 MILES SOUTH TO OSTROLENKA, THENCE SOUTHEAST 40 MILES, MEETING THE BUG RIVER AT NUR, 60 MILES NORTHEAST OF WARSAW.

IT FOLLOWS THE BUG ALONG THE EASTERN EDGE OF LUBLIN PROVINCE TO KRYSTNOPOL, 40 MILES NORTH OF LWOW, THEN BENDS SOUTHWEST ABOUT 80 MILES TO THE SAN RIVER.

IT FOLLOWS THE SAN TO ITS SOURCE AT THE SLOVAK BORDER.

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE NEW RUSSO-GERMAN PACT IS LABELED BY INFORMED CIRCLES IN PARIS AND LONDON AS AN ULTIMATUM TO THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES TO MAKE PEACE ON HITLER'S TERMS OR TAKE THE CONSEQUENCES.

IT IS BACKED BY WHAT IS DESCRIBED AS A "VEILED THREAT" THAT IF THE ALLIES DON'T ACQUIESCE THE SOVIET MAY THROW ITS VAST MILITARY MACHINE INTO THE WAR TO SUPPORT GERMANY AGAINST THEM.

THE HITLERIAN TERMS THUS FAR INDICATED PROVIDE THAT THE BRITISH AND FRENCH, WHO HAVE PLEDGED THEMSELVES UP TO THE HILT TO RESTORE POLAND, MUST ACCEPT THE POLISH CONTROVERSY AS SETTLED WITH THE PARTITION OF THAT COUNTRY BETWEEN THE COMMUNISTS AND THE NAZIS.

THE ALLIES ALSO HAVE PLEDGED THEMSELVES TO "CRUSH HITLERISM," BUT THE PEACE WOULD LIQUIDATE THAT.

SEP 30 1939

THE AGREEMENT PLACES FULL RESPONSIBILITY FOR CONTINUANCE OF THE CONFLICT ON ALLIED SHOULDERS. THIS PAVES THE WAY FOR POSSIBLE

INAUGURATION

EJIM

CONFLICT ON ALLIED SHOULDERS. THIS PAVES THE WAY FOR POSSIBLE INAUGURATION OF THE "COMPLETE WAR" ABOUT WHICH GERMANY HAS BEEN TALKING--THAT IS, A WAR WHICH WOULD BE WITHOUT QUARTER OR LIMITATIONS IF CARRIED OUT TO THE EXTREME.

THE QUESTION OF JUST WHAT PART RUSSIA MIGHT PLAY IF THE ALLIES REFUSE THE PEACE (AS THEY HAVE SAID THEY WILL) IS PURPOSELY LEFT WHOLLY UNANSWERED. THE DOCUMENT MERELY SAYS MOSCOW AND BERLIN WILL "CONSULT EACH OTHER REGARDING NECESSARY MEASURES."

OBSERVERS GENERALLY DON'T BELIEVE STALIN HAS ANY PRESENT INTENTION OF ENTERING A MILITARY ALLIANCE WITH GERMANY.

THE SOVIET DOESN'T HAVE TO FIGHT TO COME OUT OF THIS UPHEAVAL A BIG, IF NOT THE BIGGEST, WINNER. MOSCOW CAN JUST SIT WITH ITS FEET UP AND DRAW DIVIDENDS WHILE GERMANY AND THE ALLIES BATTER EACH OTHERS' HEADS.

~~HOWEVER, THE PHRASING OF THE PACT IS CALCULATED TO MAKE HITLER'S VPOSITION AS STRONG AS POSSIBLE IN HIS EF~~

SEP 30 1939

HOWEVER, THE PHRASING OF THE PACT IS CALCULATED TO MAKE HITLER'S POSITION AS STRONG AS POSSIBLE IN HIS EFFORT TO COMPEL THE ALLIES TO MAKE PEACE.

THERE IS NO DOUBT THAT THE "VEILED THREAT" OF RUSSIAN MILITARY INTENTION IS THE BLUNDERBUSS WITH WHICH THE ALLIED STAGE-COACH IS TO BE HELD UP.

ONE POINT WHICH IS OF VITAL CONCERN TO THE ALLIES IS FINALLY CLEARED UP. RUSSIA AGREES TO SUPPLY GERMANY WITH MATERIALS ON EASY TERMS.

EXPECTATION OF THIS HAS LED THE NAZIS TO BOAST THAT ENGLAND CANNOT SQUEEZE GERMANY INTO SUBMISSION WITH THE NAVAL BLOCKADE. HOWEVER THAT MAY BE, ACCESS TO SOVIET SUPPLIES CERTAINLY NULLIFIES IN SOME DEGREE THE EFFECT OF THE BLOCKADE, AND MAY PROTRACT THE WAR INDEFINITELY.

SIMULTANEOUSLY WITH THE SIGNING OF THE PACT THERE WAS ANOTHER SUDDEN SHIFT IN BALANCE OF POWER WHICH TIPPED THE EUROPEAN POLITICAL RAFT.

LITTLE ESTONIA FINALLY ACCEDED TO SOVIET DEMANDS AND AGREED TO ALLOW HER BIG NEIGHBOR TO ESTABLISH NAVAL BASES AND AIRDROMES IN ESTONIAN TERRITORY. THE SMALL STATE THEREBY COMES UNDER CONTROL OF MOSCOW.

THIS MOVE PUTS RUSSIA INTO POSITION TO BECOME THE OVERLORD OF THE BALTIC--A POSITION WHICH WILL MAKE NAZIDOM SWALLOW HARD.

IT ALSO WILL PERMIT MOSCOW TO SHIFT HER SHIPS TO KEEP PACE WITH THE RED ARMY, SHOULD THAT BE EMPLOYED FOR ANY FURTHER MOVE WESTWARD.

THESE MOMENTOUS OVER-NIGHT CHANGES, AND THE OTHER EVENTS WHICH HAVE HAPPENED IN THE FIRST MONTH OF THIS STRANGEST OF ALL WARS, HAVE MADE IT APPARENT THAT ITS ENDING WILL BE WHOLLY UNLIKE THE OBJECTIVES WHICH WERE IN THE MINDS OF THE ORIGINAL COMBATANTS ON BOTH SIDES WHEN IT STARTED ITS SORRY COURSE.

THAT IS, THIS WILL BE THE OUTCOME UNLESS SOME MIRACLE STOPS THE CONFLICT NOW.

SEP 30 1939

THE EUROPEAN WAR IS OUT OF HAND AND RUNNING WILD ALMOST AS SOON AS IT HAS STARTED. NEITHER HERR HITLER NOR YET THE ANGLO-FRENCH BROTHERHOOD HAS ANY CONTROL OVER THE DIRECTION BEING TAKEN.

ALL THEY CAN DO IS TO HANG ONTO THE REINS AND BE DRAGGED WILLY-NILLY INTO A MAZE OF POLITICAL AND PHYSICAL CHANGES WHICH THEY DIDN'T FORESEE.

1939

FOR THERE CAN BE NO QUESTION THAT EUROPE IS BEING RE-MADE, OR MORE ACCURATELY, IS CONTINUING THE PROCESS OF EVOLUTION STARTED BY THE WORLD WAR.

AS A MATTER OF FACT, THE PRESENT CONFLICT REALLY IS A CONTINUATION OF THE WORLD WAR--INTERRUPTED BY THE VERSAILES ARMISTICE WHOSE TERMS HAVE BEEN GOING THROUGH THE MANGLE. ONLY NOW WE HAVE NEW FACTORS--NEW ISMS WITH NEW AMBITIONS--WHICH COMPLICATE THE SHOW.

WHICHEVER SIDE WINS--IF IT IS HUMANLY POSSIBLE FOR ANYBODY TO WIN IN A WAR LIKE THIS--IT WILL FIND A FAR DIFFERENT SET-UP IN EUROPE TO DEAL WITH.

UNDATED HOSTILITIES

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A GERMAN-RUSSIAN PLEDGE TO DRIVE TOGETHER TO END THE EUROPEAN WAR OVERSHADOWED TODAY THE HOSTILITIES ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

NAZI GERMANY AND COMMUNIST SOVIET RUSSIA IN A SERIES OF AGREEMENTS REACHED IN MOSCOW:

1. COMMITTED THEMSELVES TO CONSULT EACH OTHER "AS TO NECESSARY MEASURES" UNLESS GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE AGREED TO PEACE IN THEIR WAR AGAINST GERMANY.

SEP 30 1939

2. PARTITIONED FALLEN POLAND, EACH TAKING ABOUT ONE-HALF OF THE NATION'S TERRITORY.

1939

3. PLANNED TO DRAW UP AN ECONOMIC PROGRAM BY WHICH RUSSIAN RAW MATERIALS WILL BE DELIVERED TO GERMANY.

AT THE SAME TIME SOVIET RUSSIA AND ESTONIA REACHED SWEEPING MUTUAL ASSISTANCE AND TRADE AGREEMENTS UNDER WHICH RUSSIA GAINED THE RIGHT TO FORTIFY TWO STRATEGIC ESTONIAN ISLANDS AND ONE PORT AS NAVAL AND AIR BASES. RED LAND AND AIR FORCES ARE TO BE ALLOWED IN CERTAIN AREAS; RIGA HEARD THAT PROVISIONS WOULD BE MADE FOR GARRISONING 25,000 RUSSIAN TROOPS IN ESTONIA.

DEVELOPMENTS CHRONICLED ON THE WAR FRONTS WERE RELATIVELY MINOR.

ON THE EASTERN FRONT, THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND ANNOUNCED, POLES WILL BEGIN MARCHING OUT OF WARSAW TONIGHT, BUT IT PROBABLY WILL NOT BE UNTIL OCT. 2, INSTEAD OF TODAY, THAT GERMAN TROOPS TAKE POSSESSION.

ON THE WESTERN FRONT, THE FRENCH WAR MINISTRY SAID THERE WAS A "CALM NIGHT ALONG THE ENTIRE FRONT." MILITARY DISPATCHES REPORTED RECONNAISSANCE FLIGHTS BY BRITISH AND FRENCH AVIATORS; THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND REPORTED ONE BRITISH AND ONE FRENCH PLANE SHOT DOWN.

ON THE SEA, THREE NORWEGIAN FREIGHTERS WERE SUNK TODAY AND YESTERDAY IN THE NORTH SEA.

ALL THE CREWS WERE SAVED IN WHAT REPRESENTED NORWAY'S FIRST SEA LOSSES IN THE WAR.

SURVIVORS OF TWO VESSELS, THE 875-TON (CORRECT) TAKSTAAS, AND THE 1,200-TON JERN, SAID SUBMARINES TORPEDOED THEIR FREIGHTERS. THE THIRD VESSEL, THE 2,000-TON SALAAS, STRUCK A MINE.

THE RUSSIAN-GERMAN AGREEMENT TO "CONCENTRATE THEIR EFFORTS IF NECESSARY IN COOPERATION WITH THE OTHER FRIENDLY POWERS" TOWARD ENDING THE WAR BETWEEN GERMANY AND THE ALLIED BRITISH AND FRENCH PROMISED THE WIDEST AND MOST IMMEDIATE REACTION INTERNATIONALLY.

THE PLEDGE BY THE TWO NATIONS TO CONSULT "AS TO NECESSARY MEASURES" IF THAT EFFORT WERE UNSUCCESSFUL WAS INTERPRETED IN MOSCOW AS AN IMPLIED THREAT OF POSSIBLE MILITARY ACTION BY THEM AGAINST GERMANY'S ENEMIES.

INFORMED SOURCES IN LONDON SAID BRITAIN'S DETERMINATION TO CONTINUE THE WAR AGAINST GERMANY WAS CHANGED IN NO WAY BY THE RUSSIAN-GERMAN ACTION. PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN WILL MAKE AN OFFICIAL STATEMENT ON THE SUBJECT NEXT MONDAY.

IN PARIS THE DECISION WAS REAFFIRMED OF BRITAIN AND FRANCE TO "FIGHT FOR THEIR SECURITY AND FOR THE SECURITY OF ALL CIVILIZED STATES" AS GERMAN-SOVIET PROPOSALS TO HALT THE WAR WERE AWAITED.

IN BERLIN THE RUSSIAN-GERMAN DEVELOPMENT WAS INTERPRETED AS APPARENTLY CASTING PREMIER MUSSOLINI OF ITALY IN THE ROLE OF "PEACEMAKER."

FASCISTS IN ROME, HOWEVER, EXPRESSED DOUBT THAT ITALY WOULD TAKE ANY FORMAL INITIATIVE UNLESS REQUESTED. THEY EXPRESSED HOPE THE RUSSIAN-GERMAN ACTION WOULD LEAD BRITAIN AND FRANCE TO SETTLE THEIR WAR WITH GERMANY.

A PREREQUISITE OF THE PEACE RUSSIA AND GERMANY DECLARED THEY WERE SEEKING WAS RECOGNITION OF THE PARTITION OF POLAND.

RUSSIA HELD THE DIPLOMATIC SPOTLIGHT ALSO THROUGH HER AGREEMENTS WITH ESTONIA--RUSSIAN TERRITORY FOR NEARLY 200 YEARS BEFORE THE BOLSHEVIST REVOLUTION.

SEP 30 1939

RUSSIA GAINED THE RIGHT TO FORTIFY SAARE MAA AND HIIUMA, STRATEGIC ISLANDS AT THE ENTRANCE TO THE GULF OF RIGA, AND THE MAINLAND PORT

OF PALDISKI AS NAVAL AND AIR BASES. GARRISONS ALSO ARE TO BE ALLOWED ON ESTONIAN TERRITORY.

THIS WILL MEAN THAT RUSSIAN FORCES WILL BE BASED MORE THAN 200 MILES WEST OF THE CURRENT ESTONIAN-RUSSIAN FRONTIER: RUSSIA WON A FIRM MILITARY HOLD OVER THE NORTH BALTIC.

A114

THE SMALL BALTIC STATES WERE APPREHENSIVE. THEY SAW THE DIPLOMATIC ACTIVITY AS PUTTING RUSSIA INTO A POSITION TO BECOME BOSS OF THE BALTIC.

THE RUSSIAN-ESTONIAN PACT WAS MADE FOR A 10-YEAR PERIOD.

IN ADDITION, ECONOMIC MEASURES WILL INCREASE RUSSIAN-ESTONIAN TRADE AN ESTIMATED FOUR AND ONE-HALF TIMES.

SEP 30 1939

DEBATE IN WASHINGTON ON THE ADMINISTRATION NEUTRALITY BILL WAS SCHEDULED TO BEGIN MONDAY. SPONSORS PREDICTED IT WOULD BE PASSED WITHIN THREE WEEKS.

A SUB-COMMITTEE OF THE INTER-AMERICAN CONFERENCE IN PANAMA DRAFTED A GENERAL NEUTRALITY DECLARATION FOR THE AMERICAN REPUBLICS. AN APPEAL TO BELLIGERENTS TO HUMANIZE WAR ALSO WAS BEING FORMULATED.

NIGHT LEAD UNDATED HOSTILITIES

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A REPORTED FRENCH ADVANCE ON THE WESTERN FRONT AND A BRITISH AIR RAID ON SHIPS OF THE GERMAN FLEET TOPPED YESTERDAY'S (FRIDAY'S) EUROPEAN WAR NEWS WHILE BRITAIN AND FRANCE GAVE INDICATIONS OF A COLD SHOULDER TO A GERMAN-RUSSIAN PEACE MOVE.

SEP 30 1939

FRENCH REPORTS SAID THE POILUS MOVED DOWN THE EASTERN BANK OF THE MOSELLE RIVER ABOUT 1,500 YARDS TO THE OUTSKIRTS OF THE GERMAN VILLAGES OF BESCH AND BORG. A GERMAN COUNTER-ATTACK A HALF-MILE EAST OF THIS SECTOR WAS REPORTED REPULSED.

GERMAN AND BRITISH STATEMENTS DISPUTED THE EFFECT OF AN ATTACK BY ROYAL AIR FORCE WARPLANES ON GERMAN WARSHIPS BERTHED AT HELGOLAND, NAZI NAVAL BASE IN THE NORTH SEA.

THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND DECLARED THE ATTACK HAD BEEN REPULSED AND THAT FIVE OR SIX BRITISH PLANES WERE SHOT DOWN BY NAZI PURSUIT PLANES.

THE BRITISH ASSERTED THE ATTACK WAS "PRESSED HOME" AT A LOW ALTITUDE DESPITE "FORMIDABLE ANTIAIRCRAFT FIRE."

THE BRITISH ADMITTED, HOWEVER, THAT "SOME OF OUR AIRCRAFT HAVE NOT YET RETURNED."

THE TOTAL OF SHIP CASUALTIES IN THE MONTH-OLD WAR REACHED 57.

THREE NEUTRAL SHIPS WERE SENT TO THE BOTTOM OF SCANDINAVIAN WATERS DURING THE 36 HOURS ENDING LAST NIGHT BY WHAT SURVIVORS SAID WERE SUBMARINES. A FOURTH SANK AFTER HITTING A MINE. NO LIVES WERE LOST.

THE LATEST LOSSES WERE THE SWEDISH FREIGHTER NYLAND AND THE NORWEGIAN FREIGHTERS JERN, AND TAKSTAAS, REPORTED SUNK BY SUBMARINES, AND THE NORWEGIAN FREIGHTER SALAAS, WHICH STRUCK A MINE.

WITH WARSAW CONQUERED BY THE GERMANS, THE EASTERN FRONT WAR SPOTLIGHT SHIFTED TO RUMANIA'S BESSARABIAN BORDER, FACING SOVIET RUSSIA.

SEP 30 1939

RUMANIA STRENGTHENED THE BESSARABIAN DEFENSES BY SENDING THE MORE HIGHLY MECHANIZED AND MOBILE SECOND CORPS THERE TO REPLACE THE FIFTH ARMY CORPS.

RUMANIA HAS OVER 1,000,000 MEN ON ACTIVE SERVICE, WITH 800,000 MORE REPORTED AWAITING A CALL TO ARMS.

POLISH TROOPS--ESTIMATED TO NUMBER 120,000--BEGAN MARCHING OUT OF WARSAW, HEADED FOR GERMAN CAPTIVITY. IT WAS REPORTED THE GERMAN CONQUERORS PROBABLY WOULD NOT ENTER WARSAW UNTIL NEXT MONDAY.

TRIUMPHANT AFTER HIS VISIT TO MOSCOW, GERMANY'S FOREIGN MINIUTER, JOACHIM VON RIBBENTROP, RETURNED TO BERLIN AND REPORTED IMMEDIATELY TO FUEHRER HITLER.

VON RIBBENTROP BORE THE GERMAN-RUSSIAN DECLARATION PUTTING THE PEACE MOVE BEFORE FRANCE AND BRITAIN, THE ACCORD ON THE PARTITION OF POLAND, AND LETTERS PROJECTING THE EXPANDED EXCHANGE OF RUSSIAN RAW MATERIALS FOR GERMAN INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTS.

GERMANY, IN EFFECT, TOLD THE WORLD SHE WANTED PEACE BUT ONLY ON THE CONDITION THAT THE GERMAN-RUSSIAN AGREEMENT ON POLAND BE RECOGNIZED.

BRITAIN AND FRANCE BOTH GAVE INDICATIONS THEY WOULD TURN DOWN THE GERMAN-RUSSIAN PEACE MOVE.

JEAN GIRAUDOUX, FRENCH COMMISSIONER GENERAL OF INFORMATION, IN A RADIO ADDRESS CALLED THE GERMAN-RUSSIAN PEACE MOVE "BLACKMAIL."

PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN WILL MAKE A STATEMENT TO THE BRITISH HOUSE OF COMMONS MONDAY. MEANWHILE, AUTHORITIATIVE BRITISH SOURCES INDICATED THEY CONSIDERED THE RUSSIAN-GERMAN AGREEMENT A "BOGEY MAN" EFFORT TO FRIGHTEN THE ALLIES INTO PEACE AND SAID IT WOULD NOT ALTER BRITAIN'S DETERMINATION TO CONTINUE THE WAR UNTIL "HITLERISM" IS WIPED OUT.

SEP 30 1939

WITH HER AGREEMENT WITH GERMANY NOW IN THE OFFICIAL FILE, RUSSIA ALSO CONCLUDED A PACT WITH ESTONIA WHICH MADE THAT LITTLE NATION VIRTUALLY A RUSSIAN PROTECTORATE. RUSSIA WAS GIVEN THE RIGHT TO ESTABLISH NAVAL AND AIR BASES AND ARMY GARRISONS ON ESTONIAN SOIL.

HER GERMAN AND BALTIC POLICIES THUS DETERMINED, RUSSIA TURNED TO TALKS WITH A TURKISH DELEGATION AS UNOFFICIAL REPORTS SAID RUSSIA WOULD DEMAND PARTIAL CONTROL OF THE DARDANELLES, BLACK SEA GATEWAY NOW HELD BY TURKEY.

IN THE AMERICAS, THE UNITED STATES SENATE FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE APPROVED THE ADMINISTRATION'S NEUTRALITY BILL AND DELEGATES TO THE NEUTRALITY CONFERENCE OF 21 AMERICANNATIONS AT PANAMA CONSIDERED STEPS TO INCREASE TRADE BETWEEN THE AMERICAN CONTINENTS AS A DEFENSE AGAINST A LONG EUROPEAN WAR.

OPPONENTS OF THE NEUTRALITY BILL ATTACKED ITS FINANCIAL SECTION, CONTENDING IT INVOLVED "CREDIT AND CARRY" INSTEAD OF "CASH AND CARRY." THE BILL WOULD ALLOW BELLIGERENTS TO BUY ARMS OR OTHER MATERIALS IN THE UNITED STATES ON A 90-DAY NON-RENEWABLE CREDIT, SUBJECT TO THE APPROVAL OF THE PRESIDENT.
